Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent nurses there were in critical care at the Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since 1997. [32973]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows the total number of nurses employed by Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust in the years 1997 to 2004.

NHS hospital and community health services: Qualified nurses in specified organisations as at 30 September each specified year

Notes:

1. Count of finished admission episodes for selected providers of treatment and for selected methods of admission:

Emergency (via accident and emergency (A and E) services including the casualty department of the provider.

Emergency (other means, including patients who arrive via A and E department of another healthcare provider.

2. Finished admission episodes:

A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

3. Ungrossed data:

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is, the data are ungrossed.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) current projects, (b) equipment and (c) facilities at the Hull Royal Infirmary have been paid for by, or receive funding from, charitable organisations. [32984]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancelled operations there were at the Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since 1997. [33005]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. However, information relating to the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust is shown in the table.

Last minute cancelled operations for non-clinical reasons at Hull and East Yorkshire Hospital Trust

	Number of last minute cancelled operations
March 2002	301
March 2003	249
March 2004	222
March 2005	333
September 2005	146

Notes:

1. Data are not collected for individual hospitals. Data were collected by health authority only prior to 2001–02. Trust level data were collected from 2001–02 onwards. September 2005 represents the latest data.

2. A last minute cancellation is one that occurs on the day the patient was due to arrive, after they have arrived in hospital or on the day of their operation. For example, patients are to be admitted to hospital on a Monday for an operation scheduled for the following day (Tuesday). If the hospital cancels their operation for non-clinical reasons on the Monday then this would count as a last minute cancellation. This includes patients who have not actually arrived in hospital and have been telephoned at home prior to their arrival.

3. An operation which is rescheduled to a time within 24 hours of the original scheduled operation should be recorded as a postponement and not as a cancellation. The quarterly monitoring cancelled operations (QMCO) collection does not record the number of postponements.

4. Some common non-clinical reasons for cancellations by the hospital include: ward beds unavailable; surgeon unavailable; emergency case needing theatre; theatre list over-ran; equipment failure; administrative error; anaesthetist unavailable; theatre staff unavailable; and critical care bed unavailable.

Immunotoxicologists

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Department has to advance medical toxicology in the UK, with specific regard to the employment of immunotoxicologists. [32287]

Caroline Flint: The Department is in touch with the Royal College of General Practitioners with a view to improving the training in toxicology provided for general practitioners. Contacts between the Department and leading United Kingdom clinical toxicologists have led to questions in this area being included in the Membership examination of the Royal College of Physicians. Officials from the Department have served on committees of the British Toxicology Society and the Royal College of Pathologists group that administers the diploma in toxicology. The Department has funded research in toxicology and with the aid of Chief Medical Officer's expert advisory committees has published reports and reviews in the field.

The Department has not focused specifically on immunotoxicology, although Professor Stephen Holgate, Medical Research Council's Professor of Immuno-pharmacology at Southampton Medical School, is a member of the Committee on the Medical effects of Air Pollutants and has been influential in drawing questions in the immuno-toxicology area to the Department's attention.

In-vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on in-vitro fertilisation treatment in each primary care trust in England in the last year for which figures are available. [32373]

Caroline Flint: Information about primary care trusts' expenditure on in-vitro fertilisation is not collected centrally. The primary responsibility for the provision of these services rests with the national health service at local level.

Isle of Wight Ambulance Service

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many violent incidents there have been involving staff of the Isle of Wight Ambulance Service in the course of their duties in each of the last five years. [34620]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The information requested is shown in the table.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many IT projects which cost over £1 million and were introduced since 1997 are in use in her Department. [26616]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has delivered 11 such information technology projects since 1997 and of these, 11 are still in use.

Local Authority Wards

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the percentage of local authority wards in the area principally served by each NHS acute hospital trust in England which are not in the most deprived 10 per cent. of local authority wards. [17941]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the format requested.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which her Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [32244]

Jane Kennedy: It is the policy of the Department, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in "Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting".

Numbers of maladministration cases for which financial redress was made

Notes:
1. 2004–05 NHS figures do not include data from NHS foundation trusts.
2. NHS bodies (health authorities, strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and NHS trusts) follow the guidance in para. (e) of Annex 2 of Chapter 5 of the relevant Manual for Accounts, which adapts elements of the Government Accounting Guidance to be applicable to the NHS.

Medical Care Practitioners

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to initiate training courses for medical care practitioners; on what date she expects medical care practitioners to start work in the NHS; and what estimate she has made of the number of medical care practitioners who will be working in the NHS in 2010. [27551]

Mr. Byrne: It is for local employers to decide how many medical care practitioners they may wish to employ and when to start the requisite training. There has been no central estimation of the 2010 medical care practitioner work force.

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency's performance in assessing applications for new marketing authorisations. [33048]

Jane Kennedy: All applications for new marketing authorisations made to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) under the European licensing procedures are being assessed well within the statutory timelines. The MHRA continues to assess new active substance applications with a mean assessment time of less than 40 days. However, it is acknowledged that performance with regard to the assessment of national abridged applications is currently below MHRA norms. This is due to a combination of reasons. As a result of new European requirements regarding the format of applications, the MHRA experienced a surge in applications in 2003 resulting in a backlog of applications to be processed. This, coupled with some difficulties in recruiting appropriate professional assessment staff as a result of market forces and the recent introduction of Sentinel, the MHRA's new information management system, has had an adverse effect on MHRA's overall efficiency in this area. Steps are currently in progress to actively address these issues, including a recent successful recruitment campaign, overtime exercises and the implementation of a range of steps to improve efficiency.

Mobile Communications

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the contribution made by mobile communications to the NHS and other health professionals in Greater London in terms of (a) achieving savings and (b) the provision of improved services to NHS users; and if she will make a statement. [27368]

Jane Kennedy: The Department is currently undertaking a strategic review of assistive technology. The potential for mobile and other technologies, including text messaging services, to help keep individuals out of acute or institutional care where appropriate and to help individuals or professionals manage long term conditions will be assessed as part of that review.

The Department has contracted to provide digital radio communication systems for ambulance trusts in England. This should save money compared to trusts holding individual contracts for the same services. It will also bring further benefits in terms of higher quality communications, standardisation and interoperability between ambulance services and with other emergency services.

North Yorkshire Area Health Authority

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were employed by North Yorkshire area health authority in 1997; and how many are employed in (a) York and Selby primary care trust, (b) Hambleton and Richmondshire primary care trust and (c) Harrogate and Craven primary care trust. [31721]

[1] Excludes medical hospital practitioners and medical clinical assistants, most of whom are also GPs working part time in hospitals.

[2] General medical practitioners (excluding retainers) includes contracted GPs, CMS others, PMS others and GP registrars. Prior to September 2004 this group included GMS unrestricted principals, PMS contracted GPs, PMS salaried GPs, restricted principals, assistants, GP registrars, salaried doctors (Para 52 SFA), PMS other, flexible career scheme GPs and GP returners.

[4] There is no health authority area data available for 2004. Health authorities were superseded by strategic health authorities in 2002.

[5] There is no PCT data available in 1997 as PCTs were first introduced in 2000.

Obesity

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance her Department has given to general practitioners to reduce obesity among their patients; and if she will make a statement. [32749]

Caroline Flint: The quality and outcomes framework specifically rewards general practitioners (GPs) for delivering evidence based care to patients with chronic diseases which may involve weight management interventions to tackle obesity.

In order to support GPs in reducing obesity we are developing a variety of tools such as the obesity care pathway, a Weight Loss Guide and a short patient activity questionnaire. Also, together with the Countryside Agency, we have already piloted the use of pedometers as a motivational tool in general practice to increase patients' levels of physical activity.

The National Institute for Health Clinical Excellence (NICE) provided guidelines for anti-obesity drugs and surgery in 2001 and has been commissioned to prepare definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity, due for publication in 2007. NICE guidance will include an assessment of four commonly used methods to increase physical activity: brief interventions in primary care, pedometers, exercise referral schemes and community based exercise programmes for walking and cycling.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of children likely to suffer from obesity over the next 10 years. [33137]

Caroline Flint: The prevalence of obesity in children aged two to 10 years increased from 9.6 per cent. in 1995 to 13.7 per cent. in 2003. The British Medical Association estimates that one in five boys and one in three girls will be obese by 2020, as stated in the recent schools' White Paper. In 2004, the Government adopted a public service agreement (PSA) target

> "to halt, by 2010, the year-on-year increase in obesity among children under 11 in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole."

This PSA target is held jointly by the Department, the Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the efficacy of identifying and managing obesity in children in a primary care setting. [33175]

Caroline Flint: The Department asked the Health Development Agency (HDA) to review the evidence of prevention and treatment of overweight and obesity. In 2003, HDA concluded that there is supporting evidence for the need to improve the role of health professionals especially general practitioners in the primary care setting in the management of obesity and overweight.

In addition, the Department has commissioned the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to prepare a definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity, which will be published after full consultation in 2007. Meanwhile, to support local monitoring of obesity among children, the Department plans to issue guidance to primary care trusts on measurement of height and weight in primary school age children. This guidance will provide advice to primary care trusts on how to measure height and weight of children between five to 11 years.

Oesophageal Cancer

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the MCM5 test being trialled at the Freeman hospital in Newcastle; and when it will be brought into regular use in the NHS. [32272]

Mr. Byrne: The Department meets the service costs of research commissioned by its research partners that takes place in the national health service. The funding allocated for this purpose supports a substantial body of health research, including Cancer Research UK's trial of the MCM5 test for bladder and prostate cancer.

The trial at the Freeman hospital in Newcastle is expected to involve 3,000 patients and is not due to finish until 2006. At this stage it is not possible to speculate on when the test might be introduced on a regular basis into the NHS as the results from the trial will require in depth analysis.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer questions (a) 26323, (b) 26321 and (c) 26322 tabled by the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon on 3 November. [33013]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2116W, and on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 254W, and to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under Secretary of State with responsibility for Care Services, on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 497W.

Pesticides

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will conduct a population biomonitoring programme which includes pesticides. [32297]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not currently have any specific plans to conduct a population biomonitoring programme, although it is having discussions with the Health Protection Agency on the feasibility of biomonitoring projects for chemical contaminants that includes pesticides. The Health Protection Agency is currently carrying out a scoping study, which will ascertain what biomonitoring programmes are currently underway in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when (a) the Health Protection Agency and (b) her Department will establish a public health toxicology service to deal with chemical issues; and whether it will include pesticides. [32299]

Caroline Flint: The United Kingdom's National Poisons Information Service, commissioned by the Health Protection Agency, provides advice on potential cases of poisoning to medical practitioners. The service does not provide advice to the public, although it is recognised that systems in other European countries do provide this service. Advice to the public on what to do in suspected cases of poisoning is available from NHS Direct.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the recent oral evidence from the Department to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, what the evidential basis was for the statement that pesticide use has not increased. [33893]

Caroline Flint: The statement that pesticide usage has not increased, made by a Departmental official while giving oral evidence to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, was based on evidence provided in the National Statistics, "Pesticide Usage Survey Report 202 on Arable Crops in Great Britain 2004", which is available on the Central Science Laboratory's (CSL) website at www.csl.gov.uk/science/organ/pvm/puskm/arable2004.pdf and on the National Statistics, "Pesticide Usage Survey Report 195 on Outdoor Vegetable Crops in Great Britain 2003", also available on CSL's website at www.csl.gov.uk/science/organ/pvm/puskm/outdoorveg2003.pdf.

These show that although areas treated may have increased, the amounts used have generally declined.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the Pesticides Safety Directorate to commission research on the bystander impact of pesticide use. [33894]

Caroline Flint: The Department will be contributing to the Government response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report, "Crop Spraying and the Health of Residents and Bystanders", which is being co-ordinated by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. This is likely to include the commission of new research but details are yet to be decided. Departmental officials have been discussing with the pesticides safety directorate issues of common interest with respect to the report.

Physical Activity

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has held with professional rugby clubs about developing community rugby programmes to tackle obesity and increase participation in physical activity; and if she will make a statement. [32208]

Caroline Flint: We are keen to encourage both rugby codes to work in partnership with local authorities, primary care trusts and other local partners to promote physical activity and healthy lifestyles in the community.

I attended an event to disseminate the results of the "Professional Rugby in the Community Consultation" and showcase some of the excellent community work being undertaken by premier rugby clubs, which was hosted by Premier Rugby Ltd. on 9 November 2005.

Premier Rugby Ltd. were invited to give a presentation setting out professional rugby's commitment to community development at the first of the regional sport and health seminars organised on behalf of the Department on 25 November 2005 in Leeds, at which I also spoke.

Prior to these events my officials met with representatives of Premier Rugby Ltd. to discuss how professional rugby clubs and the national health service might work together at a local level to increase physical activity and tackle obesity.

Pressure Ulcers

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she plans to monitor adherence to the clinical guidance published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on pressure ulcer management, published in September; and what plans she has to monitor the uptake of vacuum assisted closure technologies as recommended by the guidance; [31900]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of vacuum assisted closure machines in treating open wounds; [31901]

(3) what steps she is taking to prevent pressure ulcers in NHS hospitals. [31899]

Mr. Byrne: Clinical guidelines published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) are recommendations on the appropriate treatment and care of people with specific diseases and conditions within the national health service. They are based on the best available evidence. Guidelines help health professionals in their work, but they do not replace their knowledge and skills.

We have no plans to monitor the uptake of vacuum-assisted closure technologies as the NICE guidance stated that the findings on the effectiveness of such technology must be viewed with extreme caution due to limited trial-based evidence.

The Department has made no assessment on the effectiveness of vacuum assisted closure machines in treating open wounds.

Reducing the incidence of pressure sores in hospitals is tackled locally through the development and implementation of individualised plans for prevention and treatment agreed and delivered by a multidisciplinary team working with patients and their carers.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether decisions by primary care trusts to divest themselves of service provision will be based on the results of the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" consultation. [25422]

Mr. Byrne: Any move away from direct provision of services will be a decision for the local national health service within the framework set out in the forthcoming White Paper, "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say", and after local consultation. We will support primary care trusts (PCTs) who want to do that, but we will not instruct PCTs to do it, nor will we impose any timetable. What matters is getting the best services for each community—and that is what the White Paper will focus on.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the salary is of the chief executive of each Cheshire primary care trust; and what estimate she has made of the likely cost of their redundancy packages. [32054]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally. However, Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority advises that salaries of primary care trust chief executives are already in the public domain via annual reports. No final decisions regarding the reconfiguration of primary care trusts, under 'Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS', have been made.

Private Patients

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the share of NHS provision for private patients has been as a percentage of the total private medical market in each of the last 10 years. [31349]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect the information requested.

Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has (a) to change staffing levels in national pulmonary arterial hypertension centres in England and (b) to increase the number of such centres. [34065]

Mr. Byrne: There are no plans to increase the number of specialist centres for the treatment of pulmonary hypertension (PH) in England. It is for health professionals in the existing seven centres to decide on the appropriate staffing levels needed to achieve the national service standards for PH, as set by the national specialist commissioning advisory group.

School Nurses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether school nurses are permitted to sign prescriptions for contraceptives for minors without parental knowledge; and if she will make a statement. [34220]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

Health professionals, including school nurses, can provide contraception to young people under 16, provided they are satisfied that the young person is competent to fully understand the implications of any treatment and to make a choice of the treatment involved. When doing so, school nurses work under medical supervision through Patient Group Directions—a written instruction for the supply or administration of medicines to groups of patients, without an individualised doctor's prescription.

Health professionals work within an established legal framework, which involves assessing the young person's competence to understand the choices they are making. A young person's request for confidentiality is respected unless there are child protection issues. However, health professionals should always encourage the young person to talk to their parents.

Sexual Health

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she takes to monitor the use of funding allocated to primary care trusts to improve sexual health services following the publication of the Choosing Health White Paper in November 2004. [31469]

Caroline Flint: Primary care trusts will receive funding for implementing the targets in the Choosing Health White Paper in their mainstream allocations and we will be monitoring the outcomes from this investment. In particular, the progress towards targets to reduce the level of new infections of gonorrhoea, to ensure patients have access to genito-urinary medicine clinics within 48 hours by 2008 and numbers of screens undertaken in the Chlamydia screening programme. These improved performance measures, should significantly strengthen the incentive for local investment and service modernisation.

In addition, a letter has been sent by the Department to strategic health authority chief executives highlighting that when considering any savings from implementing "Commissioning a patient led NHS", savings should not be identified from those posts working on implementation of Choosing Health. This includes posts in frontline services.

Smoking/Alcohol

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women have smoked during pregnancy in each of the last 10 years. [34428]

Caroline Flint: The data are not available in the exact format as requested. The data which are presented is the most recent available.

Information on smoking in pregnancy is obtained from the infant feeding survey, which is carried out every five years; the most recent survey was in 2000. The available information is shown in the table.

Proportion of women who smoked throughout pregnancy, England, 1990, 1995, and 2000

Smoking prevalence	1990[1]	1995[2]	Percentage 2000[2]
Smoked during pregnancy	28	23	19
Base number	5,413	4,956	[3]4,921

[1] Data for 1990 relate to Great Britain.
[2] The results from the 1995 and 2000 surveys are not directly comparable, since some of the smoking questions on the questionnaire were revised in 2000 to improve the reliability of the results.
[3] The base for 2000 excludes 200 mothers who did not supply sufficient information for their smoking status to be classified.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidences of (a) smoking and (b) alcohol-related conditions were treated in (i) 1998 and (ii) the most recent year for which information is available; what the cost of treatment was in each year; and what estimate the Government have made of the costs to the economy. [34180]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The information is not available in the form requested.

The latest estimates, published in 2004 by the Health Development Agency in the document, "The Smoking Epidemic" are that smoking kills around 86,500 people a year in England, one-fifth of all deaths.

The latest data on the cost to the national health service of treating illness and disease caused by smoking is estimated to cost between £1.4 billion to £1.7 billion every year in terms of general practitioner visits, prescriptions, treatment and operations.

Estimates of total cost to the economy are not available.

The incidence of alcohol-related conditions treated are shown in the table.

Count of finished consultant episodes for selected alcohol related diseases NHS hospitals: England, data year 1998–99 and 2003–04

Primary diagnosis	1998–99	2003–04
Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol	35,947	38,101
Alcoholic liver disease	13,689	21,001
Toxic effect of alcohol	2,130	1,591
Total	51,765	60,693

Notes:
Finished consultant episode (FCE)
An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.
Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Grossing
Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2003–04, which is not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

It was estimated that the cost to the NHS in 2000–01 to be at a middle range of £1.5 billion.

The Prime Ministers strategy unit's interim analysis for the alcohol harm reduction strategy for England estimated that the overall cost of alcohol misuse was £20 billion a year.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Antisocial Behaviour (Hedges)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many orders to remove hedges have been made by local councils in (a) England and (b) Gloucestershire, under the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003; and if he will make a statement. [35046]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 5 December 2005]: Under section 69(3) of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003, local councils cannot order action involving the removal of a high hedge. Information on notices requiring remedial works to hedges, issued under the 2003 Act, is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with local councils about the workings of the high hedges provisions in the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003; and if he will make a statement. [35047]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has held no formal discussions with local councils about the workings of the high hedges provisions in the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003, which came into force in June 2005. The Government are committed to a formal review of this legislation after it has been in operation for five years.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the average costs to the complainant of making a complaint to a local authority relating to high hedges; and if he will make a statement. [35276]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published the 'Regulatory Impact Assessment: High Hedges—Implementing Part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003' on 23 March 2005. It contains estimates of the costs to complainants of making a complaint to a local authority about a high hedge. Copies of the Regulatory Impact Assessment are available in the House Library.

The Regulatory Impact Assessment was prepared before the legislation came into operation in June 2005. Information on the fees being charged by local authorities for dealing with high hedges complaints is not collected centrally.

Asset Register

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 30th November 2005, Official Report, column 581W, on the asset register, what documents his officials work from when assessing the assets of his Department. [35487]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The document officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister work from when assessing the ODPM's assets is the central ODPM's Asset Register which is held on its electronic accounting system SAP. This records all assets that cost over £5,000 and are held for use on a continuing basis. Third party invoices and professional valuations are the supporting documents used by officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to establish asset values on the Asset Register. The accounting system automatically calculates both increases and decreases in asset values due to indexation, and the monthly depreciation charge, according to parliamentary and HM Treasury guidelines.

Bus Services (Stoke Orchard)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he made of bus services attending Stoke Orchard, Gloucestershire when objecting to this aspect of Tewkesbury borough council's local plan; and if he will make a statement. [35086]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 6 December 2005]: As part of the assessment process of the Tewkesbury local plan, information from both Tewkesbury borough council and the bus service operators in the area was obtained in respect of the allocation at Stoke Orchard. This information was taken into account in my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister the First Secretary of State's decision to direct Tewkesbury borough council to delete the policy relating to the site allocation at Stoke Orchard from the Tewkesbury borough local plan.

It was my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, the First Secretary of State's view that this policy was inconsistent with PPG3, PPS7, PPG13 and RPG10 and would lead to a greater dispersal of development, exacerbating unsustainable patterns of commuting.

Designated Growth Areas

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the local delivery partners in (a) the Milton Keynes growth area and (b) each other designated growth area. [31850]

Yvette Cooper: The Local Delivery Vehicles established in Milton Keynes South Midlands to cover individual areas are: Milton Keynes Partnerships Committee; Aylesbury Vale Advantage; Renaissance Bedford; West Northamptonshire Development Corporation; and North Northants Together.

The Local Delivery Vehicles established in London Stansted Cambridge Peterborough are: Cambridgeshire Horizons; and Opportunity Peterborough.

The Regeneration Partnerships established in Thames Gateway to cover individual areas are: London Thames Gateway Development Corporation; Basildon Renaissance; Renaissance Southend; Thurrock UDC; Medway Renaissance Partnership; Swale Forward; and Kent Thameside Delivery Board.

The Local Delivery Vehicle for Ashford is Ashford's Future.

Fire Services

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) back-up facilities and (b) secondary sites are available for each fire regional control centre; and if he will make a statement. [34586]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The nine regional control centres will be part of an integrated network. In exceptionally busy periods, or in the worst case in the event of the failure of one centre, others in the network will be able immediately to take over answering calls and sending vehicles to incidents. Consequently, there is no need for secondary sites. To minimise the risk of the failure of one regional control centre, each has been designed so that there are no single points of failure in the system; for example, all the new centres will have two generators.

Homelessness

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of homeless people in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [34315]

Yvette Cooper: Information about English local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly and is in respect of households rather than people. The number of households accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need for the past five financial years, and the number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by local authorities under homelessness legislation as at 31 March of each year, is listed in the following table for Southend-on-Sea, Essex, Greater London and England. For corresponding information about Welsh authorities, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

After being accepted as homeless, a household will be placed in some form of accommodation. They may be placed in temporary accommodation, until a settled solution becomes available, or they may be given a settled solution straight away depending on the accommodation available to the local authority. As an alternative to temporary accommodation an authority may arrange for a household to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

Information is also collected on the number of people who sleep rough, that is, those who are literally roofless on a single night. The following table also shows the number of persons sleeping rough on a single night of each year.

Households accepted[1] as homeless during the year, households in temporary accommodation at the end of the year, and numbers of rough sleepers

Housing

James Duddridge: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the Government will publish its final response to the Barker Review of housing supply; and if he will make a statement. [34160]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Government's initial response to Kate Barker's report was provided by my right hon. Friends the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Deputy Prime Minister alongside the Budget on 17 March 2004. We published the full response on 5 December 2005.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what percentage of households in each London borough were on the housing register on 1 April. [34663]

Yvette Cooper: The number of households on the housing waiting list, and the percentage of total households that are on the housing waiting list, in each London borough, as at 1 April 2005, are shown in the following table:

Local authority	Number of households on the housing register	As a percentage of all households

ODPM's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA).

Local authorities in England report the number of households on their housing waiting list as at 1 April in their annual Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix returns. Local authorities sometimes maintain a common waiting list with the housing association/s in their district. However, information is not held centrally where a housing association maintains a separate waiting list to the local authority.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether (a) local authorities and (b) social services have responsibility for housing vulnerable people; and if he will make a statement. [34667]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities have a number of responsibilities to provide accommodation and support for vulnerable people. These include:

A duty under part 7 of the Housing Act 1996 for local housing authorities in England to ensure that suitable accommodation is available for people who are homeless through no fault of their own, if they are eligible for assistance and fall within a priority need group. (Priority need groups are as defined in section 189 of the 1996 Act and, additionally, in the Homelessness (Priority Need for Accommodation) (England) Order 2002.)

A duty under part 6 of the Housing Act 1996 for local housing authorities to ensure, in allocating settled social housing, that 'reasonable preference' for an allocation goes to certain categories of people (including those who are homeless and those who need to move on medical or welfare grounds) who might be considered vulnerable.

A duty under the Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 23(B) (8) (b) to promote the welfare of care leavers, aged 16–18, and to support them by providing them with or maintaining them in suitable accommodation. Local authorities have continuing responsibilities to support care leavers aged 18–21 which may also require them to offer support to enable this group to access suitable accommodation.

A duty under section 20 (3) of the Children Act 1989 to accommodate any child in need aged 16 and 17 whose welfare is likely to be seriously prejudiced without the provision of accommodation. A child accommodated under this section, will become looked-after by the local authority.

Section 17 of the Children Act 1989 also includes the power for the children's services function of local authorities to provide accommodation for families and children. The power to provide accommodation under this section will almost always concern children needing to be accommodated with their families.

However, there may be cases where a lone child who needs help with accommodation, but who does not need to become a looked-after child, might appropriately be assisted under section 17. In these cases, the decision about whether or not a child should be accommodated by the local authority and the related decision as to whether he/she should become looked-after will be determined by the local authority's assessment of the child's needs in accordance with the statutory guidance set out in "The framework for the Assessment of Children in Need and their Families" published by the Government in April 2000.

A power, and so far as directed by the Secretary of State for Health a duty, under sections 21 and 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948, for local authority social services to provide residential accommodation and certain other welfare services for people who are 'ordinarily resident' in the authority's area and who are in need of residential care. This includes a person with no settled residence or ordinarily resident elsewhere who is in urgent need of residential care.

In single tier arrangements, these duties will fall to parts of the same local authority. In two-tier arrangements, the housing duties will fall to the lower tier authority and the social services duties will fall to the upper tier authority.

While not a duty, upper tier authorities also provide housing-related support services for vulnerable adults through the Supporting People programme. These services are intended to support and assist people to maintain or move towards living independently.

James Duddridge: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to reduce the waiting lists for council housing in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England. [33774]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 1 December 2005]: In England in 2004–05, over 28,000 homes were provided for rent or low cost home ownership through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. Of these, 544 were completed in Essex, of which 40 were completed in Southend-on-Sea Unitary Authority.

Sustainable Communities: Homes for All sets out the Government's plans to deliver more affordable housing over the next five years from 2005–06. Measures include the delivery of 75,000 social rented homes by 2008.

For 2006–07 and 2007–08 Regional Housing Boards have made recommendations to Ministers for the allocation of Regional Housing Pots funds. The Eastern Regional Housing Board has recommended that from their allocation of £432 million for the two years a total of £356 million should be allocated to the provision of affordable housing. However, the exact distribution of funding between programmes for 2006–08 will not be known until the completion of the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing Programme bidding process in early 2006.

We are also making available £1.6 million this year to assist in the development of 15 sub-regionally based CBL schemes. The funding will support the development of the Herts and Essex Housing Options Consortium which will include Brentwood BC, Chelmsford BC, Epping Forest DC and Uttlesford DC.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to encourage local authorities to adopt innovative solutions to address household overcrowding in their area. [35291]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The Government have doubled their investment in social housing from 1997 levels and the Housing Corporation has taken steps to encourage investment in larger homes through its National Affordable Housing programme. Against that background, it is for local authorities to develop housing strategies that give due weight to the needs of overcrowded households alongside the other housing needs in their area.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department has allocated for social housing in each constituency in Essex in each of the past 10 years. [34312]

Yvette Cooper: Information is not readily available for all of the funding allocations until 1999. A total of £626 million has been allocated for social housing in Essex from 1999 to 2005–06. This includes allocations for new build, improvements to existing stock and disabled facilities grants.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of uninhabited homes in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) the Tees Valley and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [32453]

Yvette Cooper: The estimated number of vacant dwellings in (a) England, (b) the Government Office for the North East region, (c) the Tees Valley and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland are tabled as follows:

	Number
Total England	710,935
The Government Office for the North East	45,732
Tees Valley (comprising Darlington, Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar & Cleveland and Stockton-on-Tees unitary authorities)	10,962
Middlesbrough and Redcar & Cleveland unitary authorities which encompass the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency	5,058

The data are as at November 2004, the latest date for which estimates are available and were reported on CTB1 & CTB1S forms submitted by billing authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister each year. The figure includes both long and short-term empty properties.

The Government are introducing new powers from April 2006 for local authorities to reduce the number of long-term empty homes in their area.

Local Government Funding

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the net debt or reserves/surplus was for each local authority in England, including police and fire authorities, in (a) 1997–98 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [29724]

Mr. Woolas: Tables have been made available in the Library of the House showing levels of revenue reserves at 1 April 1997 and 1 April 2004 for each local authority in England.

Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changing local authority responsibilities.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new mobile telephone masts have been erected under permitted development rights in each year since 1997 in (a) Gravesham and (b) Kent. [33636]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1066W to my hon. Friend, the Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham).

Planning

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish proposals to amend the law on planning and Travellers. [34111]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to publish the new Planning Circular for Gypsies and Travellers, to replace DOE Circular 1/94 "Gypsy Sites and Planning", early in the new year.

Private Landlords

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the implications for his policy on housing of private landlords requiring a guarantor prior to agreeing a new tenancy; and whether he attributes this practice directly to the policy of paying housing benefit to tenants rather than directly to landlords. [33780]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not made any detailed assessment of the implications for housing policy of the practice of some private landlords to seek a financial guarantor prior to agreeing a new tenancy. My understanding is that they would do so for tenants whose financial circumstances are unclear, for example—students as well as housing benefit claimants.

The direct payment of housing benefit to tenants may have some impact. However, as we made clear earlier this year in 'Sustainable Communities: Homes for All', we are keen to improve access to the private rented sector for households who might otherwise face homelessness, through local authority schemes that provide rent deposits or the guarantees that private landlords seek, or which offer approved lettings with accredited landlords.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will conduct a survey of the number of local authorities reporting that private landlords require a guarantor before agreeing to a tenancy. [33781]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2005]: Information from landlords or tenants on landlords seeking financial guarantors of tenants is not currently collected in the routine statistical surveys of housing. Local authorities are unlikely to offer a consistent view of this matter as it concerns the contractual relationship between landlord and tenant.

However we will consider the case for collecting such information, along with other proposals for new research, as part of the development of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's analytical programme 2006–07. As reflected in the licensing provisions of the Housing Act 2004, we are keen that private landlords should seek references to provide some guarantees that their prospective tenants will not behave in an anti-social way.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) legislative and (b) other measures are in place to prevent private landlords discriminating against letting to tenants in receipt of housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [34579]

Yvette Cooper: Anti-discrimination legislation does not extend to the practice of refusing to let to benefit claimants and it would be impracticable to do so. However landlords often refuse to let to tenants on housing benefit because of the historical delays by local authorities in administering it. In 2002 the Government implemented a comprehensive strategy to improve delivery and now the average time taken to process new claims has been cut by over two weeks, with the greatest improvements seen in the poorest performing local authorities.

We are keen to encourage greater use of the private rented sector for those in housing need and we have been exploring with local authorities good practice in this field. Access to the private rented sector can be improved for households who might otherwise face homelessness through local authority schemes that provide rent deposits or the rent guarantees that private landlords seek, or which offer approved lettings with accredited landlords as part of an expansion of arrangements for choice-based lettings.

Public Transport (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the evidential basis is for the assessment of the effectiveness of the anticipated modal shift to public transport in North Northamptonshire as outlined in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional spatial strategy. [34093]

Yvette Cooper: One of the objectives of the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional spatial strategy is to create a shift to more sustainable modes of travel such as public transport. The strategy itself does not assess the detail of the modal shift.

Right to Buy

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council homes in Bradford were sold under the Right to Buy scheme in each year since 1980. [35288]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The numbers of council properties sold under the right-to-buy scheme by Bradford local authority in each financial year since 1979–80 as reported by Bradford are tabled as follows. There are no council sales after 2002–03 due to a large scale voluntary transfer.

Bradford: right to buy sales.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what amount of capital receipts has been generated from right to buy sales in Bradford in each year since 1980. [35290]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The total capital receipts from right-to-buy sales of local authority dwellings in Bradford in the years from 1996–97 onwards are tabulated as follows. Information for years prior to 1996–97 is not centrally available. These figures are net of discounts and are as reported by the local authority. WALES

Departmental/Ministerial Travel

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what expenditure was incurred by the Wales Office for (a) air and (b) rail travel in each year since 2003–04. [32361]

Mr. Hain: The total travel cost incurred by the Wales Office for the following years were:

Means of travel	£
(a) air travel
2004–05	18,344
(b) rail travel
2003–04	111,808
2004–05	94,533

Figures for financial year 2005–06 will be available in April 2006.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since 7 July 2005 he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35332]

Mr. Hain: On three occasions.

Government of Wales Act (Convictions)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) males and (b) females have been (i) charged with and (ii) convicted of offences under section (A) 72, (B) 75 and (C) 145C of the Government of Wales Act 1998 in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33804]

Mr. Hain: None.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many race equality impact assessments his Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32827]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office completed two race equality impact assessments between April 2004 and March 2005 as part of the regulatory impact assessments for the Public Services Ombudsman (Wales) Bill and the Transport (Wales) Bill. Between April 2005 and November 2005, one was completed as part of the Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Commissioner for Older People (Wales) Bill. No changes were made as a result of conducting these assessments.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department has given to poultry workers and those working with live birds on the actions they should take in the event of their suffering from influenza-like symptoms. [30745]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The extant general advice to poultry workers is that if they think that they have contracted an infection from an animal they should contact their doctor quickly and inform them that they work in agriculture. In the absence of avian influenza in the United Kingdom, poultry workers and others, having contact with live birds, need to follow only normal good practice in dealing with flu-like symptoms.

Both the Health and Safety Executive and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs have published guidance on their websites.

Biodiversity Ministerial Group

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who the members are of the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity; how often it meets; and whether the minutes of its meetings are published. [35049]

Jim Knight: The members of the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity are the Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Under-Secretary of State at the Department for International Development, the Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for Rural Affairs, Landscape and Biodiversity at Defra, and the Chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee.

The group has met twice to date, and a third meeting is planned for February 2006. Thereafter the group intends to meet at intervals of between six and nine months.

The minutes of the meetings are not published.

Bushmeat Trade

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what proposals the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity has made to date to combat the international trade in bushmeat; [35003]

(2) if the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity will open up discussions on the international trade in bushmeat to external stakeholders and other interested parties; [35005]

(3) what progress has been made by the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity in developing the Government's policy on the international trade in bushmeat from Africa. [35038]

Jim Knight: In response to a request from the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on biodiversity, the Department has recently let a research contract to the Overseas Development Institute.

The research will comprise a desk study which will draw on previous and current research and other relevant literature, particularly focusing on literature published in the past five years. The results will inform policy discussions at the Inter-departmental Ministers Group on biodiversity, by addressing the key questions;

1. Is the bushmeat trade a primary threat to endangered species?

2. From the published literature are the major concerns about bushmeat generic or mainly about endangered charismatic species such as great apes?

3. What action is already in hand by the Government, and to what extent does this fulfil the need to develop and implement specific actions?

4. Is current action by the Government effective and are there further interventions which would be more effective?

5. How do the Governments duties with regard to endangered species/international biodiversity relate to bushmeat? The research will include an assessment of the Governments obligations to the multilateral environmental agreements to which the UK is signed up to, as well as domestic controls that are in place.

6. What is the relative importance of the bushmeat issue in relation to global biodiversity loss; and efforts to conserve and sustainably use biodiversity?

7. What is the degree of aggregate dependence for poor people on bushmeat nationally in key bushmeat producing countries in west and central Africa?

8. What impact would the declining supply of bushmeat have on poor people in these countries?

9. Consideration of the evidence for an association between the levels of bushmeat trade in the sub-region and extra-sectoral influences, such as the EU common fisheries policy, and the policy issues arising.

10. Whether the Governments focus in this regard should remain on western and central Africa or should this be broader to address bushmeat issues in the rest of Africa, and /or other parts of the world?

The recommendations to the group will help to inform Government policy in this area. The specification for this project can be viewed at www.defra.gov.uk/science/funding/historical.htm.

At this stage it would be premature to invite external stakeholders, and other interested parties, to discuss the matter before this work has concluded. The research is due to conclude in the summer of next year.

Departmental Estate

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which buildings and sites used by her Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31764]

Jim Knight: The Sir Michael Lyons initiative is part of Defra's overall estate strategy that will contribute to the freeing up of space in London and the south east and the subsequent "release" of our occupations. Planned relocation is currently unlikely to lead directly to closures.

The following table lists those occupations nationwide that Defra and its agencies has ceased to use in the last year due mainly to estate rationalisation.

Property	Date ceased to be used
Market Towers, Nine Elms Lane, Vauxhall	28 May 2004
10 Queen Street, Ripon	23 June 2004
Springfield House, Chapel Brow, Leyland	29 June 2004
Oxford Spires Business Park, Kidlington	8 July 2004
132 Warkworth Woods, Gosforth	24 December 2004
19-29 Woburn Place, London	31 January 2005
Westmoreland Lane Farm, Crooklands, Milnethorpe	22 March 2005
2nd Floor Princes House, Queen Street, Barnstaple	25 March 2005
10 Whitehall Place, London	30 March 2005

Farming Guidelines

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidelines for working in co-operation with local farming interests her Department follows; and if she will make a statement. [34567]

Jim Knight: There are no specific guidelines for working with local farming interests, however under the Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy we have set up regional steering groups to oversee delivery of regional farming and food action plans. These groups consist of regional and local farming and food sector representatives, alongside other stakeholders from the health and environment sectors. The groups were brought together by Government offices and regional development agencies to decide initially upon the priorities within these plans, and then subsequently to oversee delivery.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to ensure the Forestry Commission works closely with local farmers. [34566]

Jim Knight: The Forestry Commission has always worked closely with farmers and other landowners as it carries out its functions and duties under the Forestry Act 1991 and other legislation. These include the provision of advice and incentives for woodland management and creation as well as regulation of tree felling. DEFRA's Rural Strategy published in 2004 is leading to delivery reforms, including the creation of Natural England with which the Forestry Commission will be aligned. This will help to deliver services to farmers and the rural community in a more streamlined customer-focused way.

The English Woodland Grant Scheme (EWGS), introduced earlier this year is simplifying arrangements for farmers who seek financial support for creating new woodlands by bringing together in a single scheme contribution to cost grants and income forgone payments.

The introduction of woodland options under the Environmental Stewardship scheme has provided new opportunities for farmers. In order to help farmers understand the woodland support options available to them, the Commission and DEFRA have produced guidance for farmers, entitled Funding for Farm Woodlands in England. The Commission has also been working closely with the Rural Development Service through joint Environmental Stewardship staff training events.

The Commission is also a major land manager, which gives it a unique insight and understanding of countryside management and the needs of its neighbours, many of who are farmers.

Housing Development

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the quantity of carbon dioxide emissions which would be saved in a year if the National Code for Sustainable Buildings was extended to all new housing developments in England. [33303]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is consulting on a proposed new Code. The consultation document includes the customary regulatory impact assessment.

Land Use

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the impact on the environment of turning high grade agricultural land into low grade park and scrub land. [34565]

Jim Knight: Land use inevitably evolves in response to a range of factors and has the potential for both positive and negative environmental impacts. The nature and speed of ongoing change may vary following the introduction this year of the decoupled CAP single payment scheme. Besides existing surveys and monitoring, we are spending over £1 million over the next three years on a new Agricultural Change and Environmental Observatory programme, to monitor and where possible anticipate such changes. The Observatory programme is being developed by DEFRA and key stakeholders including English Nature, the Countryside Agency and the Environment Agency.

TREASURY

Tax Credit System

10. Mr. Vara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent performance of the tax credit system. [35541]

Dawn Primarolo: Child tax credit is benefiting 6 million families, with 1½ million poor children already lifted out of poverty.

Building on work to improve the administration of tax credits, which I reported at the hearing of the Treasury Sub-Committee on 26 October, the Chancellor announced in his pre-Budget report a package of further improvements that reflect our experience of the first years of operating the tax credits system. These measures will provide greater certainty for claimants, while maintaining flexibility to respond to falls in income and changes in families' circumstances.

UK Economy

13. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the principal factors affecting the estimated level of growth in the UK economy. [35544]

Mr. Des Browne: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) in the Chamber earlier today, Official Report, column 986.

19. Damian Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the principal factors affecting the estimated level of growth in the UK economy. [35550]

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the principal factors affecting the estimated level of growth in the UK economy. [35441]

John Healey: Pre-Budget report 2005 (Cm 6701), published on 5 December 2005, provided a comprehensive account of recent economic developments and fully set out the Government's assessment of growth prospects for the UK economy.

Biofuels

14. Paddy Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the rate of duty on (a) biodiesel and (b) bioethanol. [35545]

John Healey: Both biodiesel and bioethanol attract a favourable duty differential of 20 pence per litre less than that for the main road fuels. We have guaranteed that this differential will continue until at least 2007–08.

Government support for biofuels has led to the amounts of biofuels being released for consumption in the UK increasing 10-fold since the same period last year.

Child Poverty

15. Chris Bryant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the number of children living in poverty in the UK. [35546]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government's policy is that every child should have the opportunity to fulfil its potential. That is why we have set a target to eradicate child poverty by 2020, and intermediate targets to reduce it by a quarter and a half.

We are broadly on track to meet our first target, and the latest figures show that we have already lifted more than half a million children out of relative low-income poverty since 1998–99, from 3.1 to 2.6 million by 2003–04.

Pensions Commission

17. Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the public expenditure implications are of the proposals in the Pensions Commission's second report; and if he will make a statement. [35548]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The most reasonable starting point for estimating the costs of the Pensions Commission's proposals is that implied by existing Government commitments and known demographic trends. Using this starting point, the Commission's own published estimates show that their core state pension package begins to add cost in 2010, reaching a total of £14 billion by 2020 in real terms.

EU Budget (Rebate)

20. Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of the UK rebate within the EU budget. [35551]

21. Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of the UK rebate within the EU budget. [35552]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the written ministerial statement given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the House on 5 December, Official Report, column 65WS.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cumulative value of the UK's rebate from the EU budget has been since 1984. [35553]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: From 1985–86, when the abatement came into effect, to the end of 2004–05, the value totalled £44.2 billion.

Work Force Skills

22. Chris Mole: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the relationship between the level of skills in the work force and economic growth. [35554]

John Healey: Skills are vital to the stability and growth of the economy. Increases in an economy's trend rate of growth depend on how many people are in employment and how productive they are. Skills are one of the drivers of productivity.

That is why the Government have more than doubled overall investment in education and training since 1997.

It is also why the Chancellor commissioned the Leitch Review of Skills, this independent review of the UK's skills needs, which published its interim report on Monday, set out the extent of current evidence on the relationship between work force skills and employment.

Job Creation

23. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new jobs have been created since 1997. [35555]

John Healey: Since 1997, there are 2.2 million more jobs in the UK. Over the last eight years, job numbers have grown by 330,000 a year; an average growth rate of 1 per cent. and, the number of jobs in the UK is now at a record high.

Air Passenger Duty

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of air passenger duty has been in each year since 1997 (a) in real terms, allowing for inflation and compared to the increase in gross domestic product, and (b) expressed as average amount per UK passenger. [35239]

John Healey: Reliable estimates of the value of each of the four APD rates for each scenario requested from 1997 are not available due to the restructuring of APD in 2001. However, estimates since 2001 are shown in the following table.

Real terms APD (£)

	EEA—Reduced rate	EEA—Standard rate	Non-EEA—Reduced rate	Non-EEA—Standard rate	Average per passenger
2001	5.00	10.00	20.00	40.00	10.12
2002	4.92	9.84	19.68	39.36	9.70
2003	4.78	9.55	19.11	38.22	8.38
2004	4.64	9.28	18.56	37.11	8.24

APD (£) if raised with money GDP

	EEA—Reduced Rate	EEA—Standard rate	Non-EEA—Reduced rate	Non-EEA—Standard rate	Average per passenger
2001	5.00	10.00	20.00	40.00	10.12
2002	4.82	9.64	19.28	38.56	9.50
2003	4.56	9.12	18.24	36.47	8.00
2004	4.28	8.56	17.13	34.26	7.61

Information on the rates of air passenger duty is available at the UK Trade Info website at: www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=statindex

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the increase in air passenger duty which would be required to maintain air fares at a constant level in real terms up to 2010 and (b) what increase in price this would contribute to average air fares. [35241]

John Healey: No estimate has been made of what APD would be necessary to maintain air fares constant in real terms until 2010. Likewise no estimate has been made into what proportion this would contribute to average air fares.

Information on the rates of air passenger duty is available at the UK Trade Info website at: www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=statindex

Companies Act Regulations

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he has drafted new regulations to replace the Companies Act 1985 (Operating and Financial Review and Directors' Report etc.) Regulations 2005; [35007]

(2) if he will list the regulations which implement the operating and financial review for UK listed companies; [35010]

(3) what new regulations he plans to issue on company reporting consequent on his planned abolition of the operating and financial review. [35011]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department of Trade and Industry is drafting regulations to amend the relevant sections of the Companies Act 1985, as originally amended by the Companies Act 1985 (Operating and Financial Review and Directors' Report etc.) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/1011). These will remove the statutory requirement for an OFR, leaving in place a requirement for all companies to prepare an enhanced business review in their directors' reports. The new regulations will reinforce the Government's commitment to improving strategic, forward-looking narrative reporting.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Barnett formula will apply to the outcome of the 2007 comprehensive spending review; and if he will make a statement. [33777]

John Healey: The funding arrangements for the devolved Administrations are set out in the Statement of Funding Policy published in July 2004. The Government have no plans to replace the Barnett formula.

Construction Projects (Bank Accounts)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on introducing a requirement for all public sector contractors to establish project bank accounts for all construction projects coming on-stream; and if he will make a statement. [35479]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Government support fair payment practice within the construction industry. Clients within Government Departments must consider the most suitable approach to use on a case-by-case basis from the range of options open to them—including making use of project bank accounts.

It is important that clients are able to judge each case on its merits, as it is not at present considered appropriate to adopt a one-size-fits-all approach to the use of project bank accounts, or for that matter any other single payment mechanism, for all construction procurement activity.

Debt

Ed Balls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many households in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency have a level of debt above (i) £10,000, (ii) £20,000, (iii) £50,000 and (iv) £100,000; [35407]

(2) how many women in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency have debts of over £10,000; and how many of these are under 30-years-old. [35408]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 8 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions on the number of households and the number of women in West Yorkshire, Wakefield district and Normanton constituency that were more than £10,000 in debt (35407, 35408).

The information requested is not available.

The only information available is national data on debt per person or per household. At the end of 2004 debt per person nationally was £25,135; and debt per household was £48,185.

Golden Rule

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to commission independent assessments of the golden rule. [35442]

Mr. Des Browne: Progress against the golden rule is measured by the average annual surplus on the current budget as a percentage of GDP over the economic cycle.

Based on cautious audited assumptions underpinning the public finance forecast the PBR 2005 shows that the Government is meeting the golden rule in the current economic cycle.

HMRC (Investigations)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to speed up the response of HM Revenue and Customs to investigations by the parliamentary ombudsman. [35517]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs generally respond to inquiries from the parliamentary ombudsman promptly within the time limit set by her office, usually three weeks. Where there are difficulties in meeting the time limit, it is normal practice that arrangements are made with the ombudsman's office to agree an extension.

Income Growth

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average percentage increase was in net income in the UK over the past three years; and what the rate of inflation was over the same period. [34678]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking (a) what the average percentage increase was in net income in the UK over the past three years and (b) what the rate of inflation was over the same period, (34678)

(a) It has been assumed that the question relates to gross disposable income of the household sector. The latest information available for gross disposable income is for the second quarter of 20057 (2005Q2). The growth in this series over the three years to 2005Q2 was 12.4%; equivalent to an average of 4.0% per annum.

The series quoted is gross disposable income for the combined household and non-profit institutions, serving-households (NPISH) sectors. The accounts for the household and NPISH sectors are currently combined; separate estimates are not available.

(b) In the UK, there are two main measures of inflation, the Consumer Prices Index (GPI) and the Retail Prices Index (RPI). The Government's inflation target is based on the CPI. The Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee sets interest rates to meet this target. The RPI is the more familiar measure of inflation. Tax allowances, state benefits, pensions and many other payments are often revised in line with this index.

The figures are published each month on the National Statistics website, www.statistics.gov.uk, in a First Release, on a Tuesday about a month, after the index date. The publication dates are announced six months in advance.

The most recently available three-year period is for October 2002—October 2005. During this period, the CPI increased by 5.0 percent while the RPI increased by 6.9 percent.

The figures for the last three years are shown in full in Annex A. Figures are presented for both the CPI and the RPI. Monthly figures and the most recently available annual averages for the last three years are presented.

Interim Death Certificates

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance his Department has given to financial institutions on the acceptability of interim death certificates in permitting access by next-of-kin to funds held in the name of the deceased. [34956]

Dawn Primarolo: No guidance has been given to financial institutions by the Treasury on the acceptability of interim death certificates in permitting access by next-of-kin to funds held in the name of the deceased.

Low-income Families

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will encourage the use of credit unions among families on low incomes; and if he will make a statement. [35129]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government welcome the role credit unions play in promoting financial inclusion and recognises their contribution to choice and diversity in the financial services sector.

Measures announced at this PBR will facilitate an expansion in the use of credit unions among individuals and families on low incomes. In particular, the maximum rate that credit unions can charge on loans will be increased from 1 per cent. a month to 2 per cent. a month.

The new rate will allow credit unions to develop a more risk-based approach to lending, enabling them to offer affordable credit to more people on low incomes who currently rely on high rate lenders.

The Government have also announced changes that will enable credit unions to offer cash ISAs to their members. This follows changes announced at Budget 2005 to allow credit unions to offer child trust fund accounts. These measures complement a £36 million growth fund for credit unions and other community-based lenders, announced at PBR 2004, and to be administered by the Department for Work and Pensions from mid-2006.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London underground in connection with his official duties. [35017]

John Healey: The Chancellor regularly uses public transport in connection with his official duties. It would be inappropriate to disclose details on security grounds.

Older Workers

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women aged 50 to 65 years are available for work; and how many are employed (i) full-time and (ii) part-time. [34965]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 8 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about people aged 50–65 and their economic activity.

The attached table provides available information showing the number of people aged 50–64 who are in employment and working full or part time, also those who are unemployed. The table covers the twelve month period ending in August 2005.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Operating and Financial Review

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effect on company stakeholders of the non-implementation of the Operating and Financial Review; and if he will make a statement; [34839]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the cost to businesses in preparing for the implementation of the Operating and Financial Review; and if he will make a statement; [34840]

(3) what the reasons were for his decision to abandon the Operating and Financial Review; [34772]

(4) what estimate he has made of the cost to British companies of preparing to meet the requirements of the Operating and Financial Review; and if he will make a statement; [34773]

(5) what assessment he has made of the implications of his announcement of the removal of the obligation to publish operating and financial reviews for the Government's policy on company law reform; and if he will make a statement. [35009]

John Healey: The Government assessed the costs of implementing a statutory Operating and Financial Review against those of implementing an enhanced Business Review in a Regulatory Impact Assessment, which was published alongside the DTI's formal response to consultation. It was estimated that a statutory Operating and Financial Review would cost business £33 million per annum more than the Business Review. Most of these additional costs related to the different audit requirements applying to the OFR compared to the Business Review.

Consistent with its approach to company law reform of simplifying company law, reducing the regulatory burden on business and promoting effective shareholder engagement, the Government have concluded that a requirement for an enhanced Business Review, in line with the requirements of the European Accounts Modernisation Directive, is preferable to a requirement for a statutory Operating and Financial Review for quoted companies. The enhanced Business Review will meet key narrative reporting requirements, while imposing considerably less cost than the Operating and Financial Review. The new reporting regime demonstrates the Government's ongoing commitment to strategic forward looking narrative reporting.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what consultation he undertook with stakeholders before revoking the regulations covering the implementation of the Operating and Financial Review for FTSE listed companies; and if he will make a statement: [34841]

(2) what discussions he had with (a) the Confederation of British Industry, (b) the Department for Trade and Industry, (c) the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, (d) the Association of British Insurers and (e) the Sustainable Development Commission prior to his decision to abandon the Operating and Financial Review; and if he will make a statement; [34774]

(3) if he will list the organisations consulted on his decision to remove the obligation on businesses to publish operating and financial reviews; [35008]

(4) whether he consulted the (a) Operating and Financial Review Working Group and (b) Financial Reporting Council before his decision to remove the obligation on companies to publish an operating and financial review. [35012]

John Healey [holding answer 5 December 2005]: In line with the Government's commitment to simplifying company law and reducing the regulatory burden on business, the Government have decided to replace the requirement for quoted companies to produce a statutory Operating and Financial Review with a requirement to produce an enhanced Business Review. This aligns the reporting requirements of quoted companies with the requirements of the European Accounts Modernisation Directive and demonstrates the government's ongoing commitment to strategic forward-looking narrative reporting.

In considering the issues around removing the statutory OFR, the Government reviewed responses to the extensive consultation on the introduction of the OFR published by the DTI in December 2004.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will list those Private Members' Bills introduced under (a) Standing Order No. 14(6), (b) Standing Order No. 23 and (c) Standing Order No. 57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by his Department in each session since 1997–98. [36059]

John Healey: The information requested is not available.

R64–8 Forms

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many R64–8 forms have been (a) received and (b) processed successfully each month since May 2004; what target has been set for the speed of processing of form R64–8 in the central processing facility; what assessment he has made of the risk of a backlog of unprocessed R64–8 forms at 31 January 2006; how many centrally employed Inland Revenue staff are involved in processing R64–8 forms; what representations he has received regarding the decision to process R64–8 forms centrally rather than at local HM Revenue and Customs offices; what the average processing time was from receipt to completion for R64–8 forms received (i) prior to and (ii) since the centralising of processing; and if he will take steps to ensure that taxpayers are not penalised where an R64–8 form has been submitted but remains unprocessed at the last date for filing tax returns. [35183]

Dawn Primarolo: Prior to April 2005 this work was dealt with across the IR office network. To improve customer service, by ensuring consistency in treatment, the centralisation of this work began in April 2005. Statistics are only available from when the work was centralised in April 2005.

	64–8s received	64–8s processed
April 2005	136,845	51,800
May 2005	86,155	54,178
June 2005	88,301	70,407
July 2005	85,588	187,388
August 2005	104,289	125,195
September 2005	91,818	80,680
October 2005	96,665	96,864
November 2005	112,182	111,830

This work is subject to a turnaround target for correspondence of 15 working days. The current average turnaround time for processing the clerical forms 64–8 on all the relevant systems within NICO is 10 days and eight days for recording the 64–8 on the self assessment system.

Plans are in place to ensure that every effort is made to have no self assessment related forms on hand at 31 January 2006. We have introduced an online authorisation service which allows agents to set up client authorisations without the need to submit paper 64–8s.

At 2 December there were 129 full time equivalent staff working on processing 64–8 forms.

We anticipate processing more than 1 million 64–8 forms this financial year, 251 representations have been received about the process. Of those 57 per cent. have mentioned delays in the process. Only a very small proportion has specifically mentioned concerns about the centralisation of the process.

As mentioned above, the current average turnaround time for processing the clerical forms 64–8 on all the relevant systems within NICO is 10 days and eight days for recording on the self assessment system.

The online agent authorisation service is currently available. Existing guidance on HMRC's website or the leaflet COP1 gives taxpayers information on how to appeal against any penalties imposed by HMRC.

Research and Development (Tax Relief)

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of research and development tax reliefs and tax credits on companies' propensity to spend money on research and development. [35495]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 95W on R and D tax credits. The results from the survey of R and D companies referred to in that reply were published on the HM Revenue and Customs website on 2 December 2005 at www.hmrc.gov.uk/research/ The survey shows that the R and D tax credit has already had a positive impact since its introduction; half of those with a successful claim said that R and D tax credits had had some impact on either their R and D spend or R and D projects.

The survey results form the first part of the long-term evaluation of R and D tax credits. The Government remain committed to ongoing evaluation of the R and D tax credit and will continue to appraise its overall impact as further evaluation results build up over time.

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) small and medium-sized and (b) other companies have chosen (i) to offset research and development tax relief against current or future tax and (ii) to receive research and development tax credit as a cash sum in each year for which figures are available; what the total (A) turnover and (B) number of employees is of those companies in each case; and what the total value is of the tax (1) relief and (2) credit in each case. [35496]

John Healey: Data for small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) is published on the HM Revenue and Customs website at www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/corporate_tax/randdtcmenu. The data shows the number and value of claims for research and development (R and D) tax reliefs. The value of support claimed is classified as either reductions in corporation tax revenue from setting off R and D tax reliefs against profits, payable credits or a combination of both. The total turnover of companies claiming R and D tax reliefs under the SME scheme is shown in the following table.

2000–01	2,620
2001–02	6,630
2002–03	10,710
2003–04	14,100
2004–05	7,890
2005–06	220

Note:
Figures, particularly for later years, are subject to change as more claims are received.

Data for other companies (commonly called large companies) are shown in the following table. The claims and value of support for large companies relate only to reductions in corporation tax revenue from companies use of R and D tax reliefs to reduce their tax liabilities.

R and D tax relief: number of claims, value of support claimed and total turnover under the large company scheme

	Number of claims	Support claimed (£ million)	Total turnover (£ million)
2002–03	765	180	125,090
2003–04	1,080	320	135,650
2004–05	260	30	4,950

Notes:
1. Figures, particularly for later years, are subject to change as more claims are received.
2. The number of claims and total turnover are calculated according to the financial year in which the company's accounting period ends. The value of support claimed is calculated on a receipts-basis according to when tax receipts are foregone by HM Revenue and Customs.

Information is not available on the total number of employees of companies claiming R and D tax reliefs.

Small Businesses

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures his Department is preparing to take to reduce the burden of administration on small businesses. [35518]

John Healey: The Government set out in the pre-Budget report their approach to better regulation including the progress made in implementing the Better Regulation Task Force's and the Hampton Report's recommendations first announced in Budget 2005. The Treasury is fully committed to the implementation of these recommendations as they effect the department, in particular applying a risk-based approach to the regulation of financial services and measuring the administrative burdens of the Treasury's regulations on business as part of a government-wide project. The Government will set targets to reduce these administrative burdens on businesses, charities and the voluntary sector next year.

Tax Credits

Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many applications have been received for tax credit additional payments (a) in each year since the start of the scheme and (b) in each month for 2005–06; [35165]

(2) how many tax credit additional payments have been made (a) in each year since the start of the scheme and (b) in each month for 2005–06; and what the total value of these additional payments has been in each case; [35166]

(3) how many tax credit additional payments have been refused (a) in each year since the start of the scheme, (b) in each month for 2005–06 and (c) according to each of the grounds for rejection as set out in Code of Practice 26 (2005); [35167]

(4) how many tax credit additional payments have been made in (a) in-year overpayments and (b) end of year overpayments, broken down by the year in which the initial award was made. [35168]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the numbers of requests for additional tax credits payments, and the number refused, is not available.

For the number and value of additional payments made I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 331W.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's latest estimate is of the number of likely (a) overpayments and (b) underpayments in tax credits for 2004–05. [35722]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my right hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what proportion of small and medium-sized enterprises in Tamworth constituency were eligible for research and development tax credits in each of the last five years; and what the take-up was in each year. [35816]

John Healey: The information requested in relation to enterprises in Tamworth is not available.

For information generally on take-up of research and development tax credits I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Luton, South (Margaret Moran) of 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 991W, on tax credits.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Emissions/Noise

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department is taking to reduce emissions from aviation as a contribution to the shared Public Service Agreement climate change target to move towards a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions below 1990 levels by 2010. [35244]

Ms Buck: International aviation is outside the scope of our domestic targets, but we are taking action to tackle the climate change impact of aviation as set out in the Aviation White paper. This includes pressing for the inclusion of aviation in the EU emissions trading scheme. The Government are also pressing for the adoption by industry of working practices that minimise their impact on climate change, research into new technologies and voluntary action by industry to control greenhouse gas emissions. We recognise that these measures may not provide a total solution. In view of this, the Government will continue to explore and discuss options for the use of other economic instruments.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Government are taking to tackle aircraft emissions. [34155]

Ms Buck: The Government's plans to tackle aircraft emissions are set out in "The Future of Air Transport White Paper". On climate change, it sets out the Government's belief that the best way of ensuring aviation contributes towards the goal of climate stabilisation would be through a well-designed emissions trading regime, for which we are pressing at international and European level. At the local level, the Government are seeking powers through the Civil Aviation Bill to require the imposition of an emissions related element in airport charges where an air quality problem exists. We are also continuing to press for tighter standards for aircraft emissions and improved operational practice to reduce local emissions.

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that children's education is not affected by exposure to aircraft noise; what (a) standards and (b) guidelines for airlines apply in this area; and if he will make a statement. [33941]

Ms Buck: In its White Paper "The Future of Air Transport" the Government stated that larger UK airports—those with more than 50,000 movements a year—are expected to offer acoustic insulation to noise-sensitive buildings such as schools, which are exposed to medium to high levels of noise, that is 63 dBA Leq or more. The dBA value relates to the Leq 16 hour daytime period from 07.00 to 23.00.

The White Paper recognised the difficulties associated with insulating some noise-sensitive buildings. We say that where acoustic insulation cannot provide an appropriate or cost-effect solution, airport operators should endeavour to provide alternative mitigation measures such as environmental grants, provisions of quiet rooms for reading or music, or funding for school trips away from the noisy environment, especially where the loss of amenity outdoors may be severe. In such cases we expect the priority of need and the level of any contribution to be assessed on a case-by-case basis by the airport operator and relevant stakeholders.

BAA have announced its intention at Heathrow to work with relevant local authorities to set up a community-led body to take these decisions.

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the (i) impact of exposure to aircraft noise on the educational development of children and (ii) numbers of schoolchildren who may be affected by aviation-related noise. [33957]

Ms Buck: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs co-funded the European Community RANCH (Road Traffic and Aircraft Noise exposure and Children's Cognition and Health) Study.

This comprised three field studies of children around major airports in the UK, Spain and the Netherlands. In the UK children from 29 different schools around Heathrow took part.

The Government took the emerging results of this research into account when developing its environmental policies set out in "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper.

Full details of the RANCH study—as well as the earlier West London Schools Study—are on DEFRA'S website at www.defra.gov.uk

The study concluded that aircraft noise exposure was related to impaired performance in reading comprehension and recognition memory. In particular that the reading age in children exposed to high levels of aircraft noise was delayed by up to two months in the United Kingdom and by up to one month in the Netherlands for a 5dB change in noise exposure. It was not possible to calculate reading age for the Spanish test.

Aircraft noise was not associated with impairment of recall memory, working memory, prospective memory or sustained attention.

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with the Department for Education and Skills on the impact of aviation-related noise under Heathrow flight paths on children's learning. [35346]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport and the Department for Education and Skills are aware of the European Community RANCH (Road Traffic and Aircraft Noise exposure and Children's Cognition and Health) Study, which was co-funded by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. There have been no discussions between Departments specifically on the issues raised by the RANCH study, as they affect Heathrow. In the first instance these are matters for the local education authority.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the change in quantities of emissions produced by UK air travel in (a) 2030 and (b) 2050 compared with 2005; and what assumptions underlie those forecasts. [35236]

Ms Buck: Our forecasts for aviation and climate change, and the assumptions underlying them, are set out in Aviation and Global Warming, published by the Department for Transport in January 2004. The figures shown relate to estimates of emissions for all flights departing UK airports for 2030 and 2050, with an interpolated figure for 2005.

	Carbon emitted (Mt)

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what amount emissions trading is expected to reduce the Government's forecast of increased climate change emissions from aviation at 2030, expressed as a percentage and in absolute terms. [35237]

Ms Buck: At present, it is too early to provide a reliable estimate of the impact emissions trading will have on forecasts of emissions from aviation. This will depend on a number of factors including the overall number of allowances and the detailed design for the inclusion of aviation into the ED ETS. These factors have yet to be specified and will be subject to discussion with other member states' Governments.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what modelling the Government has undertaken of the impact of the trend in aviation's proportion of total UK emissions of greenhouse gases on the costs and reduction requirements of other UK emissions sectors with, particular reference to (a) business, (b) public services and (c) residential use. [35245]

Ms Buck: International aviation is outside the scope of our domestic targets. Domestic aviation was responsible for 0.38 per cent. of UK emissions in 2003. We have not undertaken any modelling of the impact that trends in these emissions would have on the costs and reduction requirements in other sectors.

Departmental Energy Consumption

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much energy has been consumed by his Department in each of the last five years; and how much was spent on energy in each year. [22463]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002 and as a result the information provided only relates from the years 2002–03 onwards.

The Department's energy consumption and spend are shown in the following table:

	kWh	Cost (£)
2002–03	63,611,113	2,190,786
2003–04	65,700,149	2,494,598
2004–05	79,740,062	2,753,353

The data above covers approximately 1,100 sites that range from large central HQ offices, regional training facilities, driving test centres, Maritime Rescue Sub Centres and vehicle testing stations.

Departmental Vacancies

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff vacancies there are in the railways sector of his Department. [35397]

Derek Twigg: The complement of the Rail Group is 259. There are currently 250 staff in post.

DVLA

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority has recently sold on information about licence holders to a third party. [35392]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The provisions governing the release of vehicle keeper data have been in place for over 40 years. Regulation (1)(e) of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002 allows DVLA to release information from the vehicle register to anyone who can demonstrate 'reasonable cause' to have it. 'Reasonable cause' is not defined in legislation and requests are considered on their merits.

DVLA's inquiry unit deals with approximately 30,000 requests for information each week. When details can lawfully be released, a fee of £2.50 is charged to prevent administrative costs being borne by the taxpayer.

When these provisions were introduced, the large numbers of vehicles currently on the roads, or the range of bodies requesting access was not anticipated. For these reasons, I have announced a review of regulations governing release of information early in the new year.

Fatal Road Accidents

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal road accidents occurred in the Leeds West constituency in each year between 1992 and 2005. [35255]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of fatal accidents in Leeds West constituency from 1994–2004 based on 2004 boundaries are given in the following table. Constituency data is not compiled prior to 1994.

	Fatal accidents
1995	3
1996	2
1997	6
1998	3
1999	2
2000	5
2001	5
2002	1
2003	3
2004	4

Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 562W, on festivals, how much was spent by the Department on the Celebration of Culture event on Friday 11 November 2005. [35795]

Ms Buck: The Department spent £300 on the Celebration of Culture event on Friday 11 November 2005.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 562W, on festivals, how much money was made available by his Department for staff to travel to (a) the Swansea Chinese Association's New Year Celebration, (b) the 2004 Diwali Event at the NEC in Birmingham and (c) the November 2005 Asian Mela Event at the NEC. [35819]

Ms Buck: The Highways Agency reimbursed a total of £200 in travel costs to enable three staff to represent the agency over two days at the 2004 Diwali event at the NEC in Birmingham, and reimbursed a total of £210 in travel costs to enable six staff to represent the agency over three days at the Asian Mela Event at the NEC.

Two members of DVLA's Diversity Team attended the Swansea Chinese Association's New Year Celebration in their own time and at no cost to the Department or DVLA.

Free Travel Provisions

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include (a) dial-a-ride and (b) community transport services in the provisions for free travel from April 2006. [35146]

Ms Buck: As is the case with the current statutory minimum entitlement, dial-a-ride and community transport services will not be included. Local authorities will have the discretion, as they do at present, to offer concessions on these services based on their judgment of local circumstances and their overall financial priorities.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32238]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002 therefore prior to that no information on any maladministration is available.

Public Transport (Disabled Access)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on access for disabled people to public transport. [35482]

Ms Buck: The Government are committed to an accessible public transport system in which disabled people have the same opportunities to travel as other members of society.

A great deal has already been achieved. For example, we have introduced regulations significantly improving access for disabled people to all new trains, buses and coaches; over 4,700 accessible rail vehicles will be in service by the end of 2005 and almost half of the bus fleet is already accessible across the country, with much higher proportions in many urban areas.

Measures in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 will further increase disabled people's rights when travelling by public transport. These include extending to transport services the "right of access" disabled people currently have to services such as shops and banks. The new Act also allows us to set an "end date", of no later than 1 January 2020, by which time all trains will have to be accessible. We are on course to implement these measures in December 2006 in line with our published timetable.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects all buses in (a) England and (b) Lancashire to be accessible by disabled people and those in wheelchairs. [35483]

Ms Buck: The Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations 2000 (as amended) require buses with a capacity of more than 22 passengers, used on or after 31 December 2000 to be accessible to disabled people including wheelchair users. The regulations set end dates of 1 January 2015 for small single deck buses, 1 January 2016 for large single deck buses and 1 January 2017 for double deck buses to comply with the regulations. After those dates all buses in service will be accessible. Bus operators are free to choose how and where they introduce compliant buses, often leading to higher concentrations of accessible buses in major cities.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve access to public transport for disabled people in Swindon. [33227]

Ms Buck: We have introduced "accessibility planning" into the local transport planning process to encourage local authorities and other agencies to assess more systematically whether people can access transport services in their areas. This process covers all forms of transport from buses, coaches and taxis to cycling and walking networks. Making provision for disabled people is a condition against which the resulting Local Transport Plans (LTPs) are assessed.

Swindon borough council is using its LTP funding for an on-going programme of improvements at bus stops that will assist disabled passengers. The programme involves provision of raised kerbs at bus stops to minimise the step height between the pavement and the bus. This allows easier access for wheelchair users and for other people who have difficulty with high steps such as many older people.

Routes to bus stops are also being improved with new link paths and dropped-kerb road crossings and bus Stop Clearways are introduced to ensure that parked cars do not obstruct the stops allowing buses to pull up alongside the raised kerbs.

Local bus operators are providing new accessible low floor buses in Swindon and the Local Transport Plan funding to improve bus stops will allow the benefits of this investment in new vehicles to be maximised.

Rail services in Swindon are already accessible to disabled people. The station has lifts to all platforms and recent access improvements have been made to the forecourt and bus stop areas.

At a national level there has been significant progress in making public transport accessible to disabled people through regulations made under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA 1995). We made the Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations in 2000 and many of the trains calling at the station comply with those. Although the older rolling stock serving Swindon doesn't comply it can nevertheless accommodate passengers travelling in a wheelchair.

More generally disabled people in Swindon as elsewhere in the country will also benefit from the provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005). We have already laid regulations which will, from December 2006, lift the transport exemption in Part 3 of the for land-based public transport, vehicle hire, breakdown services and vehicles used on leisure and tourism transport services. We will also be consulting shortly on draft regulations to set an "end date" of no later than 1 January 2020 for when all trains will have to meet the rail vehicle accessibility regulations and to apply those regulations to older trains when they are refurbished.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32839]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport is committed to valuing diversity and promoting equality. The Department's Race Equality Scheme 2005–08 covers the activities of the Department and its executive agencies as an employer as well as a policy maker and service provider.

Race Equality Impact Assessments are being completed across all areas of our business. From April 2004 to March 2005 the Department for Transport has completed eight Race Equality Impact Assessments, two of which have resulted in policy changes.

No centrally co-ordinated figures are yet available for the period April 2005 to November 2005 as we collect statistics on an annual basis. These figures will be collected as part of our next race equality data monitoring exercise and published in our 2005–06 Race Equality Report.

Railways

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with rail operating companies about fares. [35484]

Derek Twigg: None.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will take steps (a) to re-establish and (b) to improve rail services between Leeds City Centre and the towns and villages in the outlying areas of Leeds metropolitan district council; and if he will make a statement; [33999]

(2) if he will take steps to re-open rail services to East Ardsley. [34000]

Derek Twigg: There are no plans to re-establish rail services between Leeds city centre and the outlying areas of Leeds metropolitan district council or East Ardsley. The Department nevertheless continues to work with West Yorkshire passenger transport executive which has responsibility for rail services in this area, to secure improvements, based on proposals that show value for money and affordability.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the impact of the returned rolling stock to the c2c Fenchurch Street line on the availability of seats for commuters entering the line at Benfleet Station; and if he will make a statement; [34818]

(2) if he will make a statement on the return of rolling stock to the c2c Fenchurch Street line; and when stock will be available to commuters. [34819]

Derek Twigg: Of the five units transferred away in May 2004, three returned to service on c2c in September. This allowed capacity increases on three morning and three evening peak services, all of which call at Benfleet. The other two units are due to return to c2c by the end of this month.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32590]

Ms Buck: The number of employees who are within one year of the official retirement age (age 60) is 424, and the number of those who are on extended sick leave (over 6 months) is 11.

The Department is committed to managing sick absence effectively and to putting in place the recommendations of the 'Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector' report. The DfT Board takes an active interest in the issue of attendance management, and a number of steps have already been taken.

The 'Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector' report covers a requirement for Departments to demonstrate progress against four generic recommendations:

line managers are trained in both systems and procedures and the skills to deal with absence management; departmental HR support should enable moves towards integrating absence and performance management;

all public sector organisations should review individual cases and case management arrangements for long-term sick absences (e.g. over six months); departments should consider whether recruitment procedures are robust in terms of pre-employment checks as to an individual's absence record.

The consumption data has been 'weather corrected' by the Building Research Establishment as part of their work in analysing the annual Government energy data.

The Department is on course to meet the target in the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate to source at least 10 per cent. electricity from renewable sources by 2008, and a range of actions are currently under way in our HQ buildings, including the commissioning of a Carbon Trust energy audit, to minimise our energy usage. Our executive agencies are undertaking similar actions to meet the energy targets contained in the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate.

SRA (Former Staff)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many former Strategic Rail Authority staff have been employed by his Department. [35396]

Derek Twigg: 161 former SRA staff have been employed by the Department for Transport.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff the Strategic Rail Authority employed prior to its abolition. [35398]

Derek Twigg: As at 31 March 2005, before functions and staff began to transfer to successor organisations, the Strategic Rail Authority employed 404 staff.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many statutory instruments introduced by his Department had to be (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps he (1) is taking and (2) plans to take to prevent this. [34257]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002 since then no statutory instrument produced by it has been withdrawn or reprinted on account of defective drafting.

The Department's records reveal that in that period 16 statutory instruments have been amended by a further instrument in order to correct defective drafting in an earlier instrument. This number breaks down by parliamentary Session as follows:

	Number
2001–02	1
2002–03	3
2003–04	5

During this period the Department produced over 520 general statutory instruments.

The Department endeavours to keep the number of defective instruments to a minimum through the provision of training for officials involved in this work and a system involving checking by two lawyers in addition to the principal drafter. The present arrangements are being reviewed.

Tyne and Wear (Financial Bids)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what payments have been made to Newcastle city council and its partners for the Quayside Transit System, broken down by year. [34378]

Ms Buck: The Department has paid Newcastle city council a total of £7.211 million for the Quayside Public Transport Scheme, broken down by financial year as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	1.050
2002–03	0.526
2003–04	0.708
2005–06	0.317

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when rail passenger partnership funding for the reopening of the Newcastle-Blyth-Ashington freight line to passenger traffic will be made available. [34379]

Derek Twigg: The Rail Passenger Partnership fund was suspended by the Strategic Rail Authority in January 2003. No new projects have been funded since that date.

US Aircraft

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions since 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P and (b) N313P has landed in the United Kingdom; and at which airports. [33246]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport has no record of these aircraft landing at UK airports, which indicates that if these aircraft landed in the UK they were either not involved in civil commercial transport or that they were stopping for technical purposes, for example, to refuel. As such they would not require the Secretary of State for Transport's permission.

Vehicle Accidents (Airport Transport)

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle accidents where drivers of airport transport had exceeded the driving time limit set down in the UK domestic drivers' hours rules have been recorded in the last three years. [35429]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Vehicle Certification Agency

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons the salary of the chief executive of the Vehicle Certification Agency differs from that of his predecessor. [35827]

Ms Buck: The current chief executive of the Vehicle Certification Agency (VGA) was recruited through fair and open competition and was appointed in post from 19 April 2004 on a three-year fixed-term contract.

The advertised salary at the time reflected the competitive market conditions relevant for the skills and experience the agency was looking for when the post was advertised. The competition field was strong and the most suitable candidate was appointed as chief executive based on competency skills and experience identified by the selection panel.

Violence Against Passengers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Guildford of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1151W, on violence against passengers, how many victims of violence were recorded by British Transport Police in each police force area in England and Wales in each year since 1998–99. [31835]

Derek Twigg: The number of victims of violence recorded by the British Transport Police (BTP) in each year in each police force area in England and Wales since 1999–2000 is given in the following table. The data for 1998–99 data is unavailable by police force area.

The Home Office introduced a National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) that all police forces across England and Wales were required to adopt. BTP adopted this standard on 1 April 2002. The impact of the new recording standard saw an increase in recorded crime nationally.

BTP have also been proactive in encouraging victims of assaults to report these offences.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Government Art Collection

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the estimated cost of damage to the Government Art Collection was in the past 12 months for which figures are available; which items were damaged; how the damage occurred in each case; and whether restoration was possible. [34375]

Mr. Lammy: The estimated cost of restoration work resulting from damage to GAC works of art in the last 12 months is £20,249, of which £1,142 was paid by the GAC The works of art affected are as follows:

Beatrice marble bust by F Saul

The bust was chipped during transport. Restoration was completed at a cost of £550.

Embassy (evening) light-box by Catherine Yass

Received a scratch and scuffs to the surface while on display. Restoration is possible; the estimate is £310.

Lady Arabella Stuart (1575–1615) Cousin of King James I and VI oil painting by Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger

The canvas was punctured while on display. Restoration was completed at a cost of £282.

Sir Henry Chamberlain Bt (1773–1829) Diplomat oil painting by an unknown 19th century British artist

The canvas was punctured while in temporary storage. Restoration was completed at a cost of £1,642.

High Treason, Court of Criminal Appeal: the Trial of Sir Roger Casement 1916 oil painting by John Lavery

The canvas was punctured while on display. Restoration was completed at a cost (including transport) of £14,465.

Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford (1676–1745) Prime Minister oil painting by Jean Baptiste van Loo (Studio)

The canvas was punctured while on display. Restoration is possible; the estimate is £3,000.

Devotional screenprint by Sonia Boyce

Received a scratch and scuff to the surface while on display. Restoration is under discussion with the artist.

London Olympics

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the acquisition of land for Olympic use. [33609]

Mr. Caborn: The London Development Agency (IDA) is responsible for acquiring the land in East London that will be needed for the Olympics and has recently made two compulsory purchase orders to this end. Other regional development agencies (RDAs) at Olympic sites elsewhere in the UK will also be able to acquire land (compulsorily or by agreement) if that proves necessary. Under the London Olympics Bill, currently before Parliament, the new Olympic Delivery Authority will have powers to acquire land by agreement—including, with the consent of the Secretary of State, on the same terms as for compulsory purchases.

The Government made an amendment to the London Olympics Bill at Report Stage, on 6 December, which will ensure the necessary land can be assembled without delay and used for Olympic development. Where a RDA purchases land for the purpose of preparing for the Olympics, the amendment has the effect of removing the need for a special parliamentary process to approve the compulsory purchase of 'special land' where equivalent land is not being provided in exchange; clarifying that 'special land', once acquired, can be built on; allowing the compulsory purchase of Crown land and any interest in Crown land; and extinguishing all existing rights over the land acquired (while providing for compensation to those who have rights removed).

Anyone owning an interest in land that is being acquired by compulsory purchase will be entitled to fair compensation, based on the principle that they should be paid neither more or less than their loss. If the amount payable cannot be agreed between the parties it will be settled by the Lands Tribunal.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to ensure that firms engaged in construction of facilities for the Olympics provide adequate levels of training to ensure a sustainable skilled work force. [34964]

Mr. Caborn: The 'Procurement Principles' published by the interim Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) in September—which underpin the development of the ODA's procurement strategy—identify the importance of a programme of skills and training to maximise local benefits and secure the wider economic dividend.

A key assessment criterion in the selection of contractors will be their commitment to working with the ODA to deliver a range of benefits including training and supply chain initiatives.

In addition, the London Development Agency, working with others such as the Learning and Skills Council, is developing a Local Employment and Training Framework which aims to maximise the potential capacity of the local labour market.

School Sports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) advice and (b) other support her Department provides to (i) schools and (ii) the Department for Education and Skills to encourage a wider range of sporting activities to be provided in schools. [35516]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the Department for Education and Skills share an ambitious Public Service Agreement target to increase the percentage of 5 to 16-year-olds who spend a minimum of two hours a week on high quality PE and school sport, within and beyond the curriculum, to 75 per cent. by 2006 and 85 per cent. by 2008. Long-term—by 2010—we want to offer children the chance to do at least four hours of sport every week.

The target is being delivered through the national PE, School Sport and Club Links (PESSCL) strategy being implemented jointly by both Departments. Over £1.5 billion is being invested over the five years to 2008 to deliver the strategy through nine inter-linked programmes of work.

We have produced a range of guidance documents including:

'High Quality PE and Sport for Young People—A Guide to recognising and achieving high quality PE and sport in schools and clubs';

'Do You Have High Quality PE and Sport in Your School—A guide to self-evaluating and improving the quality of PE and school sport';

'Swimming Charter';

'Primary Playground Development'; and which provide information and advice to school sport partnerships, schools, sport clubs, local education authorities, national governing bodies, county sport partnerships and others.

The 2004–05 School Sport Survey, the largest in Europe, confirms that the national strategy is on track to meet the public service agreement target. The survey found that overall 69 per cent. of pupils in the 11,400 schools taking part were spending at least two hours in a typical week on high quality PE and school sport. In 2003–04 the figure was 62 per cent.

Copies of the guidance documents and the survey reports have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

English Regions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals for regional question time sessions in the House for each of the English regions. [35515]

Mr. Hoon: I organise the question rota on the basis of ministerial responsibilities. Issues relating to particular regions can be raised with the relevant departmental Ministers. Issues relating to the work of the Government offices for the regions can be raised during oral questions to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House (1) which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) have a statutory base, (b) publish their advice to Government, (c) publish an annual report and (d) lay an annual report before Parliament; and if he will indicate in each instance whether this is under a statutory requirement; [34672]

(2) which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings; and whether in each case this is under a statutory requirement. [34673]

Nigel Griffiths: The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons does not sponsor any advisory non-departmental public bodies.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what the target time is for answering written parliamentary questions. [35973]

Mr. Hoon: Ministers have an obligation to Parliament to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer an ordinary written question within a working week of it being tabled.

Ministers and their Departments should make every effort to ensure that the live bundle of questions still awaiting a substantive reply should be kept to a minimum at all times.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

UK Passport Fees

Lynne Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to his written statement of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 76WS, on UK passport fees, if he will break down the elements which contribute to the increase; and how much is accounted for by increased production costs. [32856]

Andy Burnham: I have been asked to reply.

The passport fee increase reflects the cost of implementing key anti-fraud measures to combat the rapidly growing threat of passport and identity fraud and forgery. This increase will support enhanced background checks on applicants, the gradual introduction of biometric passports and face-to-face interviews for first-time applicants.

The component elements of the standard passport fee are published on the UK Passport Service official website www.passport.gov.uk Reproduced in the table as follows. With the exception of a modest increase in administration costs of £0.22 per application all other aspects of the increase directly relate to costs associated with the service provided to the customer.

Application processing	14.02
Consular protection	9.65
Book production	5.00
Secure delivery	3.00
Anti-fraud initiatives	14.51
Administrative	4.82

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Devolved Legislatures

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Law Officers' Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) NAW, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [34537]

The Solicitor-General: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case by case basis. This consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note #12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures"; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many United Kingdom cases are awaiting hearing before the European Court of Human Rights. [34534]

The Solicitor-General: Oral hearings before the Court are now the exception rather than the rule. There are 88 cases against the United Kingdom pending before the European Court of Human Rights that have been declared admissible by the Court. A further 352 cases have been communicated to the Government on which an admissibility decision is awaited.

I have now ascertained that, regrettably, the information provided in an earlier answer to a question by my hon. Friend the former member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on the same issue on 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1104W, was not accurate in that it appears to have included a group of cases known as Widowers cases as admissible which had only been communicated. There are 71 Widowers cases which have been declared admissible and 319 which have been communicated but on which there has not yet been a decision on admissibility.

NORTHERN IRELAND

CCTV

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which groups have been consulted regarding possible CCTV cameras in West Belfast; and on what dates meetings have taken place. [31935]

Mr. Hain: The Chief Constable has advised me that West Belfast District Command Unit has consulted all sections of the local community including clergy, elected representatives, statutory and voluntary groups and the Northern Ireland Office. This consultation process took place over the past three years, and is on-going.

Fair Recruitment

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account the Equality Commission takes of recent recruitment when examining the religious breakdown of the public sector work force in Northern Ireland. [34424]

Angela E. Smith: I understand that the chief executive of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland, Ms Evelyn Collins, has written to the hon. Gentleman in the following terms:

"The Equality Commission considers that recent recruitment is an important component when examining the overall trends in the composition of the public sector work force in Northern Ireland. Public authorities are required to monitor the composition of their work force, applicants, appointees, leavers and promotees. This information is provided to the Commission on an annual basis. The Commission monitors overall compositional trends and makes this information public in its annual monitoring report, "Profiling the Northern Ireland Workforce". In relation to individual employers the Commission monitors employment trends through the annual monitoring returns and in greater detail through the article 55 Review process where employers analyse their own employment trends at least once every three years."

Fisheries Patrols

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patrols were undertaken by the Fisheries Conservancy Board patrol boat around the Foyle and Bush rivers on Northern Ireland's North Coast area in the last year for which figures are available; what the (a) nature and (b) extent of co-operation with the Loughs Agency patrol vessel about these patrols was; and on how many days during the 2005 angling and netting season the patrol boat was not in use. [35356]

Mr. Hanson: In 2005, 21 boat patrols were carried out on Northern Irelands North Coast. These patrols occurred during the peak of the Foyle netting season and as such involved regular contact with the Foyle patrol boat. The North Coast patrol boat is not involved in angling enforcement. During the netting season in the FCB jurisdiction, the boat was not in use for approximately 108 days.

Home Heating Oil

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the cost of home heating oil in Northern Ireland. [34555]

Angela E. Smith: The cost of home heating oil in Northern Ireland is determined by a competitive market and, on average, has been lower than the equivalent cost in the remainder of the United Kingdom.

The competitive market reflects developments in the international oil market. Global oil prices have been high and volatile over the past eighteen months as a result of very strong growth in global demand and accompanying pressure on supplies. Most recently, disruptions to US Gulf of Mexico production and refining capacity, as a result of hurricanes Katrina and Rita, led to prices rising to record levels in early September 2005. These developments were reflected in a corresponding record increase in the price of home heating oil in Northern Ireland.

A recovery of global oil production and refining facilities, together with a slight reduction in demand has resulted in a subsequent moderation of prices. This, in turn, has led to a corresponding reduction in the average price of home heating oil in Northern Ireland.

Isle of Man (Fishing Jurisdiction)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) discussions, (b) meetings and (c) correspondence he has had with the Isle of Man Government in relation to the extent of its fishing jurisdiction; and if he will make a statement. [35317]

Angela E. Smith: There have been no discussions or meetings between the Isle of Man Government and Department of Agriculture and Rural Development Ministers in relation to extent of the Isle of Man's fishing jurisdiction. DEFRA Ministers have had correspondence from the Isle of Man Government regarding their proposal to extend the fishing jurisdiction around the island from three to 12 miles. DEFRA consulted stakeholders on this proposal in the summer and a decision on the outcome of the consultation will be communicated to the Isle of Man Government in due course.

Maritime Safety

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what publicly funded training is available for lifeguards in Northern Ireland. [18227]

Angela E. Smith: The Royal Life Saving Society (RLSS) UK awards the National Pool Lifeguard Qualification at accredited centres across the United Kingdom including many in Northern Ireland. Provision is mainly based in local leisure centres and pool lifeguards can also train for the National Aquatic Rescue Standard.

The RLSS UK also awards the National Beach Lifeguard Qualification and the Assistant Beach Lifesaver Award which are offered through local lifeguard clubs.

Motoring Offences

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been prosecuted for driving while not insured in each of the last 10 years, broken down by constituency. [34549]

Mr. Hanson: Prosecution data are not readily available broken down by Northern Ireland constituency. The statistics included within the response are based on the 12 police divisions for the years 1994 to 1999 and police district command units for 2000 to 2003. Police district command units became operational in April 2001. However, for the purposes of comparability, calendar year 2000 data are also disaggregated by DCU, rather than police division. It is not possible to disaggregate data by DCU for years prior to 2000.

With the exception of overall totals, figures in table 1 should not be compared with those in table 2, as table 1 figures relate to the police division to which an offence was reported, while those included within table 2 relate to the police district command unit in which an offenders address falls.

Data beyond 2003 will become available in early 2006.

Notes:

1. Offences include 'no insurance' and 'causing no insurance'.
2. Police stations included within brackets are the divisional headquarters.
3. Figures are based on the principal rule, thus only the most serious offence for which an offender is charged is recorded.

[1] Figures relate to the police district command unit in which an offender's address falls. Missing data relate to those offenders for which DCU information is not available.

Notes:

1. Offences include 'no insurance' and 'causing no insurance'.
2. Figures are based on the principal rule, thus only the most serious offence for which an offender is charged is recorded.

Murder and Manslaughter

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were (a) charged with and (b) convicted of (i) murder and (ii) manslaughter in Northern Ireland in each year since 1995. [33086]

Mr. Hanson: Figures for the number of offences of murder and manslaughter cleared by a charge/summons are provided in Table 1 and cover the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05.

The prosecution and conviction statistics included within Table 2 cover the calendar years 1995 to 2003. Data beyond 2003 will become available in early 2006.

It should be noted that statistics in Table 1 are based on offences cleared and subsequently charged, while data in Table 2 relate to the number of persons prosecuted and convicted. As such, comparisons between the two tables are not appropriate.

Police

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by name each group consulted by the Police Service of Northern Ireland before the installation of CCTV cameras in (a) East Belfast, (b) North Belfast and (c) South Belfast; and how many times each group was consulted in each case. [31934]

Mr. Hain: The Chief Constable has advised me that no precise records are held that can show exactly how many times consultation occurred. In addition, the confidentiality of many community consultations and contacts must be respected.

East Belfast

The CCTV cameras in East Belfast were installed in three phases.

(i) A single camera was installed at Albert Bridge/Lagan Walkway in 1998 after consultation with Laganside Corporation, Belfast city council and BT who were the partners in that CCTV scheme. Its role was primarily to prevent antisocial behaviour in the new Laganside development area.

(ii) The second phase was in 2001 and consisted of two cameras at Madrid Street and Newtownards Road respectively. There was no consultation with community groups prior to the initiation of planning work.

Sinn Fein and Loyalist community representatives were informed about the positioning of the Madrid Street and Newtownards Road cameras in 2001 prior to the installation of the equipment.

(iii) The third phase consisted of five cameras that were erected in 2002 after the prolonged violence that summer. No consultation was carried out prior to the installation as there was a clear operational need to provide a technological alternative to the use of large numbers of police and military personnel in the Cluan Place/Short Strand area. Representatives from Sinn Fein, DUP, UUP and a loyalist community group were informed of the intention to erect cameras prior to their installation.

South Belfast

The CCTV system in operation in South Belfast was developed more than 10 years ago. As with most developments in the city centre, police would have spoken with city council, planning authorities, the Chamber of Commerce and other relevant groups in the area.

North Belfast

Between 1 June 2001 and 31 May 2002 174 riots occurred in North Belfast in which 723 police officers were injured. The initial roll out of CCTV in North Belfast was undertaken by PSNI as an urgent response to the on-going interface violence in the DCU, with no time for community consultation.

The initial cameras were situated at the main flashpoints including Limestone Road, Ardoyne Shopfronts, North Queen Street/Duncairn Gardens, Whitewell Road and Ardoyne Road.

The second phase roll out allowed for wider community-based consultation, including community representatives, political representatives and other interested parties. The exact timing of such contacts is not held.

Primary Schools (Intake)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Department of Education funded primary schools in Northern Ireland had a September intake of fewer than (a) 12 and (b) nine pupils in P1 classes. [35321]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information is as follows:

Number of funded primary schools with fewer than 12 pupils in Year 1—290.

Number of funded primary schools with fewer than nine pupils in Year 1—193.

Sports Academy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the decision to establish a sports academy at the university of Ulster has been subject to an equality impact assessment; and if he will make a statement. [34607]

Angela E. Smith: In line with legislative requirements, the university carries out equality impact assessments where there is evidence to indicate that there may be differential impacts on one or more of the categories set out in the section 75 legislation; in this case, I understand that the university determined that it was not required.

Surplus School Places

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what strategic planning his Department has undertaken to address surplus school places in Northern Ireland. [35320]

Angela E. Smith: Surplus places are removed from the schools estate through closures and amalgamations, and through the capital programme which provides schools to meet long-term demand when buildings are replaced. The education and library boards and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools are aware of the need to take action to tackle surplus places and I have offered some financial support towards the costs of bringing forward rationalisation proposals.

Following a review of the procurement and delivery arrangements for the schools' estate earlier this year, the Department of Education has been examining how to improve the planning of school provision in future, including the need for rationalisation, and intends to provide guidance to school authorities on longer term planning of the estate.

Sustainable Development

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what resources have been invested by the Department of the Environment in taking forward the sustainable development strategy; and if he will make a statement. [35344]

Angela E. Smith: It is recognised that in recent years a substantial amount of the Department of the Environment's environmental policy resource was directed towards reducing the backlog in the transposition of EU directives. This had a detrimental effect on the production of the Northern Ireland sustainable development strategy. With work on the directives largely up to date the Department allocated resources to take forward the sustainable development strategy in April 2004. From September 2005 this team was increased to six staff equating in monetary terms to c. £210,000 annually.

Tourism

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to emphasise (a) the Ulster Scots connection and (b) the Scots Irish influence in the promotion of Northern Ireland as a tourist destination, with particular reference to visitors from the United States. [31278]

Angela E. Smith: Activity to harness the tourism opportunity presented by the Ulster Scots culture requires close working between a number of agencies.

In 2003–04 Tourism Ireland Ltd. (TIL) undertook a number of activities specifically aimed at the Ulster Scots audience in the United States. Advertisements were placed in US-based publications and TIL also distributed Ulster Scots Agency publications to key players throughout the United States. In addition, research undertaken by TIL in 2003 on the Ulster Scots market was used to inform the Northern Ireland Tourist Board's marketing activities in the current year.

TIL has the job to attract visitors to Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) has the responsibility to ensure that they have a worthwhile, authentic and memorable experience when they get here.

In order to deliver on the potential of the Ulster Scots connection, NITB has identified the need for a brochure which will tell the Northern Ireland story and encourage additional visits. The NITB has worked with the Ulster Scots Agency in the preparation of a new publication targeted specifically at United States visitors. The publication will be available in January 2006.

In 2007 Northern Ireland will be featured in the Smithsonian Institution's annual Folklife festival which takes place in Washington DC and attracts over one million visitors. The Smithsonian Institution intends to present a balanced, multi-faceted programme reflecting Northern Ireland's contemporary life. Ulster Scots traditions are included in the research for the festival programme.

Union Flag

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what buildings in Northern Ireland are designated as Government buildings for the purposes of flying the Union flag on designated days; on what date Churchill House was removed as a Government building for that purpose; and what other recent changes have been made to the list of Government buildings so designated. [34769]

Mr. Hanson: The specified Government buildings are listed in Part I of the Schedule of the Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000. These are Adelaide House, Castle Buildings, Churchill House, Clarence House, Dundonald House, Netherleigh House and Rathgael House. There have been no amendments to Part I of the Schedule since the regulations came into force and therefore Churchill House has not been removed.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Assets

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 10 most valuable (a) movable and (b) immovable assets owned by his Department. [27379]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has listed all its valuable movable and immovable assets, as underpinned in the 2004–05 resource accounts:

£000

	Net book value
Movable
Equipment	62
IT hardware	47
Software	35
Immovable
Dover House, London	1,090
Fixtures and fittings	121

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33257]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not own or rent any land or own any properties. However, the Office rents two buildings, which are detailed as follows:

Name and address	Constituency
Dover House, Whitehall, London, SW1A 2AU	Cities of London and Westminster
1 Melville Crescent, Edinburgh, EH3 7HW	Edinburgh North and Leith

The Office also has a small presence in the following properties:

Name and address	Constituency
Meridian Court, Cadogan Street, Glasgow, G2 6AT	Glasgow Central
50 Frederick Street, Edinburgh, EH2 1NG	Edinburgh North and Leith

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff in his Department were (a) civil servants, (b) contractors and (c) other staff in each year since 1997. [27455]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999.

The number of civil servants working in the Office can be found in Civil Service Statistics, published by the Cabinet Office. This publication is available in the Library or online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/index.asp

The Scotland Office has not employed any contractors.

The total numbers of temporary staff in the Scotland Office and Office of the Advocate-General was:

	Number of individual temporary staff
1999–2000	13
2000–01	16
2001–02	19
2002–03	15
2003–04	20
2004–05	6

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31113]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has a very limited number of executive functions and at this stage we do not anticipate any need to integrate our IT system with the identity card scheme.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of his Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32596]

David Cairns: All the staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs. No staff within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Employment Rights

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reason was for the recent withdrawal of booklets on employment rights by the Department; and if he will re-introduce the publication of those booklets. [35528]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 7 December 2005]: It is our aim to provide up to date information that meets our end users' needs. Our end users have generally told us that they do not need detailed explanations of the law, but rather practical advice and guidance on what they should actually do in respect of employment issues. The Department decided that the best way to deliver this service was through frontline providers such as ACAS who are closer to our end users. ACAS produces a series of booklets summarising individual rights and runs a helpline to provide practical advice. I understand that feedback on these has generally been very positive.

The Department continues to provide full explanations of employment law for those customers who need it on the internet. Providing this information via the internet enables officials to update text easily and avoid delays to users. Special measures are in place for hard copies of these publications to be provided for those with disabilities or without access to the internet.

EU Tariffs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the EU's average applied tariff rate on (a) agricultural and (b) non agricultural imports from the rest of the world was on the last date for which figures are available; and what the average rates would be if the EU's current offer in the World Trade Organisation is accepted. [34764]

Ian Pearson: The information is as follows.

(a) The EU's average applied tariff on agricultural imports in 2005, as reported in the WTO statistical database, is 5.9 per cent. The EU offer represents an average tariff reduction of 39 per cent. for the EU agricultural tariff schedule, but the resulting average applied tariff will depend on which tariff lines are selected as sensitive products.

(b) The EU's average applied tariff on non-agricultural imports in 2005, as reported in the WTO statistical database, is 4.0 per cent. If the EU offer is accepted the resulting average tariff would be 2.3 per cent.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account was taken by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in advancing a guarantee to Mabey and Johnson Ltd. on 30 August for the supply of flyovers and bridges in the Philippines of a complaint registered against the project with the Philippines ombudsman on 9 August. [33931]

Ian Pearson: ECGD was made aware of the complaint which is being investigated by the Philippines ombudsman. It consists of a number of unproven allegations relating to an earlier project. As such, ECGD concluded that there were no grounds to withhold its guarantee.

Fur Import Ban

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to ban the import of cat and dog fur from China; and what penalties he has power to impose on those found to have breached such a ban. [34606]

Ian Pearson: The Government share the ethical abhorrence felt on hearing reports of cruelty to domestic cats and dogs. However, to date, the Government have no evidence of imports of domestic cat and dog fur into the UK. In a statement to Parliament on 28 January 2005 the Government made it clear that they are committed to establishing the facts about this issue and taking practical and proportionate action in response. We continue to believe, given EU competence on commercial policy, that any action is best pursued at EU level. We continue to discuss this with the European Commission.

Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the timetable is for his Department's proposals to amend the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996. [35480]

Alun Michael: Officials at the Department of Trade and Industry and Welsh Assembly Government are currently preparing an analysis of the responses to the consultation and will be publishing it shortly. We have already committed to consult further on amendments to the legislation. Current plans are to issue this consultation in spring next year. The timetable for amendment to the legislation will be dependant on the outcome of this consultation and parliamentary business.

Operating and Financial Review

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's implementation of the Modernisation Directive requirements for an expanded directors' report for large and medium-sized companies following the Government's decision to abolish the operating and financial review; [35013]

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's implementation of the Companies Act 1985 (Operating and Financial Review and Directors' Report etc.) Regulations 2005 (S.I. 2005/1011). [35014]

Alun Michael: The Government intend to bring forward regulations, before the recess, under section 257 of the Companies Act 1985 to repeal the provisions of that Act which impose obligations on companies in relation to the preparation of operating and financial reviews. The regulations will leave in place those provisions of the Companies Act 1985 relating to the requirements to prepare a business review which are necessary to implement the Accounts Modernisation Directive (2003/51/EC). We will also bring forward amendments to the Company Law Reform Bill in due course.

Research and Development

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value is of research and development grants awarded to companies in Northamptonshire in each year since 1997. [36144]

Alun Michael: From 1997 to 2004, businesses in Northamptonshire were awarded a total of £1,567,699 through Grant for Research and Development and the legacy Smart scheme as shown in the following table:

	Value of offers (£)
1997	131,453
1998	214,051

2001	203,800
2002	285,000

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many research and development grants have been awarded to companies in the (a) micro, (b) research, (c) development and (d) exceptional category of his Department's research and development programme in each year for which figures are available, broken down by region; what the total value was of private sector contributions to funded projects in each year and category; and what the nearest available equivalent information is for predecessor schemes in each of the previous five years. [35501]

Alun Michael: The number of grant for research and development awards since the product's introduction in June 2003 is shown in the following tables together with the total value of private sector contributions.

Small Businesses

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in his discussions with Government Departments towards implementing a mandatory small business research initiative programme. [35493]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, mandated departments to participate in the Small Business Research Initiative in the Budget on 16 March this year and the DTI's Small Business Service will shortly be publishing the overall performance figures, for 2003–04 and 2004–05.

The Government are taking steps to improve disclosure of SBRI performance by Departments and a new system of record keeping will be in place from April 2006.

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he will use to ascertain whether the mandatory Small Business Research Initiative is a success. [35500]

Alun Michael: The Small Business Research Initiative target is that at least 2.5 per cent. of the value of the extramural research and development contracts of Government Departments' and agencies' will be placed with small firms. The Initiative will be considered a success when we are able to demonstrate that this has been achieved.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses have started in Coventry, South with the help of the Small Business Service since its inception; and how much funding was disbursed by the Small Business Service to these businesses. [35216]

Alun Michael: I understand that Business Link Coventry and Warwickshire, has helped 455 individuals in Coventry, South with their business start up plans. Of these 60 are known for certain to have started a business.

The support offered to new businesses does not include the provision of start up grants. Since 2000 I understand that Business Link Coventry and Warwickshire has spent some £600,000 of its funding on helping start-ups in the Coventry and Warwickshire area.

Telephone Preference Service

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1360W, on the telephone preference service, how many (a) informal warning letters the Information Commissioner has issued to companies in each of the last five years in respect of breaching the telephone preference scheme and (b) companies have received (i) more than one informal warning letter, (ii) between two and 10 informal warning letters and (iii) in excess of 10 informal warning letters. [33961]

Alun Michael: I am advised that as explained in the Commissioner's previous correspondence about statistics, the database that the Commissioner's office uses to record complaints about breaches of the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003 (PECR), which includes the TPS scheme, does not enable his office to determine how many of the complaints they receive about telephone calls are TPS registered. In addition, due to the nature of the casework management system previously used, his office is unable to provide specific numbers for telephone marketing complaints prior to 2004.

The number of letters the Commissioner's office wrote to organisations that were alleged to be at fault was 597 in 2004 and 1,125 so far this year. The increase in complaints corresponds with the sharp increase in TPS registrations. On the issue of multiple warning letters to individual companies, his office is unable to provide precise statistics from their database, although there are a number of companies that they have written to on several occasions for potential breaches of PECR. Where it is considered that a company has persistently breached PECR, cases are sent to their new Regulatory Action Division who consider enforcement.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

AIDS/HIV

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action his Department is taking to tackle AIDS and HIV in China. [36198]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is providing £25 million to tackle HIV and AIDS in China. This support is focused on helping the poorest and most vulnerable groups, especially injecting drugs users and sex workers, to benefit from prevention and care services. It also aims to increase the coverage and quality of prevention and care and to increase the capacity of the government to develop and implement effective responses to HIV and AIDS. There is a particular focus on Yunnan and Sichuan provinces in southwest China. Support is also provided to the central government and to Hunan, Hubei, Gansu, Guangxi, Jilin and Zhejiang provinces.

DFID is discussing a new programme of up to £30 million to support the Chinese Government's plans to increase work on HIV and AIDS. This programme would be co-ordinated with the United Nations and the Global Fund on AIDS, TB and Malaria. The programme is expected to be approved in April 2006 and to last for five years.

Asian Earthquake

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the (a) organisations in receipt of monies made available by his Department in response to the recent earthquake in Kashmir and Pakistan and (b) the amounts given; and if he will break down those amounts by (i) grant and (ii) loan. [35116]

Mr. Thomas [holding answer 5 December 2005]: DFID has allocated £58 million for the continuing relief effort. The details of grants provided to date in support of organisations' humanitarian response are as follows.

[1] In kind.
[2] Including £115,000 in kind.

All of our humanitarian assistance support through the above organisations is through grants. It does not involve loans. DFID is also providing a range of direct actions, including helicopter provision and other support for the United Nations and the funding of 78 flights for agencies of the Disasters Emergency Committee. Full details of DFID's response actions can be seen in the regular DFID Situation Reports, available at www.dfid.gov.uk.

In addition to our humanitarian response, we are contributing £70 million over three years for the reconstruction effort. This money will be provided to support Government of Pakistan programmes. The details of how this payment will be made and audited are being finalised.

British Overseas Territories

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding has been allocated from his Department for the improvement of transport links (a) to and from and (b) within each British Overseas Territory in each of the last seven years. [33767]

Mr. Thomas: Our contributions to costs of maintaining or improving transport links have been included within our overall assistance. Since 1998, these have included:

joint funding (with the European Union) of a new airport for Montserrat (around £11 million); ferry and operating subsidies for Montserrat (about £2 million annually); technical assistance for the extension of the airport runway in Anguilla (£0.57 million); civil aviation advice for the Turks and Caicos Islands (£420,000); an annual subsidy to maintain operation of the 'RMS St. Helena' (approximately £2 million annually); refurbishment of the Hill of Difficulty Road, the jetty and the slipway at Bounty Bay in Pitcairn (£2.1 million); technical support for roads improvements in Anguilla (£130,000); support, through budgetary assistance, for regular roads maintenance work in Montserrat and St .Helena;

a project, in partnership with the EU, to carry out repairs to Tristan da Cunha's only harbour, due to commence in 2006.

I announced plans last March to build an airport in St. Helena, subject to satisfactory contract bids and a rigorous environmental impact assessment.

EU Agricultural Policies

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the impact of EU agricultural policies on people in developing countries. [35037]

Mr. Thomas: The Government acknowledge the damaging impact that dumping and trade-distorting subsidies have on developing countries, particularly on their agriculture sectors. We fully support the commitment made at the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Doha Ministerial meeting in 2001, which agreed that agriculture negotiations would aim to achieve: substantial improvements in market access; reductions of, with a view to phasing out, all forms of export subsidies; and substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic support.

The package of reforms to the EU's Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) agreed in June 2003 and May 2004 mark a significant shift in the EU's agricultural policy. The de-coupling of subsidies from production should connect European farmers much more closely to the market and have real impacts on reducing excessive production, which results in dumping and harms developing countries. The Government will continue to be at the forefront of those pushing for further reform of the EU's agricultural policy and I welcome the fact that the Commission has re-affirmed its commitment to ensuring that the EU plays a full and constructive role in the WTO agriculture negotiations. I also welcome the commitment in the WTO to agree to set an end date for all export supports. The UK believes these should end by 2010.

The Doha Development Agenda and specifically the WTO Ministerial Conference in Hong Kong represent an important opportunity to make a significant contribution to reducing global poverty. The UK Government are working to achieve an outcome that delivers real gains for developing countries, including the poorest. These gains should include improved participation by developing countries in the world trading system, through substantially increased market access for developing countries and the dismantling of trade-distorting agricultural subsidies by industrialised countries.

Free Trade

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote free trade with developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [35131]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government are committed to the development of an open and rules-based international trading system that fulfils its potential to contribute to the reduction of poverty in poorer countries. Our key policy commitments on trade and development, as well as our objectives for the current round of multilateral trade talks, are set out in the Government's White Papers, "Making Globalisation a Force for Good"(July 2004) and "Eliminating World Poverty: Making Globalisation Work for the Poor" (December 2000). The UK Government are working hard to support the poorest and most vulnerable producers, be it through multilateral negotiations in the World Trade Organisation (WTO) or regional trade agreements such as the Economic Partnership Agreements.

The UK Government do not support forced liberalisation or unfettered free trade but trade that is fair as well as free. The UK Government support the view that developing countries need to decide on the timing, pace and sequencing of any market opening in line with their own national development and poverty reduction plans. In the context of the WTO negotiations we are firmly committed to ensuring that developing countries are given appropriate flexibility to adjust to trade reforms.

In the long term, the removal of trade barriers, if managed properly, can help developing countries gain better access to developed country markets and more competitively priced inputs. By increasing Aid for Trade, (AFT) the UK hopes to help poorer countries seize the opportunities presented by more open markets. DFID will treble its support to £100 million a year by 2010 to help boost poor countries' capacity to trade.

At the WTO ministerial in Hong Kong we are working with international partners to deliver on the ambition of Doha and build on G8 commitments. The UK Government are working to achieve an outcome that delivers real gains for developing countries, including the poorest.

Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has spent on enabling the least developed countries to meet the economic, administrative and legal challenges of making use of the flexibilities within the agreement on the trade related aspects of intellectual property rights of the World Trade Organisation. [35205]

Hilary Benn: DFID has been funding several programmes specifically around, or incorporating activities, on Trade Related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) flexibilities in the context of its global strategy to improve access to essential medicines.

We have been providing support to the World Health Organisation's Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, Innovation and Public Health (CIPIH), which is reporting in January 2006, with the secondment of an official to lead the secretariat of the Commission (three-year project: £240,000).

We have been funding legal research and assistance on how to implement the flexibilities, with for instance the recent release of the UNCTAD-International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development's "Resource Book on TRIPS and Development" (part of a three-year £1.2 million project), published this year.

DFID also supports country-focused work on the issue. In Ghana, we support an Access to Medicines Initiative (ATMI) through the Ghana National Drugs Programme that includes work on TRIPS flexibilities. The DFID Health Resource Centre commissioned a series of studies that looked at access to medicines in under-served markets, including country case studies in Kenya and Malawi. A study on China and India investigates the effects of changing intellectual property legislation on the pharmaceutical industry in these countries, and in a recent update, the consequences of the alignment with TRIPS obligations in 2005.

Palestinian Authority

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures are in place to ensure accountability for funds transferred from (a) the UK and (b) the European Union for development assistance in the Palestinian Authority; and if he will make a statement. [35433]

Mr. Thomas: Both the UK Government and the European Commission take concerns over the use of aid very seriously. DFID has co-ordinated closely with the European Commission, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other donors in ensuring that the Palestinian Authority (PA) makes proper use of donor funds.

Since 2004, part of both UK and European Community (EC) funding for the Palestinians has been provided to the PA budget through the World Bank-managed Reform Trust Fund. Release of funds is linked to the achievement of benchmarks for reform. Progress is carefully monitored. This process has helped the PA to improve its financial control and management. It also reflects our commitment that aid should be properly accounted for, used for the intended purposes and represent value for money. Other forms of UK and EC assistance for Palestinians have been provided through organisations whose accounts are reliably audited.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Landing Rights

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P and (b) N313P has landed in the United Kingdom; and at which military airfields. [33247]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested has not been recorded centrally over the last five years and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Aldermaston

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will amend the 25 year contract for the running of AWE Aldermaston, in relation to the number of shares held by each member of the consortium. [34868]

John Reid: The AWE contract does not stipulate the shareholding of individual consortium members.

Al-Yamamah Programme

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the 1992 National Audit Office report into charges of corruption by BAE Systems in connection with the al-Yamamah programme; and if he will make a statement. [34830]

John Reid [holding answer 5 December 2005]: I assume the question refers to the 1992 National Audit Office report on the Ministry of Defence's involvement in the al-Yamamah programme. The report refers to confidential arrangements between the Governments of the United Kingdom and Saudi Arabia.

The then Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee decided that the NAO report should not be published and that it should be handled on a highly restricted basis. In a review by the parliamentary ombudsman January 2003–04, the ombudsman concluded that > "I am satisfied that the NAO report is covered by parliamentary privilege and that the decision as to whether or not to disclose the report is properly a matter for Parliament."

In considering the report, the then PAC chairman stated

> "I did an investigation and I find no evidence that the MOD made improper payments. I have found no evidence of fraud or corruption. The deal . . . complied with Treasury approval and the rules of Government accounting."

Anglo-Polish Navy Exercises

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will attend one of the joint Anglo-Polish navy exercises in 2006. [33889]

Mr. Ingram: At present, I have no plans to attend one of the joint Anglo-Polish navy exercises in 2006.

Armed Services (Recruitment)

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what terms of reference were used to scope options for (a) collection and (b) management of data concerning the potential recruitment pool for the armed services; and what steps were taken to investigate the availability of independent experts to conduct this research. [26275]

Mr. Touhig: The armed forces conducts a range of research as part of its recruit marketing operation. All market research and collection and management of response-driven data is carried out via the Central Office of Information using their agency roster. This ensures that independent experts carry out this function on behalf of the Services.

DARA (St. Athan)

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will meet representatives of the Amicus trade union to discuss the potential for future defence contracts being awarded to the Defence Aviation Repair Agency, St. Athan. [31388]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has already met with Derek Simpson, the General Secretary, from the Amicus Trade Union to discuss the future of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency site at St. Athan.

Defence Headquarters

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to collocate HQ Land Command and HQ Adjutant-General; and how he intends to announce his plans. [35720]

Mr. Ingram: Work to consider the benefits of rationalisation and collocation of the two main Army HQs—HQ Land Command (currently based in Wilton) and HQ Adjutant-General (currently based in Upavon)—is ongoing. The Army is currently determining the possible size and structure of the new HQ organisation and, in parallel, assessing a number of local site options. We expect to know the outcome of this analysis in early 2006 and then to inform the House accordingly. Staff and the trade unions are being kept closely in touch with developments and formal consultation will commence in 2006.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) his Department's output categories for financial years (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06 and (b) the STPO5 Overseas Security and Policy Paper. [32703]

John Reid: Schedule 5 of the Departmental Resource Accounts sets out costs by Departmental aims and objectives. These are in effect high-level output categories. Data for financial year 2004–05 were published on 28 October 2005 and copies of the relevant accounts have been placed in the Library of the House. On current plans, the format of Schedule 5 of the Resource Accounts is unlikely to change for financial year 2005–06.

I am unable to place a copy of the Overseas Security and Policy Paper in the Library of the House as it is a confidential document and its release would prejudice the formulation of Government policy and have a detrimental impact on international relations.

EU Arms Embargoes

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many countries are members of the NATO Partnership for Peace programme and also the subject of an EU arms embargo. [30868]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

There is only one country (Uzbekistan) that is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Partnership for Peace Programme and also the subject of an EU arms embargo. The embargo was agreed on 14 November 2005.

Ground-based Air Defence

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on plans for future ground-based air defence. [34363]

Mr. Ingram: We remain committed to delivering an effective Ground Based Air Defence (GBAD) capability to meet envisaged threats. From 2008 GBAD capability will be delivered by the Army, deploying Rapier Field Standard C and the High Velocity Missile, with a Joint Headquarters located at RAF High Wycombe.

Helicopters

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Lynx AH 7 and (b) Lynx AH 9 helicopters are fit for operations; what his plans are for the cannibalisation of army and navy helicopters during the next 12 months; and how many (i) Lynx AH 7 and (ii) Lynx AH 9 helicopters have been cannibalised in the last two years. [33405]

Mr. Ingram: In October 2005, 31 Lynx AH Mk 7 and eight Lynx AH Mk 9 helicopters were defined as Fit for Purpose (FFP). As stated in my answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 120W, the numbers of helicopters that have been cannibalised is not held centrally. Records are maintained only of the total number of times that cannibalisation has taken place. The following table shows this information for Lynx AH Mk 7 and Mk 9, for the periods November 2003 to October 2004 and for November 2004 to October 2005.

	Aircraft type
Total cannibalisations	Lynx AH Mk 7	Lynx AH Mk 9
November 2003-October 2004	463	37
November 2004-October 2005	573	108
Last two years	1,036	145

All instances of cannibalisation of Royal Navy, Army and RAF helicopters are authorised and undertaken in accordance with clearly defined regulations. This process will continue to be employed where appropriate.

Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary) Project

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many design changes have been made to the Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary) Project by (a) BAE Systems and (b) Swan Hunter; and what has been the cost to his Department of these changes. [34030]

Mr. Ingram: As the Design Authority for the Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary) Programme, Swan Hunter have considered numerous proposals for design changes as part of the ship building process. The costs are part of the price of the Swan Hunter contract. Some of the design changes have led to claims from BAES for delay and dislocation to their shipbuilding programme, not all of these claims have been resolved and therefore a revised contract price for BAES is not yet available.

Non-depleted Uranium Ammunition

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with introducing the new non-depleted uranium ammunition for Challenger 2 tanks. [32683]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is investigating the feasibility of new non-depleted uranium ammunition for Challenger, and initial de-risking work is being undertaken by BAE Systems.

Remembrance Day Poppies

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department (a) was consulted by and (b) offered advice to the Royal British Legion on the risks of pinning Remembrance Day poppies onto the clothing of purchasers. [26871]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 14 November 2005]: So far as I am aware, the Ministry of Defence was neither consulted nor offered advice on this matter.

Shropshire Light Infantry

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel from the Shropshire Light Infantry are serving in Iraq. [33419]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 14 members of the Shropshire Light Infantry serving in Iraq.

UK Military Airfields (Arrests)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether UK military police have lawful authority to arrest individuals suspected of criminal offences who are on board aircraft which transit through UK military airfields; and if he will make a statement. [33938]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom military police have lawful authority to arrest an individual suspected of a criminal offence if that person is subject to UK military law. This power is set out in the Service Discipline Acts.

Veteran Medal

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans in Paisley and Renfrewshire, North constituency have applied for veteran medals in the last five years. [28959]

Mr. Touhig: Records of applications are not broken down by geographical area, however a total of 21 badges have been issued since April 2005.

CABINET OFFICE

Business Regulation (Kettering)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will visit Kettering to discuss reducing the level of regulation on business. [34969]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Cabinet Office Ministers currently have no plans to visit Kettering. However, businesses can submit suggestions to Government for areas where regulations are placing an unnecessary burden on them through the www.betterregulation.gov.uk web portal. Departments will be obliged to respond to proposals within 90 working days.

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has made of the annual amount which would be raised if civil servants were required to pay a 6 per cent. contribution to their pension scheme. [35592]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government have not made any estimate of the annual amount that would be raised if civil servants were required to pay a 6 per cent. contribution to their pension scheme. Civil servants currently pay contributions of either 1.5 per cent. or 3.5 per cent. of pensionable earnings depending on which section of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme they belong to. The total of these member contributions for the year 2004–05 as disclosed in the Civil Superannuation Resource Accounts was £256 million.

Nos. 10 and 11 Downing Street

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans there are to refurbish Numbers (a) 10 and (b) 11 Downing Street; and if he will make a statement. [36053]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have nothing further to add to the answer given on 6 June 2005, Official Report, column 302W by the then Chancellor of the Duchy, my right hon. Friend the Member for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton).

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Brownfield/Greenfield Land

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many acres of brownfield land there are in each London borough; and how many such sites are of half an acre or less; [33305]

(2) how many acres of (a) brownfield and (b) greenfield land there are in England, broken down by local authority. [33306]

Yvette Cooper: The National Land Use Database of Previously-Developed Land provides estimates of the amounts of previously developed vacant and derelict land in 2004. A table with this information has been made available in the Library of the House. The estimates include an allowance for the contribution from small sites but these are not generally recorded separately and no count is available. The table also shows the amounts of land not in built-up areas (greenfield). The built-up areas are those with a population of 1,000 or more and are for 2001. They include green spaces if they are within the built-up area.

Catalyst Corby-North Northants Together

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what month he expects a decision to be made on the appointment of a new chairman and chief executive for the merged Catalyst Corby-North Northants Together. [34101]

Yvette Cooper: Following Baroness Andrews' provisional approval last month, the two bodies have just launched, on 2 December, a public consultation on the proposed merger. The merger aims to build on the considerable success of Catalyst Corby and the promising early work of North Northants Together and draw on the expertise of both organisations in driving and managing the delivery of sustainable growth in North Northamptonshire.

Responses to the consultation are invited by 27 January. Subject to the results, it is planned that the new organisation will start operations on 1 April 2006. Formal appointments to the board and of the executive staff will be made after the close of consultation, subject to final ministerial approval of the merger in the light of comments received.

Council Tax Revaluation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2062–63W, on council tax revaluation, how many of the 1,794,709 dwellings fall into each value significant code. [33742]

Mr. Woolas: Work on the collection of value significant codes is incomplete.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [33004]

Jim Fitzpatrick: A list of all research projects commissioned by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is available from the Research Management Database (RMD) at: http://www.rmd.odpm.gov.uk

Under the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Publication Scheme, we are committed to publishing research project reports within six months of project completion or, at the latest, when quality checks, including relevant peer review, are completed or when a policy decision based on its findings is publicised. Information on the project completion date is contained in the Research Management Database.

There are agreed publication timetables for a number of statistical research projects. This information is regularly updated and available at: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/stellent/groups/odpm_about/documents/page/odpm_about_609298.hcsp

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1688–89W, on designated growth areas, (1) what evidential factors will be used to determine mainstream funding in each designated growth area in England; [31851]

(2) how much additional grant funding will be made available by his Department for designated growth areas within England; [31849]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the amount of private funding that will be used within (a) the Milton Keynes growth area and (b) each other designated growth area towards infrastructure costs; and if he will make a statement. [31848]

Yvette Cooper: Mainstream Government funding is, by its nature, determined by the relevant Government Departments based on their own procedures for allocating funding towards meeting their objectives under their Public Service Agreement. For most Government programmes, this is covered by the periodic spending reviews. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been working with Departments towards ensuring that growth is given due consideration in the allocation of funding. In a number of cases this would follow in the ordinary course, simply because funding levels are based on (among other factors) population. In other cases, specific mechanisms are available to safeguard rapidly growing areas.

To give an example from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's own departmental expenditure, population is an important factor in the allocation of revenue support grant (RSG) to local authorities. As a result of recent changes to the formula for allocating RSG, namely the abolition of "ceilings" and (as from 2006–07) the use of forward-looking population data, local government funding will be more responsive to the relatively rapid population growth associated with growth areas.

By way of example from another Department, capital funding from the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) for new schools places responds formulaically to local authorities' estimates of pupil numbers. Local authorities in the growth areas should therefore be taking account of growth plans in their submission to DfES. Nonetheless, a "safety valve" mechanism has been put in place to allow exceptional needs resulting from unanticipated factors (which could include growth in pupil numbers) to be taken into account. A number of growth locations have accessed funding under this mechanism.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made grant funding available exclusively in support of projects in the growth areas. The total amount of such funding, up to and including 2007–08, is around £1.25 billion. This does not include the £200 million to be made available to the growth areas by Department for Transport under the community infrastructure fund. Expenditure beyond 2007–08 will be subject to the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review. This expenditure will lever in funding from other sources. For example, it was estimated that the initial round of ODPM funding (amounting to just over £600m) would lever in funding of over £3 billion from other public and private sector partners (not including Department for Transport funding).

Private sector investment will respond to opportunities presented by the growth areas, e.g. investment by the privately owned utilities in water, wastewater and electricity supply infrastructure. In addition, housing developers will be expected to contribute to the infrastructure costs associated with housing development through Section 106 contributions. A good example of this is in Milton Keynes, where the local delivery vehicle Milton Keynes Partnerships Committee has been negotiating a standard charge of over £18,000 per house from developers in the east and west expansion flanks. This will generate approximately £300 million of funding to complement circa £900 million of funding from public sources in support of infrastructure to facilitate construction of 15,000 houses to 2016.

Disabled Facilities Grant

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the disabled facilities grant funding stream from the Government Office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [34970]

Yvette Cooper: The London borough of Croydon received a specified capital grant from Government of £591,000 in 2004–05 towards the authority's expenditure on Disabled Facilities Grants. This represents almost 4 per cent. of the total allocation for London of £15,282,000.

Energy Efficiency

David Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the interdepartmental committee on improving the energy performance of existing buildings set up by the Minister for Housing and Planning on 14 September is expected to complete its work; and what its terms of reference are. [35716]

Yvette Cooper: The aim of the review is to identify the scope for measures that can be taken in existing buildings to:

improve the sustainability, and in particular the energy and water efficiency of the building; and make the building more resilient to the predicted effects of climate change; while not adversely affecting either the building fabric or the health and safety of the occupants.

It is due to be completed by summer 2006.

EU Funded Projects (North-east)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the EU funded projects in the north-east of England which were identified by the European Court of Auditors as having (a) accounting errors and (b) inadequate documentation; and if he will make a statement. [35814]

Yvette Cooper: The European Court of Auditors carry out audits in all member states on all EC income and expenditure to ensure sound financial management and compliance with EC regulations. The audit in the north-east of England was conducted in July and October 2004. The findings of these audits are summarised in the European Court of Auditor's annual report to the European Parliament. The individual reports and the detail contained in them belong to the European Court of Auditors. They do not publish individual reports. The appropriate route to request the report is to apply in writing to the court.

Fire Service

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many attacks on fire crews have taken place in each county in England in each of the last eight years. [35463]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been maintaining records of attacks on firefighters since April 2004. Prior to that date their was no requirement for the fire and rescue service to report attacks on firefighters.

Since April 2004 there has been in place a procedure for attacks on firefighters to be notified to the ODPM using the Fires and Incidents of Special Interest (FOSI) reporting procedures as detailed in Dear Chief Fire

Officer (DCOL) letter 3/2004 issued 1 April 2004. This procedure was updated by the issue of Fire and Rescue Service Circular 5/2005 issued on 15 February 2005. The following table shows a break down of notifications received by the ODPM of attacks on firefighters since the 1 April 2004:

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the members of the project team for the delivery of (a) Fire Link and (b) Fire Capture; and from where each secondee on the team has been seconded. [35114]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Firelink and FiReControl project teams comprise civil servants, seconded fire and rescue service staff and consultants.

As of 30 November 2005 there were, for Firelink, 51 team members, including 12 officers seconded from the following fire and rescue services: London, West Yorkshire, Mid and West Wales, South Wales, Suffolk, East Sussex, Devon, Nottinghamshire, Staffordshire, Northumberland Lothian and Boarders and Strathclyde.

For FiReControl, there were 74 team members (70 full-time equivalents). The 13 secondees from the fire and rescue service are from Wiltshire, London, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, West Midlands, Greater Manchester, Tyne and Wear, Lancashire, Northumberland, Cumbria and South Wales. The project team number includes two full-time special advisers from the Chief Fire Officers' Association (CFOA).

Fire-prevention Sprinklers

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to revise planning regulations and guidance to ensure that new-build commercial and residential properties are required to have fire-prevention sprinkler facilities as standard. [34967]

Yvette Cooper: Health and safety issues including construction standards for new buildings are included in Building Regulations rather than planning guidance. Guidance on measures that will meet the fire safety requirements of these Regulations is given in Approved Document B (or 'AD B'). AD B includes guidance on limiting the spread of fire in a building and on when sprinklers should be provided. AD B is intended to provide guidance only for some of the more common building situations; there may be other ways of complying with the Regulations, such as using sprinklers as a compensatory feature.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises that the greater use of sprinklers could be beneficial, especially for those buildings where occupants are particularly vulnerable to fire. Therefore, ODPM recently consulted on a revised draft AD B which proposes the increased use of sprinklers. The public consultation is now closed and the responses are being considered. ODPM hopes to be in a position to publish a revised AD B around the end of 2006.

Flooding

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department provides to (a) elected representatives and (b) the general public on planning applications relating to areas indicated on the website of the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs as prone to flooding; and if he will make a statement. [32619]

Yvette Cooper: Planning policy guidance on development and flood risk is contained in PPG25, published in 2001. It aims to ensure that flood risk is taken into account at all stages in the planning process to avoid inappropriate development in areas at risk of flooding and to direct development away from areas at highest risk. PPG25 advises that the Environment Agency should be consulted on planning applications in flood risk areas, including areas shown on the Agency's Flood Maps, and that planning applications in such areas should be accompanied by a Flood Risk Assessment. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is now consulting on a new PPS25 which strengthens and clarifies these and other aspects of policy on this issue.

Green Belt

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the applications for building on greenbelt land in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [34328]

Yvette Cooper: Information on planning applications for building on Green Belt land is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Growth Areas Directorate

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many officials are assigned (a) full-time and (b) part-time to the Department's Growth Areas Directorate, broken down by grade; [34075]

(2) how many officials in the Department's Growth Areas Directorate are working (a) full-time and (b) part-time on recovering the growth agenda in Northamptonshire, broken down by grade. [34088]

Yvette Cooper: Growth Areas Division, which has responsibility for the three newer growth areas of Milton Keynes/South Midlands (including Northamptonshire), Ashford, London-Stansted-Cambridge-Peterborough and the New Growth Points Initiative, currently has 15 staff. Its work is organised on a mix of area and thematic responsibilities and to reflect policy and business priorities.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions have taken place between the Department's Growth Areas Directorate and officials in the (a) Department of Health, (b) Department for Education and Skills and (c) Home Office on adjusting future revenue spending in the growth areas to take account of house building. [34103]

Yvette Cooper: The Growth Areas Division in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) has periodic discussion with other Government Departments on how mainstream programmes keep in step with growing populations. For example the ODPM has worked with the Department of Health to ensure that funding allocations to primary care trusts take account of growth. The Department of Health's announcement on primary care trust revenue funding on 9 February 2005 included a growth area adjustment.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions the Department's Growth Areas Directorate has had with Anglian Water about the provision of water supplies and sewerage to North Northamptonshire. [34107]

Yvette Cooper: Growth Areas Division in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have held meetings with the water industry including Anglian Water on how the industry might respond to higher growth levels. This supplements the industry's discussion with local partners and delivery organisations.

High Hedges

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications have been made to local authorities to reduce the height of hedges since the introduction of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003. [34126]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the impact of local authority fees on the willingness of applicants to use the process provided by the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 to deal with excessively high hedges. [34127]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no formal assessment of the impact of local authority fees on the willingness of applicants to use the process provided by the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 to deal with excessively high hedges. This part of the 2003 Act came into operation in June 2005 and so it is too soon to draw conclusions about the impact of local authority fees. We are also aware that authorities are keeping their fees for this service under review.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has issued to local councils on action they should take in response to an application under high hedges regulations to cut a hedge by more than a third to ensure reasonable enjoyment of a property. [34913]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has issued no guidelines on not cutting hedges by more than a third. Paragraph 6.24 of our publication 'High Hedges Complaints: Prevention and Cure' advises that Councils cannot order remedial works that would kill a hedge. In our view this would amount to the same as removing the hedge altogether and, under section 69(3) of the 2003 Act, Councils are expressly prevented from ordering action involving removal of a hedge.

How far one can reduce a hedge before it is killed will vary according to the particular circumstances and, to illustrate the point, we give the example of a healthy Leyland cypress hedge which will usually respond well to a reduction by up to one-third whereas an older specimen may not. There will be circumstances where Leyland cypress, or other species, may be reduced by more than one-third without destroying them.

Where local councils have concluded that remedial action is required to ensure reasonable enjoyment of a property, it is for them to decide what height the hedge should be reduced to while ensuring its survival. That judgment depends on the species of the shrubs or trees in the hedge, their age and health, and past management. We recommend councils, therefore, to consider each case on its merits and to obtain arboricultural advice.

Copies of 'High Hedges Complaints: Prevention and Cure' are available in the Library of the House. Further information is published on the Frequently Asked Questions pages of our website at www.odpm.gov.uk/treesandhedges, under the heading 'Remedial works'. This acknowledges that there may be some cases where councils could be prevented from requiring action that would provide a full remedy to the problems identified because it would kill the hedge. Nevertheless, they would still be able to order works that offer some relief to the complainant. In addition, if a complainant considers that the action specified in a remedial notice does not go far enough, they can appeal against the council's decision to the Planning Inspectorate.

Homelessness

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many individuals were homeless in each district authority in Northamptonshire in each year since 1997. [34432]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected in respect of households, rather than persons.

The number of households accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need in each year since 1997–98, and the number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by local authorities under homelessness legislation on 31 March each year as reported by each local authority in Northamptonshire is as tabled.

The duty owed to a person accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority may secure temporary accommodation until a settled home becomes available. As an alternative to the provision of temporary accommodation some authorities arrange for households to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

Information is also collected, since 1998, on the number of people who sleep rough—that is, those who are literally roofless on a single night—and these are also presented in the tables.

n/a denotes the authority failed to provide a return for 1 or more quarters of the year.

[1] All households eligible under homelessness legislation, found to be unintentionally homeless and in a priority need category, and consequently owed a main homelessness duty.
[2] Households in accommodation either pending a decision on their homelessness application or awaiting allocation of a settled home following acceptance. Excludes those households designated as "homeless at home" that have remained in their existing accommodation and have the same rights to suitable alternative accommodation as those in accommodation arranged by the authority.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many households applying under Part VII of the Housing Act 1996 in each authority in Norfolk and Suffolk have been found to be (a) homeless and in priority need, (b) homeless but not in priority need, (c) intentionally homeless and (d) not homeless in each year since 1997; [32538]

(2) how many homeless households have been placed in temporary accommodation in each authority in Norfolk and Suffolk in each year since 1979. [32539]

Yvette Cooper: A table presenting summary information reported by each local authority in Norfolk and Suffolk on their decisions under homelessness legislation during each financial year since 1997/98 has been made available in the Library of the House. Also included are the numbers in temporary accommodation arranged by local authorities, as at 31 March of each year.

Equivalent information collected prior to January 1997 is not available in electronic format and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Householder Development Consents Review

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will ensure that the Householder Development Consents review will clarify the position on permitted development rights for domestic micro-generation equipment. [33473]

Yvette Cooper: The Householder Development Consents review has been considering whether it is necessary to require a planning application for various kinds of minor development to dwellings. As stated to the House on 11 November, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister envisages consulting next year on possible amendments to the General Permitted Development Order, including provisions that would make it easier for householders to install micro-generation equipment.

Housing

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people are on the housing list waiting to be re-housed in Tamworth. [32030]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 205W, in which the number of applicants on the Tamworth housing waiting list was requested.

Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting list as at 1 April in their annual Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix returns. Households looking for transfer within the local authority's stock are not included.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vacant dwellings there were in (a) Tamworth and (b) Staffordshire in each of the last five years (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of all dwellings. [32032]

Yvette Cooper: The following table gives the latest available figures for the total number of vacant dwellings and the proportion of vacant dwellings for Tamworth and Staffordshire for each of the last five years. From April 2006 local authorities in Staffordshire will have new powers to bring long-term empty dwellings back into use.

2000 and 2001 figures come from a combination of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) return, and the Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return (RSR). For the years 2002 to 2004 the figures are based on ODPM's Council Tax Base 1 (CTB1) return.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what circumstances, and after how long an interval local authorities are allowed to re-ballot tenants who have previously voted against a large-scale voluntary transfer of council housing. [32341]

Yvette Cooper: The timing and circumstances surrounding any decision to re-ballot tenants are matters for the local authority.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the merits of extending the National Code for Sustainable Buildings to all new housing developments; what estimate he has made of the likely cost to the housing industry of such an extension; and if he will make a statement. [33304]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently consulting on a proposed new code. The consultation document includes a regulatory impact assessment as is customary.

Colin Challen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new houses were built in the last accounting period; and how many of these were built to Ecohomes standards, broken down by Ecohomes category. [34482]

Yvette Cooper: There were 155,000 new dwellings built in England during 2004–05, as reported by local authorities (P2 return to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister) and the National House-Building Council. Information on how many of these were built to Ecohomes standards in not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in Gravesham are waiting to be found suitable accommodation by the local authority while living in accommodation judged unacceptable by social services. [34666]

Yvette Cooper: Gravesham borough council have provided details of three individuals that are waiting to be found suitable accommodation by the local authority, and are currently in accommodation deemed unsuitable by social services. These cases are being addressed during December 2005.

Further information of this nature can be readily accessed by contacting the housing needs team at Gravesham borough council.

John Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) of 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 760W, on housing, what assessment he has made of the impact of the Right to Buy on the number of households on Leeds housing waiting lists; and if he will make a statement. [35249]

Yvette Cooper: No such assessment has been made. It is for each housing authority to manage its stock in the light of local circumstances.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the latest figures are for the number of vacant (a) private and (b) public properties in each local authority in Hampshire; and if he will make a statement. [33991]

Yvette Cooper: The most recent data for the total number of vacant dwellings by tenure and by district in Hampshire are tabled as follows:

	Tenure

The figures above are based on three sources: Total from ODPM's Council Tax Base 1 return; LA and 'Other' public sector tenures from ODPM's Housing Strategy Statistical return; RSL tenure from Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return; and the private sector (non-RSL) is obtained by subtracting all these three separate tenure figures from the total.

New powers will be available to local authorities in Hampshire to bring empty dwellings back into use from April 2006.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many houses have been completed in each local authority in Hampshire in each year since 2001; how many of these were classified as affordable housing; what the projections are in each case for the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [33993]

Yvette Cooper: The number of affordable dwellings completed and acquired, as well as the total number of all new build dwellings completed in each local authority in Hampshire and Portsmouth and Southampton, in each financial year since 2001–02 are tabled as follows.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the target is of each local authority in Hampshire for the percentage of housing to be provided which is to be affordable housing; and if he will make a statement. [34173]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities set out targets for affordable housing provision in their development plans. It is for individual local authorities to explain and make statements on their policy. The content of adopted and emerging plans in Hampshire is tabled as follows:

Local authority	Percentage sought
Portsmouth	Minimum 30
Southampton	Up to 25
Basingstoke and Deane	30–40
East Hampshire	[1]—
Eastleigh	30–40
Fareham	20–35

[1] Negotiated on a site by site basis.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many affordable homes are planned to be built as part of the growth area programme in (a) Lancashire and (b) Ribble Valley constituency in each year to 2031. [35472]

Yvette Cooper: The current review of the Regional Spatial Strategy for the North West will address future housing provision in the region. It is up to local authorities to assess the need for affordable housing within their areas in their local development frameworks. The Housing Corporation is also considering bids from registered social landlords for resources to provide social housing up to 2008.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of new households likely to be established in each government office region over the next 20 years. [33500]

Yvette Cooper: Interim 2002 based projections of additional households up to 2021 are published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at:

http://www/odpm/gov.uk/embedded_object.asp?id=1156104

Mr. Soames: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vacant homes there are in (a) West Sussex, (b) the area covered by the South East plan and (c) the South East Region. [34034]

Yvette Cooper: The estimated number of vacant dwellings in West Sussex is 8,525. The area covered by the South East plan is the same as that covered by the South East region. The estimated number of vacant dwellings in that area is 97,804, including short term and long term empty homes.

The data are as at November 2004 and are as reported on CTB1 and CTB1S returns submitted by billing authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister each year. The figure includes both long and short-term empty properties.

The Government are introducing new powers from April 2006 for local authorities to reduce the number of long-term empty homes in their area.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reports he has received of registered social landlords in London selling off social rented housing to finance Decent Homes Standard works to remaining stock. [33371]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 30 November 2005]: Records of registered social landlords' (RSLs) applications for consent to dispose of housing stock, which include the reason for disposal, are maintained by the Housing Corporation. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not require formal reports on this information. Information provided by RSLs in their Regulatory and Statistical Returns (RSR) on the number of homes they have disposed of is publicly available on the RSR's website at: www.rsrsurvey.gov.uk .

London Borough of Croydon (Funding)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the (a) European Structural Fund Objective 2, (b) Community Chest and (c) Estate Action funding stream from the Government Office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [32433]

Yvette Cooper: No funding was available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05 through the European Structural Fund's Objective 2 Programme as it did not meet the European Union's eligibility criteria when the present round of Objective 2 Programmes were agreed.

In 2004–05 the Community Empowerment Network (CEN) in Croydon received funding of £243,139 under the Single Community Programme. Of that the CEN allocated £112,600 for Small Grants (formerly Community Chest), and spent £137,001. Total Single Community Programme funding available in London in 2004–05 was £9,343,811.

2004–05 was the last year of Estate Action funding in London, which received £2,626,000 for two schemes in the London borough of Lambeth. The London borough of Croydon received no Estate Action funding.

London Mayor

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the people and organisations which were sent the consultation document on the Government's proposals for additional powers and responsibilities for the London Mayor and Greater London Assembly. [34966]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have sent its consultation document on proposals for additional powers and responsibilities for the Mayor of London and London Assembly to over 400 organisations and individuals. A list of recipients can be viewed on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: www.odpm.gov.uk/gla/review

Materials Recycling (West Sussex)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the environmental implications of the proposed materials recycling facility at Ford in West Sussex. [35855]

Yvette Cooper: Assessment of the environmental implications of such developments is a matter for the local planning authority, in this case West Sussex county council, to determine in the first instance. I understand that the applicant submitted an environmental impact assessment with the planning application.

Should a planning application for a proposed materials recycling facility at Ford be referred to my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister the First Secretary of State for consideration, the environmental implications of the proposal would be considered together with other material considerations.

Mining

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessments are required to be conducted prior to an agreement being reached for the diversion of a river to enable the extension of open cast mining; and what ongoing monitoring of river quality is then required. [34485]

Yvette Cooper: An environmental impact assessment (EIA) would almost certainly be necessary before any such proposal could be considered. EIA is mandatory for all open-cast mining at sites in excess of 25 hectares. In all other cases the proposals would be considered for EIA against the potential impacts, as would any works involving river canalisation in excess of 1 hectare. The Environment Agency would be consulted as part of the EIA process, and if it was decided in the light of the resulting environmental statement that the development should proceed, it could require conditions on the monitoring of river quality to be attached to the mineral permission. Planning policy for England is set out in PPS23, "Planning and Pollution control Annex 1".

Mobile Homes

Chris Huhne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what rights those with mobile homes on plots owned by their local council have to buy the plot; and what plans he has to (a) review and (b) to change the legislation which applies in such cases. [31359]

Yvette Cooper: A park home owner does not have the right to buy the plot they rent from a local authority. Under Part V of the Housing Act 1985, the Right to Buy is available only to secure tenants who rent dwelling houses from a social landlord, who may buy the house or flat that they rent.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not have any evidence to suggest that there is sufficient demand for right to buy from this sector and have no current plans to review and change the legislation.

Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (Leeds)

John Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what programmes the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund has funded in Leeds West constituency since it began. [35122]

Mr. Woolas: Neighbourhood Renewal Fund is allocated at local authority level. Details of the individual activities funded by the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund are not collected at constituency level and, unfortunately, the information requested is not directly available. However, over the financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05, Leeds city council has confirmed expenditure of £27.3 million of Neighbourhood Renewal Fund for the delivery of agreed Local Strategic Partnership priorities focussed on accelerating improvements in the most deprived areas of the local authority district, some of which will be in the Leeds West constituency. Further detail on Neighbourhood Renewal Fund expenditure within the district may be obtained direct from the Leeds city council's Regeneration Service, which is located within its Neighbourhoods and Housing Department.

Planning

Philip Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications were referred to the planning inspector in (a) England and (b) Yorkshire in each of the last eight years; and in how many of those cases the planning inspector overturned the local planning authority's decision. [33877]

Yvette Cooper: The information is as follows.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the aggregated receipts to local planning authorities were from planning fees in England for each year from 1996–97 to 2004–05; and what the estimated figures are for 2005–06. [33167]

Yvette Cooper: Planning fee receipts collected by English local authorities were estimated and are tabled as follows.

1996–97	110
1997–98	132
1998–99	132
1999–2000	134
2000–01	142
2001–02	144
2002–03	174
2003–04	188
2004–05	204

There is no official estimate for the current year 2005–06.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes the Government (a) has made since 1997 and (b) is planning to make to planning regulations relating to the use for residential purposes of land designated for employment, industrial or commercial purposes. [33168]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Policy Guidance note 3: Housing (PPG3), published in March 2000, asks local planning authorities to review their non-housing allocations of land (including employment land) when reviewing their development plan and consider whether some of this land might be better used for housing or mixed use developments. This built on the general policy approach in the previous PPG3 published in 1992.

The PPG3 update 'Supporting the Delivery of New Housing', published in January this year, added a new paragraph to PPG3. This advocates the re-use of industrial and commercial land where it would be better used for housing and mixed use development unless a compelling case can be made for the retention of the current allocation.

A new draft Planning Policy Statement 3 was published on 5 December.

Predictive Diallers

John Hemming: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many calls were made from call centres in his Department in 2004–05 using predictive diallers; how many such calls resulted in contact being made with the recipient without a Government agent available to talk to them; and what assessment he has made of the likely impact of Ofcom's policy on silent calls on the use of predictive diallers in departmental call centres. [28177]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The central Office of the Deputy Prime Minister HQ does not have a call centre, and its switchboard does not use predictive diallers when making calls to members of the public.

Regional Assemblies

Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of the North East Regional Assembly referendum; and if he will make a statement. [32206]

Yvette Cooper: The Electoral Commission Report on the North East Regional Assembly Referendum records the cost of running the referendum at £2.3 million. In addition support for the Yes and No campaigns totalled £0.5 million. A copy of the report is available at www.electoralcommission.org.uk

Resident Management Companies

Mr. Maude: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many resident management companies or associations there were in the United Kingdom in each year since 1987. [35152]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information about how many resident management companies or associations there are in the UK, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However according to our information, the number of tenant management organisations (TMOs) in England in each year since 1987 are as follows:

	Number
1987	16
1988	18
1989	21
1990	24
1991	35
1992	47
1993	55
1994	72
1995	84
1996	103
1997	114
1998	126
1999	134
2000	140
2001	147
2002	152
2004	160

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister believe there are in the region of a further 100 TMOs for which we do not have information on the year of their establishment. TMOs can exist in both the local authority and registered social landlord sectors.

Right-to-Buy Scheme

Jim Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what regional variations there are in right to buy sales discounts; and what changes there have been in such discounts in each region since 1997. [32415]

Yvette Cooper: There are 10 regional discount limits for Right to Buy:

£38,000 in the South East (except in the local authority areas of: Chiltern, Epsom and Ewell, Hart, Oxford, Reading, Reigate and Barnstead, Tonbridge and Mailing Vale of the White Horse, West Berkshire, where it is £16,000)

£34,000 in the Eastern Region (except in Watford where it is £16,000)

£30,000 in the South West

£26,000 in the North West, and the West Midlands

£24,000 in the East Midlands, and Yorkshire and the Humber

£22,000 in the North East

£16,000 in London (except in Barking and Dagenham and in Havering, where it is £38,000).

In 1997, the maximum Right to Buy discount in England was £50,000. The lower regional limits set out above were introduced with effect from 11 February 1999. The limits were reduced to £16,000 with effect from 27 March 2003 in 41 areas under the greatest housing pressure as evidenced by high levels of homelessness and high local house prices. Of the areas, 31 are in London, nine are in the South East, and one is in the Eastern region, as indicated.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of Lancashire's council housing stock was sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each year since 1980. [35471]

Yvette Cooper: The following table shows the proportions of council housing stock of local authorities in Lancashire that were sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each year since 1980.

	Council housing stock[1]	Right-to-buy	Proportion of council housing stock sold under right to buy (percentage)

John Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what total capital receipts have been generated from right-to-buy sales in Leeds in each year since 1980. [35120]

Yvette Cooper: The total capital receipts from right-to-buy sales of local authority dwellings in Leeds in each year from 1996–97 onwards are tabled as follows. Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of his Office's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32602]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There are currently no staff in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister who are within one year of the official retirement age and who are also on extended sick leave.

Telecommunications Masts

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 209–10W, on mobile telephone masts, if he will make a statement on the application of the precautionary principle as recommended by the Stewart Group and adopted by the Government. [34057]

Yvette Cooper: Since the publication of the Stewart Report the Government have introduced standards to ensure that all base stations meet the international guidelines on public exposure set by the International Commission on Non-Ionising Radiation Protection (ICNIRP). These guidelines are five times tougher in respect of public exposure than the guidelines previously used. More generally the Government's acceptance of the precautionary approach recommended the Stewart Group is demonstrated in the way it has adopted its recommendations.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the Arup Report on mobile telephone masts; and if he will make a statement. [34349]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned the University of Reading and Arup to undertake an independent study to assess the impact that the code of best practice on Mobile Phone Network Development has had since its introduction, how local authorities have implemented the code and how the public perceives its operation. Plans are to publish this report in the new year and a statement will be made at that time.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications have been granted for mobile phone masts in Tamworth since 1997. [35671]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham) on 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1066W.

Thames Gateway

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what provision there will be for (a) older people, (b) disabled people and (c) families with children in the new housing planned for the Thames Gateway. [33307]

Yvette Cooper: New housing developments in the Thames Gateway, as elsewhere, are required to follow national planning policy for housing as set out in planning policy guidance note 3: "Housing" (PPG3). PPG3 expects new developments to meet the housing requirements of the whole community, including those in need of affordable and special needs housing. It seeks to provide wider housing opportunity and choice, and a better mix in the size, type and location of housing than is currently available so that new housing meets the diverse range of needs across the social spectrum—including those of older people, disabled people and families with children. The Government also require new housing to be well-designed in order to create attractive, high-quality living environments in which people will choose to live.

The Government are now consulting on a new national policy framework for planning for housing through draft planning policy statement 3 which was published on 5 December 2005.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list public sector organisations involved in the regeneration of the Thames Gateway. [33308]

Yvette Cooper: The key partners are identified in "Creating Sustainable Communities: Delivering the Thames Gateway" (page 52), which sets out the Government's vision for and commitment to the Gateway. The Thames Gateway spans 40 miles north and south of the Thames and includes 16 local authorities. Therefore there are a large number of local organisations involved in regeneration projects in different parts of the Gateway. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister therefore announced on the 23 November that we will be publishing a strategic framework to help shape and guide investments, decisions and actions by Government and our delivery partners across the Thames Gateway.

Town and County Planning Act

Greg Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many certificates were granted under section 191 of the Town and County Planning Act 1990 in each of the last 10 years. [32658]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Transport Innovation Fund

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much of the Transport Innovation Fund is to be allocated to the growth areas in each year for which information is available. [34091]

Yvette Cooper: The Transport Innovation Fund will support:

innovative local transport packages that combine demand management measures, such as road pricing, with public transport improvement; and regional, inter-regional and local schemes that are beneficial to national productivity.

The Fund is expected to increase from £290 million 2008–09 to over £2 billion by 2014–15. None of these funds have yet been allocated. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport recently announced on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 3WS, that seven areas would receive development funding to work up demand management proposals. These included Cambridge, which is part of the London-Stansted-Cambridge-Peterborough Growth Area.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Valuation Office Agency has made of the number of domestic properties in England with (a) patios, (b) greenhouses and (c) scenic views. [33483]

Mr. Woolas: None.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Experiments

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of animals used for experimentation were genetically modified, in the last year for which figures are available broken down by species . [30479]

Andy Burnham: In 2003, the last year for which information is available, there were around 764,000 procedures on genetically modified animals, which represented 27 per cent. of all regulated procedures reported in that year. The number of actual animals used is very close to the number of procedures, because nearly all animals are used once only.

The number of procedures carried out on animals carrying a genetic modification, broken down by species and type of procedure, is given in tables three and 3.3 of the annual publication Statistics of scientific procedures on living animals, Great Britain, 2003 (Cm 6291), a copy of which is in the Library. Over 97 per cent. of genetically modified animals used in 2003 were mice; most of the remainder were fish.

Asylum/Immigration

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officials of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate are directly employed in making initial decisions on asylum claims, broken down by civil service grade. [20491]

Mr. McNulty: The number of caseworkers making initial decisions on asylum claims in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate are as follows:

Higher executive officers—59

Executive officers—183

Administrative officers—4.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Libyan nationals claimed asylum in the UK in each year since 2000. [33593]

Mr. McNulty: The table shows the number of asylum applications (excluding dependants) from Libyan nationals from 2000 to Q3 2005, by year. Information on asylum applications is published in quarterly web pages and in the annual statistical bulletin Asylum Statistics United Kingdom. Copies of these publications and others relating to general immigration to the UK are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what process the National Asylum Support Service awards contracts for housing asylum seekers; what safeguards are in place to ensure that best value is obtained; what terms and conditions are imposed on agencies which contract with providers of accommodation to ensure that they obtain the cheapest and best accommodation available; what process is available for unsuccessful tenderers to challenge decisions; what monitoring is undertaken by his Department to ensure transparency and absence of collusion between agencies and housing providers; and if he will make a statement. [34125]

Mr. McNulty: The procurement process to award contracts for housing asylum seekers is based on best practice guidelines and managed under the EU

Procurement directive (Negotiated Procedure). Contracts are developed to meet the strategic aims of delivering business continuity, flexibility, value for money and maintaining community cohesion. Unsuccessful tenderers have a right of challenge under the EU directive and all challenges will be dealt with according to the EU guidance and in line with Home Office policy. As part of the procurement process all parties are expected to sign a confidentiality and non-collusion agreement and there is an auditable record of all communication between the purchasing agency and the bidding organisations.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with EU Ministers about illegal immigration from North Africa into the EU; and if he will make a statement. [35301]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Home Secretary has held various discussions with other EU Ministers about illegal immigration from North Africa, both bilaterally and at EU level, including at recent JHA Councils and at the G5 in Evian. It has been a UK presidency priority to make progress on this issue.

Illegal migration across the Mediterranean is an humanitarian problem affecting source, transit and host countries alike. Discussions have focused on the need to take urgent action to prevent loss of life at sea, tackle human trafficking and assist transit countries in North Africa to build capacity to manage migration flows more effectively. In parallel, there is a need for the EU and African countries to work in partnership to develop a comprehensive, long-term approach to strengthen and enhance dialogue and practical co-operation and to address the root causes of migration.

This approach was recognised by EU Heads of State at the informal summit in London on 27 October 2005 and is strongly reflected in the Commission Communication on Priority actions for improving migration management published on 30 November 2005. The communication focuses on concrete actions that can be carried out quickly with sub-Saharan Africa and the Mediterranean countries, as the first step in this long-term approach.

Civil Emergency Planning

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what dates since September 2001 local authorities and emergency services in (a) Essex, (b) Greater London and (c) England have carried out emergency drills for terrorist attacks; where such drills took place; and which agencies were involved. [34340]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have been asked to reply.

The Government do not gather information about the number and nature of exercises carried out by local responders and which agencies were involved.

Part 1 of the Civil Contingencies Act 2004—which came fully into force on 14 November 2005—establishes a statutory framework for civil protection activity at the local level. The Act sets out clear roles and responsibilities for local responders and establishes a basis for effective performance management. Under this legislation category 1 responders (eg local authorities, emergency services, health bodies) are required to maintain emergency plans and business continuity plans to ensure that they can respond effectively to the full range of emergencies, including terrorism. The legislation also requires category 1 responders to put in place a programme of exercises to ensure that these plans are effective.

Responders' performance against the requirements set out in the Act will be monitored by their existing performance management bodies (eg Audit Commission, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary).

Criminal Records Bureau

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people working with children have completed Criminal Records Bureau checks. [33116]

Andy Burnham: The Home Office does not collate data concerning the number of people who are working with children. Therefore I am unable to provide information on the number of people working with children who have completed Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks. However, during the last 12 months, the CRB processed 1,904,789 disclosure applications where a check against the Protection of Children Act 1999 (PoCA) list has been specifically requested.

Departmental Estate

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the status of the old Home Office building at 50 Queen Anne's Gate. [31797]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

The building is currently being prepared for refurbishment by the landlord following completion of the move of the Home Office to their new premises at 2 Marsham Street, on 18 April 2005. An agreement has been signed between DCA and the landlord, on 5 October 2005, under which the landlord will refurbish the building before DCA take occupation. Work will start on the building on 5 December 2005 and is due for completion in November 2007.

Deportation

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responsibility he has for deportees after the expiry of the three year period in the Memorandum of Understanding with Jordan. [31156]

Mr. McNulty: There is no time limit on the operation of the majority of the understandings contained in the Memorandum. The exception to this relates to the deportee's entitlement to contact, and be visited by, a representative of the independent body in the event he is arrested, detained or imprisoned. A deportee who is arrested, detained or imprisoned within three years of his return is entitled to contact and be visited regularly by a representative of that body. Where applicable, those visits will continue beyond that three year limit. If a returned person is arrested detained or imprisoned after this three year period, there is no entitlement to contact, or be visited by, the independent body.

European Anti-crime Measures

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the European Commission's proposals to establish a European Public Prosecutor's Office to prosecute serious crime with a cross-border dimension. [35643]

Andy Burnham: Any proposal for the development of a European Public Prosecutor remains subject to ratification of the Constitutional Treaty and the unanimous agreement of the member states. There is no legal base for the creation of a European Public Prosecutor under current treaties. We remain unconvinced that the creation of a European Public Prosecutor is necessary or desirable.

Identity Cards

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether identity card database material will be shared with other EU countries; and if he will make a statement. [34370]

Andy Burnham: There will be no open access to the information held on the National Identity Register. Information may be provided with the consent of the individual under clause 14. Information may also be provided without consent under clause 19 to organisations such as the police and the security services, provided that the conditions set out in clauses 19 and 23 are met.

Clause 20 allows information to be provided to overseas authorities in the context of criminal proceedings and investigations, as provided for in section 17 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. In these cases both the safeguards provided under clause 23 and section 18 of the 2001 Act also apply.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring costs associated with the introduction of stand-alone identity cards. [34728]

Andy Burnham: The current best estimate for the total average running costs for issuing passports and ID cards to UK nationals, for which fees will be charged, is £584 million per annum, 70 per cent. of which is attributable to the cost of the biometric passport. Within our current best estimates of the ID cards scheme as a whole, it will be affordable to set a charge of £30 at current prices for a stand-alone ID card, valid for 10 years.

The Home Office is not breaking this cost down further, nor publishing details of set-up costs because this information is commercially sensitive and discussion of estimated costs for individual elements of the scheme, such as the stand-alone identity card, may prejudice the procurement process by limiting the Department's ability to secure value for money from the market.

The Government recognise the need to have independent assurance so the public can place trust in the figures produced. Thus, KPMG a world leading audit and accounting firm, were commissioned to produce an independent review of the costing methodology and key assumptions in the business case. They concluded that the methodology used to cost the identity cards proposals is robust and appropriate for this stage of development.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer to the Question on identity cards, 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 594W, when he expects his Department's work with representatives from law enforcement agencies and Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs will be completed. [35272]

Andy Burnham: It is planned that work to identity benefits to fight organised crime and money laundering with law enforcement agencies and Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs will be ongoing up to and beyond the launch of the identity cards scheme so that, along with planned activities, its potential to assist any emerging threats can be assessed.

Naturalisation

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it took to process applications for naturalisation in (a) the most recent period for which figures are available, (b) 1997 and (c) 2001; and if he will make a statement. [34653]

Mr. McNulty: The most recent period for which figures are available is January/April to October 2005, at which time the overall average waiting time for naturalisation applications was 4.16 months. This figure is provisional and subject to change. For periods prior to 1 April 2004, we cannot provide the waiting time figure purely for naturalisation applications. Waiting time data covers all nationality applications received by Nationality Group, including naturalisation, registration (adult and minor) and renunciations. Overall average waiting time in 1997 was 14.26 months and in 2001 was 10.51 months. These figures are for the calendar years.

Passports

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 18 October 2005, Official Report, column 868W, on passports, if he will break down the number of passports recorded as lost between the London and Peterborough passport offices. [24511]

Andy Burnham: The number of recorded reports for lost or stolen passports that were received at either the London or Peterborough office, since 1 April 2004, now stands at 152,470. This is broken down as follows:

Passports: lost or stolen

	Number lost	Number stolen
Peterborough	78,402	31,373
London	34,602	8,093

Port Security

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to introduce 24 hour security at UK ports. [23124]

Mr. McNulty: Immigration coverage of international flight arrivals is based upon a range of factors, including the nature and frequency of traffic and the numbers of passengers requiring leave to enter at each port.

There are currently 41 manned ports, of which 16 are staffed 24 hours a day. Other ports are covered on a risk assessed basis. Officers are deployed to unmanned ports to meet specific arrivals where necessary. The provision of advance passenger information by carriers under the e-Borders programme will increase the Border Agencies' ability to conduct risk assessments and deploy resources in a targeted manner.

There are no plans to have personnel manning the ports 24 hours a day. We are however extending the Immigration Service mobile response capacity, based on intelligence, to respond to any new or emerging threats.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Barry Courthouse

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the last valuation was of the Barry court house; and whether this was undertaken for (a) commercial and (b) residential purposes. [30980]

Ms Harman: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) last visited Barry magistrates court for the purposes of valuing it in September, 2004. The valuation basis used by the VOA was depreciated replacement cost (DRC) as this is a specialised building with separate circulation routes and custodial facilities (three cells). The value of the site at 31 March 2005 was £2,674,000. Barry magistrates courts was valued in common with other magistrates courts as it transferred under the Courts Act 2003 to the Department of Constitutional Affairs on 31 March 2005.

Civil Service Relocation (Scotland)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [32378]

Ms Harman: No posts have been relocated to Scotland since 2001.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33213]

Ms Harman: My Department and a list of its agencies which have spent the following amounts on design and production of logos and employing external public relations agencies since 2000 is set out below.

(a) Expenditure on design and production of new logos

Agencies	Logos	Amount
FY 2000–01
Council on Tribunals	New organisational logo	575
Law Commission	New organisational logo	7,500
FY 2002–03
Commission for Judicial Appointments	Logo for new public body: CJA	1,350
FY 2003–04
DCA	Logo for new Department	25,000
HM Courts Service	Logo for new agency: HMCS	20,000
Northern Ireland Court Service	Logo for new public body: NI Legal Services Commission	12,705
FY 2004–05
DCA	Logo for Freedom of Information Act	12,842
FY 2005–06[1]
DCA	Logos for new public bodies: Commission for Judicial Appointments, Office for Judicial Complaints, Judicial Appointments and Conduct Ombudsman	35,000
Judicial Studies Board	Logo for the European Judicial Training Network General Assembly	1,600
HM Inspectorate of Court Administration	Logo for new agency: HMICA	5,850

[1] To date.

(b) Expenditure on employing external public relations agencies—

Commission for Judicial Appointments	Amount
2002–03	12,000
2003–04	37,360
2004–05	48,900
2005–06	33,350

[1] To date.

Information on employing graphic design agencies since 2000 is not centrally held. To collate the information would be disproportionate to cost.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff in her Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31755]

Ms Harman: There has been no relocation of jobs into London and the South East. The Department for Constitutional Affairs does not hold records on individual staff who may have relocated through the normal course of internal staff movement.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to relocate staff in her Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31756]

Ms Harman: The Department for Constitutional Affairs has no plans to relocate staff into London and the South East.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what her Department's policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33327]

Ms Harman: My Department lets contracts in accordance with the general principles of EU Community law, which are non-discrimination, equal treatment, transparency, proportionality, and mutual recognition. In addition, my Department's standard contract documents make clear its policies on matters such as equality and diversity, and, that suppliers should demonstrate the same values.

Environmental factors in contracts let by my Department are considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of EU Community law.

Human Rights Act

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance her Department has given the English Regional Chambers on the implementation of the Human Rights Act 1998. [33120]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1700W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, columns 640–41W, on the Human Rights Act, what the (a) name and (b) publication date is of the guidance to local authorities; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [35405]

Ms Harman: The "Guidance on Contracting for Services in the light of the Human Rights Act 1998" was first published in May 2005, and was republished in November 2005. It is available on the websites of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and of the Department for Constitutional Affairs, and I have placed a copy in the Library.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into her Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within her Department. [31105]

Ms Harman: The Department for Constitutional Affairs has, in consultation with the Identity Cards Programme, commenced work on calculating costs in the areas where ID cards will be used in the department—both in terms of integrating with the IT systems and the ongoing operational impact. This information is commercially sensitive and to release it may prejudice the procurement process and the Department's ability to obtain value for money from potential suppliers.

The Department is represented on the Ministerial Committee on Identity Cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation.

We believe that operational benefits will be realised through the use of ID cards particularly in areas where the identity of individuals will assist in the delivery of front line services. As improvements in our business processes are identified we will consider changes to our IT systems to derive the maximum benefit.

Judges

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department is taking to increase the number of disabled people serving as judges. [26630]

Ms Harman: My Department has been working with organisations and individuals with an expertise or interest in, or experience of, disability, including the Disability Rights Commission and a number of serving judges, to develop an action plan to promote judicial appointment to potential candidates who are disabled, and to ensure that issues of reasonable adjustment are properly dealt with, both for disabled candidates and for serving judges who have or develop a disability. The action plan was published on my Department's website (www.dca.gov.uk) on 2 November and I have today placed a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

The same organisations and individuals will be involved in implementing the action plan, through a joint working group with departmental officials.

Land Registry Adjudicator

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the Adjudicator to the Land Registry was appointed; how many cases have been referred to him; how many cases have been resolved; and what the average length of time taken to resolve each case has been since the appointment of the Adjudicator. [33605]

Ms Harman: The Adjudicator, Mr. Cousins, was appointed to post in September 2003. The Office of the Adjudicator to HM Land Registry came into force in October 2003.

From October 2003 until October 2005 the total number of cases referred to the office of the Adjudicator to HM Land Registry was 2,853.

From October 2003 until October 2005 a total of 2,059 cases have been disposed of.

The information requested for the average length of time to resolve each case cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Legal Services (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has for a specialist domestic violence court in Ribble Valley. [34521]

Bridget Prentice: The Department for Constitutional Affairs wrote to all magistrates courts committees on 15 December 2004 asking for expressions of interest in setting up a specialist DV court (SDVC).

The Lancashire area was among those who responded and included in the selection process for establishing 25 specialist domestic violence court systems across England and Wales.

Lancashire has a roll out programme in place for SDVC's across the Criminal Justice Area, Ribble Valley is included.

The timing for the setting up of individual courts is currently being decided between the Government Office for the North West Region and the Local Criminal Justice Boards and Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships within the area.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what proportion of the magistrates sitting at Ribble Valley magistrates courts are female. [34522]

Ms Harman: The Ribble Valley is covered by the Blackburn, Darwen and Ribble Valley Local Justice Area.

72 out of 157 magistrates (45.9 per cent.) in the Blackburn, Darwen and Ribble Valley are female.

Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether victims in cases covered by the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill are included in the proposals made in the consultation document "Hearing the Relatives of Murder and Manslaughter Victims"; and if she will make a statement. [34419]

Ms Harman: The proposals for victims' advocates set out in the consultation paper "Hearing the Relatives of Murder and Manslaughter Victims" apply to cases tried only in England and Wales.

Rape Trials

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many rape trials in which all proceedings are complete have been conducted in (a) Darlington Crown court, (b) Carlisle Crown court, (c) Newcastle Crown court and (d) York Crown court under the revised definition of that offence in the Sexual Offences Act 2003; and what verdicts have been returned in each case. [35292]

Ms Harman: Departmental records show the following figures for completed rape trials and their verdict under the revised definition of that offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 at Carlisle Crown court, Newcastle Crown court and York Crown court. We cannot supply figures for Darlington, as the Crown court does not sit there.

	Carlisle	Newcastle	York
Trials	7	9	11
Acquittal	3	4	7
Conviction	4	5	3
Jury unable to agree	—	—	1

Royal Marriage

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether HRH the Prince of Wales asked (a) before and (b) since his marriage in April that legislation be introduced to make his marriage morganatic; and if she will make a statement. [35852]

Ms Harman: No.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how adults without a qualification at level 2 are prioritised in the (a) learndirect and (b) nextstep services. [36046]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council delivers an integrated information and advice service on learning and work through the national learndirect telephone and online service, and 47 local nextstep partnerships. The information services which learndireet and nextstep provide are freely available to all adults, and there is no prioritisation. The more resource intensive advice services which learndirect and nextstep deliver are targeted primarily on those who do not have a full level 2 qualification, since they are more likely to lack the skills foundation for employability and lifelong learning. Within those who lack a full level 2, nextstep face-to-face advice services are further prioritised towards people aged 50 and over, or who have learning difficulties or disabilities.

Autism

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Government have approved the Son-Rise programme for public funding for the treatment of autism. [34571]

Maria Eagle: It is for schools and local authorities to decide on provision for children with autistic spectrum disorders (ASDs) in individual cases. The Option (Son-Rise) programme is one of the interventions listed in my Department's and the Department of Health's Good Practice Guidance on ASDs as an intervention which is available to use for individual children. The guidance makes clear that listing does not constitute an endorsement of the intervention by the Department's Autism Working Group. A number of local authorities have funded Son-Rise programmes for individual children through statements of special educational needs.

Childminders

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been given to support childminder networks in (a) Leeds and (b) Leeds West constituency in 2005–06. [35142]

Beverley Hughes: Developing robust childminder networks attached to children's centres and extended schools is one of the objectives set out in the 10 year strategy for childcare. The Government have given local authorities the scope to use funding flexibly to develop and sustain childcare services, rather than allocate funds for specific purposes. Leeds city council will receive 405,982 over 2004–06 for the sustainability element of their Sure Start general grant. They will decide how much is required to support childminder networks, and where to direct this funding. The council can also use a proportion of their children's centre revenue funding (£1,615,171 over 2004–06) on network development to meet the requirement to integrate childminders with children's centre services.

Leeds city council currently supports a city-wide network of 125 childminders using Sure Start funding. Work to link these childminders closely with children's centres and extended schools is ongoing, including the five centres developing in the Leeds West constituency.

Employer Training

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 2056W, on employer training, what definition she uses of a fair contribution for employers to pay towards the cost of wider employee training. [35823]

Phil Hope: We do not expect employers to pay for employees to attain the skills they need to give them a sound basis for sustainable employment in the economy. That is why we have introduced an entitlement to free training for adults who lack basic skills or a first full level 2 qualification. Beyond this, where there are tangible returns to business, the Government believe it is right that employers make an appropriate contribution to the cost of training provided through the further education system. We expect this contribution to grow to 50 per cent.—of course fees costs—by 2010. This is what we stated in the LSCs 'priorities for success' in October 2005.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) employers and (b) employees who were eligible signed up for employer training pilots in the last year for which figures are available. [36047]

Phil Hope: A report by the Institute for Employment Studies (IES) published in March 2005, "Platform for Progression: Employer Training Pilots Year 2 Evaluation Report" found that at the end of the second year of the pilots almost 12,000 workplaces were involved in the 12 phase 1 and 2 pilots. Some 10 per cent. of eligible employers were involved—12 per cent. in the phase 1 pilots and 8.5 per cent. in phase 2. Take-up had been stronger in the second year of the pilots than the first and take-up levels varied significantly by pilot area. 80,000 learners had signed up, around 4 per cent. of the eligible population.

These figures will be updated in the IES Evaluation Report of Year 3 of ETP which we expect to publish early in 2006.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the National Employer training programme will continue with the Employer Training Pilot model of weighting funding towards the successful completion of qualifications by participating employees. [35614]

Phil Hope: Yes. The new national employer training programme—which will be known as Train to Gain"—will pay 50 per cent. of the tuition costs on successful completion of the qualification by the learner. This is the same approach as currently operates in the Employer Training Pilots.

Every Child Matters Youth Board

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the Every Child Matters Youth Board. [33855]

Beverley Hughes: The Government committed to forming a Children and Youth Board in "Every Child Matters: the Next Steps". The Board was set up so that children and young people could gather the views of their peers on the issues that affect them. These views are then used to provide direct advice on the development of national policy and the design of services to the Minister for Children Young People and Families and to officials in the department.

The 2005/06 Board consists of 25 children and young people aged between 8–19, with five under 12-years-old. The children and young people are from the nine Government office regions and also include two representatives from each of the two devolved Administrations. The Minister for Children, Young People and Families meets the Board regularly.

Free Nursery Places

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many three and four-year-olds in Leeds West constituency are in free nursery places. [35141]

Beverley Hughes: All four-year-olds have been entitled to a free early education place since 1998 and from April 2004 this entitlement was extended to all three-year-olds. The free entitlement consists of a minimum of five two and a half hour sessions per week for 33 weeks of the year for six terms before statutory school age, which is the term following their fifth birthday.

Some local authorities may additionally offer subsidised childcare places but this information is not collected centrally.

Figures for January 2005 show that all four-year-old children receive some form of free entitlement. The figure for three years olds is 96 per cent. This covers all maintained, private, voluntary and independent providers and represents 535,100 three-year-olds and 568,300 four-year-olds.

In January 2005 in Leeds local authority there were 7,100 free nursery places taken up by three-year-old children. The equivalent figure for four year olds was 7,600. Information for private and voluntary providers is not currently available for Leeds West constituency in 2005.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 43/2005 "Provision for children under five years of age in England-January 2005 (final)" in September, which is available on my Department's website:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000604/index.shtml

Noise Pollution

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Transport on the exposure of children to aircraft noise (a) during the school day, (b) in the evening and (c) at weekends. [33958]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not had discussions with the Secretary of State for Transport on this subject. I have however met with Cllr Ruth Cadbury from the London borough of Hounslow and expressed my concern that the challenges faced by schools under or near the flight path approach of Heathrow and its new runway are fully addressed.

Ofsted Reports

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to enable state schools to have a right of appeal to the parliamentary ombudsman in relation to Ofsted reports. [35641]

Jacqui Smith: Where a school is dissatisfied with the outcome of Ofsted's internal consideration of a complaint about an inspection, it has the right to have the case re-examined by the Independent Complaints Adjudicator, appointed by the Secretary of State.

The role of the parliamentary ombudsman is to protect private persons in their relations with the Executive. As a consequence, complaints from bodies constituted for purposes of the public service fall outside the remit of the ombudsman. However, there may be specific circumstances in which those involved in a school inspection may appeal to the ombudsman, in particular, where it can be demonstrated that maladministration has caused them a personal injustice.

Online Message Boards

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's policy is on the use of online message boards for public consultations. [36022]

Phil Hope: My Department does not have a specific policy on the use of online message boards for public consultations.

The Department uses an online consultation system to enable respondents to contribute to public consultations.

Positive Action for Young People (Croydon)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the Positive Action for Young People funding stream from the Government office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [33875]

Maria Eagle: In 2004–05, £213,662 was made available from the Positive Activities for Young People programme (PAYP) to the London borough of Croydon. Total expenditure in the London region in 2004–05 was £13,471,088.

Prison Service (Learning and Skills)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid to HM Prison Service by her Department for the post of Head of Learning and Skills for the last three years; what the projected expenditure is for these posts over the next five years; and what the projected costs over the next five years are for the Learning and Skills Co-ordinator posts in prisons in the south-west. [35615]

Phil Hope: The following table sets out the budget allocated to the Prison Service by the Department for Education and Skills for Heads of Learning and Skills posts for the last three years.

£ million

	Budget
2003–04	1.96
2004–05	7.00

Expenditure for 2006–07 is expected to be the same as 2005–06. Budgets for future years have not yet been set.

Expenditure for the Learning and Skills Co-ordinator posts in the south-west is £455,000 for 2005–06. Budgets for future years have not yet been set.

School Deficits (Essex)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Essex are expected to run a deficit in the current financial year; and what the reasons given for a deficit are in each case. [35811]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is due to collect the section 52 out-turn data relating to the 2005–06 financial year from October 2006.

Sexual Abuse

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action her Department is taking to prevent sexual abuse involving children. [34792]

Maria Eagle: The Government's guidance documents 'What to do if you you're worried a child is being abused' (2003), 'Safeguarding Children in Education', and 'Statutory guidance on making arrangements to safeguard and promote the welfare of children under section 11 of the Children Act 2004' set out the roles and responsibilities of practitioners who work with children, and of a wide range of organisations, to promote children's welfare and safeguard them from harm. We are currently revising 'Working Together to Safeguard Children', the core inter-agency guidance on safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children. The revised version will include updated guidance on female genital mutilation, forced marriage, child prostitution and internet safety. My Department is leading work to update the National Plan to Prevent the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and is contributing to the Home Office review of prostitution. We provide support for the Stop It Now! campaign run by the Lucy Faithfull Foundation and also to ChildLine. We are implementing the recommendations of the Bichard Inquiry relating to improved vetting arrangements for workers with children and the provision of training for school governors and head teachers to ensure that staff selection interviews reflect the importance of safeguarding.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance is given to schools to encourage children to report acts of sexual abuse. [34793]

Maria Eagle: My Department's guidance for all local authority education departments, schools (including independent schools) and further education colleges in England, 'Safeguarding Children in Education', explains the duty, roles and responsibilities placed upon them by sections 157 and 175 of the Education Act 2002 to carry out their functions with a view to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children. The guidance makes clear that schools should demonstrate to children that they are in a safe environment where they will be listened to, and that schools should have a child protection policy in place, which emphasises the importance of listening to children and taking their concerns seriously.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has had with children's charities about child sex abuse. [34794]

Maria Eagle: In November I addressed the annual conference of the Coalition for the Removal of Pimping (CROP). My right hon. Friend, the Minister for Children, Young People and Families, has recently written to the NSPCC in response to their recent 'Talk 'til it Stops' campaign, which asked the Government to introduce and resource public awareness campaigns to prevent child abuse.

Sick Leave

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of her Department's employees who are within one year of the official retirement age are on extended sick leave. [32601]

Maria Eagle: My Department remains committed to managing sickness absence effectively and to putting in place the recommendations of the recently published report "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector".

There is currently one person within one year of the official retirement age on extended sick leave.

Sixth-form College (Shrewsbury)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will visit the sixth-form college in Shrewsbury. [33890]

Ruth Kelly: My Ministers and I are keen to visit educational establishments of all types and get many invitations, which we try to accept as far as our diaries permit.

Special Advisers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the names of the special advisers who have served in her Department since 2001; what the dates of service were of each; and what policy areas each covered. [33851]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 2 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1257W.

Special advisers support their Ministers across the range of the Department's policy areas. Their responsibilities are set out in the Model Contract for Special Advisers which is available in the House Libraries.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children received a statement of special education needs in (a) each local authority in Essex, (b) each London borough and (c) England in the last year for which figures are available. [34216]

Sure Start

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children living in (a) Leeds and (b) Leeds West constituency are participating in Sure Start schemes. [35137]

Beverley Hughes: There are eight Sure Start local programmes in Leeds reaching a total of 6,026 children under the age of four. Sure Start Seacroft covers 1,345 children; Sure Start Bramley covers 993 children; Sure Start Middleton covers 502 children; Sure Start Chapeltown covers 783 children; Sure Start Beeston Hill covers 905 children; Sure Start Burley covers 466 children; Sure Start Harehills covers 499 children and Sure Start Little London involves 533 children under four. All eight Sure Start local programmes are part of or are becoming children's centres. There are also 24 neighbourhood nurseries in Leeds providing 730 full day care places. 13 of these nurseries are involved in becoming children's centres.

In 2004–06, Leeds planned to develop 25 children's centres reaching a total of 10,706 children under the age of five. 14 of these centres have been designated as children's centres by the Sure Start unit and eleven have received approval to proceed.

Five of these children's centres are based within the Leeds West constituency serving a total of 2,450 children under five; two have been designated as children's centres. There are also two Sure Start local programmes within the constituency covering 1,458 children under four; both are part of children's centres. There are four neighbourhood nurseries based within Leeds West, offering a total of 147 full day care places.

University Staff (Salaries)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions the Department has had with the relevant trade unions on the salaries of university staff. [35214]

Bill Rammell: The Department has had no such discussions. Universities are autonomous and responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including deciding what to pay their own staff. Pay and conditions of service are subject to negotiations between employers, their staff and their representative trade union bodies. The Government plays no part in this.

Youth Services

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding was made available for youth services in (a) England, (b) Staffordshire and (c) Tamworth constituency in each of the last 10 years. [35669]

Maria Eagle: From 2003–04, and the introduction of Formula Spending Shares, there has been a Youth and Community sub-block containing unhypothecated resources for the Youth Service, among other items. Subsequently, authorities' planned expenditure on Youth and Community activities has been separately recorded on their section 52 budget statements each year.

The following table shows the planned expenditure on Youth and Community activities for both Staffordshire and England, using information provided by authorities to the Department.

The figures for England and Staffordshire are in the following table:

Financial year	England	Staffordshire
2003–04	516,853,232	7,231,835
2004–05	528,637,156	7,358,625
2005–06	545,410,613	7,588,790

All LEAs including Staffordshire have received additional funding via the Transforming Youth Work Development Fund (replaced in 2005–06 by Transforming Youth Work Performance Improvement Fund) and SENDA funds. The allocations to Staffordshire were:

Financial year	SENDA capital	SENDA revenue	TYWDF/ TYWPIF

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Recipients

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals in Scotland are in receipt of at least one social security benefit. [35041]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. It is not possible to separate those receiving only housing benefit and council tax benefit from the overall figures.

The available information was in the written answer I gave the hon. Member on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 607W.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to improve take-up of benefits provided by his Department in the top 125 most deprived lower layer super output areas as identified in the 2005 Welsh Index of Multiple Deprivation; and what discussions he has had on this issue with the Welsh Assembly Government. [33293]

Mr. Plaskitt: Although the Department is not taking any steps specifically aimed at take-up of benefits in these areas, it maintains close working relationships at operational level with local authorities and the voluntary sector across the country, to ensure that all those entitled to services and benefits from the Department receive them.

Nationally, we have recently begun the third annual publicity and marketing awareness campaign aimed at getting everyone who is entitled to council tax benefit to claim it.

We are continuing, nationally, to make contact with those households that are likely to be eligible to pension credit. Activity has included direct mail, telephone calls and, where appropriate, home visits. The Pension Service's Local Service is working closely with local partners including Help the Aged and Age Concern to help ensure pensioners take up their entitlements.

As with all matters relating to the Department's responsibilities, we maintain ongoing dialogue with the Welsh Assembly Government at an operational level.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of assessed Child Support Agency cases had maintenance collected via deduction of earnings orders in each quarter since 1994; and if he will make a statement. [28383]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 8 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what proportion of assessed Child Support Agency cases had maintenance collected via deduction of earnings orders in each quarter since 1994; and if he will make a statement.

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand and percentages to the nearest whole number.
2. Robust information covering the period May 2003 to February 2004 is not currently available.
3. Information prior to November 1995 is not provided as management information is not available.

4. The above includes those old scheme cases with a full maintenance assessment, and those new scheme cases with either a full maintenance calculation, or a default maintenance decision. Old scheme cases with a punitive interim maintenance assessment (an imposed assessment due to the non co-operation of the non resident parent), a small number of which would have deductions from earnings orders in place, are excluded from this analysis in line with the Agency's target definitions, as are new scheme cases being processed clerically.

5. These figures include all cases with a maintenance liability with the exception of around 5,000 cases for which the method of payment is unknown.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children in Northamptonshire have been supported by parental payments made through the Child Support Agency in each year since 1997. [34880]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information can not be broken down to the geographical level requested.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many change requests have been made to the Child Support Agency's new computer system in each year since 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [21450]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 8 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many change requests have been made to the Child Support Agency's new computer system in each year since 2003–04.

The process for notifying EDS of any elements of the system that do not fully enable us to meet our functional requirements involves making a "request for change". This does not necessarily mean that a change to the underlying requirement has taken place. The change is commonly a defect discovered during testing or live operation.

In 2003/4 we introduced 32 agreed changes to the original requirement, 11 in 2004/5 and 4 to date in 2005/6.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent progress there has been with tackling (a) computer problems and (b) telephone problems at the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [21585]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is matter for the chief executive Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 8 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent progress there has been with tackling (a) computer problems and (b) telephone problems at the Child Support Agency.

As a result of the remedial work carried out over the past 18 months, the computer system stability, availability and performance are much improved, in most cases now achieving and maintaining agreed technical service-level standards.

There have been significant technical improvements made to the performance of the telephony system, including recent upgrading of call-management software, resulting in a measured improvement in the stability and availability of the telephony service. There are further planned telephone service improvements, which will mainly centre around enabling faster responses, and more consistent availability of staff who can deal with a client's call.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the key performance metrics are for measuring the success of the EDS contract with the Child Support Agency. [30021]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 8 December 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the key performance metrics for measuring the success of the EDS contract with the Child Support Agency are.

The Departmental wide contract with EDS sets out a number of performance related criteria that are designed to measure their ability to deliver the operational services. The Department monitors the achievement or otherwise of these measures and where applicable it can apply financial remedies to EDS for poor performance.

The main criteria on which EDS performance is measured in respect of CS2 are:

The level of system availability (where the target is 99.2%);

Response times (where the target is 95% of responses within 3 seconds); and Accuracy and timeliness of payments to parents with care (where the target is 100%).

In addition as part of the CS2 commercial settlement with EDS they have agreed to a deliver a staged and specified programme of work. The Department has retained substantial sums of money that will be released over time as and when EDS deliver on their commitments.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will break down the Child Support Agency's compliance figures by the income band of the non-resident parent. [30069]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not currently available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deduction of earning orders were in place at the Child Support Agency in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05; what proportion of cases this represented in each year; and if he will make a statement. [33433]

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many cases in which the Child Support Agency was seeking to make the flat rate deduction in child maintenance where the non-resident parent was on benefit in each year since 2003 the request was subsequently found to be for a different benefit from the one being claimed. [34697]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what problems remain to be fully resolved with the Child Support Agency computer system. [21440]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is matter for the chief executive Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 8 December 2005:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what problems remain to be fully resolved with the Child Support Agency computer system.

Under the terms of the recently-completed commercial settlement, EDS will complete the new computer system (CS2) to an agreed specification, up to the point of providing system capability for conversion of cases onto the new rules. This will include correcting all currently-agreed system defects and running any scans necessary, without further cost. The Department will retain a proportion of payments conditional upon timely completion of this work to the required standards of quality. In addition EDS has agreed to make no further charges for the old (CSCS) computer system until June 2008.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Housing Benefit

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria he used in determining whether to continue the single room rent upper limit on housing benefit provisions for those aged under 25 years. [36042]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stafford, (Mr. Kidney), on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 13W.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Government have made of the effect of the age discrimination clauses in the Equality Bill of the legality of the single room rent upper limit on housing benefit provisions for those aged under 25 years. [36043]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no clauses in the Equality Bill which introduce (or extend) protection against discrimination on grounds of age.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed Identity Card Scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31120]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department for Work and Pensions has, in consultation with the Identity Cards programme, developed its current best estimate of the cost of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees and these costs have been incorporated into the business case. The Department is represented on the Ministerial Committee on Identity Cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation.

In deriving these estimates account has to be taken of the types of use required to support the particular services which this Department oversees. Not all services will require a high degree of integration between the Identity Cards Scheme and other IT systems. Where there may be a need for integration, some costs can be absorbed into the usual cycles of system upgrades and technology refreshes.

We cannot release the detailed estimated costs for integrating IT systems and the ongoing operation of the Identity Cards Scheme within the Department and the services which it oversees at this stage as these elements may be acquired from the market. The estimates are therefore commercially sensitive and to release them may prejudice the procurement process and the Department's ability to obtain value for money from potential suppliers.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Jobcentre Plus clients live more than 20 miles away from their nearest Jobcentre Plus office; and what arrangements are made to assist with their travel requirements. [28702]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Leslie Strathie, dated 8 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many Jobcentre Plus clients live more than 20 miles away from their nearest Jobcentre Plus office; and what arrangements are made to assist with their travel requirements. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

We do not hold information on the distance our customers have to travel to their nearest Jobcentre Plus office. However, this government is investing in modern, welcoming offices which provide a single point of access to Jobcentre Plus services. Previously, a customer may have had to visit a Jobcentre to access job vacancies, and a social security office to arrange payment of benefit. The new service brings both together in an integrated, personal service for customers. In fact, customers in receipt of benefit other than Jobseeker's Allowance have increased access to our offices, as there will be approximately double the number of Jobcentre Plus locations compared with the number of social security offices they could have previously contacted.

In planning the new network of Jobcentre Plus offices, local managers take into account many factors including population spread, availability and cost of public transport and the distance between offices. We aim to locate our new offices where there are good transport links. Inevitably as the office network changes, there will be some customers who will find they will have to travel further. Jobcentre Plus is actively working with local partners to ensure these hard to reach communities have access to services.

In many locations, particularly rural locations, we are often able to provide outreach facilities, ensuring access to job vacancies, advice and information through third party premises. In practice this means that with our new network, very few of our customers would have to travel more than 20 miles to access Jobcentre Plus services, other than in the most remote rural areas.

Customers are now using our offices differently. More of our face-to-face customer contact is on an appointment basis and information on job vacancies is readily available by telephone and the internet. This enables staff in our offices to focus on those customers in greatest need of support.

There are long established rules for reimbursing travelling costs for Jobseeker's Allowance customers attending a Work Focused Interview, principally where the interview does not fall on their normal signing day. For normal fortnightly attendance to sign-on, customers are expected to meet the cost of their journey to the office. Where the closure of an office means customers having to travel over an hour to the nearest office, we will consider if postal signing is appropriate. Customers in receipt of Income Support and Incapacity Benefit can claim for reimbursement of their expenses in a similar way when requested to attend the office.

Link-Age Pilots

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 548W, on the Link-Age pilots, where each pilot is located; and how each pilot will be evaluated. [35474]

Mr. Timms: The pilot sites for the second phase of Link-Age are in the process of being agreed DWP is working in partnership with the Department of Health, the social exclusion unit, Better Government for Older People, Help the Aged, Age Concern, Citizens Advice Bureau, and the Local Government Association to identify the criteria against which the pilots will be selected. An evaluation plan is being designed alongside the pilot selection criteria. The location of pilot sites and the evaluation plan will be announced shortly.

Pension Credit

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Stroud (a) received the state pension and (b) (i) applied for and (ii) received pension credit in each of the last five years; and what the average pension credit payment was in each year. [35112]

Mr. Timms: The available information is in the following tables.

Information on the number of people who have applied for pension credit is not available in respect of individual constituencies. pension credit was introduced from October 2003. Information on numbers of households and individuals in receipt of pension credit at 30 June 2005 is contained in the most recent quarterly pension credit progress report published on 20 October. The report is available in the Library.

Number of people in Stroud parliamentary constituency receiving pension credit and the average weekly amount

	Household recipients	Individual beneficiaries	Average weekly amount
May 2005	3,900	4,700	38.00
May 2004	3,600	4,300	36.06
November 2003	2,900	3,400	37.85

Notes:
1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest 100 therefore totals may not sum. Average weekly payments are shown to the nearest penny.
2. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).
3. PC data are taken as at 30 November 2003 and 31 May in 2004, 2005.
4. State pension data are taken as at 31 March 2001 and 31 May in 2002–05.
5. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.
6. For March 2001, the caseload figures have been adjusted to be consistent with the Work and Pension Longitudinal Study (WPLS) data. These figures are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Pension Reform

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is his policy to increase the state pension age to 67; and if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for pension reform. [33631]

Mr. Timms: The Pensions Commission's Second Report published on 30 November 2005 includes recommendations to Government on raising the state pension age over time.

As far as the specific recommendations are concerned, the Government are ruling nothing in and nothing out. Ministers have asked the Pensions Commission to continue their involvement in the public debate over the next few months. The Government will work toward, republication of a white paper in the spring which will set out their response.

Pensioners

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many female pensioners in Midlothian are in receipt of the full basic state pension. [35261]

Mr. Timms: The number of female pensioners in the Midlothian parliamentary constituency who are in receipt of a full basic state pension as at 31 March 2005 is 4,600.

Notes:
1. Data is taken from 5 per cent. extract of Pension Service Computer System, therefore figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation. They are also adjusted to be consistent with the overall caseload from the Work and Pension Longitudinal Study.
2. The figure for the number of recipients is rounded to the nearest hundred.
3. A full basic State Pension (£79.60 in 2004–05) is paid to those who fully satisfy the contribution conditions either in their own right or where applicable, on the basis of their late or former spouse's contributions.
4. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners have been entitled to either income support or pension credit in each year since 1990; how many claimed it in each year; and what percentage did not claim in each year. [35647]

Mr. Timms: Estimates of the number of pensioners entitled to Income Support, the comparable number of recipients and the associated percentage rates of take-up can be found in the DWP report series: "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up". Copies of the annual series are held in the Library.

The latest report relates to financial year 2002–03 and pre-dates the introduction of pension credit. The report presents patterns in the take-up of pensioners' income support/minimum income guarantee between 1997–98 and 2002–03.

Information on numbers of households and individuals in receipt of pension credit at 30 June 2005 is contained in the most recent quarterly pension credit progress report published on 20 October. A copy of the report is also in the Library. The report containing the first six months following the introduction of pension credit, "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2003/2004" will be released on 19 December 2005 and will contain estimates of take-up.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is taking to speed up the payment of the winter fuel allowance. [35505]

Mr. Timms: The winter fuel payment is issued as quickly as possible following the September qualifying week and subsequent matching exercise to determine entitlement and level of payment. Payments go out over several weeks and commenced in early November. The majority of payments, including all automatic payments, will be made by Christmas.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about increasing the winter fuel allowance. [35507]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor has announced that the winter fuel payment will continue at the current rate for the remainder of this Parliament. The payment provides a significant contribution towards fuel cost.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people will receive the winter fuel payment in the Leeds, West constituency in 2005–06. [35125]

Mr. Timms: For winter 2004–05 there were 14,035 people in the Leeds, West constituency who received a winter fuel payment. We expect the numbers for winter 2005–06 to be similar. This information for winter 2004–05 is also available in the Library.

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Local authorities and parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Australia (Domestic Violence)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many immigration cases have involved allegations of domestic violence in Australia in the past three years; [35087]

(2) how many women accompanied by their children who have fled alleged domestic violence in Australia have been (a) granted visas to stay in the United Kingdom and (b) had their children returned to Australia against their wishes in the last three years. [35088]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Our visa issuing post in Canberra, which handles all applications for entry clearance to the United Kingdom from Australia, has no statistics of applications from individuals who might have been involved in domestic violence.

Although it is possible that some individuals seeking entry clearance for the UK may be victims of domestic violence, there is no provision under the Immigration Rules for entry to the UK on these grounds. There is therefore no requirement or incentive for an applicant seeking entry clearance at any of our visa issuing missions overseas to declare that they have been subject to domestic violence, as their applications will be considered on other grounds.

Jurisdiction on the return of nationals to their home country belongs with the Home Office.

BBC World Service

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) benchmarks and (b) indicators have been set by which to judge the effectiveness of the planned BBC World Service Arabic television news channel. [34929]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is currently in discussions with the BBC World Service about all its performance measures to be in place from April 2006. It is anticipated that measures for the BBC Arabic Television service will include indicators on reach, impact (including reputation), quality and value for money among target audiences in key areas throughout the region.

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions have been held between the US State Department and the UK Government on representations each Government has made to the Libyan Government over the recent jamming of communication satellites Telstar 12 and Hotbird; and if he will make a statement; [34921]

(2) what representations he has made to the Libyan Government about the jamming of the Telstar 12 and Hotbird communication satellites since September; and if he will make a statement; [34923]

(3) what assessment he has made of Libya's compliance with the International Telecommunications regulations of the United Nations International Telecommunications Union (a) within Libya and (b) with reference to jamming of the Telstar 12 and Hotbird communications satellites; and if he will make a statement; [34925]

(4) what discussions the Government had with (a) broadcasting authorities and (b) Loral Skynet on (i) disruption of commercial and Government data circuits and (ii) restoration of Sowt Alamel's broadcasting services via the Telstar 12 and Hotbird satellites; and if he will make a statement; [34926]

(5) what impact the recent interruption of the Telstar 12 and Hotbird communication satellites had on Government communications. [34927]

Dr. Howells: We have been informed that the Telstar 12 satellite has experienced some technical interference and note it has been alleged that the interference has originated from Libya. Our understanding is that, if true, the alleged action might be a breach of the International Telecommunications Regulations of the United Nations International Telecommunications Union.

Government communications may have been disrupted and we are investigating the matter further. Following discussions with the United States authorities, the Office of Communications and Loral Skynet, the British ambassador in Tripoli raised the issue with the Libyan authorities at senior level.

The Government continue to work to eliminate barriers to freedom of expression and information and to create an environment in which free speech and free media flourish.

Burma

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Myanmar Government over the extended detention under house arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. [34719]

Ian Pearson: Daw Aung San Suu Kyi remains under house arrest with almost no contact with anyone outside her compound. We have not yet been able to verify the reports that her period of detention has been formally extended. The Burmese authorities have given no official notification of the extended detention.

We have, however, joined with others in the international community in calling repeatedly for her immediate release and that of all political prisoners in Burma, most recently in a statement issued on behalf of the European Union on 28 November.

We will continue to highlight the case of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi with the Burmese authorities at every available opportunity. Our ambassador in Rangoon raised her continuing detention and that of other prisoners of conscience when she met the Burmese Home Minister on 26 October. In the meantime our embassy in Rangoon is monitoring the situation closely.

Cameroon

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will instruct the British ambassador to Cameroon to make urgent representations to President Biya concerning the arrest and detention of Mr. Nfor Ngala Nfor. [32154]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 7 December 2005]: My noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised the case of Mr. Nfor Ngala Nfor with the Cameroon Minister Delegate at the Ministry of External Relations at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting on 24 November.

The British high commissioner to Cameroon discussed the Southern Cameroons National Council with the Cameroon Deputy Minister of Justice on 29 November.

Colombia

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Colombia to ensure that (a) criminal investigations into third parties who backed and co-ordinated paramilitaries are advanced and (b) that those responsible for backing paramilitarism are brought to justice under the new Justice and Peace Law. [35254]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We have regularly urged the Colombian Government to do more to tackle the issue of collusion between state officials and the paramilitary groups. President Uribe has publicly stated on a number of occasions that he will not tolerate such collusion and will act decisively against those who are proved to have such links. The Colombian Government have a clear duty to undertake thorough judicial investigations into all attacks and abuses, including those where there are credible allegations of collusion. We have made this point to the Colombians on many occasions and will continue to do so. We have also made it clear that a culture of impunity must not be allowed to flourish.

We have been encouraged by recent, stronger action by the Colombians to address these issues. This has resulted in dismissals from the security forces, and in some cases, arrests and imprisonment of both high-ranking army officers and police. Such action sends a strong message that collusion with illegal groups and involvement in drug trafficking will not be tolerated. It also helps increase public confidence in the security forces. We commend the Colombian Government for this and urge them to continue, and strengthen, their efforts to crack down on collusion and to deny impunity to wrong-doers.

The EU response to the new Justice and Peace Law can be found at http://ue.eu.int/ueDocs/cms_Data/docs/pressdata/en/gena/86442.pdf

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates President Kabila of the Democratic Republic of the Congo has visited the UK in the last four years. [34516]

Ian Pearson: President Joseph Kabila of the Democratic Republic of the Congo has made an official visit to the United Kingdom once over the last four years, from 4–6 February 2004. Prior to that, he also made an official visit to the UK in March 2001.

Departmental Victim Support

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether policy changes in relation to victim and family support from his Department are being considered following the Sharm el-Sheikh bombing. [34493]

Dr. Howells: Those injured abroad, or the relatives or dependants of those killed abroad, are not currently eligible for compensation under the UK compensation schemes. However, the Government are currently discussing this, and the wider question of support in the UK for the victims of terrorist incidents overseas.

Diplomatic Residency (Cape Town)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) for what reasons the head of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office property management team and a consultant interior designer recently visited the high commissioner's residency in Cape Town; and at whose request the visit was made; [35717]

(2) when the high commissioner's residence in Cape Town was last refurbished and redecorated; [35718]

(3) who is now resident in the high commissioner's residence in Cape Town. [35719]

Ian Pearson: The Head of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Property Management team has not visited Cape Town.

The FCO has a rolling visit programme to review the interiors and furnishings of certain residences. The visit of an interior designer to Cape Town was part of this programme. A senior member of Estates Directorate visiting South Africa on other business took the opportunity to accompany them.

The Cape Town residence last had a major refurbishment in financial year 2000–01.

The high commissioner, the right hon. Paul Boateng and his wife, reside both in his residence in Pretoria and in his residence in Cape Town.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those cases against the United Kingdom that have been lodged and are awaiting consideration by the European Court of Human Rights; which articles of the Convention are cited in each application as having been breached; which cases have been ruled admissible; and if he will make a statement on each case. [33726]

Ian Pearson: A list of all the cases lodged against the United Kingdom at the European Court of Human Rights is not available as in the majority of cases the Court decides without referring them to Governments. The cases against the United Kingdom that have been ruled admissible, and the articles in respect of which they are admissible, are as follows:

Case name	Article
Barrow	Article 14 and Article 1 of Protocol 1
Bell	Article 6
Black	Article 6
Blake	Article 6
Boyle	Article 5
C	Articles 6, 8 and 13

Tsfayo	Article 6
Walker	Article 14 and Article 1 of Protocol 1
Widowers (71 cases)	Article 8 and/or Article 1 of Protocol 1 and Article 14
Young	Article 6

The other cases which have been communicated to the Government and on which an admissibility decision is awaited, and the articles in respect of which they have been communicated, are as follows:

Case name	Article
A and Others	Articles 3, 5, 13 and 14
Alderson and eight Others	Article 6

Widowers (319 cases)	Article 8 and/or Article 1 of Protocol 1 and Article 14
Wilkinson	Articles 3, 6, 8 and 13
Wilson	Article 6

To prepare a statement on each of these cases would result in disproportionate cost.

Foreign Decorations

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2245–46W, on foreign decorations, when he expects the Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals to announce (a) its decision on the Pingat Jasa Malaysia medal and (b) the results of its review of the Government's rules for the accepting and wearing of foreign awards. [33436]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals will be considering the Pingat Jasa Malaysia medal and reviewing certain rules governing the accepting and wearing of foreign awards at its meeting on 7 December. Further consultations may be required before the Committee submits its advice to Her Majesty The Queen. Hon. Members will be informed when decisions have been taken.

Indonesia

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on the US removal of the military embargo against Indonesia; what representations the Government has made to the US Administration on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [33323]

Ian Pearson: We have noted the United States (US) Government decision on their military relationship with Indonesia. We have not made any representations to the US Administration on this matter.

Iraq

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of (a) private security guards and (b) private contractors employed in Iraq by the UK Government in 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [35001]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 6 December 2005]: In financial year 2004–05, the total cost requirements for private security guards and private contractors employed in Iraq by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office were £48.9 million and £9.67 million respectively.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether an official in his Department has issued an apology to the Iraqi authorities in relation to the events in Basra on 19 and 20 September. [36072]

Dr. Howells: No apologies have been given to the Iraqi authorities by officials with regard to any aspect of the events of 19 September. The UK and Iraqi authorities have conducted and completed inquiries into the events of 19 September in Basra. A joint statement about the matter was released on 11 October 2005, available at http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/uky4332818.stm. The matter is now closed.

Kosovo

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress in the UN-led talks on the future status of Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [34720]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: On 10 November, the United Nations Security Council endorsed the Secretary-General's appointment of former Finnish President, Martti Ahtisaari, as his Status Envoy for Kosovo. Mr. Ahtisaari has begun his work, visiting Belgrade and Pristina last week. We look to both sides to engage constructively in this process. The British Government will continue to support the Status Envoy. I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of the Contact Group (United States, UK, France, Germany, Italy and Russia together with representatives of the European Union) Guiding Principles. These are there to support the work of the Status Envoy.

Legislative Consultation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those of his Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies which the Government are required to (a) consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) publish its response to advice from. [34681]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has three advisory non-departmental public bodies (NDPB). They are the Diplomatic Service Appeal Board, The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine and the Wilton Park Academic Council.

The Government are not required to consult these NDPBs prior to legislative proposals or publish their response to advice from them.

Liberia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the UK is providing to the Government of Liberia to reform and strengthen the (a) justice and (b) civil security structure in Liberia; and if he will make a statement. [34730]

Ian Pearson: The UK is currently providing no direct support to Liberia on the justice sector. The Department for International Development (DFID) looked into a justice programme, but could not proceed for lack of a suitable local partner. Further, there are several other donors present in Monrovia better placed to cover this sector. The UK, however, played a key role in negotiating and getting agreement on the Governance and Economic Management Assistance Programme (GEMAP), which has a justice component. The UK representative in Monrovia is also involved in the Rule of Law Taskforce, and DFID is running a governance programme with an anti-corruption component.

The UK is actively involved in sharing lessons learned from the UK Security Sector Reform (SSR) leadership role in Sierra Leone with the UN and the United States, who are leading on SSR in Liberia. There is also a UK Brigadier seconded to the UN in Liberia to advise on various aspects of SSR.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the level of resources available to UN human rights officials tasked with investigating reports of trial by ordeal in Liberia; and if he will make a statement. [34731]

Ian Pearson: We are aware of recent so-called "witchcraft" trials in Grand Cape Mount county. Such worrying issues form part of our regular dialogue with the UN Mission in Liberia (UNMIL), including with their human rights staff. UNMIL are not only following closely and attending some of the hearings, but they are also carrying out civic education with local communities. The UK Political Officer in Monrovia—the sole Government representative in Liberia—has discussed the trials with UNMIL human rights staff, both in Monrovia and during a visit to the county where the activity is centred, in November 2005.

Palestine

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli authorities regarding the lifting of restrictions in Palestine in line with the Roadmap in preparation for the legislative elections scheduled for 25 January 2006. [35172]

Dr. Howells: We, along with our EU partners, have emphasised to the Israeli Government the need to co-operate fully with the Palestinian authority in facilitating the preparation and conduct of the elections, especially to ensure the freedom of movement of all election officials, candidates, campaigners and voters.

Sanjar Umarov

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment his Department has made of the (a) whereabouts, (b) medical condition and (c) reason and conditions of detention of Sanjar Umarov; and if he will make a statement; [34732]

(2) what discussions (a) he, (b) Ministers of his Department and (c) other members and representatives of the UK Government have had with members and representatives of the government of Uzbekistan concerning the (i) arrest and (ii) detention of Sanjar Umarov on 22 October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [34733]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Sanjar Umarov was detained on 22 October 2005. He is being held in solitary confinement in Tashkent City Prison on charges of large scale embezzlement related to his business affairs. The Prosecutor General's Office has completed its preliminary investigation into Mr. Umarov's affairs and has submitted it to the Supreme Economic Court.

Mr. Umarov's lawyer was first able to visit on 26 October 2005. He reported that Mr. Umarov was naked in his cell and incoherent. On subsequent visits Mr. Umarov has been able to talk to his lawyer in the presence of the investigation team. He has requested medical treatment for high blood pressure but has not had an independent medical assessment to date.

Our ambassador in Tashkent, David Moran, raised Mr. Umarov's case with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 24 October 2005 and again with Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs Mustafayev on 26 October 2005. We issued a Presidency statement on 25 October 2005 calling on the Uzbek authorities to allow Mr. Umarov access to his lawyer and his family and to treat him in accordance with international standards. The statement can be found at:

http://www.eu2005.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1107293561746&a=KArticle&aid=1129042521613&date=2005-10-25.

Mr. Moran discussed Umarov's case with Foreign Minister Ganiev on 2, 10 and 11 November 2005.

On 8 November 2005, the EU issued a declaration on the human rights situation in Uzbekistan, which referred to Umarov's detention and urgently requested the Uzbek authorities to allow an independent assessment of Mr. Umarov's condition. The declaration, which can be found at: http://www.eu2005.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1107293561746&a=KArticle&aid=1130675480072&date=2005-11-08, was delivered to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs by diplomatic note.

Our Embassy in Tashkent remains in close touch with Umarov's family and lawyer.

Uganda

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of whether the Lord's Resistance Army is willing to engage in peace talks with the Government of Uganda. [35210]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The Ugandan Interior Minister has welcomed the recent comments made by Vincent Otti, the Lord's Resistance Army's (LRA) deputy commander, to the BBC that the LRA is ready to talk. Former Ugandan Minister, Betty Bigombe, who has been trying for years to encourage peace talks, has suggested that if it is genuine in its latest offer, the LRA should call a ceasefire in northern Uganda. For any peace talks to succeed the LRA needs to demonstrate that they are seriously pursuing a sustainable peace that ensures those indicted by the International Criminal Court face justice in The Hague.

United States (Deportation)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 October 2005, Official Report, column 909W, to the right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell), on the United States (deportation), whether the answer applies to UK Overseas Territories. [34421]

Dr. Howells: I can confirm that that answer is true of the UK Overseas Territories.

War Crimes Trial (Guantanamo)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the US Administration on behalf of (a) the UK Government and (b) the European Union regarding the US Department of Defence's decision to conduct the first war crimes trial at Guantanamo with the power to impose the death penalty; and if he will make a statement. [33709]

Ian Pearson: The Government's view on the Military Commissions are well known to the United States (US) Government. The Government have expressed their reservations about them from July 2003 when two British nationals were designated for possible trial. The Government subsequently concluded that the Commissions did not meet the standards required for our nationals. The UK has not made representations on this matter on behalf of EU member states.

The Military Commissions have been suspended, pending consideration of the Hamdan case by the US Supreme Court. This is not expected before early next year. The US Government have confirmed that it will not seek the death penalty for any of the nine terrorist suspects it has formally charged at Guantanamo Bay.

West Papua

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visits have been made by embassy staff to West Papua in the past year; and if he will place copies of the reports of the visits in the Library. [35050]

Ian Pearson: Members of the British embassy, Jakarta, have visited Papua on three occasions in the past year.

It would not be appropriate to place copies of the reports of the visits in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1902W, on West Papua, what reports he has received that Tactica water cannon vehicles are present in West Papua and have been used to control peaceful protests; what representations he has since made to the Indonesian authorities; and if he will make a statement. [35126]

Ian Pearson: In the period since 22 November, we have received reports indicating that Tactica water cannon vehicles were deployed to the city of Jayapura, Papua in August of this year. The reports indicate that the vehicles may have been used by police to disperse a violent incident during which demonstrators were allegedly seeking to cause criminal damage to a public facility. We are currently seeking confirmation of these reports from the Indonesian authorities.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1902W, on West Papua, what guidelines have been issued to his Department's embassy staff in Indonesia concerning the end-use monitoring of UK-supplied military equipment; and if he will place copies of those guidelines in the Library. [35128]

Ian Pearson: No guidelines have been issued to embassy staff in Jakarta concerning the end-use monitoring of UK supplied military equipment. The core standing tasks of the British embassy Jakarta include investigating any credible reports that British supplied equipment has been used by the armed forces or law enforcement agencies to perpetrate abuses of human rights.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1902W, on West Papua, what assessment he has made of whether the use of Tactica vehicles to control peaceful protests is a breach of previous assurances that UK-supplied equipment will not be used to violate human rights. [35134]

Ian Pearson: We consider that the use by a Government within its own borders of proportionate force to maintain law and order, subject to appropriate controls, is legitimate and does not constitute internal repression or a human rights abuse.

We have received reports that Tactica water cannon vehicles may have been used by police to disperse a violent incident in Jayapura, Papua, during which demonstrators were allegedly seeking to cause criminal damage to a public facility. We are currently seeking confirmation of these reports from the Indonesian authorities.

HEALTH

Acute Hospitals

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospitals have provided type 1 accident and emergency facilities in each year since 1990. [25281]

Mr. Byrne: Data on the number of type 1 accident and emergency (A and E) departments are only available in this format from 2000–01 and are shown in the following table. Prior to 2000–01, statistics provided a count of the number of trusts providing a type 1 A and E service, rather than the number of type 1 A and E services. The pre-2000–01 trust data are available on the Department's website at:www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity

Alcohol

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 22 March 2005, Official Report, column 738W, on alcohol, if she will break down the figures provided by (a) primary care trust, (b) London borough and (c) individual London hospital. [16899]

Jane Kennedy: Information showing the number of admission episodes for alcohol-related diseases in children aged 11–15 by primary care trust, London local authority and London hospital provider, has been placed in the Library.

Allergy Specialists

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many allergy specialists are working in the NHS in London, broken down by (a) primary care trust and (b) London borough. [31436]

Jane Kennedy: London primary care trusts do not employ staff with an allergy speciality and numbers of allergy specialists are not collected by London borough.

However, the information in the table shows the latest figures available for hospital medical staff with a specialty in allergy, within London Government Office Region, by strategic health authority, national health service trust and grade.

Antidepressants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1799W, on antidepressant drugs, if she will break down the figures by (a) 0 to 11, (b) 12 to 16, (c) 17 to 25, (d) 26 to 50, (e) 51 to 65, (f) 66 to 75 and (g) 75 year olds and over; and what proportion of the total population in each age chart is represented as a proportion of the total population for each age group. [33514]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not available. Age-based prescription data are available only for people within the three age-related charge exemption categories: zero to 15 years; 16 to 18 years and in full-time education; and people aged 60 years or over.

Prescription data are not gathered for other age categories, nor where a prescription charge exemption on age grounds alone does not apply: 16 to 18 but not in full-time education and all persons aged 18 to 59 years.

Audiology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2648W, on audiology services, what data is being collected as part of the pilot for diagnostic tests for pure tone audiometry; which hospitals are involved in the pilot; when the results of the pilot will be published; and if she will make a statement. [33352]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on 12 November 2005, Official Report, column 2648W. The pilot data collection looked at data on activity and waiting times for a short list of diagnostic tests or procedures, including pure tone audiometry. The same set of information was collected for each of the diagnostic tests/procedures covered by the piloting exercise.

Children's Hospices

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of primary care trust deficits on funding for children's hospices; and if she will make a statement. [30387]

Mr. Byrne: The national health service is currently receiving the largest sustained increase in funding in its history, with an investment of £135 billion over 2006–07 and 2007–08. There is no limit to the amount primary care trusts may devote to palliative care

In our manifesto, we made a commitment to increase the funding for end of life care, giving people the choice as to where they receive this care. This pledge is extended to the care of children and young people with a life-threatening condition.

Departmental PSAs

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she intends to extend the ambit of her Department's 2004 public service agreement target number eight to include those persons supported by grant-funded organisations. [30801]

Mr. Byrne: There are no current plans to extend the ambit of public service agreement target number eight. However, the Health and Social Care Information Centre is currently leading a project to establish a data collection on the number of people who are helped to live more independently in their own homes through services provided by voluntary and other organisations that do not form part of a formal care package agreed by social services.

Departmental Resources

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the real terms percentage increase in allocated resources for her Department (a) was for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05 and (b) is estimated to be between 2005–06 and 2007–08 (i) for each period and (ii) for each year. [31038]

Jane Kennedy: The average real terms increase in national health service total net expenditure for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05 is 6.2 per cent.

The estimated average real terms increase in NHS total net expenditure for the period 2005–06 to 2007–08 is 7.1 per cent.

The real terms increase year on year from 1997–98 to 2007–08 is included in the following table.

East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust (Chief Executive)

Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds the chief executive of the East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust recently resigned her position; and what payment has been made to her in settlement of her claims against the Trust. [21474]

Caroline Flint: Ministers were not involved in the employment matters of East Sussex Hospitals National Health Service Trust. This was a matter which was dealt with by the trust.

However, Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority, the local headquarters of the NHS has advised that the former chief executive resigned her position to pursue new career opportunities. I understand that the trust intends to publish details of her severance package in the next annual accounts.

Epilepsy

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to encourage the development of epilepsy networks within the NHS. [30744]

Mr. Byrne: We have invested £1.2 million in a NHS Modernisation Agency project to improve access to, and the quality of, neurological services. We have also given £290,000 to the National Society for Epilepsy to develop its information outreach services.

On 19 February 2003, the Department published its action plan for epilepsy—"Improving Services For People With Epilepsy". Following this, the NHS Modernisation Agency ran "Action on Neurology" in 2004–05 at eight pilot sites. This included delivering high quality epilepsy service without the need for patients to travel far by the use of electronic and paper patient-held records. The pilots also aimed to improve communications between primary, secondary and tertiary care by developing a network of healthcare professionals to deliver a co-ordinated service. A further aim was to develop general practice with special interest services for people with epilepsy and headaches and a primary care triage system to improve access and efficiency.

Fertility Treatment

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of the use of eligibility criteria by primary care trusts in the provision of funding for infertility services; [28519]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the extent to which primary care trusts are making available sufficient funding for centrally-agreed levels of fertility treatment; [28520]

(3) if she will make a statement on the progress that primary care trusts in England are expected to make in implementing the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's clinical guideline on fertility; [28521]

(4) what assessment she has made of the likely effect of the forthcoming (a) review of specialised services commissioning and (b) reorganisation of primary care trusts on progress towards implementing the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's clinical guideline on fertility. [28522]

Caroline Flint: When the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) guideline on the assessment and treatment of people with fertility problems was published in February 2004 we advised primary care trusts (PCTs) to offer a minimum of one cycle of invitro fertilisation (IVF) by April 2005 to those who meet the clinical criteria in the guideline, giving priority to couples with no children living with them. Following up the implementation of the guideline, NICE has carried out surveys measuring its impact and these are available on the NICE website at www.nice.org.uk The surveys have found that 95 per cent. of the PCTs who responded are offering at least one cycle of IVF to those defined as eligible according to local criteria. The primary responsibility for the implementation of the clinical guideline on the assessment and treatment of people with fertility problems produced by NICE rests with the national health service at local level, in discussion with patients' groups and local health bodies. Local policies will reflect local needs and priorities. We have advised that we expect the NHS to make progress to full implementation of the guideline in the longer term.

The assessment and treatment of people with fertility problems is not defined as a specialised service. In many cases, PCTs work together to commission infertility treatment services.

Health Services (Uxbridge)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential and (b) in-patient specialist drug treatment rehabilitation places are available in (i) Uxbridge constituency and (ii) each London borough. [29758]

Jane Kennedy: We do not hold figures for Uxbridge as drug treatment data are collected on a drug action team (DAT) area basis. Data are not collected on treatment places, but collected on the basis of aggregated numbers in treatment in the financial year across all six treatment types, which are:

day care

general practitioner prescribing specialist prescribing residential rehabilitation in-patient detoxification structured counselling

In 2004–05, the numbers in treatment in Hillingdon, of which Uxbridge is part of, was 504.

The figures for all DATs in London, for numbers in treatment in 2004–05 is shown in the following table.

Health Warnings (Cigarette Packets)

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make representations to the European Commission for the addition of a "smoking causes blindness" warning to the list of approved warnings for cigarette packets. [33448]

Caroline Flint: The European Commission is not currently in a position to change the health warnings on tobacco packs. There are many candidate conditions caused by smoking that might be appropriate as new warnings. As and when the 14 current health warnings are reviewed, the United Kingdom will be keen to be involved in ensuring that the revised warnings are as effective as possible.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to increase the proportion of people infected with hepatitis C that are treated. [33584]

Caroline Flint: The Department is running a hepatitis C awareness campaign for healthcare professionals and the public as part of implementation of the Hepatitis C Action Plan for England.

One of the aims of the awareness campaign is increase diagnosis of hepatitis C so that those infected can be referred for specialist assessment and treatment, if indicated. The awareness campaign highlights groups considered to be at risk of hepatitis C infection and who should consider being tested, or who should be offered testing by healthcare professionals.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will instruct the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to conduct an appraisal of the use of anti-HIV drugs for post-exposure prophylaxis. [26015]

Caroline Flint: Public health guidance on anti-HIV drugs for post-exposure prophylaxis was published on 5 July 1998 by the Health Education Authority and is available on the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's website at www.nice.org.uk. It has also been placed in the Library.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in North Somerset primary care trust were diagnosed with HIV/AIDS in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004; and how many have been so diagnosed in 2005. [33687]

Caroline Flint: Data on HIV/AIDS diagnoses are not available at primary care trust (PCT) level. Data at strategic health authority (SHA) level which have reported to the end of September 2005 are available on the Health Protection Agency's website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hiv_and_sti/hiv/epidemiology/hars_tables.htm.

The relevant SHA for North Somerset PCT is Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire SHA.

Hospitals

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people were admitted to hospital on Christmas day in each year since 1997 in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority, broken down by reason for admittance; [32024]

(2) how many people stayed in hospital overnight on Christmas day in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997. [32025]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost is to NHS hospitals per meal provided by (a) in-house and (b) external caterers. [33135]

Jane Kennedy: The average cost to NHS hospitals per main patient meal for in-house and external caterers is £2.60 and £2.56 respectively.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of patients leaving NHS hospitals after stays of a week or more who are suffering from malnutrition. [33134]

Influenza Vaccinations

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those categories of people who are on the Government's priority list to receive avian influenza vaccinations in the event of a UK outbreak. [33728]

Caroline Flint: There has been some confusion between seasonal flu, avian flu and pandemic flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal flu refers to the viruses that circulate in the human population and cause widespread illness each winter. Pandemic flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a strain to which large numbers of the population have not been exposed and which can spread easily between humans.

We are finalising a contract for the purchase of a two to three million doses of vaccine against the H5N1 strain currently circulating in South East Asia and other areas. This vaccine can be used for research and for possible use for healthcare workers in an emergency, and may provide some limited protection against a pandemic emerging from that source. We hope to award this contract shortly and would receive some stocks early next year.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of those eligible for the winter influenza vaccine have been vaccinated in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29808]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the table.

Flu uptake in those aged 65 and over for the last five years

	Percentage
2000–01	65.3
2001–02	67.7
2002–03	68.5
2004–05	71.5

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average patient waiting time was for a winter influenza vaccine in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29811]

Caroline Flint: This data are not held centrally.

IVF Treatment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have received help from the national health service for IVF treatment in each of the last five years, broken down by primary care trust. [33784]

Caroline Flint: Information about the number of people receiving in vitro fertilisation in each primary care trust is not collected centrally. The primary responsibility for the provision of these services rests with the national health service at local level.

Lupus

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 442W, on lupus, whether the part of her Department's research and development budget which is allocated to and managed by individual NHS organisations is ring-fenced solely for the purpose of research and development. [25066]

Jane Kennedy: The research and development budget the Department allocates to national health service organisations is subject to an agreement between the Secretary of State and each of those organisations. The agreement is an NHS contract and is legally binding. The agreement states that the research and development allocation should be used to

> "host, support, carry out and commission research and development in such a way as to achieve maximum benefits in terms of the NHS research and development strategy".

It specifically precludes expenditure on local service development, clinical audit, patient care services, or costs that are, or should be, met by another body such as a commercial organisation, NHS commissioner or university.

The Department undertakes regular performance management to ensure compliance with the terms of the agreement, requiring annual reports from individual NHS organisations covering current research activity and financial accountability.

The Government are committed to moving to full transparency of the use of research and development funds allocated to NHS trusts and achieving full sustainability for clinical research in the NHS. To that end, the Department's consultation document, "Best Research for Best Health: a new national health research strategy" includes proposals for the introduction of a system in which the money supporting research and development undertaken in the NHS will follow patient involvement in health studies.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS (a) consultant psychiatric posts and (b) mental health acute beds were available in each of the last five years in (i) West Sussex, (ii) East Sussex and (iii) Brighton and Hove Unitary Authority. [33107]

Caroline Flint: Information is not held centrally in the format requested. However, information on the number of medical consultants within the psychiatry group of specialities for West Sussex, East Sussex and Brighton and Hove Unitary Authority is shown in the table.

The Department does not collect mental health acute beds data. However, information relating to the number of acute beds and the number of mental health beds at trust level is available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/data_requests/beds_open_overnight.htm

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the level of funding for mental health services in North West Leicestershire. [33286]

Mr. Byrne: The Department assesses annually the investment in mental health services published in the national survey of mental health services. The report details the level of investment in adult mental health services and compares it with results reported in previous years.

The analysis in the report is derived from the detailed finance mapping exercise co-ordinated by local implementation teams as part of the regular adult mental health review process undertaken each autumn.

Ministerial Travel

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) flights and (b) helicopter flights, taken by Ministers within her Department for (i) UK and (ii) overseas visits in each year since 1995; on how many occasions (A) charter flights were used and (B) first and club class tickets were obtained; and who accompanied the ministers on each trip. [27800]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not hold the information in the form requested.

Since 1999, the Government have published, an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent in each year from 1 May 1997 on ministerial travel, broken down by (a) provision and running costs of vehicular transport, (b) first class travel by rail, (c) standard class travel by rail, (d) first class travel by air, (e) club or equivalent class travel by air and (f) economy class travel by air. [27815]

Jane Kennedy: The Department's finance systems do not hold information in the form requested. The available information up to 2003–04 is shown in the following table. In April 2004, the Department introduced a new accounting system. Under the new accounting system information on travel costs are not separately identifiable.

In respect of ministerial cars, my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Cabinet Office has asked Roy Burke, Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) to write to the hon. Member with details of the costs of ministerial vehicles provided to Departments in 2004–05. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library. For information for the financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04,I refer the hon. Member to the letters from the Chief Executive of the GCDA to the hon. Member for Buckingham (John Bercow) dated 10 January 2005 and to the then hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Howard Flight) dated 13 September 2003. Copies of these letters are available in the Library.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the end-of-year financial position was of the NHS (a) in total and (b) broken down by (i) NHS trust, (ii) primary care organisation and (iii) other NHS organisation in each year since 1997–98. [27541]

Mr. Byrne: This information requested has been placed in the Library. In the year before this series (1996–97), 209 of the 529 national health service bodies were in deficit and the total deficit was £460 million.

NHS Logistics

Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the £3.1 billion business for consumable goods not purchased from NHS Logistics in 2003 she expects the winning bidder for NHS Logistics business to provide direct to NHS trusts; and how the figure of £3.1 billion was calculated. [32882]

Jane Kennedy: The market testing of the proposed outsourcing of the national health service consumable supply chain and procurement services is ongoing and no decision has been made regarding outsourcing to an independent provider.

The figure of £3.1 billion was calculated using trust financial returns (TFR3) data of 2003.

NICE (Drug Approvals)

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer drugs approved by the EU Committee for Medicinal Products for Human Use are awaiting approval by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence. [19897]

Jane Kennedy: This is a matter for the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE). Information about NICE'S current work programme is available on the its website at www.nice.org.uk.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average period of time taken was to assess a drug already approved by the EU's Committee for Medicinal Products for Human Use as suitable for human use following its referral to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in the last period for which figures are available. [19903]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is not responsible for assessing the suitability of drugs for human use. Assessment of the safety, quality and efficacy of a medicinal product lies with the relevant medicines regulator, such as the Medical Healthcare products Regulatory Agency in the United Kingdom. NICE provides advice to the national health service on the clinical and cost effectiveness of drugs approved by the European Union's Committee for Medicinal Products for Human Use and other regulators.

Obesity

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2743W, on obesity, what indicators her Department has proposed for the new quality and outcomes framework; and whether they include obesity treatment. [32305]

Caroline Flint: NHS Employers, on behalf of United Kingdom Health Ministers, are currently discussing with the British Medical Association's general practitioners committee revisions on the existing general medical services contract. Once approved by the respective UK Health Ministers, an announcement on changes to the current contract will apply from April 2006.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will include points for treating obesity in the general practitioners contract; and if she will make a statement; [32750]

(2) what recent discussions her Department has with the British Medical Association about treating obesity; and if she will make a statement. [32751]

Caroline Flint: NHS Employers, on behalf of United Kingdom Health Ministers, is currently discussing with the British Medical Association's general practitioners committee revisions on the existing general medical services contract. An announcement on changes to the current contract that will apply form April 2006 will be made at the end of the negotiating process, and once approved by the respective UK Health Ministers, which is intended to be later in the year.

Premature Babies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the financial impact of caring for a premature child who has contracted respiratory syncytial virus has been assessed; and if she will make a statement. [30157]

Caroline Flint: Premature children, children with chronic lung disease, and those receiving oxygen therapy are particularly vulnerable to respiratory syncytial virus. The financial impact associated varies with the severity of the illness and is difficult to estimate. In addition to the cost to the national health service of hospital admissions, the associated longer term morbidity has a financial impact on families and on children's community health services.

Primary Care Trusts (Oxfordshire)

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what authority she has granted to the Thames Valley strategic health authority to consider letting the contract for the management of primary care trusts in Oxfordshire to the private sector. [20396]

Caroline Flint: No authority has been granted to the Thames Valley strategic health authority (SHA) to let the contract for the management of primary care trusts in Oxfordshire to the private sector.

SHAs have submitted their proposals for the reconfiguration of primary care trusts (PCTs), which set out how they intend to strengthen their commissioning function. These proposals have been assessed by an independent external panel drawn from and representing a wide range of stakeholder interests, to determine whether the SHA proposals meet the criteria stipulated in 'Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS' (July 2005). Where the criteria are judged to have been met, the proposals will go forward to a 14 week local consultation. No decisions on the reorganisation of PCTs will be taken until this process has been completed.

Private Patients

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private patients were admitted to NHS hospitals in each of the last 10 years. [31346]

Mr. Byrne: The numbers of finished consultant episodes for private patients treated in national health service hospitals for each year from 1994–95 to 2003–04 are shown in the following table.

Count of finished consultant episodes for private patients treated in national health service hospitals in England 1994–95 to 2003–04

	Number
1994–95	101,526
1995–96	109,716
1996–97	112,923
1997–98	124,325
1998–99	142,783
1999–2000	144,341
2000–01	125,902
2001–02	121,712
2002–03	118,680
2003–04	113,273

Notes:
1. Last 10 years for which data are currently available.
2. Figures do not accurately represent the number of patients treated as a patient may have more than one episode of care during the year.
3. Two different counting systems were used during this time series. From 2000–01 counts were based on administrative data category field 'admincat' but for earlier years the counts were based on a derived administrative category data field.
4. Figures are grossed for coverage, except for 2003–04 which is not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Public Interest Disclosure Act

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure that her Department meets the requirements of the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998. [30390]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has its own whistleblowing policy which was introduced in line with the best practice advised by the Public Interest Disclosure Act. It enables staff to raise concerns about any malpractice or illegal act.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the costs of implementing the tuberculosis action plan, Stopping Tuberculosis in England. [31192]

Caroline Flint: The Chief Medical Officer's action plan Stopping Tuberculosis in England (October 2004) makes a number of recommendations on how tuberculosis (TB) services already funded within the national health service can make improvements to the overall delivery of services to tackle TB.

The costs of implementing the action plan are not quantifiable. Changes to NHS services to deliver these recommendations are the responsibility of NHS managers and depend on local service models for the provision of services. Costs will vary in different locations to meet local needs.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated cost was of treating multi-drug resistant tuberculosis (a) per case and (b) in total in the last year for which figures are available. [31006]

Caroline Flint: Data on the costs associated with treatment of multi-drug resistant tuberculosis, either by case or in total, are not routinely collected. The National Institute of Clinical Excellence has undertaken analysis of tuberculosis treatment costs as part of the development of forthcoming guidance Tuberculosis—National clinical guideline for diagnosis, management, prevention, and control. This data is due for publication in early 2006.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) tuberculosis and (b) multi-drug resistant tuberculosis there were in each year since 1997–98. [31010]

Caroline Flint: The information in the following table shows the number of cases of tuberculosis and of multi-drug resistant (MDR) tuberculosis in England and Wales from 1999 to 2003.

	TB cases	MDR cases
1999	5,704	17
2000	6,271	27
2001	6,597	24
2002	6,794	31
2003	6,780	48

Note:
Data is provided from 1999, the first year from which matched data are available, to 2003 which is the most recent year that matched data is available.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the training requirements are for nurses to administer the Mantoux test for TB. [33296]

Caroline Flint: Training requirements for nurses administering Mantoux tests are that they should be properly trained and competent in all aspects of Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) immunisation policy and Mantoux testing procedure including:

recent changes to national BCG policy, identification of individuals at higher risk of tuberculosis, when the use of Mantoux testing is appropriate, administration of an intradermal injection, subsequent reading of the test.

Waiting Times

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 5 October 2005, Official Report, column 2842W, on waiting times, where her Department is piloting data collections to support the 18-week waiting time target; when these data will be published; what data are being collected under each of the pilots; when she expects the collection of data to be extended to all parts of the country; and if she will make a statement. [23953]

Mr. Byrne: Details of the sites and diagnostic tests piloted are shown in the list. Pilot diagnostics data collections have helped refine the list of diagnostic tests to be included in the national data collection for the 18-week target. The national data collection is to be rolled out nationally from January 2006.

Since this has been a pilot exercise, we have no plans to publish the associated data.

A listening exercise on the principles and definitions to underpin the implementation of the 18-week target is under way. This will help inform the development of systems for measuring performance against the target. The exercise is being conducted via the 18-week website (www.18weeks.nhs.uk).

X-ray Equipment

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) repairing existing and (b) buying new NHS X-ray equipment in 2004–05. [33603]

Jane Kennedy: A figure of £110 million, excluding value added tax, is recorded for repairs to existing x-ray equipment for national health service trusts in England in 2004–05. X-ray equipment is taken to refer to x-ray imaging equipment only: fluoroscopy, bone densitometers, general and mobile x-ray, mammography, cardiac, mobile image intensifiers.

X-ray film or posterior anterior chest system, linear accelerators, ultrasound, and magnetic resonance imaging equipment are therefore not included in these figures.

Information on buying new NHS x-ray equipment in 2004–05 is not held centrally.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION

Registered Third Parties

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many (a) organisations and (b) individuals are registered with the Electoral Commission as Registered Third Parties; and how many were so registered in each month since 2004. [33787]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission's statutory register of recognised Third Parties is available at www.electoralcommission.org.uk. There are currently 22 recognised Third Parties on this Register, 20 of which are organisations and two are individuals.

As of the last day in each month since January 2004 the number on the register was:

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many officials in the Electoral Commission deal with the registration of Registered Third Parties; at what grade; and if he will make a statement. [33788]

Peter Viggers: The Commission informs me that no staff are employed full time on the registration of recognised Third Parties, but aspects of this form part of the duties of three officials. The staff concerned are at manager, officer and assistant level respectively.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by the Law Officers' Department in each year since 1995 in respect of what percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [34539]

The Solicitor-General: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The Report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–40WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

In respect of correspondence from members of the public, my Department have provided statistics dating back to November of last year, when the Correspondence Unit was first set up. During the period 1 November 2004 to date we have replied to 91 per cent. of correspondence within 20 working days. Following tables show these figures.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many statutory instruments introduced by the Department had to be (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps he (i) is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [34535]

The Solicitor-General: None have been withdrawn or reprinted because of defective drafting. Two have been revoked and replaced by statutory instruments giving effect to new legislation.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

A120 (Expansion)

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to safeguard the efficient use of agricultural land affected by the proposed expansion of the A120 between Braintree and Marks Tey. [35750]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Highways Agency will seek to minimise the impact of the new A120 road improvement on agricultural holdings and farm practices, within a balanced environmental design strategy. The strategy, which is still in development stage, will consider agricultural land take, the severance of individual or associated farm units and the creation of non-viable land parcels, whilst maintaining farm access routes, or providing acceptable alternatives where necessary.

Animal Welfare

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of animals likely to need re-homing as a result of the introduction of the new welfare offence in the Animal Welfare Bill; and what percentage change she expects in the number of animals in need of re-homing. [34592]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have no statistics for the number of animals currently requiring re-homing. However the introduction of the welfare offence is not expected to increase overall numbers significantly. We believe that the majority of sanctuaries are run satisfactory, providing a valuable service to animal welfare. However, there is evidence that a minority pose a risk. The Animal Welfare Bill will enable this risk to be addressed through the introduction of secondary legislation. The Regulatory Impact Assessment published in conjunction with the Bill proposes that all sanctuaries should be required to register with local authorities on the basis of a veterinary assessment and be subject to a code of practice by 2009. The regulation of animal sanctuaries under the Animal Welfare Bill will enable reliable data to be built up by local authorities so that high-risk establishments can be identified and inspected.

We propose to work closely with welfare organisations and representatives of animal sanctuaries in preparing secondary legislation. This consultation will enable us to refine our thinking on key issues such as the criteria for regulating a sanctuary and the guidance which the code will give on rehabilitation and re-homing. The draft regulations and code will be subject to public consultation and there will also be the opportunity for discussion in Parliament.

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many animal sanctuaries she estimates are open to the public in England; [34593]

(2) what recent estimate she has made of the number of animal sanctuaries there are in England. [34594]

Mr. Bradshaw: Because animal sanctuaries are not regulated there is a lack of comprehensive data on their numbers in England. The Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) which accompanied the Animal Welfare Bill, published on 14 October 2005, gave a conservative estimate of 700 sanctuaries in England and Wales based on previous consultations with animal sanctuary interests. It is not known what percentage of animal sanctuaries are open to the general public.

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what process her Department undertakes to estimate the number of animal sanctuaries; and what definition of a sanctuary is used. [34595]

Mr. Bradshaw: Animal sanctuaries are not regulated, so there is a lack of comprehensive data on their numbers in England. The Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) which accompanied the Animal Welfare Bill, published on 14 October 2005, gave a conservative estimate of 700 sanctuaries in England and Wales based on previous consultations with animal sanctuary interests.

There is no legal definition of an animal sanctuary. However, the term is generally taken to mean any establishment that takes in displaced, injured or unwanted animals, ranging from domestic pets to wild animals, re-homing or rehabilitating animals or providing long-term care.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many bird deaths in quarantine have been investigated by qualified veterinary personnel since 2000; and in how many such cases avian influenza was identified as the cause of death. [24651]

Mr. Bradshaw: All birds which die in quarantine must be submitted to the Veterinary Laboratory Agency for investigation for Newcastle Disease and for Avian Influenza (A.I.).

Since 2000 no cases of A.I. have been discovered, apart from the recent case in Essex discovered on 21 October 2005.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether officials from her Department have made inspections of export facilities in endemic avian influenza H5N1 areas from which live birds are despatched to this country. [31406]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) of the European Commission is responsible for inspecting facilities in exporting countries and ensuring they comply with Community legislation for export to the Community. Currently the Community has a ban on live bird imports from countries where High Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI) has been found.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what basis any single batch of birds may be declared clear of Avian influenza virus H5N; what expert advice she has received on this matter; and what guidance she has promulgated. [32125]

Mr. Bradshaw: Batches of birds may be released under the current rules when either samples are taken from individual birds or from sentinel birds have been tested with negative results.

In addition, if birds have died in quarantine they must be sampled or a representative sample of the dead birds has be tested with negative results. The Local Veterinary Inspector must certify that the birds are free from signs of notifiable disease at the end of the quarantine period.

This is in accordance with Commission Decision 2000/666/EC and Chapter 21 of VIPER the instructions to the State Veterinary Service.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 6W, on Avian influenza, when she expects the Pollution Prevention and Control Review to be completed; and how she will publicise the location of these landfill sites. [34307]

Mr. Bradshaw: The PPC Review referred to in the answer of 28 November is a review of all PPC authorised commercial landfill sites, to assess their potential suitability for the disposal of carcases in the event that the preferred disposal hierarchy of incineration and rendering capacity is exceeded.

The review will be completed early in the new year. Defra will write to each listed landfill operator, and to each local authority in whose area the landfill is located, informing them of the listing before the list is published. This will enable the risks and mitigation measures to be explained. The list will be available on the Defra website.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to promote the consumption of poultry this Christmas season accompanied by clear guidance that its consumption does not pose risks in regard to Avian influenza. [34494]

Mr. Bradshaw: Advice on food safety is a matter for the Food Standards Agency. They have already issued clear advice that, on basis of current scientific evidence, Avian flu does not pose a food safety risk for UK consumers. For people, the risk of catching the disease comes from being in close contact with live poultry that have the disease, and not through eating cooked poultry. The Agency will continue to monitor the most up-to-date information and evidence, as it becomes available and will keep an open mind as to any information that may lead to its advice being updated.

Promotion of poultry and poultry products is of course a matter for the industry.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the recent statement by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation concerning culling wild birds in countries affected by Avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [34722]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government is aware of this recent statement by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation.

The Wildlife and Countryside Act and Animal Health Act both permit the killing of wild birds for particular purposes, such as preventing the spread of disease. However, there are currently no plans to recommend this as a disease control strategy.

The Government's current assessment is that the control of Avian influenza in wild bird populations is not feasible—from a logistical, environmental and biodiversity point of view.

The Government has already put measures in place aimed at reducing the risk of introduction and spread of Avian influenza in the United Kingdom.

It has increased levels of surveillance of wild birds, encouraged keepers to feed and water birds indoors, issued guidance on biosecurity and keeping birds separate from wild birds, banned the import of captive birds and controlled bird show and fairs.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure that quarantine facilities for cases of suspected avian influenza are properly run and maintained; and if she will make a statement. [35219]

Mr. Bradshaw: All commercial facilities are required to comply fully with the strict procedures and processes in place to ensure facilities are run in accordance with Community legislation.

Professor Dimmock's review is looking at procedures in general and expected to report later this month. If necessary we will take appropriate action to strengthen our quarantine arrangements.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the (a) Turkish, (b) Romanian, (c) Russian, (d) Ukrainian, (e) Chinese and (f) European Government on avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [35221]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have had discussions with ministerial counterparts in the EU on a regular basis since the H5N1 strain of the virus emerged in South East Asia four years ago.

Ministers and officials have been actively involved in discussions, and the provision of assistance, at international level on avian influenza. Recent examples have been:

The UK presidency has provided technical support (central research laboratories (CRL) and veterinary assistance) to many countries, including Romania.

Under the UK presidency Commission funds have been provided to enable OIE, the International Animal Health Organisation, to hold technical programmes on AI in Eastern Europe.

As presidency, the UK delegation has represented the EU at the international partnership on avian and pandemic influenza on 7 October; and the Geneva partners' meeting on avian and human pandemic influenza on 7–9 November.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure wild birds are prevented from entering poultry houses; and if she will make a statement. [35222]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government has agreed with stakeholders and issued guidance on biosecurity for bird keepers. That guidance is on the Defra website and has been distributed very widely. It includes encouragement to keepers to minimise contact between poultry and wild birds by feeding and watering their birds indoors and maintaining buildings to ensure wild birds do not roost or nest in them. Further guidance to the industry on how to separate their birds from wild birds will issue shortly.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what emergency preparation plans the Government has put in place for a mass cull of birds to combat an outbreak of Avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [35223]

Mr. Bradshaw: In the event of an outbreak of highly pathogenic Avian influenza Defra would immediately invoke the "Exotic Animal Disease Generic Contingency Plan". Disease control would include killing birds on the infected premises and dangerous contacts (premises likely to be contaminated by a direct link with the infected one). Several techniques are currently available for the humane killing of birds on farm, these include lethal injection, neck dislocation, percussion killers, mobile electrocution and exposure to gases.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government has made of the effects of an outbreak of Avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [35310]

Mr. Bradshaw: An Avian influenza outbreak in the UK could have a range of impacts, depending on its precise nature and scale, and bring serious consequences for the UK poultry industry and others. That is why we are doing all we can, such as working with our stakeholders, to manage the risk effectively.

A full animal disease contingency plan is in place to tackle the outbreak of Avian influenza and reduce the impact on poultry industry and others.

Biodiesel Industry

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research the Government have commissioned into ways of developing the biodiesel industry. [33417]

Mr. Morley: The research commissioned by this Department focuses on the potential carbon savings from using biodiesel and the impacts on agriculture and the rural economy of growing oilseed rape as a biodiesel feedstock. In 2003, Sheffield Hallam university evaluated the comparative energy, environmental and socio-economic costs and benefits of biodiesel production in the UK. The Central Science Laboratory carried out two studies. The first, in 2002, looked at the prospects and potential impacts of liquid biofuels on UK agriculture, the farmed environment, landscape and rural economy. The second, in 2003, looked at industry support, cost of carbon savings and agricultural implications. Cambridge university is currently carrying out a review of the economics of energy crops, including those used for biofuels. DEFRA also commissions research supporting the sustainable development of arable crops, including oilseed rape.

Biodiversity Ministerial Group

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on Bio-diversity has to look at the role of UK-based companies providing financial support to illegal or ecologically unsustainable timber producers and manufacturers. [35075]

Mr. Morley: The Government are aware of the problems of support to unsustainable timber producers and manufacturers. The Department for International Development commissioned Chatham House, an independent research institute, to investigate the nature of the problem, and to identify possible options for moving forward. Their report was published in June 2005 and is available at www.illegallogging.info/papers/due_diligence_in_forestry_investment.doc. The Government are considering the content of the report.

The Government are also working with the private sector in timber consuming and timber producing counties to develop and promote legally sourced timber products and adopt and implement good business practices and improved market transparency. This is in response to the commitments made by the UK and other G8 countries to tackle illegal logging made at the UK presidency's G8 environment and development ministerial in March 2005.

There are no plans for the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on Biodiversity to do additional work on this at present but it does discuss overall Government policy as it relates to global forestry.

Biomass Energy Generator (Winkleigh)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with interested parties on the proposal for a biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon; and what assistance her Department has given to the project. [33978]

Mr. Morley: Defra officials have had discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Forestry Commission, the Government Office for the South West, Regen SW and Renergy Ltd. Ministers and officials have replied to correspondence from Peninsula Power and Winkleigh residents, giving advice on policy issues relevant to the project. No financial assistance has been given although farmers intending to supply energy crops to the power station will be eligible to apply for available planting grants.

Bovine TB

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the proposals are for the BCG vaccine in badgers trial planned for Gloucestershire; what the scale of the trial will be; what the timetable is for the trial; and in what area it will take place. [35777]

Mr. Bradshaw: The field study for the badger vaccine will cover an area of approximately 50 km squared near Cirencester, Gloucestershire and up to 500 badgers. Preparatory work is now under way to obtain landowners' permission and plan the initial field work (surveying setts and bait-marking) which will start in early 2006. Trapping and sampling of badgers will commence in June 2006. Vaccination will be carried out in September 2006, and then annually. The study is likely to run for three years.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the incidence of bovine TB caused by cattle-to-cattle transmission was in the latest period for which figures are available. [33813]

Mr. Bradshaw: The evidence in this area is complex. It is difficult to pinpoint sources of infection for individual herd breakdowns, particularly when infection by wildlife is a possibility, and the regional variation in the incidence of the disease complicates the overall picture. It is, therefore, not possible to put a precise figure on the number of cases of bovine TB (bTB) that can be attributed to cattle-to-cattle transmission (or to any other source of infection). It is clear, however, that "cattle-to-cattle transmission is of critical importance" (Independent Scientific Group on cattle TB, 3rd report, p41) and in low bTB incidence areas there is evidence that it could be responsible for around 80 per cent. or more of cases.

The evidence from work recently submitted for publication does suggest that cattle-to-cattle transmission is the main cause of TB spread in areas currently free, or relatively free, of cattle TB.

But the situation is quite different in the high incidence areas of the country where 85 to 90 per cent. of all confirmed breakdowns occur. Some herds in these areas are also infected by purchased cattle, but wildlife is a major source of new herd infection and in some counties it may be a more important source than cattle.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether animals suspected of being infected by bovine tuberculosis after an initial test are permitted further tests at the animal-owner's request; [34187]

(2) what steps are taken to verify a suspected case of bovine tuberculosis. [34277]

Mr. Bradshaw: Approved testing procedures and standards for cattle TB are set out in EC Directive 64/432/EEC, a trade directive covering health requirements for cattle and pigs. These arrangements are incorporated in domestic legislation the Tuberculosis Order, which are under sections 32 and 34 of the Animal Health Act 1981.

TB is confirmed by identification of visible lesions in the slaughterhouse and/or laboratory testing. Animals that react to the TB skin test are valued, removed from the farm and slaughtered. The farmer is compensated for 100 per cent. of the market value of the animal.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms in England have had animals slaughtered as part of the measures to prevent the spread of bovine tuberculosis in each of the last three years. [34188]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of farms in England over the last three years that have had animals slaughtered to prevent the spread of bovine TB are given in the following table.

Farms affected by bovine TB

	Number of farms affected
January-December 2002	2,876
January-December 2003	3,127
January-December 2004	3,109
1 January-30 September 2005	2,854

Note:

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what statutory powers the Department has to take measures to prevent the spreading of bovine tuberculosis. [34189]

Mr. Bradshaw: The domestic legislation which provides for the notification of disease, compulsory testing, slaughter, valuation and compensation, and restriction of the movement of affected herds is set out in the Tuberculosis Orders made under sections 32 and 34 of the Animal Health Act 1981.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether officials investigating cases of bovine tuberculosis have the power to refer farmers to (a) trading standards officers and (b) other authorities. [34191]

Mr. Bradshaw: Officials from the State Veterinary Service (SVS) will report all breaches, or suspect breaches, of the TB order to local trading standards officials. The officers are also notified of all TB herd movement restrictions that are served as a result of overdue TB tests as well as when the disease is identified.

Officials from the SVS will notify all TB herd movement restrictions to the British Cattle Movement Service.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedures her Department's officials undertake to investigate bovine tuberculosis. [34192]

Mr. Bradshaw: Detailed information on testing and control for TB in cattle is available on the Defra website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/index.htm.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms in England have produced positive skin tests for bovine TB 60 days after the first test in each month since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [34276]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of farms in England that produced a positive skin test for bovine TB 60-days after the first test in each month since 2001 are given in the following five tables. All animals were subsequently slaughtered.

Notes:

[1] Provisional data downloaded from the State Veterinary Service Data Warehouse on 2 December 2005. Subject to change as more data becomes available.

[2] In 2001, the TB testing and control programme was largely suspended due to the Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) outbreak. When testing resumed in 2002, resources were concentrated on herds with overdue TB tests which would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Also the proportion of high risk herds tested immediately after the FMD outbreak was greater than that prior to the outbreak. As a result, data for 2001 and 2002 are not comparable with other years.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms have gone out of business (a) three months, (b) six months, (c) 12 months, (d) 24 months and (e) 36 months after being closed by her Department after a suspected case of bovine tuberculosis. [34278]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is not collected by Defra.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs at what meetings the Minister responsible for Animal Welfare discussed bovine tuberculosis in the last 12 months. [35780]

Mr. Bradshaw: I hold regular meetings with colleagues on a range of issues.

Carbon Dioxide

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets she has set for carbon dioxide reductions over the next (a) 20, (b) 30 and (c) 40 years. [35514]

Mr. Morley: The UK has two targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions. In 1997 the UK Government set a national goal to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. The 2003 Energy White Paper also set out a longer term goal of putting the UK on a path to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by some 60 per cent. by 2050, with real progress by 2020.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will reassess the 60 per cent. by 2050 target for reducing UK carbon dioxide emissions. [34480]

Mr. Morley: The 2003 Energy White Paper accepted the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's recommendation that the UK should put itself on a path towards a reduction in carbon dioxide emissions of some 60 per cent. from 1990 levels by about 2050. This figure is constantly kept under review in light of emerging scientific findings including the results of the Avoiding Dangerous Climate Change conference held as part of the UK's presidency of the G8 in Exeter earlier this year.

The Energy Review announced jointly by the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 29 November will assess progress against the four goals set by the 2003 Energy White Paper including the 2050 target.

Central Heating (Leeds)

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of houses in the Leeds West constituency she estimates had no central heating in each year since 1992. [35251]

Mr. Morley: We do not currently hold this data. However, detailed information on the percentage of households without central heating in each ward of Leeds Metropolitan district is available from the 2001 census, and can be explored in depth at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk

Cetacean By-catch

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1053W, what discussions she has had with the French Government regarding French fishing vessels' compliance with the European Commission Observer Programme. [34847]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 December 2005]: None.

Commissioner Borg wrote to all member states on 14 November asking them to take all necessary steps to comply with the obligations of Council Regulation 812/2004, particularly those relating to monitoring of cetacean by-catch. Member states are required to report to the Commission by 1 June 2006. I anticipate they will report soon thereafter.

CFCs

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Environment Agency requests figures from recyclers on the amount of CFC recovered from recycled refrigerators. [R] [35662]

Mr. Bradshaw: Licences issued by the Environment Agency require operators of refrigerator treatment and recovery facilities to provide information on the quantity of CFC's recovered.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the CFC removed from a refrigerator is from (a) the insulating foam and (b) the coolant. [35663]

Mr. Bradshaw: Between 25 per cent. and 33 per cent. of the CFC's removed from refrigerators is coolant and 66 per cent. to 75 per cent. is recovered from the foam.

The variation is due to differences in numbers of damaged refrigerators being received at the treatment plants. The percentage of damaged refrigerators which have lost most or all of the coolant varies between 40 per cent. and 70 per cent..

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many firms are accounting for all CFC gases (a) destroyed properly and (b) missing due to mishandling during the process of recycling refrigerators. [35664]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are 13 firms and one local authority operating CFC recovery and disposal facilities at present. Some firms operate more than one site. Operators provide information on numbers of refrigerators received, damaged, treated, the quantity of CFCs recovered and sent for destruction or destroyed on site.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many prosecutions her Department has pursued for releasing CFC while collecting refrigerators for recycling. [35665]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency has taken six successful prosecutions and one resulted in a jail sentence. Some prosecutions involved more than one offence.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost is of recycling a refrigerator (a) with and (b) without the CFC from its (i) coolant and (ii) foam insulation. [35666]

Mr. Bradshaw: The cost of recycling a refrigerator is a contractual matter between local authorities and the waste management industry, and may vary from contract to contract.

Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make a statement on the operation of section 27 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. [35978]

Mr. Bradshaw: Section 27 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 came into force on 7 June this year, and provides clarification that chewing gum and smoking-related materials are litter for the purposes of Part 4 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. It has always been the case that Defra considered these items to be litter but the legislation now confirms this for the avoidance of any doubt among practitioners.

Tackling these forms of litter is particularly important given the huge cost to local authorities of removing gum once it has become impacted, and the findings of the Local Environmental Quality Survey of England (LEQSE) which show that in both 2003–04 and 2004–05 smokers materials were found on 79 per cent. of the sites surveyed and so is one of the most widespread types of litter. Section 27 operates so as to encourage action to be taken by local authorities against these forms of litter through awareness-raising, public campaigns and enforcement action including the use of fixed penalty notices.

Climate Change

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made of the potential impact on England and Wales of changes to the Gulf Stream as a result of climate change. [34876]

Mr. Morley: Research funded by Defra at the Met Office's Hadley Centre is aimed at determining the likelihood of changes as a result of global warming to the Atlantic Thermohaline Circulation (THC), of which the Gulf Stream forms an important component.

Although recent data collected by the Natural Environment Research Council suggest a possible recent weakening of components of the THC of up to 20 to 30 per cent., changes in the strength of the Gulf Stream itself or effects on temperatures have not been seen.

Latest Hadley Centre modelling results indicate that a sustained slowing of the THC over a few decades could have a cooling effect of about 1C. However, warming due to greenhouse gases is likely to be greater, leading to a net warming in coming decades.

No specific assessment has been made of the potential impacts of this scenario but it would likely mean that impacts would be reduced relative to current warming scenarios.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the attribution of a carbon value to forest retention in developing countries as part of her climate change policy, with particular reference to the position she is taking on international climate change negotiations. [33698]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Our policy is that emissions reductions from reduced deforestation should be part of developing countries' participation in climate change agreements. Papua New Guinea and Costa Rica, supported by other countries making up the Coalition of Rainforest Nations, have proposed to the 11th Conference of Parties to the United Nations framework convention on climate change which met in Montreal from 28 November to 9 December this year that reductions below a national baseline could be used as a measure of achievement. This is an interesting proposal, although significant technical issues remain, including on how baselines would in practice be defined and reductions relative to them measured. These questions need to be resolved before this or any other proposal could provide a basis for quantification of emissions saved, and hence valuation in carbon markets. Participation under the Kyoto protocol would be after the first commitment period, for which the rules are already set. We are working with other parties to establish a process to resolve the technical and related policy questions.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her discussions with the US administration on climate change strategies. [35379]

Mr. Morley: Throughout 2005 we have engaged with the US administration on climate change issues. In particular, the UK's G8 presidency has succeeded in focusing US attention on energy and climate issues.

Cockle Beds (Pilling Sands)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the plans of the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee to re-open cockle beds at Pilling Sands before the end of this year. [34872]

Mr. Bradshaw: Inshore fisheries management at Morecambe Bay, and the decision to re-open cockle beds at Pilling Sands is the responsibility of the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. The Committee works together with other Government Agencies to ensure appropriate regulation of cockle fishing. I will be considering whether additional provision for effective inshore fisheries management needs to be made in the Government's planned Marine Bill.

Company Operating Regulations

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list meetings between her Department and the Treasury at which the decision to remove the obligation on businesses to publish operating and financial reviews was discussed. [35032]

Mr. Morley: Discussions were held at various levels, including between the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, before the decision was taken to remove the obligation on businesses to publish operating and financial reviews.

European Environmental Monitoring Programme

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department is recommending a UK contribution of a quarter of gross domestic product to the European environmental monitoring programme; and what assessment she has made of the likely impact of such a move on the UK's contribution to addressing climate change. [R] [33464]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 December 2005]: As policy lead on the joint European Commission and European Space Agency initiative Global Monitoring for Environment and Security (GMES), DEFRA has considered with other Government Departments the appropriate level of UK funding for the space component of the GMES programme. At the ESA ministerial on 5–6 December, the UK subscribed €8.86 million to the programme, equating to a quarter of the UK net national income share. This subscription will allow the UK to influence the shape and management of the GMES programme so that it can, inter alia, contribute towards understanding and mitigating the impacts of climate change.

Fixed Penalty Notices

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many fixed penalty notices have been issued by (a) community support officers and (b) police officers for (i) graffiti and (ii) fly-posting under paragraph 1(2)(ca) of Schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29345]

Mr. Bradshaw: The figures collected for graffiti and fly-posting fixed penalties do not distinguish between police employees and those authorised by local authorities. The power to issue fixed penalties in relation to graffiti and fly-posting offences under paragraph 1(2)(ca) of Schedule 4 to the Police Reform Act 2002 (as amended), is provided to community support officers, but not police officers. Under the penalty notice for disorder scheme as provided for under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001, police officers have the power to issue fixed penalty notices for the offence of criminal damage.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many confirmed foot and mouth cases (a) occurred in (i) 2002, (ii) 2003 and (iii) 2004 and (b) have occurred in 2005 in each county in England and Wales. [33552]

Mr. Bradshaw: None.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received on the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Brazil; and if she will make a statement. [35282]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Competent Authority in Brazil has provided information via the European Commission on the situation with respect to recent outbreaks of foot and mouth disease. This data provides information on the action Brazil is taking to control the disease.

Following notification of the outbreaks action was taken to ban imports of meat from the affected areas, which may present a risk. This is in accordance with European Community legislation.

All meat imported into the EU from third countries must enter at designated Border Inspection Posts (BIPs) where it is subject to veterinary inspections. All consignments are subject to documentary and identity checks and at least 20 per cent. of consignments undergo physical checks. These ensure import conditions are met and that the products remain in a satisfactory condition during transport.

Any consignment that does not meet EU requirements, including that which may have been affected by the ban would be rejected and re-exported or destroyed.

Gas Supplies

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her policy to relax pollution controls on coal-fired power stations in the event of a gas shortage this winter. [33664]

Mr. Bradshaw: Pollution controls on coal-fired power stations—and indeed on power stations and other large industrial installations generally—are a matter for the Environment Agency and are set in authorisations issued under the integrated pollution control (IPC) system or in permits under the integrated pollution prevention and control (IPPC) system which is replacing IPC.

Under these systems, the operator has to notify the Environment Agency of any change it wishes to make in the operation of the installation which has a bearing on the conditions of the authorisation or permit. It is then for the Environment Agency to consider whether and on what terms the change can be accepted, taking into account the circumstances in which the change has been proposed and their likely duration.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further steps the Government are planning to take on reducing greenhouse gas emissions. [33627]

Mr. Morley: The Government are aiming to publish a revised UK Climate Change programme early next year which will set out additional policies and measures to further reduce the UK's greenhouse gas emissions.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 1 December 2005, Official Report, columns 652–3W, on greenhouse gas emissions, if she will produce an annual report to Parliament on greenhouse gas emissions. [35522]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 December 2005]: As my hon. Friend, the Minister for Energy, has confirmed to the House, if Clause 2 of the Private Member's Bill "Climate Change and Sustainable Energy" is amended to the effect that producing such a report would be the responsibility of the Secretary of State and the Bill then becomes law, the Secretary of State will produce annual reports to Parliament on greenhouse gas emissions.

Household Waste

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much residential household refuse was collected in each year since 1997; and what proportion of refuse was recycled in each year. [34440]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information is collected through the Municipal Waste Management Survey of England and is published on the Department's website.

The information can be found in Annex A, Table 5 at:
www.defra.gov.uk/environment/statistics/wastats/mwb0304/index.htm

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the average weight in kilograms of waste per household in each of the last 20 years. [36031]

Mr. Bradshaw: The estimated amount of waste arising from households in England is shown in the following table. Figures for 1996–97 to 2003–04 are from the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey. Earlier data are only available for the years shown and are from the CIPFA Waste Survey.

	Kilogrammes per household per year
1983–84	1,055
1991–92	1,066
1993–94	1,093
1995–96	1,089
1996–97	1,117
1997–98	1,146
1998–99	1,146
1999–00	1,194
2000–01	1,196
2001–02	1,228
2002–03	1,233
2003–04	1,205

Media Relations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department spent on external media relations in each year since 2001. [29577]

Jim Knight: Since 2001 Defra's Communications Directorate has commissioned the following external media relations services:

Agency	Project	Date	Cost (£)
Good Relations	Sustainable Food and Farming	2002	5,900
Biss Lancaster	Your countryside you're welcome	2002	189,366.67

Amazon Public Relations	Sustainable Development case studies	August to date	18,750
Weber Shandwick	Climate Change	October 2005 to March 2006	60,000

All agencies provided specialist skills and services not currently available within Defra's Communications Directorate.

Peninsular Power Ltd.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what indications have been given to Peninsular Power Ltd. on her Department's likely response to applications from that company for a relaxation of the catchment radius applicable to the proposed biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon under the Energy Crops scheme. [33975]

Mr. Morley: No such applications have been received and no indications have been given as to the Department's likely response. The Department has a protocol for considering such applications. This requires the views of the statutory environmental agencies to be sought before a decision is made.

Pesticides Residues

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with other EU countries on setting a maximum residue level for pesticides. [35108]

Mr. Morley: Officials of the Pesticides Safety Directorate meet regularly with the European Commission and other member states in the EU Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health to set maximum residue levels for pesticides.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the guidelines for statutory maximum residue levels for pesticides in relation to the School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme. [35178]

Mr. Morley: Like food in the general supply chain, produce supplied as part of the School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme must comply with the provisions of the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Crops, Food and Feeding Stuffs) (England and Wales) Regulations 1999 (as amended).

Poultry Carcase Disposal

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria are used to determine the suitability of a potential landfill site for the disposal of poultry carcases; and if she will make a statement. [34305]

Mr. Bradshaw: The sites are being assessed against the criteria set out in the landfill protocol, originally developed for the disposal of carcases during the 2001 foot and mouth disease outbreak, and which is being updated as a generic protocol for the disposal of animal carcases from exotic animal disease outbreaks. Sites will be fully engineered landfills and be subject to a Pollution Prevention and Control (PPC) permit and thus compliant with the strict requirements of The Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2002 (as amended). A pre requisite for obtaining a PPC permit is compliance with the Environment Agency's policy for the protection of groundwater (PPG).

The protocol requires the following:

A good and robust leachate management system at the site ensuring the control of leachate head and the efficient collection, treatment and disposal of very high organic loading leachate for the next 20 years.

The site monitoring plan demonstrate that there is adequate monitoring of groundwater, surface water and leachate and there are contingency plans in place, should the monitoring indicate a potential problem.

That the gas management infrastructure should be planned to collect gas from the whole of the site and to be installed as soon as possible after final levels have been achieved. Combustion of the collected gas is essential.

A bird deterrent and management plan and an odour and vermin control plan should be in place and its effectiveness reviewed and tailored as appropriate to account for the disposal of animal carcases.

In addition to these environmental and public health criteria, which are assessed by the Environment Agency, the site will also be assessed by the State Veterinary Service for any biosecurity risk and only sites that do not pose a risk of disease spread will be used.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 889W, on private Members' Bills, when the information ceased to be collected; and if she will make a statement. [32535]

Jim Knight: The information requested has never been collected.

Quarantine

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why there were no birds in quarantine at Pegasus Birds between 9 March and 16 September 2005. [30859]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 22 November 2005]: It is purely a commercial matter for the importer how often the premises are used and it is common for quarantine premises to be empty for a significant part of the year.

The information previously available to us suggested that no consignments of birds had occupied the quarantine premises since March. It has now been established that a further set of records had been misfiled.

Though this does not materially alter the position as previously reported, we have now been informed that the quarantine premises in question accommodated a consignment of birds from 15 July to 18 August this year. The consignment is documented as comprising approximately 2,000 birds from Tanzania. There have been no reported cases of avian influenza in Tanzania.

The full written statement, issued on 1 December 2005, can be found at:

http://defraweb/corporate/ministers/statements/mb051201.htm

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the regulation of quarantine facilities; and if she will make a statement. [35353]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are currently awaiting the outcome of an independent review of the avian quarantine system, which is expected to report in December, to see whether quarantine procedures need to be reviewed.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timescale is for the review of quarantine arrangements. [35110]

Mr. Bradshaw: In keeping with Defra policy to publish scientific results and the evidence base behind our decision making, my Department will be making the results of the review public later this month.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations the Government have received on proposals to license quarantine facilities; and if she will make a statement. [35220]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have received none. Commission Decision 2000/666 already requires quarantine facilities or centres to be approved by the competent authorities. In England approval is carried out by the state veterinary service (SVS).

Each approval lasts for one year and is only renewed after a satisfactory re-inspection. Approvals may be withdrawn at any time should the approval requirements of the Commission decision not be met.

Recycling

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of (a) paper-based waste and (b) potentially recyclable plastic waste was generated by (i) domestic households and (ii) commercial premises in each of the last five years. [34873]

Mr. Bradshaw: Figures are available for the estimated total amount of paper and plastic materials consumed within the UK and therefore likely to become waste. No reliable estimates are available on the relative amounts from household and commercial premises. Consumption is defined as UK production plus imports minus exports. The Confederation of Paper Industries estimate that the UK consumed between 12.4 and 12.9 million tonnes of paper and board in each of the last five years. The British Plastics Federation estimate that the total amount of plastics consumed within the UK in 2001 was 4.7 million tonnes and this is expected to steadily increase to 5.3 million tonnes in 2005. All plastics are potentially recyclable, but the extent to which this occurs will depend on economic and logistic factors.

A packaging study by Valpak, the UK's largest packaging compliance scheme, has estimated that around 75 per cent. of paper packaging waste arises in the commercial and industrial waste streams and 25 per cent. originates from domestic households. Likewise, 36 per cent. of plastic packaging waste arises in the commercial and industrial waste streams and 64 per cent. comes from households.

Sheep Movement Restrictions

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what total compensation has been paid to date to United Kingdom farmers as a result of economic losses from restrictions on sheep movements. [35833]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is not Government policy to compensate for economic losses as a result of animal movement restrictions to safeguard animal health.

Sites of Nature Conservation Importance

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the site of nature conservation importance designation in protecting such sites; and if she will make a statement. [36453]

Jim Knight: Sites of nature conservation importance or other similar non-statutory designations, which we refer to generically as local sites, contribute significantly to delivering both UK and local biodiversity and geodiversity action plan targets. It is understood that there are over 35,000 local sites throughout the country.

The Government have re-affirmed the importance of the contribution such sites can make to our overall biodiversity objectives in the revised planning statement, "Planning Policy Statement 9: Biodiversity and Geological Conservation" published in August this year. The planning statement states that local authorities should establish criteria-based policies in local development documents against which proposals for any development on, or affecting, such sites will be judged. These policies should be distinguished from those applied to the nationally important statutory sites.

In the new year, we also plan to publish guidance, developed with stakeholders, on the process for identification of these sites and the operation of partnerships concerned with local sites systems.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice her Department has received from English Nature regarding sites of nature conservation importance and similar conservation designations. [36454]

Jim Knight: In consultation with stakeholders, my officials and English Nature have been drawing up good practice guidance on the process for identification of sites of nature conservation importance, which along with similar terms, we refer to generically as local sites. The guidance will also offer advice on the operation of partnerships concerned with administering local sites systems.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is permissible for a local authority to rescind site of nature conservation importance status as a result of ecological degradation caused by the action or neglect of the owner or tenants of the protected site. [36455]

Jim Knight: Sites of nature conservation importance form part of the group of non-statutory designations generically referred to as local sites, and may be de-selected if their nature conservation interest deteriorates to such an extent that they no longer qualify as local sites. Government guidance on local sites, which will be produced in the new year, will suggest that where a site has degraded, the potential for restoring the site's features of interest should be a consideration in determining whether a site should be de-selected.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill will strengthen the protection provided by (a) site of nature conservation importance and (b) similar designations; and whether the Government have further plans to strengthen such protection. [36456]

Jim Knight: There are no specific measures in the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill concerning sites of nature conservation importance or other similar non-statutory designations which we refer to generically as local sites. However, Natural England will have a broad purpose and range of powers relating to conservation of the natural environment, including a power to enter into management agreements with any person on any land if it would further its general purpose.

The Government have re-affirmed the importance of the contribution such sites can make to our overall biodiversity objectives in the revised planning statement: Planning Policy Statement 9: Biodiversity and Geological Conservation' published in August this year.

In the new year, we also plan to publish guidance, developed with stakeholders, on the process for identification of such sites and the operation of partnerships concerned with local sites systems.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition requirements take into account Site of Nature Conservation Importance status. [36457]

Jim Knight: Land managers claiming the single payment are obliged to meet the relevant Statutory Management Requirements (SMRs) and to maintain their land in Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition (GAEC). The SMR and GAEC standards do not contain specific standards relating to the non-statutory Sites of Nature Conservation Importance. However the overall range of measures, especially those designed to achieve soil management and protection, and maintenance of habitats and landscape features, are expected to contribute to the conservation of interests within Site of Nature Conservation Importance.

Waste Management

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is for (a) each borough in Essex and (b) each London borough of the proportion of (i) household and (ii) industrial waste that was (A) recycled, (B) disposed of by incineration and (C) disposed of by landfill in each of the past five years. [34316]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data on the disposal of municipal waste are collected through the Municipal Waste Management Survey for England. The disposal of household waste is not disaggregated from municipal waste, however as household waste is the major constituent of municipal waste (comprising around 87 per cent. of all municipal waste), data for the disposal of municipal waste are a good approximation to household waste. The proportion of municipal waste by disposal route for the most recent five years, is in table 1. Data are presented for each waste disposal authority and unitary authority in Essex and London, which is the lowest level of detail available.

Data for the disposal of industrial waste are available for Government office regions only, and these are presented in table 2. Data are available for 1998–99 and 2002–03. Industrial waste is defined as waste from manufacturing, and oil, gas electricity and water supply sectors, but the data for 1998–99 also include waste from the transport, storage and communications sectors, and from hospitals. The data for the two years are therefore not directly comparable.

Environment Agency Survey of Commercial and Industrial Waste

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to develop a quality protocol for certified compost material to enable it to be defined as a product rather than waste. [31618]

Mr. Bradshaw: The definition of waste in force in the United Kingdom is the definition in Article 1*(a)* of the Waste Framework Directive (as amended). Whether or not a substance is discarded as waste, and when waste ceases to be waste, are matters which must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts. The European Court of Justice (ECJ) has issued several judgments on the definition of waste which are binding on member states and their "competent authorities". The composting of waste is classified as a waste recovery operation under the Directive. This means that composting must be carried out under the terms of a waste management licence issued by, or a waste management licensing exemption registered with, the Environment Agency (England and Wales).

The ECJ has ruled that

"...whether [a substance] is waste, must be determined in the light of all the circumstances, regard being had to the aim of the Directive and the need to ensure that its effectiveness is not undermined."

In practice, this means that waste does not cease to be waste until it has undergone a complete recovery operation and has been fully recovered within the meaning of the directive. A complete recovery operation is one which has the effect of transforming waste into a product which is wholly interchangeable with another product and requires no additional regulation or supervision beyond that applicable to the product which it is replacing. Waste has not undergone a complete recovery operation if, after the operation has been carried out, it continues to present a danger typical of waste (e.g. it continues to be contaminated).

The Environment Agency considers that (a) source-segregated waste which, after composting, meets a recognised and suitable quality standard (e.g. BSI PAS 100) is likely to be fully recovered within the meaning of the directive; and (b) mixed waste which is composted is likely to remain waste until it is used in a further recovery operation (e.g. land treatment resulting in agricultural benefit or ecological improvement subject to control by the Agency under a licence or registered licensing exemption). These considerations are being taken into account in work currently being undertaken by the Environment Agency and the Waste Resources Action Programme (WRAP) on the development of a quality protocol for waste composting.

The Department supports the development of such protocols at national level and advocates their development at a European Union level. A key objective of our doing so is to enable our competent authorities, and those engaged in the recovery of waste, to determine with a high degree of certainty the point at which waste has been fully recovered for the purposes of the Waste Framework Directive and has ceased to be waste. This was reflected in the UK's response of 15 February 2005 to the European Commission's questionnaire on possible amendments to the directive linked to the Thematic Strategy on the prevention and recycling of waste. In its response, the UK identified municipal/household waste which is recovered by means of composting or other biological transformation processes as a priority waste stream in this context. The UK's response is available at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/thematicstrat/questionnaire-ukresponse.pdf

Water Quality/Supplies

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the quality of the water supply in Tamworth. [35673]

Mr. Morley: Tamworth constituency is situated in the centre of the Glascote water supply zone of South Staffordshire Water plc. I am advised by the independent Drinking Water Inspectorate that all of the 1,384 tests carried out by the water company in this zone in 2005 have met the strict European drinking water standards.

The water supply to Tamworth is artificially fluoridated and there have been no breaches of the health based standard for fluoride of 1.5 mg/l in 2005.

Although unrelated to the quality of the drinking water supply, there has been recent local concern about the Glascote service reservoir which stores treated water. A nearby residential property is the subject of flooding and, as a consequence, the structural integrity of the reservoir was questioned. South Staffordshire Water plc have inspected and tested the reservoir and there is no evidence of leakage or damage. The flooding problem at the property is now being dealt with by Tamworth borough council.

Water

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with water companies on their ability to protect vulnerable individuals in the event of a breakdown in water supplies; and if she will publish (a) the protocol for identifying such individuals and (b) guidance on how support will be provided to them. [35776]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, issued a Security and Emergency Measures Direction in 1998 which sets requirements on water companies in relation to emergency planning and in dealing with water emergencies. In the event of a failure of the piped water supply, water companies are required to give priority to the domestic needs of the sick, the elderly, the disabled, hospitals, schools and other vulnerable sectors of the population. The minimum amount of water to be provided to all domestic customers when such a failure occurs is 10 litres per head per day. Those vulnerable customers who are housebound will be provided with supplies of bottled water. Water companies maintain a list of their vulnerable customers based on information provided by the customers, and in liaison with local authorities, health agencies and other support bodies.

TRANSPORT

A120

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of constructing a new tunnel or bridge to cross the Braintree to Liverpool Street railway line for the proposed southern route of the A120. [35593]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has included an estimated cost of £2 million in the A120 scheme proposals for the crossing of the Braintree to Liverpool Street railway. That cost will be reviewed as the scheme develops.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of the new crossing over the River Brain required by the A120 proposed southern route. [35594]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has included an estimated cost of £500,000 in the A120 scheme proposals for the bridge crossing the River Brain. That cost will be reviewed as the scheme design is developed.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether an assessment has been made of the likely impact on the A120 Proposed Southern Route of the additional heavy goods vehicle movements which are expected under plans to build a waste disposal plant on Rivenhall airfield. [35755]

Dr. Ladyman: No information on the waste disposal plant was available at the time the public consultation took place on the A120 Braintree to Marks Tey Improvement scheme. A proposal was submitted by developers in August 2005 after the public consultation period had ended.

Drawings for the proposed development show a junction with the Proposed Southern Route. The Highways Agency has responded to Essex county council, rejecting such a proposal.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the public consultation on the expansion of the A120 between Braintree and Marks Tey complied with the Cabinet Office's code of practice on consultation in relation to the (a) necessary publicity within affected areas, (b) location of consultation exhibitions, and (c) publication and distribution of consultation documents. [35843]

Dr. Ladyman: The Cabinet Office code of practice on written consultations applies to national consultations. The public consultation for the A120 between Braintree and Marks Tey was local. However, the code of practice advises that the criteria should be applied wherever possible to local consultation.

The Highways Agency applied the principles of the code to its recent public consultation on route options for the A120 between Braintree and Marks Tey in relation to publicity, location of exhibitions and publication and distribution of consultation documents.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account was taken of the construction costs of the new crossings required by the A120 proposed southern route when judging whether the scheme achieved best value. [35844]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has included an estimate cost of £24 million for these crossings in the A120 scheme proposals.

These costs were used in the economic assessment of the options taken to public consultation.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the costs of the effect on railway services between Braintree and London Liverpool Street of the construction of a crossing for the proposed A120 southern route. [35845]

Dr. Ladyman: No estimate of the cost for the effects on rail users of providing a crossing has yet been prepared.

Should a railway crossing be required, any work to provide a crossing of the railway line would be taken forward in discussion with Network Rail with the aim of minimising disruption to the railway and passengers.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the costs were of (a) stabilising and (b) rerouting electricity lines included in the total project budget for the A120 proposed southern route. [35846]

Dr. Ladyman: A preliminary estimate of £180,000 including VAT at present day prices has been obtained from EDF for the cost of stabilising and rerouting of electricity lines for the proposed A120 southern route. Major national grid power lines are to be avoided.

Airport Designation

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he expects (a) Luton, (b) London City, (c) Liverpool and (d) East Midlands airport to be designated under section 25 of the Aviation Security Act 1982 in the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [36469]

Ms Buck: On 21 November the Secretary of State for Transport announced that the Government would shortly commence an independent review of policing at airports. It will be a wide ranging review that it is expected will make recommendations by spring 2006. Until the review has been completed, it would not be appropriate to consider e designation of any additional airports.

Airport Security

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 558W, on airports (security costs), (1) how much each named airport has paid in policing costs for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [36386]

(2) what the policing costs were at (a) Luton, (b) Liverpool, (c) London City and (d) East Midlands airport in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [36468]

Ms Buck: The costs of policing at non-designated airports such as those at Luton, Liverpool, London City and East Midlands is a matter for the local chief constable and the police authority, as the aerodrome manager is not obliged under section 25 of the Aviation Security Act 1982 to make a contribution. If the aerodrome manager has entered into a voluntary funding agreement with the chief constable, that is a commercial decision and not a matter to which the Secretary of State is a party.

The costs of policing at Heathrow, Gatwick, Stansted, Birmingham, Manchester, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Prestwick, all of which are designated airports, are a matter for agreement between the aerodrome manager and the relevant police authority. Only if the aerodrome manager or the police authority ask the Secretary of State to make a determination under s26(3) of the Aviation Security Act 1982 does the matter of costs become a matter for the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State announced on 21 November 2005 that amendments to these provisions will be tabled in the Civil Aviation Bill which is currently being considered in another place.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the introduction of new security measures at North American airports for passengers travelling from the UK. [35860]

Ms Buck [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Responsibility for security measures at US airports rests with the US Government. As at airports in the UK and elsewhere, such measures typically evolve over time, and changes sometimes prompt representations to the Department.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the transportation security administration regarding the screening of baggage for passengers travelling from the UK. [35861]

Ms Buck [holding 8 December 2005]: Responsibility for security screening at airports in the USA rests with the US Government, with whom we maintain a continuing dialogue across the full range of aviation security matters, including baggage screening.

Braintree Bypass

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the (a) total construction cost and (b) cost per mile of the dual carriageway Braintree bypass in 1989; and if he will express those costs at present day prices; [35609]

(2) what was the construction cost of the (a) crossing of the London to Liverpool Street railway line and (b) crossing of the River Brain required by the Braintree bypass in 1989; and if he will express those costs at present day prices. [35610]

Dr. Ladyman: These roads were constructed by Essex county council as local highway authority.

Coastguards

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make long service medals available to professional coastguards. [36709]

Dr. Ladyman: There are currently no plans to recommend a change. The intention of the Coastguard Auxiliary Long Service and Good Conduct Medal is to reward long and faithful service by volunteers.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29062]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1315W, given to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Tom Brake).

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33225]

Ms Buck: For details of how much the Department for Transport spent on design and production of new logos since 2000, I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 25 October 2005, Official Report, column 236W, which details the cost of branding. Separating out the individual costs of design and production of new logos could be done only at disproportionate cost.

For details of expenditure on employing external public relations, I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 146W, which details the spend on external media relations since the Department for Transport formed in 2002–03.

The provision of the remaining information requested—the costs of external media relations and expenditure on graphic design agencies by project—could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32990]

Ms Buck: Details of research contracts awarded by DfT(c) are posted on the DfT website and are accessible, through the research database, at http://www.rmd.dft.gov.uk/. Publication arrangements are as shown under the science class of the DfT Publication Scheme (see extract at end). While delivery mechanisms may vary in Highways Agency and Maritime and Coastguard Agency, both agencies have adopted arrangements based on similar principles to the DfT(c).

DVLA

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 562W, on the DVLA, what percentage of complaints were subsequently reopened after the substantive response had been despatched in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05. [36390]

Dr. Ladyman: DVLA does not keep statistics on the number of complaints that have been subsequently reopened following a substantive response.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34044]

Ms Buck: The Department was created on 29 May 2002 and the numbers of employees who have taken early retirement in each year since then are shown in the table:

	Number of employees
2002	57
2004	105

The figures include those who have retired voluntarily with an actuarially reduced pension, those who have retired with benefits under the Civil Service Compensation Scheme and those who have retired on ill-health grounds.

Forest of Dean

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on public transport services in the Forest of Dean. [36248]

Ms Buck: It is for Gloucestershire county council, the local transport authority, in consultation with members of the community, key stakeholders and partners (including Forest of Dean district council), to determine local transport priorities and the provision of services.

Transport priorities are brought forward to Ministers through the Local Transport Plan process and my officials are currently assisting the local authority in the development of the second Local Transport Plan for Gloucestershire county council. During the first round of Local Transport Plans funding for the area increased from £15.78 million in 2000–01 to £17.49 million in 2005–06.

I understand that Gloucestershire county council already commits £1.6 million of its budget and disburses £1.1 million of Rural Bus Subsidy Grant from central Government to ensure the operation of bus services. Within the last year, bus patronage in the area has increased between 2 and 30 per cent. (and up to 50 per cent. on one route). The network of services in the Forest of Dean now carries substantially higher numbers of passengers at a lower subsidy cost.

I welcome these improvements and look forward to working with the authority as they build on their public transport strategy in their second Local Transport Plan.

Free Off-peak Bus Travel

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pensioners in (a) Lancashire and (b) Chorley will qualify for free off-peak local bus travel. [36773]

Ms Buck: The number of residents aged 60 or over who will qualify for free off-peak local bus travel from April 2006 are:

(a) Lancashire: 256,700

(b) Chorley: 20,800

Highways Agency

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria the Highways Agency uses when assessing the impact of transport schemes on (a) commercial and (b) residential property; and what weighting is given to (i) the preservation of established residential properties and (ii) recent commercial developments. [35756]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency when assessing the impact of transport schemes takes into account both the natural and human environments. This includes consideration of the impacts schemes may have on both residential and commercial properties. The Agency makes every effort to avoid the majority of properties within a given area, in order to reduce the potential impacts of new routes on local towns and villages. However, it is not always possible to find a perfect solution.

The detailed appraisal of transport schemes is undertaken in accordance with the Department for Transport's web-based transport analysis guidance (WebTAG; http://www.webtag.org.uk). The guidance does not provide weighting which distinguishes between established residential property and commercial developments.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines he has issued to the Highways Agency on timely response to statements of objection which arise from public consultations; and what upper limit for an acceptable response time he has set. [35758]

Dr. Ladyman: All statements received by the Highways Agency in response to public consultations are logged and assessed. All responses which require a reply are dealt with within 15 working days, either by a full or an interim reply. Where an interim reply is sent, this is followed up by a more detailed reply when information has been gathered.

All comments are summarised in a public consultation report which forms part of the decision process that identifies a preferred route.

Lamberhurst Bypass

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding schemes the Government have used to pay for the Lamberhurst bypass in East Sussex; and how much money was used in each scheme. [36593]

Dr. Ladyman: The Lamberhurst bypass was funded entirely by the Government's 10-year targeted programme of improvements (TPI). The estimated final cost of the scheme is £25.24 million.

The scheme was funded from the Highways Agency budget, which is part of the Department for Transport's voted expenditure.

M2

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answers of 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 145–46W, on the M2, when he expects (a) the roadworks on the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 to be completed and (b) all lanes on both carriageways of the motorway between junctions 5 and 6 to reopen. [36597]

Dr. Ladyman: Due to adverse weather conditions, including fog, frost and rain, the resurfacing work on the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 was delayed. Completion is now expected on 16 December 2005 when all traffic management will be removed and both carriageways of the motorway will be open to traffic.

M5

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct an evaluation of traffic flows at Junction 7 of the M5, with particular reference to (a) queuing on the slip road on the northbound carriageway and (b) related use of the Southern Link Road. [36243]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency will evaluate traffic flows at this junction. This will also include an assessment of movements to and from the Southern Link Road. Worcestershire county council are responsible for the Link Road.

Quiet Lanes

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department plans to publish regulations for local authorities on the designation of quiet lanes before 20 December 2005. [35682]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport is currently finalising the work on the draft regulations and intends to publish them soon. But publication will not occur before 20 December.

Railways

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on developing passenger services on the Coventry-Nuneaton railway line; and what recent discussions he has had with Coventry city council on this. [34703]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The train service between Coventry and Nuneaton was restored in May 2005. Local authorities including Coventry city council have met with the Strategic Rail Authority to discuss their aspirations for longer term transport developments over the Coventry-Nuneaton corridor. My Department has not had any recent discussion with Coventry city council on this.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to encourage in-house maintenance on the railways. [35485]

Derek Twigg: This is an operational matter for Network Rail, which completed its programme to take all infrastructure maintenance in-house on 24 July 2004.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) capital and (b) revenue subsidy per passenger mile travelled was to bus companies by transport authorities in England for the most recent year for which information is available. [34861]

Ms Buck [holding answer 6 December 2005]: In 2004–05 English local transport authorities, including Transport for London, spent a total of £854 million on revenue support for bus services, excluding re-imbursement to operators of the costs of providing concessionary fares. In that year there were 4,032 million passenger journeys made on all local bus services implying an overall average revenue subsidy of about 21p per journey. However, outside London only slightly over 20 per cent. of the local bus network receives revenue subsidy. Separate data on passenger numbers on these subsidised services is not collected by the Department so it is not possible to calculate average subsidy costs per journey for subsidised services outside London.

In 2004–05 local transport authorities, again including Transport for London, spent a total of £285 million on capital projects primarily to improve bus-related infrastructure and traffic management schemes to improve facilities for both commercial and subsidised bus services.

Road Schemes

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used in balancing the needs of local communities affected by road schemes with wider strategic objectives. [35842]

Dr. Ladyman: Under our appraisal criteria the impact of road schemes on local areas and communities is assessed very carefully, in particular impacts on noise, local air quality, townscape, landscape, biodiversity, safety, severance and land-use policy.

These impacts are judged alongside a scheme's costs and economic benefits, in particular, from reduced congestion, time savings to travellers and wider economic benefits in reaching an overall assessment of its justification.

Rochdale/Oldham Loop Line

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on the Rochdale/Oldham loop line in the last eight years; and if he will make a statement. [34634]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail is responsible for operating, maintaining and renewing the main rail network, including the Oldham loop line. I have therefore asked them to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in his Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if he will make a statement. [34258]

Ms Buck: Statutory instruments are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where instruments amend primary legislation, Parliamentary Counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training in the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the parliamentary scrutiny committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of statutory instruments and provide frequent feedback and on-the-job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an on-going process and part of the continuing education of government legal advisers.

Transport (Financial Support)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the financial support provided by (a) by central Government, (b) via local government and (c) via passenger transport authorities in England for (i) local bus services, (ii) local bus service infrastructure, (iii) rail services, (iv) rail infrastructure, (v) air services and (vi) aviation infrastructure in each year between 1995–96 and 2004–05. [32153]

Ms Buck [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The following table provides the information held centrally. The Department for Transport was formed in 2002.

Support for rail infrastructure is made through direct capital grants to Network Rail and London and Continental Railways.

Central Government support for aviation is in the form of research and development, international subscriptions, support for Royal Travel and loans to National Air Traffic Services. Direct support is not provided for air services or aviation infrastructure.

Trunk Road Schemes

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trunk road schemes are experiencing cost overruns; what action he is taking to tackle such overruns; and if he will make a statement. [34710]

Dr. Ladyman: Of the 29 conventionally funded schemes formerly in the targeted programme of improvements (TPI), that have opened over the last four years, 16 are forecast to cost more than provided for, and 13 are forecast to cost less. The total cost of those schemes is estimated at £888 million, some £12 million less than programmed.

When faced with potential cost overruns, the Agency's approach is to work with the supply chain to drive down costs of construction.

Where that is not possible, cost increases are met from a Strategic Reserve contained within the risk allowance for the TPI. Where cost savings are made, these are fed back into the Strategic Reserve.

UK Air Passengers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what average number of flights was taken by UK passengers (a) in 1997 and (b) in the latest year for which figures are available, broken down by social class. [35238]

Ms Buck: The results by socio-economic classification for 2003 are given as follows. Respondents in managerial/professional occupations had a higher mean number of air trips than those in lower occupational categories.

This data was not collected in 1997.

How many air trips in last year?

Vehicle Certification Agency

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what bonuses the Chief Executive of the Vehicle Certification Agency has received since his appointment; and for what reasons in each case. [35828]

Ms Buck: The Chief Executive of the Vehicle Certification Agency has received one bonus since his appointment. It was performance related and part of his 2005 pay award as a senior civil servant.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons the Vehicle Certification Agency is involved in the work of the management systems certification. [35829]

Dr. Ladyman: VCA, as the UK vehicle type approval authority, has the responsibility to test and certify vehicles and components to a range of EU Directives and ECE regulations. Part of that certification requires that VCA verifies the "conformity of production" arrangements of the manufacturer to ensure production vehicles and components continue to meet the standards. This is done through an audit of the manufacturer's quality management systems. With the introduction of ISO 9000—quality management systems—manufacturers requested VCA to extend the auditing service to include the issue of certificates. Therefore VCA became accredited by UKAS (United Kingdom Accreditation Service) to enable it to issue recognised certificates and be able to offer automotive related organisations management systems certification services on a commercial basis.

Commercial Ventures

Martin Horwood: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the House of Commons Commission will expand the number of commercial ventures in the House of Commons part of the parliamentary estate to include (a) a newsagent, (b) a bookshop, (c) a bank, (d) a laundrette and dry cleaners, (e) a pharmacy, (f) a stationers and (g) an Indian restaurant; and if the Commission will make an assessment of the contribution to public funds such services might make. [36330]

Nick Harvey: The House carries out a number of activities which have a commercial element, but which are predominantly aimed at providing services to Members and others on the parliamentary estate rather than having an outright profit objective. These include a wide range of catering venues and services including one which offers a curry each day; souvenirs; Post Office counters; a hairdresser; a florist; the parliamentary bookshop; a business travel agency; and the Westminster gymnasium. There are also smaller installations including ATMs and various vending machines. In addition, the House leases out external parts of the estate for specific retail activities; these include a retail chemist and pharmacy, a food retailer, a cafe, a dry cleaners and a public house. The House gets a normal market return on these leases. Newspapers are available for Members to read at a number of locations on the estate, and books, periodicals and videos are available from the Library.

There are no current plans to extend the House's commercial activities.

Telephone Lines

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many telephone lines are installed in each building in the House of Commons estate; how many of those lines are live; which companies the live lines are with; what the call charges are under the current contract; when the contract is up for renewal; and if he will make a statement. [36465]

Nick Harvey: Telephony on the parliamentary estate is provided by the Parliamentary Communications Directorate using a network of seven linked switches. There are currently 5,714 live lines on the 020 7219 xxxx range installed throughout the House of Commons as shown in the table:

Building	Extensions in use
1 Derby Gate	232
1 Canon Row	182
1 Parliament Street	295
2 Abbey Gardens	45
4 and 7 Millbank	1,007
Norman Shaw North	622
Norman Shaw South	272
Portcullis House	1,031
Palace of Westminster (Commons)	2,028
Total Commons	5,714

There are also 50 BT direct exchange lines at various locations throughout the estate and a further 208 mobile extension lines are allocated to House staff.

All incoming calls come via BT. Circuits installed with four suppliers BT, Cable & Wireless, Colt and O2 take outgoing calls depending on the destination of the call, the time of day and the tariffs available. These services are supplied under rolling contracts and the tariffs are regularly reviewed. The routing was adjusted earlier this year to take advantage of reduced tariffs.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Asian Tsunami

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the Government allocated to assist the victims of the tsunami in south east Asia; and how much of that money has been disbursed, broken down by recipient country. [33017]

Mr. Thomas: When the tsunami struck last December, the Government immediately allocated £75 million for relief and recovery needs. Nearly £67 million of this has been programmed through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross Movement and non-governmental organisations and DFID direct action. Of this figure, all but approximately £800,000 has been disbursed and this is earmarked to cover costs already incurred, and ongoing costs such as secondments of experts to United Nations agencies. Up to £7.5 million has been earmarked for disaster risk reduction initiatives in affected countries. This allocation will be disbursed, against agreed programme activities into 2006. It is now likely that the remaining £500,000 of the £75 million allocated is not required for relief and recovery activities.

DFID has allocated £65 million to meet reconstruction needs in tsunami-affected areas. A total of £41 million of this has been committed. In Indonesia, we have so far programmed £34.3 million, including two contributions to the Multi Donor Trust Fund of £5.6 million and £20 million. A further £5 million has been committed for technical assistance to help ensure timely, accountable and equitable provision of reconstruction assistance and rebuilding of livelihoods. A total of £2.8 million has been committed to Sri Lanka, and to date £1.5 million of this has been programmed to support the capacity of the North East Provincial Council (NEPC) to plan and implement programmes and services. A total of £3 million has been committed to India to support the United Nations Recovery Framework for Post Tsunami Rehabilitation and Reconstruction. The remaining £24 million of the £65 million allocation for reconstruction has not yet been committed.

British Overseas Territories

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding his Department directed to each British Overseas Territory in each of the last seven years. [33755]

Mr. Thomas: DFID expenditure for the Overseas Territories for each of the financial years from 1998–99 to 2004–05 is set out in the table. A number of territories, for example Montserrat and St. Helena, still need significant levels of support to help meet basic needs and promote growth and, in the case of Pitcairn, a need now for budgetary aid to cover essential recurrent expenditure. Declining levels of support, for example in Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands and the Cayman Islands, follow increased prosperity and economic growth.

In addition, the countries also benefit from DFID's "regional" Overseas Territories programme. Individual country shares of this cannot be attributed.

The European Development Fund also allocates funds for the UK Overseas Territories. Cumulative allocations since 1993 total some €86.33 million (the UK share of which is about €10.79 million or approximately £7.2 million). This sum, some of which is still being committed to or spent on approved development activities, has been shared among eligible UK Overseas Territories as follows.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he plans to increase his Department's spending on British overseas territories. [33760]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's funding for the overseas territories seeks to maximise economic growth and self sufficiency. For example we anticipate some increase in future years to accommodate the cost of the proposed airport for St. Helena. At this stage, I cannot be specific about amounts.

Cayman Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his Department's work in helping to rebuild homes on the Cayman Islands. [33764]

Mr. Thomas: DFID and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) provided approximately £250,000 for emergency supplies and services in the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Ivan. We have not provided specific assistance to rebuild homes. We understand, however, that the European Union is considering a request for support from the Cayman Islands Government.

CDC/Actis Capital

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which energy sector companies CDC/Actis Capital has invested. [35521]

Hilary Benn: CDC/Actis Capital have invested in the energy sector companies listed:

Child Treatment Fund

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether funding for the child treatment fund is included in the 10 per cent. of his Department's spending on HIV/AIDS to be spent on orphans and vulnerable children. [32207]

Mr. Thomas: Globally, access to AIDS treatment for children is low, despite the fact that, in the absence of treatment, 50 per cent. of children with HIV will die before their second birthday. In Mozambique and Malawi, for example, 5 per cent. and 7 per cent. of those on treatment are children, whereas equitable access would require coverage of approximately 13 per cent.

DFID has committed £150 million for support to children affected by AIDS from 2005–08. This funding will not be put through new instruments. However, this funding is being used to support a range of activities that will promote children's access to prevention and treatment, as well as to protection and care. For example, we are providing £10 million to Medecins Sans Frontieres for anti-retroviral roll out and prevention in South Africa.

We are also funding research into better medicines and diagnostics for children, such as the £4.8 million trial DFID and the Medical Research Council are co-funding on anti-retroviral treatment for children. An earlier DFID funded trial in Zambia has proven the efficacy of a cheap antibiotic, Cotrimoxazole, in reducing mortality in HIV positive children.

DFID will continue to ensure the needs of children and other vulnerable groups are addressed as we work towards scaling up to universal access to treatment by 2010, as agreed by the G8 and by the Millennium Review Summit. DFID is supporting UNICEF's Global Campaign on Children and AIDS that sets a target of providing treatment to 80 per cent. of children in need by 2010.

Colombia

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money the UK Government are providing in 2005–06 to (a) the European Commission, (b) the Inter-America Development Bank and (c) the World Bank for projects in Colombia; and if he will list the projects concerned. [32666]

Mr. Thomas: Through its contribution of 18 per cent. to the European Commission's (EC) budget, the UK Government provided £5.4 million to Colombia over the three years 2001 to 2003 (the last years for which data is available). The EC supports the search for peace and the targeting of the roots and causes of the conflict. The following four sectors are priorities for EC co-operation with Colombia: social/economic development and poverty reduction; alternative livelihoods for cocoa farmers; public sector administrative and judicial reform; and the support and promotion of human rights. Specific areas of work include: initiatives to promote peace; resettlement of people uprooted by the conflict, support to make export sectors more efficient; reinforcement of the state of law and democracy; the protection of the environment and conservation of natural resources; landmines clearance; and science and technology research.

Colombia does not benefit from the concessional lending by the World Bank (WB) and Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) that is funded by donors such as the UK, given its relatively high income. It does, however, borrow from the WB and IDB on near commercial terms. The UK, therefore, contributes indirectly as a shareholder of these organisations. A table of current projects supported by IDB and WB are as follows.

[1] Judicial.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which British non-governmental organisations in Colombia were given financial assistance by the UK Government in the last two years; and how much each received. [32667]

Mr. Thomas: Three projects are currently funded through DFID's Civil Society Challenge Fund:

War on Want in the promotion of workers and human rights in Southwest Colombia—£213,950 over the period December 2003 to March 2007.

Concern Universal to enable marginalised groups to demand and secure their constitutional rights (including access to clean water, adequate sanitation, access to healthcare and access to education)—£322,000 from April 2005 to March 2009.

Y-Care International, to strengthen the ability of 1,800 marginalised young people and children to contribute to community development and peace promotion—£10,796 in 2005–06.

DFID also approved an additional £7 million a year from 2005 for six international NGOs working in Latin America and the Caribbean. Of the six selected, CAFOD, Christian Aid, and the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) are active in Colombia and will benefit from these additional funds.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is currently funding two projects by Save the Children in Colombia worth £92,000 over the next two years. These projects aim to tackle child sexual abuse through strengthening local institutions and raising awareness through training of journalists in child rights.

Commission for Africa

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what timetable he has set to deliver the recommendations of the Commission for Africa. [30231]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave to the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 54–55W.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to relocate staff in his Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31759]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has no plans to relocate staff into London or the South East. Our relocation plans are in keeping with Government policy with 85 posts being relocated to our office in East Kilbride over the periods 2004–05 and 2005–06.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34046]

Mr. Thomas: The number of DFID employees, who have taken early retirement in each year since 1997, are shown in the table.

	Number of employees
1997	26
1998	6
1999	9
2000	3
2001	9
2002	10
2003	24
2004	13

[1] To date

The figures include those who have retired voluntarily with an actuarially reduced pension, those who have retired with benefits under the civil service compensation scheme and those who have retired on grounds of ill-health.

Ethiopia

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to take forward the Africa Commission's work on Ethiopia; what account he will take in his plans of (a) the participation of President Meles Zenawi, (b) the killing of demonstrators in Ethiopia by Ethiopian security forces and (c) the detention without charge of demonstrators; what plans he has to promote good governance in Ethiopia; and if he will make a statement. [34519]

Hilary Benn: The Commission for Africa has now completed its work, having successfully produced recommendations on the changes needed to reduce poverty. Prime Minister Meles contributed to the Commission's report, but it is up to individual countries to take these recommendations forward.

UK Ministers, and our ambassador in Ethiopia, have registered our concerns with Prime Minister Meles about the situation in Ethiopia, which resulted in deaths and injuries, and about the issue of detainees. We have urged the Government to launch an investigation into the violence.

As a result of these events the UK, in close co-ordination with other donors, has announced a review of our development programme. We have made it clear that principles of good governance must be central to our future development partnership.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many freedom of information applications his Department has received; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31217]

Mr. Thomas: Between 1 January and 30 June 2005, DFID received 151 freedom of information requests. Of these, 48 took more than 20 working days to complete. Requesters sought internal reviews on the timeliness of handling for three requests.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs is committed to publishing quarterly updates in relation to departmental performance under FOI, including information on both the volume and outcomes of requests. The bulletin for the second quarter was published on 30 September 2005 and can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/statsapr-jun05.htm and in the Libraries of both Houses. The next bulletin will be published before Christmas, while an annual report will be published in early 2006.

HIV/AIDS

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions his Department has had with the Government of (a) Lesotho, (b) Swaziland and (c) Somalia on HIV/AIDS infection, prevention and treatment. [30768]

Hilary Benn: DFID officials have met on many occasions with Government officials and civil society organisations to discuss the HIV epidemic in both Swaziland and Lesotho.

In both countries, DFID is providing support for both prevention and care activities through a programme managed by the Southern Africa Development Community. The project is providing £7.5 million for the sub-region, of which £2 million is being spent in Lesotho and Swaziland respectively. The work focuses upon treatment of Sexually Transmitted Diseases (STDs), behaviour change and the promotion of condom use. DFID has also financed key posts within the Department of Health. In Swaziland, DFID support targets the provision of Anti-Retroviral Treatment (ART) and in Lesotho it is directed towards monitoring and evaluation through the AIDS secretariat in the Ministry of Health.

In Lesotho, DFID is providing additional support (£1.7 million 2005–08) to develop the National AIDS Commission so that the country can develop a more co-ordinated response. This support is combined with assistance to the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), to strengthen civil society and with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), to help the Government build work on HIV/AIDS into its economic and development planning.

Outside of these project activities, we have most frequently discussed issues of HIV and AIDS with officials in the National AIDS Councils of the respective countries. Because the epidemic continues to infect many people, our discussions concentrate on both prevention and care.

In Somalia, resources from the Global Fund were committed in June 2005. DFID is providing £00,000 to the UNDP to bridge the gap until Global Fund resources come online. DFID support to the UNDP will help to build capacity to the National AIDS Commissions in Somaliland and Puntland, and should benefit the entire population. The funding will also comprise support to Voluntary Counselling and Testing (VCT) and Anti-retroviral (ARV) programmes, which are likely to reach 1,000 people.

We are also contributing funding to UNAIDS for a 'five country strategy' which runs from 2004–06. The aim of the programme is to improve co-ordination on HIV and AIDS across all five countries. Approximately £950,000 will go to Somalia which equates to 26 per cent. of the total funding package for this programme.

Palestinian Refugees

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with Arab States about the provision of aid and assistance to Palestinian refugees; and if he will make a statement. [36168]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) is mandated by the UN General Assembly to provide education, health, relief and social services to Palestinian refugees. As a major contributor to the UNRWA, providing approximately £15 million this year, DFID has regular contacts with Arab States that are hosts of refugees or provide financial assistance to the UNRWA. Most recently, DFID participated in UNRWA's annual Hosts and Donors Meeting in Jordan and, as holding the EU presidency, made a statement on behalf of the EU. In September DFID participated in the annual Advisory Commission meeting which includes the four host authorities (Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and the Palestinian Authority) and seven other countries, including the UK.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he will publish a Public Service Agreement delivery plan for 2004 Public Service Agreement target number 5. [29949]

Hilary Benn: We do not intend to publish the delivery plan for 2005–08, as this is an internal document. However, the Government regularly reports progress against PSA Target 5 in the annual Departmental and Autumn Performance Reports. These reports are publicly available on the DFID and other relevant Departments' websites. Details of the measurement systems underpinning the target are published in the PSA Technical Note, which is publicly available on the DFID website: www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/PSA/technicalnotes.pdf

South Asia Earthquake

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress is being made in providing shelter for those made homeless by the South Asia earthquake. [35414]

Mr. Thomas: The UN has released a 90-day winter plan that builds on the response of the past eight weeks. The focus remains on providing shelter and food for those living at high altitudes. The Government of Pakistan and the humanitarian community continue to provide relief assistance to between 350,000 and 380,000 people who remain in remote areas, and to provide camp services for up to 250,000 people in official and self settled camps.

The United Nations has reported that a significant number of the tents provided are not winterised and efforts are under way to reinforce their protection against the winter conditions. The relief effort is also providing shelter using local materials with support for the construction of shelters with warm rooms.

DFID has provided 5,500 winterised tents directly, and is giving further assistance to shelter provision through its support to United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations working in this sector. DFID officials have, in consultation with the United Nations, identified a further package worth £1 million of the most urgently needed support to shelter provision. We are working with the United Nations to deliver this additional support as quickly as possible.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the applications submitted by non-St Helenians for land purchase licences in each year since 1997; who the applicant was in each case; and what total land mass each application concerned. [34080]

Mr. Thomas: The "Governor in Council" has considered, or is considering, the following applications received since 1997. Decisions are made according to the Immigrants' Landholding (Restriction) Ordinance.

Date of application	Name(s)	Land area(s) (Acres)	Remarks

As part of the St. Helena Access project, DFID is supporting the St. Helena Government to develop appropriate investment and tourism policies aimed at both encouraging economic development and protecting the island's interests.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many species of (a) insects and (b) plants are endemic to St. Helena. [34081]

Mr. Thomas: The standard work on the natural history of St. Helena and Ascension Island, jointly authored by Philip and Myrtle Ashmole and published in 2000, lists, as currently known to be endemic to St. Helena, approximately 385 species of invertebrates (of which approximately 285 are insects) and 50 species of plants (of which 37 are flowering plants and 13 are ferns).

The protection of St. Helena's unique biodiversity currently benefits from a programme funded under the joint DFID/FCO Overseas Territories Environment Programme which seeks to implement a protected area plan for the Central Peaks including the control of invasive species and the restoration of endemic plants. St. Helena continues to have access to the project for the protection and enhancement of its biodiversity. Work to mitigate the effects on and to further protect the island's biodiversity is also a key component of the project to introduce air access to St. Helena.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of funding allocated to direct budget support in 2005–06 in each country is attributable to the control and treatment of tuberculosis. [26072]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the response given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Julie Morgan) on 14 November 2005, Official Report, columns 870–71W.

Zimbabwe

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the value of grants in aid made to Zimbabwe were in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [30160]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not made grants in aid to Zimbabwe in the last five years.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Audio Signing Services

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which broadcasters covered by the Ofcom Code on Television Access Services did not broadcast (a) audio description and (b) signing during the first half of 2005. [36208]

James Purnell: The matter raised is the responsibility of Ofcom, as independent regulator. Accordingly, officials have asked the chief executive to respond directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) representations she has received from broadcasters and (b) discussions she has had with the Office of Communications on the jamming of UK satellite communications system Telstar 12 and the European system Hotbird; and if she will make a statement. [34922]

James Purnell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not received any direct representations from broadcasters nor has she had discussions with the Office of Communications about the jamming of UK satellite systems.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact of the interruption within the UK of television services provided by (a) BBC World, (b) CNN, (c) Euro News, (d) JSTV and (e) others since September; and if she will make a statement. [34924]

James Purnell: The Office of Communications (OFCOM) received a report from Arquiva, the network operator responsible for transmission of Channel 5 television services in the UK on 25 October. This report notified the regulator of interference to the Telstar 12 satellite service.

The Telstar 12 satellite provides programme feeder links for Channel 5 television broadcasts. No detailed assessment of the interference is available but it is known that it caused interruption to Channel 5 broadcasts for several hours on a number of occasions over a period of approximately two weeks.

There were no complaints to OFCOM or DCMS officials of interference to any other UK broadcasting services sharing the satellite during the same period.

The interference has now ceased and there have been no further reports of interruption to Channel 5 or any other UK television broadcast stations using the affected satellite. DCMS officials nevertheless remain in touch with OFCOM and FCO officials to monitor the situation and will take appropriate steps should there be a re-occurrence of the problem.

Communion Wine

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations her Department has received from groups whose only alcoholic product on sale is communion wine; and when she received such representations. [34418]

James Purnell [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Government has received letters from two hon. Members, which enclose correspondence from their constituents on this matter. One is from a business that engages in the sale of communion wine and the other from a churchwarden. These letters were received on September 8 and 15, 2005, respectively.

My Officials are currently investigating the points raised and I will reply as soon as all the information has been collated.

Departmental Property

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was paid by her Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35941]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport paid rents for properties in London as follows in 2004–05. (This is the net figure after receipt of rental income from private sector tenants.)

The Department did not pay any rent outside London in 2004–05.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was paid by her Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35988]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport paid rates as follows in 2004–05.

City of Westminster, London—£716,655.07

London borough of Camden—£167,354.93

The Royal Parks Agency paid rates as follows in 2004–05.

City of Westminster council, London—£68,400

The Department did not pay any rates outside London in 2004–05.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff are employed by her Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if she will make a statement. [35905]

Mr. Lammy: As at 1 December 2005 the Department for Culture, Media and Sport had 517 employees (502 full-time equivalents), which are all based in Central London.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of each civil service grade in her Department is located in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; what the average salary is for each grade; and if she will make a statement. [35906]

Mr. Lammy: All 517 staff (502 full time equivalents) in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport are based in central London.

The average salaries for each grade at 1 December 2005, are shown in the following table.

Grade	Civil service equivalent	Head count	Average salary (£)
SCS payband 2 and above	—	10	101,067
SCS payband 1	—	20	63,794
A(U)	Grade 6	21	54,150
A	Grade 7	96	43,577
B	HEO/SEO	175	29,509
C	EO	128	21,490
D	AA/AO	67	17,524

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in her Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to her Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35907]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not pay supplements, bonuses or any incentive package to staff on the basis of geographical location.

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36267]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has a range of measures in place to support staff with health problems, including mental ill-health. These include guidance for managers on supporting staff with mental health problems, and the services of a professionally trained staff counsellor and occupational health adviser. The Department also has a stress management policy to provide staff and managers with guidance on how to recognise and manage stress effectively, and offers a range of flexible working patterns to accommodate the individual needs of its staff.

The Department would also make reasonable adjustments for staff suffering fron mental ill-health in compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

National Lottery

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what basis moneys allocated to the Big Lottery Fund will be distributed between the nations of the United Kingdom. [36934]

Mr. Caborn: The Big Lottery Fund allocates their funding between the nations of the UK using a formula based on census data and modified by various deprivation factors. The current allocations used by the Big Lottery Fund are 77.5 per cent. for England, 11.5 per cent. for Scotland, 6.5 per cent. for Wales and 4.5 per cent. for Northern Ireland.

Newspaper Advertisements

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what responsibilities newspapers have to check on the legality of services advertised in their publications. [35588]

James Purnell: Marketers have primary responsibility for ensuring that advertisements are legal. Advertisements, and other marketing communications, should comply with the law and should not incite anyone to break it. Complaints about advertising should be made to the Advertising Standards Authority.

Olympic Sports (Young People)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with local authorities on allocation of resources to promote involvement of young people in Olympic sports events; and what plans she has to create centres of sporting excellence in (a) Wales and (b) Blaenau Gwent in relation to participation in the 2012 Olympics. [35767]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no specific discussions with local authorities on this issue, but they will be fully involved in plans to maximise the benefits of hosting the Games by encouraging more young people to become involved in sport.

We have established a Nations and Regions Group to ensure the whole of the UK is engaged with and benefits from the Games in 2012. Each nation and region is also establishing a regional working group which will draw together all those who have a role to play in securing the benefits from 2012.

The Welsh Assembly Government is responsible for sport in Wales, including capital investment and funding support for talented athletes and centres of excellence. The Welsh Assembly Government will be discussing further proposals for support to talented young sports people to ensure Wales can claim its share of medals at the 2012 Games.

The Welsh Assembly Government is also committed to maximising the wider benefits of the 2012 Olympic Games. They have already established a dedicated Unit to take forward a co-ordinated approach to ensure Wales benefits from the sporting and economic opportunity of the Olympic Games. Local authorities in Wales will play a key role in this co-ordinated approach.

Olympic Games

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that adequate preparations have been taken to ensure that skilled labour will be available to finish the construction of the Olympic Village and other Olympic facilities in a timely manner. [31554]

Mr. Caborn: The 'Procurement Principles' published by the interim Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) in September—which underpin the development of the ODA's procurement strategy—identify the importance of a programme of skills and training to maximise local benefits and secure the wider economic dividend.

The Department is working closely with the London Development Agency (IDA), the sector skills council for construction, Learning and Skills Council and other partners to quantify the detailed construction skills and employment requirements needed to deliver the London 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games and to develop appropriate responses to address any gaps.

The Office of Government Commerce is undertaking a 2012 Construction Demand/Capacity Study which will bring together existing research and data across the construction industry, including that relating to skills issues. This will enable us to assess the ability of the industry to deliver significant capital development programmes, including the Olympics.

In addition, the LDA is in discussion with the local London boroughs to finalise a framework of initiatives which will assist residents in accessing employment opportunities in construction relating to the Games and also help the construction industry to meet the challenges of the project. Proposed interventions include brokerage services to assist residents from all sections of local communities to access skills training and construction employment, support for local construction businesses and a construction work force training programme.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Race Equality Impact Assessments her Department completed between (a) April 2004 and March 2005 and (b) April 2005 and November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32831]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has not completed any Race Equality Impact Assessments during these periods. We are currently looking at training needs within the Department to ensure that staff are fully aware of the importance of carrying out these assessment in relevant cases.

Sporting Facilities

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets her Department has set for the use of sporting facilities in England. [35712]

Mr. Caborn: We do not have a target specifically on use of sports facilities. But our aim is that by 2008 almost no one should be more than 20 minutes travel time from a range of good quality sports facilities.

More and better facilities are an important part of our wider sports policy participation objectives. DCMS has an ambitious PSA target to increase participation in sport among priority groups by 3 per cent. by 2008.

Tourism Bodies

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what changes (a) have been made and (b) will be made to the allocation of expenditure as identifiable or non-identifiable in the Department's Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis (PESA) as a result of the English Tourism Council being subsumed into Visit Britain; and what criteria were used for the allocation of identifiable and non-identifiable expenditure for VisitBritain in the most recent PESA. [35817]

James Purnell: Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) shows expenditure by region based on the expenditure aggregate Total Expenditure on Services (TES), which excludes certain grants and transfers within the public sector. A full definition of TES is shown in annex E of PESA 2005 or on HM Treasury website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/45E/2D/pesa2005_appendixe.pdf.

Grants to VisitBritain and its predecessors have not been included in the regional analyses in PESA. This position is under review.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the value was of grants paid to the (a) English Tourism Council, (b) Greater London Authority and (c) Scottish Executive and VisitScotland in each year since 2001; and how these were allocated in terms of identifiable and non-identifiable expenditure in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses. [35818]

James Purnell: Table 1 gives details of the grants paid to the English Tourism Council (ETC) for the period 2001 to 2003 and Greater London Authority (GLA) for the period 2001 to 2005. My Department does not hold data for the Scottish Executive or VisitScotland, this data would be held by their offices.

Table 1

	ETC	GLA
2001–02	14.591	1.9
2002–03	14.125	1.9
2003–04	merged with VisitBritain	1.9
2004–05	n/a	1.9

In PESA 2005 expenditure on tourism by VisitBritain (which succeeded the British Tourist Association and the English Tourism Council) is classified as non-identifiable. However, this is under review. The criteria for classifying expenditure as identifiable or non-identifiable is published on the HM Treasury website http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/e13/8B/CRA%20memoranum.pdf in the annex B of the memorandum issued by HM Treasury and ONS. Treasury Government Expenditure by Region.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Airspace (Extraordinary Renditions)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether United Kingdom security services personnel have travelled in an aircraft used for the purpose of an international rendition. [36443]

Mr. Straw: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions and at what locations officials in the United Kingdom security services have questioned individuals who have been subject to an international rendition or other involuntary transfer by United States officials. [36444]

Mr. Straw: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any aircraft used by United States officials for the purpose of an international rendition has landed at a UK airport. [36445]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 36414).

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information officials in the United Kingdom security services collect on (a) the detention of individuals in European states by or at the request of United States officials and (b) the transit through UK airports of aircraft used by United States officials for the purpose of international rendition. [36446]

Mr. Straw: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the Government's policy is on the use of (a) UK airspace and (b) UK overseas territory for the purposes of extraordinary rendition flights involving those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [36673]

(2) whether the Government have made representations to the US Administration regarding reports of the use of British territory and overseas territories, including sovereign bases, for purposes of extraordinary rendition flights involving those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [36677]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave the right hon. and learned Member for North East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) today (UIN 36414).

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from his EU counterparts regarding the use of EU airspace for extraordinary rendition flights involving those accused of terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [36674]

Mr. Straw: At the request of my EU colleagues, as the EU President, I wrote to the United States (US) Secretary of State on 29 November about media reports of US rendition operations and detention camps in Europe. The Secretary of State replied on 6 December enclosing a copy of her public statement of 5 December, available at http://www.state.gov./secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm, by way of response.

Bangladesh

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Bangladesh concerning terrorist incidents in Bangladesh; and if he will take steps to highlight to the international community recent incidents of attacks against the Christian community in Bangladesh. [36933]

Dr. Howells: I visited Bangladesh from 14 to 16 November. In meetings with the Prime Minister, Khaleda Zia, Home Affairs Minister, Lutfurzzaman Babar, and others, I raised the 17 August attacks and subsequent bombings. I underlined to them and others the need for this threat to be addressed seriously and reminded them of the UK's commitment to work with the Government of Bangladesh to counter terrorism and promote democracy and the rule of law.

We continue to be concerned about the situation of religious minorities including Christians in Bangladesh. I discussed this with representatives from minority communities during my visit and outlined, in a widely reported speech to senior politicians, religious figures, media and business professionals, the UK's concerns about acts of repression against minorities. The British High Commission in Dhaka closely monitors incidents of religious persecution and intolerance. These issues are highlighted in the 2005 Foreign and Commonwealth Office Annual Human Rights Report which is available in the Library of the House. We regularly raise human rights including religious persecution with the Government of Bangladesh, both bilaterally and together with EU partners.

Burma

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take up with the Burmese authorities the case of Thet Win Aung, a prisoner of conscience in Burma. [36913]

Ian Pearson: Thet Win Aung is one of a number of political prisoners the EU has identified as being of particular concern. The EU raises their cases with the Burmese military regime at every opportunity. Most recently, our ambassador in Rangoon raised this with the Burmese Interior Minister on 26 October and the Minister of Foreign Affairs on 31 October.

Chagos Islanders

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on plans for the return of the Chagos islanders to their homes. [34050]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There are no plans to allow the Chagossians to return to the Chagos Archipelago.

Two Orders in Council were made in June 2004: the British Indian Ocean Territory (Constitution) Order 2004 and the British Indian Ocean Territory (Immigration) Order 2004. These restored full immigration control over the entire British Indian Ocean Territory. In his written statement to Parliament on 15 June 2004, Official Report, columns 32–34WS, my hon. Friend, the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Bill Rammell stated,

> " ... full immigration control over the entire Territory is necessary to ensure and maintain the availability and effective use of the Territory for defence purposes, for which it was in fact constituted and set aside in accordance with the UK's treaty obligations entered into almost 40 years ago."

In the statement, Mr Rammell also said

> "... anything other than short-term resettlement on a purely subsistence basis would be high precarious and would involve expensive underwriting by the UK Government for an open-ended period—probably permanently."

The Government's position has not changed.

An application for judicial review of the Orders in Council will be heard by the High Court from 6 to 12 December 2005.

CIA Prisons (Europe)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he first raised reports of secret Central Intelligence Agency prisons in European countries with the US authorities. [36676]

Mr. Straw: At the request of my EU colleagues, as the EU President, I wrote to the US Secretary of State on 29 November about media reports of US rendition operations and detention camps in Europe. The Secretary of State replied on 6 December enclosing a copy of her public statement of 5 December, available at http://www.state.gov./secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm, by way of response.

Colombia

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will offer support to victims of human rights violations in Colombia. [35248]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We have consistently demonstrated our support to the victims of human rights violations in Colombia. We have done so through interventions with the Government of Colombia over specific human rights cases, either through the EU or bilaterally; through financial and political support to the Colombia office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR) and its activities to improve the human rights situation; and through support to British and Colombian NGOs working in human rights in Colombia, including through projects funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Conflict Prevention Pool and the Global Opportunities Fund. Ministers regularly meet representatives of churches, trade unions and other organisations in civil society to address their concerns. We have regularly used high level visits between the UK and Colombia to highlight the importance we and the EU as a whole attach to human rights, especially to the rights of victims of the armed conflict to truth, justice and reparation. The most recent example of this was during the visit to the UK of Vice-President Santos on 28 November when he met my noble Friend, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. We will continue to ensure that human rights are at the heart of our policy, and indeed EU policy, towards the country.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of human rights in Colombia; and if he will make a statement. [35250]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The human rights situation in Colombia remains grave. While we acknowledge that there has been a reduction in recent years in some human rights abuses, there is still a lot that needs to be done to improve the situation. During the visit to the UK by Vice-President Santos in late November, my noble Friend, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office raised human rights issues with him. We have made it plain to the Government of Colombia that we are willing to work with them to help bring an improvement to the situation in the country, either as a bilateral partner or through our EU membership. We will continue to look for ways to bring about change, working with other partners such as the UN and civil society, to achieve this goal.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will increase its financial support for the UN Human Rights Office in Bogotá to increase its capacity to observe the impact of the paramilitary demobilisation process on human rights; and if he will make a statement. [35253]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK is already a significant financial supporter of the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR) in Bogota. In the financial year 2005–06 we provided £400,000 in voluntary contributions to the office of the UNHCHR in Geneva, £100,000 of which was allocated to the Colombia office. Such matters are decided on a case by case and annual basis. The funding level for financial year 2006–07 is likely to be considered in March 2006. We also provide political support for the mandate of the UNHCHR. We view it as an important component in the search for peace and one that seeks to protect and promote the human rights of all sectors of society, particularly victims of the armed conflict.

Correspondence

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to answer the hon. Member for Buckingham's letter of 18 November. [34422]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 7 December.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34978]

Ian Pearson: All Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff have access to a full occupational health service provided by Capita Health Solutions through the FCO Healthcare Contract with International SOS. This includes work station assessments and advice on adjustments to working arrangements related to health problems. Training in manual handling is provided where appropriate.

Detention Centres (US Flights)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information (a) he and (b) his officials have received about flights operated by United States agencies stopping in the UK en route to detention centres in (i) European Union states, (ii) other European states, (iii) non-European countries other than the United States and (iv) Guantanamo Bay. [35273]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement issued by the US Secretary of State on 5 December, available at http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm, in response to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's letter to her of 29 November requesting clarification of reports of flights allegedly related to the transfer of terrorist suspects.

Eurozone (Poland)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ask the new Polish Government not to proceed with entry into the eurozone. [35435]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: No. It is for each new member state to pursue its own strategy for adoption of the euro appropriate to its circumstances, and in line with its obligations under the treaty establishing the European Community.

Falkland Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds have been allocated to promoting tourism in the Falklands. [33897]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The promotion of Tourism in the Falkland Islands is the responsibility of the Government of the Falkland Islands. We have been informed that the Falkland Islands tourist board's budget for tourism development is £220,000.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the United States administration over treatment of detainees at Guantanamo Bay. [34959]

Dr. Howells: We discuss Guantanamo Bay with the United States (US) Government on a regular basis. The US Government is well aware of our continuing concerns over the conditions of detainees there.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 298W, on international arrest warrants, from which other UK Government Departments officials were present at the two meetings with officials of the Israeli Government; and whether suggestions were made at these meetings to amend (a) UK law and (b) guidance relating to international arrest warrants. [35279]

Dr. Howells: Officials from the Home Office attended both of these meetings and an official from the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers attended one of them. The meeting discussed the legal background to the Almog case and its implications. As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office, Andy Burnham wrote in his response to my hon. Friend on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 596W, details of these meetings are confidential.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 160W, on Israel, what he apologised for. [35270]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary apologised as a matter of courtesy to Israeli Foreign Minster Shalom in the event that the issuing of an arrest warrant for retired Israeli General Doron Almog had upset or embarrassed the Israelis. As I said in my answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 160W, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary also stressed that the Government had had no role in this matter and that it had been a private prosecution.

Mediterranean Countries

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of EU funding to encourage Mediterranean partners to make progress on democracy and good governance. [34939]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: In common with our partners in the EU Mediterranean Partnership, we recognise that much remains to be done to meet the aspirations set out in the 1995 Barcelona Declaration. However, EC funding is increasingly linked to progress, for example, on action plans, and leaders agreed at the 2005 Barcelona Summit to enhance their efforts in areas such as support for political pluralism and meeting international standards in the conduct of elections. One of the main achievements of the recent Summit was the announcement of a Governance Facility through which the EU will help support those countries ready to take bold steps on governance.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress towards the goal of establishing an EU/Mediterranean free trade area by 2010. [34940]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Progress towards Euro-Mediterranean free trade has been one of the main achievements of Euro-Mediterranean relations since the Euro-Mediterranean process was launched in 1995. Association Agreements covering free trade have been negotiated with all Southern Mediterranean partners. The liberalisation of trade in goods in the Mediterranean region is now a reality and most industrial goods originating in Southern Mediterranean countries enjoy duty free access to the EU. Conversely, Mediterranean countries are progressively dismantling tariffs on imports of EU industrial goods over a period of 12 years. The adoption in 2003 of a protocol on rules of origin has allowed economic operators to cumulate processing made in different countries of the region in order to obtain preferential treatment for their products more easily. Progress has also been made towards the conclusion of South-South agreements (eg the Agadir free trade agreement between Jordan, Egypt, Tunisia and Morocco in 2004).

At the recent Euro-Mediterranean Summit, Partners reiterated their commitment to the creation of a Free Trade Area by 2010 and agreed a set of measures to achieve this goal. This included the imminent launch of regional negotiations on services and investment and on agricultural products.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what resources the Government have committed to economic, political and social reform in southern Mediterranean countries. [34941]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has an £8.5 million programme fund to help implement constructive engagement with the Islamic world and peaceful political and economic reform in Arab countries including southern Mediterranean countries. Through our membership of the EU, we also contribute towards the EU Mediterranean Partnership which since 1995 has provided the southern Mediterranean countries with financial support—around €1 billion a year in grants and another €2 billion a year in loans.

Montserrat

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government take to encourage British tourists to travel to Montserrat. [33680]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Responsibility for the development of tourism in Montserrat falls within the remit of the locally elected Montserratian Government. However, the UK Government are funding initiatives to help promote Montserrat as a tourist destination.

The Department for International Development (DFID) is supporting a three-year Tourism Development Project in Montserrat, to develop and market tourism products, and to reintroduce Montserrat to the regional and international tourism markets. It includes activities targeted specifically at British tourists, such as ensuring Montserrat is represented at major travel events in the UK.

DFID has also supported a 12-month publicity project for Montserrat, which included a recent photographic exhibition at the Mall Gallery in London with images of Montserrat 10 years on from the volcanic eruptions.

These initiatives, in addition to the resumption of fixed wing air services earlier this year which allow travellers to book through air tickets from the UK to Montserrat, encourage British tourists to travel to the island.

Palestine

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times he has met members of the Palestinian Authority in the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [35132]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I, along with other Members of the Government, regularly meet members of the Palestinian Authority (PA). Most recently I met with PA Foreign Minister Nasser al Qidwa, Finance Minister Salam Fayyad and Presidential Chief of Staff Rafiq Husseni during my visit to the region on 27–30 September. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last held meetings with Foreign Minister Nasser al Qidwa, Prime Minister Ahmed Qurei and President Mahmoud Abbas in Barcelona on 28 November.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures are being taken by the Palestinian Authority to fulfil its international obligations to reduce terrorism. [35432]

Dr. Howells: The Palestinian Authority (PA) President Mahmoud Abbas has publicly condemned all terrorist activities. The PA is working closely with the United States Security Co-ordinator (General Ward) in order to improve its effectiveness on security. Some progress has been made but much more needs to be done. The EU are working with the PA to expand the current EU Co-ordinating Office for Palestinian Police Support mission to increase the operational capacity of the Palestinian police force.

Russia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the Partnership and Co-operation Agreement between the EU and Russia. [35077]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The EU enjoys close co-operation with Russia on a range of issues outlined in the 1997 Partnership and Co-operation Agreement, including on justice and home affairs and economic relations.

The Road Maps for the Four Common Spaces finalised at the May 2005 EU-Russia Summit formalised the EU-Russia dialogue in new areas not covered in the Partnership and Co-operation Agreement, in particular on external security issues including counter terrorism. Progress on these areas was welcomed at the UK-hosted EU-Russia Summit in October.

The EU and Russia are examining in more detail the implementation of the Partnership and Co-operation Agreement as part of early considerations on future EU-Russia relations following the scheduled expiry of the first 10-year term of the Partnership and Co-operation Agreement in 2007.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received on the human rights situation in Russia. [35078]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Staff at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and at our Embassy in Moscow are in regular contact with human rights non-governmental organisations (NGOs) who use the opportunity of these meetings to make representations and discuss a range of human rights issues in Russia.

In addition, during 2005 the FCO received 36 letters and 17 parliamentary questions about human rights and democracy in Russia.

Given this public interest about human rights in Russia and our broader objective of engagement with the Russian Government on human rights and democracy, staff at the FCO in London and at our embassy in Moscow raise human rights issues with their Russian Government interlocutors at every appropriate opportunity.

Security Services (Travel)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether personnel in the United Kingdom security services have travelled in US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N313P and (b) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P. [36413]

Mr. Straw: It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters.

Sensitive Products

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the consistency with which trade rules on the protection of sensitive products are applied to (a) developed and (b) developing countries. [35757]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Sensitive products are a new concept which form part of the Doha Development Agenda's Framework Agreement. The number and treatment of sensitive products have yet to be decided in the context of the Doha Development Agenda and therefore they have yet to be applied. However, in line with Framework Agreement these sensitive products will be available to all WTO members—developing and developed—and will be subject to lesser tariff cuts than non-sensitive products.

In line with the principle of special and differential treatment for developing countries—based on the fact this is a development Round—developing countries will also have access to "special products". These special products are in addition to sensitive products and should be based on criteria of food security, livelihood security and rural development needs. Special products will be eligible for more flexible treatment, which has yet to be agreed.

St. Helena

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances the Public Solicitor in St. Helena is allowed to undertake private work; and what mechanisms are in place to ensure that such work does not conflict with his public duties. [34083]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Public Solicitor is forbidden to undertake work outside his terms of reference, which require him, while being employed in the public service, to provide legal advice to the private sector.

Terrorist Suspects (Renditions)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he was first informed that the United States was conducting international renditions of terrorist suspects; and what representations he has made to the US administration on such renditions. [36414]

Mr. Straw: The term "rendition" is currently being used to describe informal transfers of individuals in a wide range of circumstances. Whether any particular "rendition" is lawful depends on the facts of each individual case. Where we are requested to assist another State and our assistance would be lawful, we will decide whether or not to assist taking into account all the circumstances. We would not assist in any case if to do so would put us in breach of UK law or our international obligations. In particular, we would not facilitate the transfer of an individual from or through the UK to another State where there were grounds to believe that the person would face a real risk of torture.

Careful research by officials has been unable to identify any occasion since 11 September 2001, or earlier in the Bush administration, when we received a request for permission by the United States (US) for a rendition through UK territory or airspace, nor are we otherwise aware of such a case.

Additional research covering the remainder of the period of office of this Government (i.e. back to May 1997) has been undertaken. This shows there were some renditions via the UK during that period. Specifically, we have identified two definite occasions in 1998 when requests were made by the US. These occasions, for which records have been identified, were for transfer to the US for the person concerned to stand trial there. As the then Home Secretary I agreed these requests.

Although confirmatory records have yet to be identified, we believe that there may have been one or two other possible cases, also in 1998, which concerned requests by the US but for transfer to a third country. We have information on one such case which is incomplete and does not tellus whether the request was refused. We also have information on a case based on the recollection of officials involved in such matters, without any confirmatory records. The officials' recollection is that the case vas refused. It is likely, but not certain, that the two caes are in fact one and the same. I have some recollection of such a case, but, given the passage of time, I cannot be certain. The search for records continues.

Trade Liberalisation

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account he has taken of the World Bank's assessment that designating 2 per cent. of products as sensitive products could counter progress made in trade liberalisation in his assessment of the EU proposal to protect 8 per cent. of products as sensitive. [35752]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

The UK is aware of the research cited and is committed to substantial improvements in market access. We also believe that there should only be a minimal number of sensitive products. The number of sensitive products must be considered in light of the 'treatment' which is agreed for sensitive products and in the context of the tariff reduction formula. Only then is it possible to consider the impact of a certain number of sensitive products.

US Aircraft (Registration)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the Government have asked the US Administration what the purpose has been of aircraft registered with the United States Central Intelligence Agency landing at United Kingdom (a) civilian and (b) military airports since 11 September 2001. [35807]

Mr. Straw: I refer to the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for North East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) today (UIN 36414).

US Detainees

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government know the identity of the detainees held by the United States and referred to in paragraph 78 of the report published in March 2005 by the Intelligence and Security Committee. [36404]

Dr. Howells: The International and Security Committee's Report described the circumstances under which UK personnel conducted or witnessed interviews with detainees held by the United States (US) authorities. Its main focus was not the identities of those detained. The Government do not have full details of all those detained by the US.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US Administration about reports of US detention facilities which use torture in Eastern Europe. [35520]

Dr. Howells: As EU President, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary wrote to the US Secretary of State on 29 November seeking clarification of media reports of Central Intelligence Agency detention camps in Eastern Europe.

I refer my hon. Friend to the US Secretary of State's statement and that of the Foreign Secretary of 5 December. These are available at http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2005/57602.htm and http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391638&a=KArticle&aid=1133771542523 respectively.

Zimbabwe

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Zimbabwe's discovery of uranium. [33928]

Ian Pearson: The recent statement by President Mugabe is not the first announcement of uranium discoveries in Zimbabwe. It is not yet clear if the uranium is viable for extraction, or if Zimbabwe intends to invest the considerable time and money required to develop this resource. Zimbabwe is a signatory to the Non Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). In accordance with its NPT obligations, Zimbabwe has signed a nuclear safeguards agreement with the IAEA. Any proliferation in this area would, therefore, be subject to international oversight, in accordance with their safeguards agreement. We will continue to monitor the situation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ageing

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many gerontologists are on the boards of the (a) Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council and (b) Biotechnology and Biology Science Research Council; and if he will make a statement. [34228]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The information is as follows:

(a) The Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council's strategic advisory team for its 'Infrastructure and Environment Programme' has an independent member who is involved in ageing research.

(b) There are representatives on the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council's boards, committees and panels who are researching aspects of ageing in humans and animals. Two scientists who are members of the healthy organism strategy panel (whose role it is to devise the future strategy for BBSRC sponsored ageing research) and two scientists who are members of grant-awarding committees are involved in such research. In addition, two members of the bioscience for industry strategy panel and four members of grant-awarding committees are from companies with major ageing research programmes.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Government funding has been made available for the Biotechnology and Biology Science Research Council programme of experimental research on ageing programme for the years 2002 to 2005; if he will list the (a) organisations and (b) projects to which grants have been made in each year; and if he will make a statement. [34233]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 2 December 2005]: BBSRC has awarded a total of £4.2 million through the experimental research on ageing initiative. Estimated spend by year is as follows:

2001–02	68,000
2002–03	1,026,000
2003–04	1,286,000
2004–05	1,200,000
2005–06	592,000
2006–07	37,000

Further details on each grant can be found in the table including project title and name of the principal investigator.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has made an assessment of the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee report Ageing: Scientific Aspects, published on 21 July 2005; and if he will make a statement. [34411]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The Government's response to the report was submitted to the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee on 4 November 2005 and I expect it to be published by the Committee in due course.

Bankruptcies

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people living in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency have been declared bankrupt in the last 12 months; and how many such declarations occurred during the Christmas period. [35409]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The regional breakdown available for the insolvency statistics is not directly comparable with standard administrative or electoral geographies. The insolvency "regions" are areas assigned to groups of official receivers and are based around the location of county courts where the cases are heard and of courts having jurisdiction over these. As such the Metropolitan County of West Yorkshire (including Wakefield) is best matched to the Leeds official receivers office, however there is some overlap with adjoining areas. The county courts covered by the Leeds Official Receivers Office are Bradford, Dewsbury, Halifax, Harrogate, Huddersfield, Keighley, Leeds, Otley, Pontefract, Skipton, Todmorden and Wakefield. Bankruptcy statistics are not available at a lower geographical level than official receivers offices.

The following table records the number of individual bankruptcy orders classified under the Leeds Official Receivers' Office for the period October 2004 to September 2005 as a whole and for the months of December 2004 and January 2005 separately.

Numbers of individual bankruptcies recorded under the Leeds official receivers office, October 2004 to September 2005

	Bankruptcy orders
12 month total	1,826
December 2004	114
January 2005	128

Bio-energy Capital Grants Scheme

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many grants have been awarded for projects to construct large scale electricity generators of greater than 20 MWe under the Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme; how much each grant was; to which company each was awarded; and if he will make a statement. [33981]

Malcolm Wicks: The capital grants are as follows.

Company	Project	MW	Grant (£ million)
E.on (Powergen)	Lockerbie	43	[1]18
Sembcorp/Wilton 10	Teesside	31.5	[1]11.9
Peninsula Power	WINBEG	23	[2]11.5

[1] Accepted.
[2] Grant undertaking of.

Biomass Energy Generator (Winkleigh)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with interested parties on the proposal for a biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon; and what assistance his Department has given to the project. [33977]

Malcolm Wicks: I have had no direct discussions with any of the parties involved.

The developer company Peninsula Power is presently in receipt of a grant undertaking of £11.5 million from DTI under its Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme and my officials have met routinely with the applicant company as required by the grant process. They have also dealt with a considerable correspondence from Winkleigh residents regarding the proposed project.

Broadband

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which post code areas in Westmorland and Lonsdale do not have access to broadband; and on what date broadband will be available in each of those areas. [34128]

Alun Michael [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Great progress has been made towards providing broadband access everywhere and 99.6 per cent. of the population is now covered. This is considerable progress against the 2003 (80 per cent.) and 2004 (93 per cent.) figures.

BT considers that it is not financially viable to enable the remaining exchanges. Regional development agencies are working to address the gaps in broadband access at a local level.

Business Start-ups

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new business start-ups there were in (a) the East of England, (b) Suffolk and (c) the constituency of Bury St. Edmunds in each of the last five years. [35466]

Alun Michael: The information is as follows:

Business Start Ups in the East of England, Suffolk and St. Edmundsbury

It is difficult to give absolutely firm figures of business start-ups. One measure is the number of registrations for VAT but VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Information for VAT registrations is not available at a constituency level. Figures for St. Edmundsbury local authority district are therefore provided.

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
VAT Registrations
East of England Government Office Region	17,595	16,555	17,710	18,510	17,580
Suffolk County	2,040	1,860	2,075	2,130	2,050
St. Edmundsbury	295	295	340	310	345
VAT Registrations per 10,000 adults
East of England Government Office Region	39.9	37.5	40.1	41.9	39.8
Suffolk County	37.0	33.7	37.6	38.6	37.2
St. Edmundsbury	36.2	36.2	41.7	38.0	42.3

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new business start-ups there were in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Kettering constituency in each year since 1997. [36145]

Alun Michael: It is difficult to give absolutely firm figures of business start-ups. One measure is the number of registrations for VAT but VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

According to Barclays bank's latest survey of business creation, which includes non-VAT registered firms, there were 428,200 business start-ups in England in 2003 and a further 425,100 in 2004.

Barclays data show that there were 5,300 business start-ups in Northamptonshire in 2003 and a further 5,100 in 2004. Data for counties are not available before 2003. Data for Kettering constituency are not provided, since Barclays do not produce sub-county level data at present. Data for 2005 will be available in spring 2006.

DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations for England, Northamptonshire county and Kettering constituency are shown as follows for 1997 to 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

VAT registrations: 1997 to 2004

	England	Northamptonshire county	Kettering constituency
1997	159,730	2,050	330
1998	160,235	2,065	345
1999	155,390	2,140	330
2000	157,615	2,055	345
2001	148,835	1,955	315
2002	155,175	1,990	320
2003	166,505	2,270	385
2004	158,535	2,270	395

Carbon Emissions

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Government funding will be available in the next 10 years to UK electricity generators who wish to make use of carbon capture equipment to reduce emissions. [35036]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government have made available £35 million for demonstration projects in carbon abatement technologies and this includes the £10 million announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer during his pre-Budget speech. These technologies will involve the use of carbon capture equipment.

Also, the climate change programme review is considering the possibility of incentives for carbon reduction from fossil fuel use.

Clean Coal

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Department is funding into clean coal; and if he will make a statement. [34636]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1999 the Department provided £13 million to the Cleaner Coal Technology Programme and an additional £3.5 million for collaborative Cleaner Coal Technology projects with the USA. The Department's Carbon Abatement Technology Programme has also provided £4 million for new Carbon Abatement Technologies including Cleaner Coal Technologies under its first call for project proposals during 2005–06.

The Government has also made available £35 million. This includes the £10 million announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his pre-Budget speech, for demonstration projects in Carbon Abatement Technologies which will involve carbon capture and storage.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the use of clean coal technology. [34799]

Malcolm Wicks: The Carbon Abatement Technologies Strategy which I announced on 14 June this year sets out the Government's policy and views for the future support for cleaner coal technologies. Copies of the Strategy are available in the Libraries of the House and at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/coal/cft/cct/pub/catreportlinked.pdf

Clear Skies/Photovoltaics Programmes

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the expenditure on the Clear Skies and Major Photovoltaics Demonstration Programme was in each year since 2002. [35434]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows.

For Clear Skies the details are as follows:

2003	200,722
2004	1,386,556
2005	1,977,599

For the Major Photovoltaics Programme the details are as follows:

2002–03	966,176
2003–04	2,885,094
2004–05	6,792,174
2005–06	4,207,354

Construction Act Review

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will consult in the forthcoming Construction Act Review on outlawing (a) pay when certified and (b) pay when paid arrangements; [37016]

(2) if he will consult in the forthcoming Construction Act Review on introducing measures to increase certainty on when a debt is created. [37017]

Alun Michael: Officials at the Department of Trade and Industry and Welsh Assembly Government are currently preparing an analysis of the responses to their consultation on "Improving Payment Practices in the Construction Industry". The analysis will be published shortly and will set out the proposals we intend to take forward. We have already undertaken to consult further on amendments to the legislation. The construction industry and its stakeholders will have the opportunity to scrutinise the proposals at that stage.

Correspondence

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for North Essex of 28 October concerning the Government's energy policy. [32425]

Malcolm Wicks: I have received the hon. Member's letter and have now replied.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department has spent on the purchase of branded (a) L.P. bags, (b) plastic carrier bags and (c) pens in each year since 1997. [35449]

Alan Johnson: A response cannot be provided to this question as the Department's records do not capture this level of detail. Finding this information would exceed the disproportionate cost threshold.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34974]

Alan Johnson: The DTI provides medical and other advice, through their Occupational Health Services and through disability management advisers and specialist assessors where appropriate, to identify the appropriate support for employees with medical conditions, including chronic back pain.

Domestic Accidents

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what initiatives his Department is taking to help reduce the number of serious accidents in the home. [36207]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. The Department has for many years maintained advice on its website on safety in the home. However, the Department's role is to ensure that the right regulatory framework is in place to ensure the safety of consumers. In some product sectors, such as toys, there is specific safety legislation, and new General Product Safety Regulations came into force on 1 October 2005. Other Departments offer advice on e.g. fire safety in the home, but generally other organisations are better placed to take forward safety campaigning and to provide advice on safety in the home.

Doorstep Selling

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regulations govern doorstep selling; what action his Department is taking to combat aggressive doorstep selling; and if he will make a statement. [36212]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Doorstep selling is governed by the Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded Away from Business Premises) Regulations 1987.

In the light of an OFT market study of doorstep selling, my Department has been consulting on ways to improve consumer protection when buying goods or services on the doorstep. In parallel we have been considering the impact of the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive (UCPD), which is specifically directed at aggressive and misleading sales practices towards vulnerable consumers.

Ministers will be considering next steps and intend to publish a final government response as soon as possible.

Electricity Supplies

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department is taking to ensure security of electricity supply this winter. [31739]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government believe that security of energy supply is best delivered by ensuring that market mechanisms provide incentives to energy suppliers to meet demand. This includes financial penalties, which can be very stringent depending on the overall balance of the market, where suppliers fail to balance the amount of electricity supplied by them to the national grid with the amount of electricity used by their customers. Responsibility for deciding how best to meet demand—for example, by restoring mothballed generating plants or building up coal stocks or back-up fuel for gas-fired power stations—rests with the electricity supply industry itself.

Energy (EU Relations)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the EU's international relations on energy issues in relation to (a) the EU-Russia energy dialogue, (b) the South East Europe energy treaty, (c) the EU-OPEC dialogue and (d) the energy charter treaty. [34931]

Malcolm Wicks: As I reported at the EU Energy Council on 1 December, a number of developments have taken place or are about to take place under the UK presidency of the EU with respect to the EU-Russia Energy Dialogue, the Energy Treaty with South East Europe EU-OPEC dialogue and the Energy Charter Treaty.

EU-Russia Energy Dialogue

The first EU-Russia Permanent Partnership Council on Energy was held in London on 3 October. Ministers discussed the work and future programme of the four Thematic Groups on Energy Efficiency, Trade, Investment and Infrastructure. The Council endorsed an interim list of actions for the groups to take forward. The work of these groups is proving valuable to both partners in the Dialogue and allows us to engage Russia on key issues, including those that are important in the run-up to the St. Petersburg G8 summit in 2006, where energy will be a priority.

EU-OPEC Energy Dialogue

The overall aim of the dialogue is to promote oil market stability and improve mutual understanding. At the dialogue meeting on 2 December in Vienna, we shared perspectives on recent oil market developments and discussed issues of common interest regarding technology. Expert-level roundtable meetings are being organised to develop practical areas of co-operation.

The EU Energy Dialogues with both Russia and OPEC are an important part of a broader approach to developing the EU's relationship with major energy suppliers. This was one of the issues discussed at the informal EU Heads of State meeting at Hampton Court on 27 October which considered the challenges of globalisation.

Treaty establishing an Energy Community (with South East Europe)

I am pleased to confirm the signature of this treaty on 25 October. This treaty should facilitate the reconstruction of energy infrastructure in the Western Balkans, the establishment of an efficient energy market in the region and, eventually, its integration with the EU internal market, to the mutual benefit of these countries and EU member states.

Energy Charter Treaty

The negotiations on a Protocol on Energy Transit have continued with increased vigour under the UK presidency but we are not in a position to announce a final protocol. A conference is to be held on 9 December.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the progress made during the UK presidency on the EU's security of energy supply. [34932]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK's presidency of the EU's Council of Ministers continues until the end of December; progress to date has been made on a number of fronts. This includes:

EU Market Liberalisation: The best means we have of ensuring our energy supplies is the development of an open and competitive EU energy market. It is for this reason that I pressed the Competition Commissioner to undertake a competition inquiry into the state of the European Energy Market in electricity and gas (announced in June 2005). The UK has also supported the Commission's report on implementation of the existing directives in electricity and gas. The interim report of the competition inquiry and the 2005 implementation report were both published on 15 November. The UK facilitated substantive discussion of the two reports at the Energy Council on 1 December, where, on the basis of presentations by Commissioners Kroes and Piebalgs, the presidency was able to conclude that secure electricity and gas supplies at competitive prices, delivered on open, transparent and competitive markets are crucial to Europe's competitiveness and that full implementation of the second electricity and gas directives was paramount.

There have also been important steps taken on Energy Efficiency. At the UK's Energy Council on 1 December, energy efficiency was recognised as making an important contribution to all three primary energy objectives of competitive markets, security of supply and tackling climate change. Negotiations have been ongoing during the UK presidency on the Energy End-Use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive. We have worked hard to reach a Council position under our presidency and we expect the final agreement of the European Parliament on 14 December. In addition, we have pushed for more long-term action, facilitating discussion of the Commission's Green Paper on energy efficiency. We also held a successful conference on Energy Efficiency on 2–3 November in London.

The UK has also furthered the EU's relations with external actors during our presidency, with a view to enhancing our security of supply (as per parliamentary answer 2005/2255). The UK held Permanent Partnership Council on Energy with Russia on 3 October, participated in the EU-OPEC dialogue, on behalf of the Council, in Vienna on 2 December; and facilitated the signing of a treaty establishing an Energy Community (with South East Europe), signed on 25 October. The UK has also been working with the Energy Charter Secretariat ahead of their annual conference on 9 December, particularly on the long running negotiations on a Protocol on Energy Transit.

Finally, the potential for a European Energy policy was discussed at the Hampton Court Heads of State Informal in October. The Commission plans to take this forward through a Green Paper in 2006 and with a view to reporting to the 2006 December European Council. The EU's Security of Energy Supply will be an important feature of this document, on which the UK will continue to work with the Commission.

Energy Market Liberalisation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on liberalisation of the energy market in the EU. [34644]

Malcolm Wicks: At the Energy Council on 1 December, the Commission presented two reports—DG TREN's "Report on progress in creating the internal gas and electricity market" (Council Document 14800/05) and DG Competition's "Energy Sector Inquiry: Issues Paper"—on the further development of the internal energy market and possible structural barriers to competition within this sector. These were hard hitting and outlined serious deficiencies in the market. The Council agreed on the need for more work on implementing existing legislation and on releasing more information.

The Council also unanimously agreed that secure supplies of electricity and gas, delivered on open, transparent and liberalised markets, are crucial for Europe's competitiveness.

I am grateful for the commitment to further action given by the Commission at the Council. We will support proposals that help to accelerate the development of the internal market and, separately, expect the Commission to take early enforcement action against any who are acting against the interests of consumers.

Energy Policy

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's energy (a) policy and (b) review; and when the review will be completed. [34167]

Malcolm Wicks: A written statement on the Energy Review was set before the House on 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 12–13WS. The statement contained the Review Terms of Reference, which stated that we aim to bring forward proposals on energy policy next year.

The review team will report to my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in early summer.

Energy Review

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Energy Review will consider (a) the (i) level and (ii) targeting of research and development funding in the energy sector and (b) the role of (A) Government and (B) Ofgem in ensuring (1) security of supply, (2) affordable energy and (3) progress towards environmental targets. [34183]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: As the terms of reference of the review make clear, the Review is focussed on policy measures to help us deliver our objectives beyond 2010—to maintain secure energy supplies, to tackle fuel poverty, to reduce carbon emissions and to promote competitive markets. It will consider a wide range of options, including the role of current generating technologies and new and emerging technologies. We believe that Ofgem as an independent economic regulator is central to the competitive operation of UK energy markets.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the written statement on the Energy Review of 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 10–12WS, if he will list the membership of the review team; and which Department each works for. [36054]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 December 2005]: I will lead the Energy Review, which will be taken forward by a cross-departmental team.

The review team will be based in DTI, with secondees from DEFRA, Department for Transport, HM Treasury and the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit. In addition there will be input from ODPM and FCO.

The devolved Administrations and territorial Departments are already involved and will continue to be involved throughout the course of the review.

Energy Supplies

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of total energy supply he expects (a) fossil fuels, (b) renewables and (c) nuclear to supply by (i) 2020, (ii) 2040 and (iii) 2060. [35525]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The following table shows the DTI's November 2004 projection of percentage shares of fuels in the future energy supply mix for 2020. There are significant margins of uncertainty attached to such estimates. Estimates are not available for later years. Work to update projections is currently under way.

	Percentage
Fossil	91
Renewable	6
Nuclear	3
Total	100

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what cost-benefit analyses have been undertaken on different strategies to secure sufficient energy for the United Kingdom without increasing greenhouse gas emissions. [35841]

Malcolm Wicks: The 2003 Energy White Paper published the result of extensive modelling of the costs of different options for reducing carbon dioxide emissions over the period to 2050. The analysis is available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/whitepaper/phase2.pdf

In November 2005 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that there would be a review of energy policy which would report in summer 2006. This will involve further analysis of the costs of different options for meeting the Government's long-term targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

Fuel Demand

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to provide for an increase in demand for fuel. [33630]

Malcolm Wicks: I understand that the question pertains to heating oils. My Officials are in regular contact with operators in the UK oil industry to monitor market developments and to help ensure that they are best able to meet increased demand for heating oil during the winter.

Although production and refining capacity is still tight by historical standards, conditions in the global oil market have eased since prices spiked in the aftermath of hurricanes Katrina and Rita. This has allowed oil and oil product stocks to build in both Europe and the US and left the market better able to cope with higher demand in the winter.

Gas Prices

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the price differentials between (a) gas spot and (b) forward prices and the impact upon energy intensive users; and if he will make a statement. [33895]

Malcolm Wicks: The price differentials for the last three months are given in the table.

Average price in	Spot (p per therm)	Forward price for contract in quarter 4, 2005 (p per therm)	Forward price for contract in quarter 1, 2006 (p per therm)
September	27.5	50.8	68.7
October	32.7	n/a	67.2
November	80.7	n/a	81.0

n/a = Not applicable

Note:

That the forward contract for quarter 4, 2005 was not available after September 2005.

The choice of the type of contract to enter into is a commercial decision to be made by each firm, within the context of their own risk management strategy and balancing a number of factors.

Spot prices for November were volatile and rose, in part, due to nervousness about a tight winter supply demand balance. The Government understand that this creates tough trading conditions for energy intensive users. We will continue to work closely with industry to help, wherever possible, to mitigate the situation and reduce the impact on industrial customers, particularly large users. We are in close contact with high-energy users who have been affected by the price increases.

The recent price spike has not had an impact on all of industry. For example, for the less energy intensive users contracts with suppliers may be on a fixed price basis which are lower than the EU average.

Heat Pumps (Grants)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants are available for the replacement of old boilers with ground source heat pump systems; what the average grant awarded is; and if he will make a statement. [35070]

Malcolm Wicks: Under the Clear Skies Programme grants of £1,200, regardless of system size, are available for the installation of ground source heat pumps.

Hydro-power

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money the Government have invested in hydro-power technologies in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [33488]

Malcolm Wicks: It has not been possible to collate all public expenditure and other Government support since 1997 for hydropower in the time available at proportionate cost. However, it is possible to detail direct DTI expenditure on hydropower for these years through the New and Renewable Energy Programme. This are set out in the following table.

1997–98	57,000
1998–99	80,000
1999–2000	138,000
2000–01	60,000
2001–02	130,000
2002–03	200,000
2003–04	85,000
2004–05	0

There have also been sums allocated to Community and Household projects through the "Clear Skies" scheme. Grants have been allocated for hydro projects totalling; 2003–04 £67,000, 2004–05 £187,955 and 2005–06 £95,880.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31114]

Alan Johnson: The Department has not finalised current best estimates of the cost of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees.

Inward Investment

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of inward investment grants made to English regional development agencies was in each year since 2001; and how these grants are dealt with in the allocation of expenditure as identifiable or non-identifiable in his Department's public expenditure statistical analyses. [35859]

Alun Michael: The total value of inward investment grants made to the English regional development agencies by UK Trade and Investment since 2001 is detailed in the following table:

Financial year	Grant (£ million)
2001–02	12.78
2002–03	12.93
2003–04	12.93
2004–05	13.23
2005–06	15.23

Notes:

1. Grants to individual regional development agencies are made via the single pot formulaic distribution method.
2. The grants to the regional development agencies are classified as non-identifiable in the 2005 public expenditure statistical analyses.

Isle of Grain Gas Terminal

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what limit there is on the number of companies that can use the liquefied natural gas import facilities at the Isle of Grain terminal. [34185]

Malcolm Wicks: There is no limit on the number of companies that can use the LNG import facilities at the Isle of Grain. The primary capacity has been auctioned by the terminal owner, and is fully contracted to two parties. If they do not use their contracted capacity, it should be made available to other parties under "use it or lose it" ("UIOLI"). Under the regulatory regime applying to this terminal, enforced by Ofgem, the terminal owner is required to facilitate UIOLI arrangements. On 5 December Ofgem announced that the terminal owners and primary capacity owners are improving the arrangements for transparency and UIOLI at the Isle of Grain facility.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many IT projects which cost over £1 million and were introduced since 1997 are in use in his Department. [26613]

Alan Johnson: Due to a change in the Department's accounting system during 2003–04, and the devolved nature of the ICT, consistent data on the number of IT projects cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Low Carbon Building Programme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the £30 million funding package recently announced for the Low Carbon Building Programme is expected to be spent (a) on programmes and (b) across the six-year period outlined in the June consultation paper. [33951]

Malcolm Wicks: £1.5 million of the £30 million funding package has been brought forward to extend the Clear Skies and PV programmes. £28.5 million will be spent over three years on the Low Carbon Buildings programme, which is due to start in April 2006.

Long term commitment to the micro-generation sector needs to be seen in the wider context of the micro-generation strategy (to be published April 2006) that will seek to tackle some of the non grant barriers that are currently hindering development of a sustainable micro-generation market.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32247]

Alan Johnson: It is the policy of my Department, its agencies, and the non-departmental public bodies it sponsors, to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting. However, the information requested for these organisation is not held centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Manufacturing/Processing Industries

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government assistance is available to (a) small and (b) large manufacturing firms in Burnley and Padiham. [33899]

Alun Michael [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Manufacturing firms in Burnley and Padiham are eligible for financial support from a range of schemes available throughout the north west. For SMEs these include the grant for research and development and a variety of venture capital funds. In addition, manufacturing firms in parts of Burnley and Padiham are also eligible for selective finance for investment and the north west business investment scheme for SMEs.

A range of non-financial assistance is available from Business Link and the Manufacturing Advisory Service. The latter is funded by DTI and delivered in the north west by the Manufacturing Institute. It offers the region's manufacturing firms free diagnostic visits and support for projects to help boost performance and competitiveness. The North West Development Agency is also proposing to develop an advanced manufacturing centre on the former Michelin site.

Businesses across the country were recently involved in enterprise week. This encouraged young people to become involved in enterprise and develop entrepreneurial skills. There were many events in the north west, of which six tailored for organisations rather than individuals took place in Lancashire, including the 'Arts for Enterprise: Gallery Glass' event, which was held in Burnley and aimed to encourage adults to utilise often under-used materials for window decorations.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the (a) state of and (b) future prospects for (i) manufacturing industry and (ii) process industries in (1) Hartlepool constituency, (2) the Tees Valley sub-region and (3) the North East Region. [35181]

Alun Michael: The Government is committed to supporting a high value, high skill manufacturing sector, capable of introducing new products and processes into the economy, creating new markets, and improving the prosperity of the regions. The manufacturing and process industries within Hartlepool, the wider Tees Valley and North East region are demonstrating the transition to higher value manufacturing, competitive within global markets—including through the newly formed North East Process Industries Cluster (NEPIC). The Government is also encouraged to see the high profile which the manufacturing and process sectors in the Tees Valley have within the North East's Regional Economic Strategy, and the work of ONE North East and local partners.

Maternity Payments (Adopters)

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will increase maternity payments to adopters in line with those paid to natural parents. [34490]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since its introduction in April 2003, statutory adoption pay has been paid at the same standard rate and for the same length of time as statutory maternity pay (SMP) and maternity allowance (MA). We intend to continue the existing approach as we increase both the standard rate and the payment period. The Work and Families Bill will enable us to meet our commitment to extend the payment period of SMP, MA and SAP from the current 26 weeks to 39 weeks from April 2007, with an ambition to extend to one year by the end of this Parliament.

Micro-generation

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent in financial year 2005–06 under each micro-generation installation scheme; and what the projected spend for this full financial year is for each scheme. [33964]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is as follows.

Clear Skies

2005–06	Amount
Spend	1,977,599
Allocated	2,029,320
Total[1]	4,006,919

Miners (Compensation)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to accelerate the process of providing compensation to the widows and families of deceased miners; and if he will make a statement on the waiting time for compensation. [35787]

Malcolm Wicks: Two fast-track processes have been introduced to the respiratory disease scheme, one specifically for claims concerning deceased miners. These processes have enabled an additional 60,000 claims to be settled in the last nine months, for total compensation in excess of £125 million. We anticipate that fast-track payments could be made to a further 75,000 claimants, mainly in respect of deceased miners. These changes to the schemes should result in the time taken to settle all claims to be reduced by two years.

Nuclear Power

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make a statement on Government policy on the nuclear industry. [35378]

Malcolm Wicks: The recently announced energy review will be bringing forward proposals next year on energy policy to help us deliver our medium and long-term objectives. The review will be examining a wide range of options including civil nuclear power.

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which companies have expressed an interest in (a) building and (b) operating a new generation of nuclear power stations in the UK. [34007]

Malcolm Wicks: Many companies regularly express interest publicly in a variety of energy infrastructure projects that relate to a number of different generating technologies, including nuclear, renewables, gas and carbon capture and storage.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of nuclear power. [35524]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The recently announced Energy Review will bring forward proposals next year on energy policy to help us deliver our medium and long-term objectives. The Review will be examining a wide range of options including civil nuclear power.

Ofgem

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will amend the remit of Ofgem to require it to give more encouragement to (a) decentralised energy and (b) low-carbon technologies. [36055]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Ofgem's general duties already require them to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development as well as to have regard for the environment when making their decisions. The Secretary of State has also issued social and environmental guidance to Ofgem which allows them to contribute to broader Government policies without compromising the principle of independent regulation. There is therefore no need to amend their statutory duties. Government are committed to providing a framework which allows markets to make long term investment decisions with confidence. Stability and regulatory certainty are an important part of this. Changing the well understood duties of the regulator would inject unwelcome uncertainty in energy markets.

Open Cast Mining

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what guidance he has issued to successor companies to British Coal on their position under exemptions in relation to restoring open cast coal working on their sites; [34484]

(2) what level of bond operators of open cast sites are required to hold to enable restoration of sites to be carried out; [34488]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact on former coal areas of British Coal being exempt from providing restoration bonds since it was privatised. [34489]

Malcolm Wicks: No guidance has been issued nor assessment made in relation to these matters. Where site restoration bonds are required, the level will be determined by the relevant mineral planning authority in light of the specific circumstances of the site concerned.

Peninsular Power Ltd.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what evidence he took into account in satisfying himself, for the purposes of its application for a grant under the Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme, that Peninsular Power Ltd. had access to adequate financing to complete the proposed project relating to a biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon; [33979]

(2) what evidence he took into account in satisfying himself, for the purposes of its application for a grant under the Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme, that Peninsular Power Ltd. was (a) credible, (b) possessed the right skills and track record and (c) were organised in an appropriate manner to ensure the project to construct a biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon was well planned and managed. [33980]

Malcolm Wicks: Peninsula Power, as applicants under the scheme, met all laid-down criteria for a developer company to demonstrate availability of finance before the issue of a grant offer letter. Peninsula Power also demonstrated at the application stage that that they would have access to the required project development skills and experience.

Any offer of grant under the Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme remains an undertaking of support for an agreed period of time. The development of bio-energy projects is a complex process and the offer is subject to evidence of timely progress on a range of milestones. The milestones to be achieved before any grant drawdown could be triggered, include evidence of availability of adequate finance, securing of planning consent, and development of biomass fuel supply chains.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has been made to (a) Torridge district council and (b) Devon county council concerning the grant of planning permission to Peninsular Power Ltd. in respect of a biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon. [33983]

Malcolm Wicks: No representations have been made by DTI Energy Group to either Torridge district council or Devon county council. National policy on development of renewable energy projects is set out in Planning Policy Statement 22.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the South West Regional Development Agency about the payment of public funds to cover Peninsular Power Ltd.'s costs associated with the project to construct a biomass energy generator, which are not eligible under the Bio-energy Capital Grants scheme. [33984]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI routinely discuss matters of common interest with regional authorities and agencies regarding the projects it is supporting within their regions. Here, SWRDA funded elements of this project not eligible under the capital grants scheme from their own budgets as part of their own local bio-energy strategy.

Regional Development Agencies

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how best practice and key incentives are proactively shared between the regional development agencies; what regular meetings are held at board and operational levels; and if he will make a statement. [28918]

Alun Michael: The RDAs proactively share best practice and information on key incentives and initiatives at both senior and operational levels. For example at senior level the chairs of the agencies meet every six weeks to discuss their collective agenda and one of the standing items on the agenda is a best practice slot where two chairs will give presentations on projects from their own RDA. Copies of the presentation are circulated to all RDAs after the meeting, and are available upon request. Chairs also meet with Government Ministers every six weeks and there is a regional showcase item on the agenda. One of the chairs will give a presentation on a key initiative that illustrates the broader theme of the meeting. For example the chair of the East of England development agency recently gave a presentation on higher education provision in the region as part of a wider discussion on the skills agenda.

The RDA directors meet their peers quarterly to discuss issues of mutual interest and best practice. There are six groups covering the following areas; strategy, finance, communications, enterprise, development (regeneration) and skills.

At operational level there are a number of networks that support the RDA directors, including one, whose purpose is to support best practice in relation to RDA performance management, reporting and evaluation framework.

In addition, at operational level there are a number of networks that support the RDAs in their lead roles. These groups communicate mainly through e-mail, but will meet occasionally to discuss common issues and share best practice. The areas the groups cover include; planning, transport, sustainable development, diversity, and the voluntary and community sector.

The RDAs have established the Office of Project Advice and Training jointly with English Partnerships and the Welsh Development Agency which aims to promote best practice in project appraisal, delivery and evaluation. The office has both a technical and strategic role. The technical role is to develop and share best practice in project appraisal, delivery and evaluation, and to disseminate this advice within the agencies and their partners. The strategic role is to influence and advise both Departments and agencies on the implications of new responsibilities and government initiatives based on their technical knowledge and expertise in project processes and agency procedures. This helps avoid duplication of effort, maximises the use of resources and so achieves value for money.

Following the publication of the Egan report all RDAs have established regional centres of excellence which will help RDA staff and regeneration practitioners share and promote best practice in their work. The regional centres will work closely with the National Centre, which is being established in Leeds.

Best practice is shared among representatives from the RDAs responsible for managing Business Link in the regions at the Business Link Implementation Group. Recommendations from that group are ratified by the Business Link Strategy Board, which is made up of representatives from the RDAs that have a wider responsibility for co-ordinating the delivery of business support in the regions.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average grant awarded for school renewable energy projects was under his Department's Clearskies programme. [32847]

Malcolm Wicks: 71 schools have been offered grant funding totalling £1,152,596, this equates to an average of £16,234 per school.

Skilled Workers

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government are taking to reduce the loss of skilled workers to areas outside the European Union. [23455]

Alan Johnson: The mobility of skilled people is positive and beneficial for career development and the UK is making significant gains as a result of such international mobility. Recent research shows that almost all highly cited UK academic staff who went abroad subsequently returned and that the UK was one of the most dynamic and highly regarded locations for higher education careers. In fact the UK was a magnet for both young researchers at the beginning of their careers as well as established academics, gaining 40 per cent. more staff than it lost over an eight-year period, from highly cited academics to postdoctoral staff.

In addition, we have introduced several initiatives to encourage foreign national students to stay on after education in the UK by raising PhD stipends, improving professional training in PhDs, improving postdoctoral pay and conditions and developing entrepreneurship.

Small Business Research Initiative

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the guidelines issued to all Government Departments in implementing the mandatory small business research initiative. [35492]

Alun Michael: The guidelines issued to Government Departments regarding the small business research initiative are currently being revised. A copy of the revised guidance will be placed in the Library shortly.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received about the extension of Sunday trading hours; and if he will make a statement. [35815]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We have received representations from a range of stakeholders on the issue. My officials are preparing a cost-benefit analysis of the case for further liberalisation of the Sunday trading laws.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to extend the six hour limit on Sunday trading by large stores. [36620]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Officials are carrying out a full cost benefit analysis of the scope for further liberalisation of Sunday trading. To assist in this we are inviting independent researchers to carry out a thorough assessment of the effects of liberalising Sunday trading in whole or in part, including the impact on jobs, retailers, the needs of consumers and the impact on economic growth. The Government will then come forward with proposals, after discussions with businesses, consumers, religious groups and employees.

Tourist Industry

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the (a) state of and (b) future prospects for the tourist industry in (i) Hartlepool constituency, (ii) the Tees Valley sub-region and (iii) the North East Region. [35182]

Alun Michael: Since 1 April 2003, the English Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) have had strategic responsibility for tourism. This has helped to unlock a whole range of benefits for the industry, including clearer business support and links to wider services and resources.

One NorthEast recently commissioned research by Global Tourism Solutions into the economic impact of tourism in the North East. This showed that in 2004:

tourism in Hartlepool is worth £39 million and supports 900 jobs (Full Time Equivalents); in Tees Valley, tourism was worth £339 million and supported around 7,000 jobs; in the North East region, tourism was worth £1.8 billion and supported around 38,000 jobs; a total of 8.7 million overnight tourists visited the region in 2004, a 3 per cent. increase on the previous year.

North East England Tourism Strategy, published in January 2005, sets out the region's target to increase tourism by 1.3 million domestic visits and 0.7 million visits per annum by 2010 against the baseline year of 2003.

One NorthEast investment in tourism continues through its capital programme, and activities in regional marketing, business development, strategic planning and project development. For example, it is expected that Tees Valley will benefit from:

£20 million new investment at Durham/Tees Valley airport

Development of the Coastal Arc

Regeneration of Darlington Town Centre worth £200 million

Middlesbrough Institute of Modern Art, £15 million project (currently under construction)

One NorthEast is also investing £7 million over the next three years in a strategy to improve the image of North East England, a campaign which was awarded the World Travel Award for the world's best regional marketing campaign.

Trading Standards

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to relocate certain responsibilities for supervision of trading standards from local to central Government. [33783]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As announced in the pre-Budget report on 5 December the Government will set up the Local Better Regulation Office (LBRO) to work in partnership with national regulators and Trading Standards and Environmental Health Departments within local authorities to deliver a risk based approach to business inspection and enforcement.

Service delivery will remain at a local level led by Trading Standards and Environmental Health. The LBRO will be tasked with building on existing good practice to improve the overall efficiency and effectiveness of local authority regulatory services, promoting and supporting risk based approaches at a local level and minimising the inspection burden on business. It will develop a co-ordinated strategy for all Trading Standards and Environmental Health enforcement and inspection activities affecting businesses that operate in more than one local authority area, building on existing arrangements with local authorities continuing to play a lead role.

Zirconium Silicate (Iran)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether an export of zirconium silicate from the UK to Iran requires an export licence. [34700]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Zirconium silicate may be controlled under entry 1C234 of the EC Regulation, as follows:

"Zirconium with a hafnium content of less than 1 part hafnium to 500 parts zirconium by weight, as follows: metal, alloys containing more than 50% zirconium by weight, compounds, manufactures thereof, waste or scrap or any of the foregoing. Note: 1C234 does not control zirconium in the form of foil having a thickness of 0.10mm or less."

Additionally, its export may potentially be controlled, on a case by case basis, where the goods are to be used in connection with a WMD programme.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which UK agencies are investigating the circumstances relating to the interception by the Bulgarian authorities at the beginning of September of a truck travelling from the UK to Iran, containing zirconium silicate; and whether these investigations are (a) separate from and (b) in conjunction with investigations by the Bulgarian authorities; and if he will make a statement. [34701]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Investigation of alleged breaches of UK export controls are the responsibility of HM Revenue and Customs. However I believe the goods in question were not controlled under UK export controls and did not therefore require an export licence.

DEFENCE

Blake Inquiry Report

12. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the report of the inquiry by Nicholas Blake QC into the investigations of the deaths of young soldiers at Deepcut to be published. [36107]

Mr. Ingram: Nicholas Blake's plan is to publish his report after the House returns in January. His report will be published in full, as will my response to it.

Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) Project

13. Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the landing ships dock (auxiliary) project. [36108]

Mr. Ingram: The Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) project continues to make progress towards the completion of the four Bay Class vessels. Mounts Bay, the first ship built by BAE Systems in Glasgow, has begun her final sea trials prior to the Ministry of Defence acceptance. Build and testing continues on the remaining three ships.

Friendly Forces (Identification)

14. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to improve identification in combat of friendly forces. [36109]

Mr. Ingram: Combat Identification is a vital element of combat effectiveness and we constantly seek to improve our capability which involves tactics and training as well as technology. Recent steps include fielding a Coalition Blue Force Tracking system for helicopters and the Bowman communications system. We also take account of operational experience, and for example are following up as a matter of priority the recommendations of the recently completed Board of Inquiry into the Challenger blue-on-blue incident in Operation Telic.

BAE Systems Puriton

15. Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of BAE Systems Puriton. [36110]

Mr. Ingram: I am aware that BAE Systems Land Systems have announced that their site at Puriton near Bridgwater is to be closed as part of the company's rationalisation plans. This is a commercial decision for the company and we are satisfied with the alternative arrangements they intend to put in place.

Arctic Emblem

16. Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the introduction of the Arctic emblem. [36111]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently met Commander Eddie Grenfell at his request to discuss the Arctic Emblem. Commander Grenfell had submitted a design of his own for consideration. We have since sent him a developed version of this design and I understand he is consulting his fellow veterans.

Once the design has been agreed, we can progress with the contract and manufacturing stages, after which the Emblem will be despatched to eligible veterans. We have already received a number of applications.

Iraq

17. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the security situation in Iraq. [36112]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he first asked Sir Ronnie Flanagan to investigate policing in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [36940]

John Reid: I asked Sir Ronnie Flanagan on 21 October, in his capacity as HM Chief Inspector of Constabulary, to conduct the review of policing in Iraq.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what remit has been given to Sir Ronnie Flanagan for his review of the Iraqi police force; when his report is due; and if he will make a statement. [36052]

John Reid [holding answer 8 December 2005]: We keep progress on Security Sector Reform under close review and as part of that process we have asked Sir Ronnie Flanagan to provide both his objective assessment of the UK's policing programme in Iraq, and recommendations as to how to increase the effectiveness and neutrality of the wider Iraqi Police Service. Sir Ronnie has not yet concluded his assessments but we expect that he will report early in the new year.

Relief Effort (British Armed Forces)

18. Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what role British armed forces are playing in aid and rebuilding efforts in countries affected by natural disasters. [36113]

John Reid: The United Kingdom armed forces provide humanitarian assistance in support of the Department for International Development. For example, we have provided significant and wide ranging assistance to the Pakistan earthquake relief effort, which has included: three heavy lift Chinook helicopters, a specialist 86-man light engineering team, a four-person mobile medical team, four logistics planners, three C-130 transport aircraft as part of the NATO air-bridge, and 24,000 vegetarian and halal ration packs.

Recruitment

20. James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if he will make a statement on recruitment trends for the UK armed forces. [36115]

Mr. Touhig: In the first six months of this financial year the armed forces gained 8,810 new recruits from civilian life. This represents 47 per cent. of the recruiting target and is comparable to the position at the same point last financial year.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on recruitment trends in the UK armed forces. [35348]

Mr. Touhig: In the first six months of this financial year the armed forces gained 8,810 new recruits from civilian life. This represents 47 per cent. of this year's recruiting target. This level of achievement is comparable to the position at the 6-month point in the last financial year.

Although armed forces recruitment is an area of concern, the level of interest and the number of applications has increased in recent months. It is now a matter of converting this interest into actual recruits. The Services continue to undertake numerous and varied initiatives, both at national and local level, aimed at increasing the level of recruitment.

A sustained Recruiting Training and Retention Plan is providing a coordinated focus on Royal Marine recruiting.

Infantry recruiting has now been highlighted as a main effort for the Army. In January 2006 an Infantry recruiting multi-media recruiting campaign is planned. The campaign is in the early days of development but will be designed to demonstrate the exciting and rewarding lifestyle and ethos of the Infantry.

Recruitment remains buoyant across all branches and trades within the RAF.

Commonwealth War Graves Commission

21. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if he will make a statement on the work of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. [36116]

Mr. Touhig: The Commonwealth War Graves Commission continues its important work worldwide in maintaining around one and three quarter million war graves and memorial commemorations to Commonwealth Service men and women who died in the two world wars.

War Memorials (Redevelopment)

22. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what plans he has to protect war memorials in buildings being redeveloped. [36117]

Mr. Touhig: Where a building is to be redeveloped, any war memorial is considered as part of the planning process.

We work closely with regimental associations and other interested parties to ensure that memorials in buildings being redeveloped are either incorporated within the refurbished building or moved to a suitable new location.

If the memorial is within a listed building, or is itself listed, the local authority must be approached for listed building consent prior to removal and appropriate re-siting.

Defence Export Service Organisation

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Defence Export Service Organisation maintains records in its (a) UK offices and (b) overseas offices of the occasions on which it has provided lists of agents to customers. [36844]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation occasionally receives requests for lists of agents. When received, such requests are treated in the same way as other routine requests for information, responses to which are not, in general, put on the record.

Investment Appraisals Board

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how decisions of the Investment Appraisals Board are (a) recorded and (b) implemented; and if he will make a statement. [36159]

Mr. Ingram: The Investment Approvals Board considers proposals for major investments in equipment, estates, support and business change projects and, where appropriate, makes recommendations to Ministers as to whether such investments should be approved. Recommendations take the form of submissions to Ministers or, for lower value projects, advice within their delegated powers to project owners to proceed or otherwise. There is no Investment Appraisals Board.

Landing Ships Dock Project

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) Project. [36099]

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) Project. [36104]

Mr. Ingram: The Landing Ships Dock (Auxiliary) project continues to make progress towards the completion of the four Bay Class vessels. Mounts Bay, the first ship built by BAE Systems in Glasgow, has begun her final sea trials prior to The Ministry of Defence acceptance. Build and testing continues on the remaining three ships.

Territorial Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army personnel qualified for their 10 years' continuous service medal in each of the past 10 years. [33578]

Mr. Touhig: The Volunteer Reserves Service Medal, instituted on 31 March 1999, is awarded for 10 years reckonable continuous service. The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Total
1999	1,375
2000	1,001
2001	917
2002	810
2003	593
2004	319
2005	46
Total	5,061

Relief Effort (Pakistan)

Mr. Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how the UK armed forces have assisted the relief effort in Pakistan. [36105]

Mr. Ingram: UK armed forces have provided significant and wide-ranging assistance to the Pakistan earthquake relief effort. This has included three heavy lift Chinook helicopters, a specialist 86-man light engineering team, a four-person mobile medical team, four logistics planners, three C-130 transport aircraft as part of the NATO air-bridge, and 24,000 vegetarian and halal ration packs.

White Phosphorus

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions white phosphorus weapons have been used by British forces during the invasion and occupation of Iraq; and at what level of command their use was authorised. [33282]

John Reid: British armed forces have used white phosphorus on Operation Telic in Iraq primarily as a smoke screen to provide cover and thus protection for our soldiers, or for target illumination. Its use in Iraq is a tactical decision authorised by commanders on the ground. Although white phosphorus does have a recognised anti-personnel effect, our armed forces go to great lengths to ensure that civilian and non-combatants are not harmed during operations; guidelines issued to British military personnel on its use emphasise that it should not be deployed as an anti-personnel weapon. Information on the number of occasions it has been used by British armed forces in Iraq is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much the Cabinet Office and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33200]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The following table details the projects and the amount the Cabinet Office has spent on the design and production of new logos, employing external public relations agencies and employing external graphic design agencies since 1 April 2004. The figures are exclusive of VAT.

The Cabinet Office does not hold central records for this activity before 1 April 2004 and to provide the information requested before that date would incur disproportionate costs.

IT Projects

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many IT projects have been developed for his Department since 2001; and whether he has agreed to make public the Gateway Reviews for these projects (a) in full and (b) in part. [23514]

Mr. Jim Murphy: According to available records, the number of information technology projects developed for my Department since 2001 is 120. The figure is based on IT projects developed or enhanced since April 2001 and includes corporate and business unit specific IT projects.

I have not agreed to make public either in full or in part, the Gateway Reviews for those IT projects which have gone through the Gateway Review process.

Nuclear Power (Birt Report)

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library a copy of the report produced by Lord Birt on nuclear power. [36588]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There is no such report.

PRIME MINISTER

Appointments

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Prime Minister when he will appoint a Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. [36242]

The Prime Minister: The appointment of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be announced in due course.

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister whether in his bilateral discussions with President Colonel Gadaffi he (a) sought and (b) obtained assurances that access to Libya and the region by Western television and radio services via satellite communication would not be impeded by Libyan authorities or official agencies; and if he will make a statement. [34919]

The Prime Minister: I have discussed a number of bilateral and international issues with Colonel Gadaffi. Internationally the Government continue to work to eliminate barriers to freedom of expression and information and to create an environment in which free speech and a free media flourish. The British ambassador in Tripoli has also raised the issue with the Libyan authorities at a senior level.

Citygate Public Affairs Ltd

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings his Office has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36754]

The Prime Minister: My Office does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers, meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Prime Minister how much the office and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33201]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) today.

Departmental Property

Mr. Weir: To ask the Prime Minister how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties. [36000]

Angus Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister how much his Office paid in rates in 2004–05. [36013]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Jim Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Review

Peter Law: To ask the Prime Minister what considerations underpinned his decision to launch the energy review at the Confederation of British Industry conference. [35805]

The Prime Minister: I made my speech at the Confederation of British Industry conference following the written ministerial statement made earlier that morning by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Alan Johnson), 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 12–13WS.

Extraordinary Renditions

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister when he was first informed that the United States was conducting international renditions of terrorist suspects; and what representations he has made to the US administration on such renditions. [36442]

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answers I gave the right hon. Member for Ross, Skye and Lochaber (Mr. Kennedy) at Prime Minister's Questions on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 862–63.

I also refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary (Jack Straw) today.

Guantanamo Bay

Peter Law: To ask the Prime Minister what reports he has received on the compliance with the Geneva human rights accords in respect of the United States detention camp at Guantanamo Bay. [35784]

The Prime Minister: The United States Government regard the detainees at Guantanamo Bay as "enemy combatants" under the Laws of War and not as Prisoners of War under the Geneva Convention.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick), at Prime Minister's Questions on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 867.

Invoice Payments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister on what occasions his office did not pay valid invoices (a) within 30 days and (b) after the agreed credit period within financial year 2004–05. [35971]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ethiopia

Tim Farron: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make representations to Meles Zenawi on the human rights situation in Ethiopia. [37141]

The Prime Minister: I, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) and my noble Friend the Foreign Office Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman) have raised concerns about the current situation in Ethiopia with Prime Minister Meles over recent months.

I have also asked Lord Triesman to reiterate my concerns to Prime Minister Meles when he visits Ethiopia later this month.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister (1) pursuant to his answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1661W, on ministerial travel, which aspects of travel on the London Underground are covered by the code; [36634]

(2) pursuant to his answers of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1661W and 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1038W, on ministerial travel, what account he takes of the guidance document Travel by Ministers in deciding whether to travel by underground on official business. [36635]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1661W and 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1038W.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Hoon) during the Business Statement on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1006.

Opinion Research/Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Prime Minister what the total value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (A) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (B) London. [36001]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Jim Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Terrorism

Grant Shapps: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 298, to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), and his answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1039W, on terrorism, if he will estimate the number of police officers required to analyse 750 gigabytes of data within a 90-day period. [37255]

The Prime Minister: As I set out in my answer to the hon. Member on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1038W, the decision on the number of police officers deployed to focus on a particular area of an investigation, such as analysing data, is the responsibility of the chief constable of the force concerned.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Olympic Games

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to enhance the skills base to enable people to participate in sustainable construction for the 2012 Olympic Games. [35835]

Phil Hope: ConstructionSkills, the Sector Skills Council responsible for recruiting and training the UK's construction work force, has announced a special team—Constructing London 2012—to deliver locally available construction skills to build the Olympic and Paralympic infrastructure operating as part of the Strategic Forum Olympic Task Group. Constructing London 2012 will work with partners to recruit and train local people ensuring that building the Olympic infrastructure provides sustainable skills and job opportunities for people resident in East London through a range of newly targeted initiatives.

In addition, the recently announced Construction National Skills Academy will have a significant impact on developing construction skills for the Olympic infrastructure and other London-based construction projects. One of its first on-site centres is expected to be launched in the Thames Gateway area during the last quarter of 2006.

A significant proportion of ConstructionSkills' 2006 "Inspire Scholarships" will be targeted on Olympic projects. These provide around £9,000 to support undergraduates on construction-related degree courses through university.

Academies

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new providers have expressed an interest in funding new academies; how much each such provider has indicated it may make available; which authorities each is interested in operating in; and if she will make a statement. [34708]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills has spoken to in excess of 230 organisations and individuals about sponsorship of academies. In general, academy sponsors are required to provide 10 per cent. of the capital costs of establishing an academy, up to a cap of £2 million. This can be from a single organisation or individual or a group of sponsors. It is not possible to state how much each potential sponsor has indicated it may make available. Discussions with potential sponsors may focus on the programme as a whole or on specific academies. As such it is not possible to state which authorities each is interested in operating in.

Adult Education

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1613W, on adult education, what percentage of colleges charged fees to adults for a first full level 2 course, in each year since 2001–02. [35825]

Bill Rammell: Reliable Information about the prior qualifications of learners, that would enable us to identify those who have paid tuition fees for a first full level 2 qualification, is not available at a college level for the years since 2001/02. Information is available about those studying for a full level two qualification and paying tuition fees but not whether such qualifications are a first level 2 qualification for the individual.

In a recent survey of learners[1] in FE a third of learners on a first full level 2 course said they paid fees.

[1] Prior Qualifications of Adult Learners in Further Education. DfES Research Report 677.

Agency Staff

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the costs of (a) temporary and agency staff and (b) consultants fall within (i) gross administration costs and (ii) staff costs as referred to on page 12 of the Resource Accounts 2004–05. [35613]

Maria Eagle: The treatment of such costs in the Department's Resource Accounts follows standard Government accounting conventions. The cost of temporary and agency staff fall within both gross administration costs and staff costs. The costs of consultants may be charged to either gross administration costs or programmes depending on the nature of the work on which they are engaged. Where consultants are charged to administration costs, they are treated outside staff costs.

Basic Skills Agency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 475W, on the Basic Skills Agency, if she will list the local authorities which are not members of a Quality Mark partnership. [36023]

Phil Hope: The local authorities which are not members of a Quality Mark partnership are:

Blackburn with Darwen
Camden
City of London
Cumbria
Hammersmith and Fulham
Haringey
Herefordshire
Isles of Scilly
Lewisham
Rutland Solihull
Stoke-on-Trent
Westminster
Windsor and Maidenhead
Wokingham

Behaviour and Attendance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list the schools included in the Primary National Strategy's Behaviour and Attendance Pilot; and how they were selected; [34024]

(2) if she will make a statement on the progress and findings of the Primary National Strategy's Behaviour and Attendance Pilot; [34026]

(3) what guidance her Department has produced for schools on Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning; and if she will make a statement. [34019]

Jacqui Smith: 25 local authorities were selected to take part in the Primary National Strategy Behaviour and Attendance pilot on the basis of social deprivation and geographic spread. Steering groups within each authority selected the schools to be involved. Participation was voluntary.

The pilot had four strands: curriculum materials to develop children's social, emotional and behavioural skills; different models of local authority support for schools where behaviour or attendance was a key issue; small group interventions for children needing extra help with social, emotional and behavioural skills; and behaviour and attendance audit and staff training materials. Different schools piloted different combinations of these strands.

Within the pilot 253 primary schools took part in the piloting of the Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning (SEAL) curriculum resource for at least a year. A list of these schools has been placed in the Library.

About 100 primary schools tested different models of local authority support. A similar number piloted small group interventions. All primary schools in the pilot authorities were encouraged to trial the audit and training materials.

The Primary Behaviour and Attendance pilot has been evaluated by London University's Institute of Education. Their report found evidence of positive impacts on behaviour and learning. We therefore decided to make enhanced versions of the SEAL and audit and training materials available to all primary schools.

The SEAL materials became available in June 2005. They provide a structured, whole-curriculum resource together with clear guidance for staff on how to use it. Using the SEAL resource is entirely voluntary, but there has been a high level of demand from schools. Over half of all primary schools have now ordered it.

Building Schools for the Future

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local authorities have received money under the Building Schools for Future programme; and how much each has received. [34354]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities will receive monies under the Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme after their particular projects achieve contract signature. None have reached this stage yet, but we anticipate the first contract signatures to take place in 2006. There are 17 authorities in pathfinder and wave 1 (2005–06) of BSF and for this approximately £2.2 billion has been allocated; there are 11 authorities in wave 2 and 11 in wave 3, and again approximately £2.2 billion has been allocated for each wave. It is not possible to be more specific as the allocations to individual authorities were indicative and would weaken the competitive tendering process. If a bidder (or bidders) knows the value of a project when it goes to market, i.e. an allocation of £75 million to build three schools, there is the possibility that they will all price their bid at around this mark, rather than a truly competitive price.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with other Government Departments concerning using the Building Schools For The Future funds for providing sports facilities. [36472]

Jacqui Smith: Building Schools For The Future (BSF) aims to renew all secondary schools in England in 15 waves of investment starting from this year. This can include new and refurbished sports facilities. Our aims include making high quality sports facilities in schools available to the wider community.

BSF was developed in consultation with a large number of other Government Departments. Its aims on sport have been discussed with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and with other bodies including Sport England. My colleague, Lord Adonis, has regular meetings with the Minister of State for Sport which include discussion of sports provision in schools through the programme.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will ring-fence funding for sport in the Building Schools for the Future budget. [36666]

Jacqui Smith: Building Schools for the Future (BSF) is a long-term strategic programme to renew and rebuild secondary schools in England and to bring about educational transformation over 15 waves of investment starting this year. It would restrict the successful delivery of new school facilities were we to ring-fence funding through BSF for sport, or indeed for any other aspect of a successful school. Existing provision for sports will vary from authority to authority and school to school.

BSF requires local authorities and schools to have the widest visions of what can be achieved across a group of schools. We set out clear expectations and guidance as to what our aims are in terms of the type of facilities that schools could provide. This includes an expectation that pupils will have access to 21st-century sports facilities, which can be shared with the local community. It is best that local authorities and schools then have the flexibility to achieve this in a way that is most appropriate for their local circumstances.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will ensure that the Building Schools for the Future budgets includes funds for Olympic sport facilities. [36667]

Jacqui Smith: Building Schools for the Future (BSF) funding is for investment in secondary school buildings in England. Facilities for the Olympic Games in 2012 are separately funded. BSF aims include new and refurbished sports facilities in schools, which will be available to the wider community.

Bullying

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to work with the police, education authorities and schools to combat bullying. [35510]

Jacqui Smith: We work with all three of the police, education and local authorities to combat bullying, both directly and through the DfES funded work of the Anti-Bullying Alliance (ABA). The Department works with particular groups of police on particular projects. For example, we have worked with Leicester city police on countering racist bullying and with Haringey police on countering homophobic bullying. The police have been involved in anti-bullying week.

The nine ABA regional co-ordinators work with statutory and voluntary organisations with an interest in tackling bullying, and in all regions this includes the police.

We have published guidance for local authorities and schools on specific aspects of tackling bullying. Through our conferences we have offered a platform to share good practice and learn from the most successful.

The ABA has established regional network partnerships of lead officers from 146 local authorities in the nine Government office regions. These promote best practice and develop innovative and practical approaches to tackle bullying at a strategic level.

Anti-bullying work has a high profile within the national strategies behaviour strands. There are secondary national strategy behaviour and attendance consultants in every LA working directly with schools to tackle a range of behaviour issues including bullying.

Careers/Connexions Services

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the running costs (a) were of the careers service in the last year of its operation and (b) have been of the Connexions service in each year since it was set up; and what assessment she has made of these costs. [36196]

Maria Eagle: I set out the annual budgets of the careers service and the Connexions service since 1994–95 in my answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1282W to the hon. Member. We do not hold separate information on the running costs of the careers service or Connexions service. However, we commissioned an independent study in 2003 which estimated that the total administrative costs (including such things as training, communications, transport for outreach work and ICT) of Connexions Partnerships as a percentage of total costs was 25 per cent.

Connexions does of course deliver more than a careers service. We have been consulting on proposals to embed its information, advice and guidance (IAG) and targeted support work more firmly in integrated services for young people.

Education (Southend-on-Sea)

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average A level point score per candidate was in Southend-on-Sea local authority for each year from 1997 to 2005. [34817]

Jacqui Smith: The A Level average point scores per 16 to 18-year-old candidate for Southend-on-Sea local authority can be found in the following table.

	APS per candidate
1997/98	17.2
1998/99	17.8
1999/2000	17.8
2000/01	17.7

Education Maintenance Allowance

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the relevant cohort in Doncaster North is eligible for an education maintenance allowance, broken down by ward. [35599]

Maria Eagle: It is not possible to accurately estimate what percentage of young people will be eligible for education maintenance allowance (EMA) at sub-national level. However, for the academic year 2005/06, we estimate that around 55 per cent. of young people in full-time education nationally will be eligible for EMA. Eligibility in Doncaster local education authority as a whole is likely to be higher than this.

Free School Meals

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils there were on (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special schools rolls in (i) England, (ii) London and (iii) each London borough in each of the last five years; and how many (A) took and (B) were eligible for free school meals in each case. [35421]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information has been placed in the House Libraries.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in Doncaster North constituency receive free school meals; and what the figures were in each year since 1997. [35679]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table.

[1] NAGTY Membership in Worcestershire

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children from each secondary school in Eddisbury have joined the National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth. [35611]

Jacqui Smith: This information is set out in the following table. Membership of the National Academy is available to pupils aged 11–19 in the top 5 per cent. nationally.

School name	Type of establishment	Total pupils	NAGTY members	Percentage of members

Grammar Schools

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils in (a) Kent and (b) Buckinghamshire attend (i) grammar schools and (ii) secondary schools which are not grammar schools. [35118]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is given in the table.

Maintained secondary schools and city technology colleges[1]: Full-time equivalent number and percentage of pupils by type of school[2] as at January 2005—Kent and Buckinghamshire local authority areas

Head Teachers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to reduce the burden of administration on head teachers. [35511]

Jacqui Smith: First we are determined that head teachers have the time and support to provide good leadership to manage their schools. That is why from the start of this school year every head teacher has a contractual entitlement to "dedicated headship time". Head teachers must have dedicated time to lead their schools, as well as manage them.

And with the right leadership much school management can be delegated effectively. Through our workforce remodelling agenda we are supporting schools in recruiting very many numbers of administrative and support staff to free school leaders to lead and teachers time to teach. This ensures the best use of resources to improve outcomes for children.

We are also establishing a new relationship with schools; this will strip away clutter and bureaucracy in schools. Key aspects include the introduction of an improved and streamlined data collection system, more user-friendly communications (ordering publications online when the schools require them rather than when DfES sends them out automatically) and fewer of them; and a Single Plan from which Ofsted and other bodies will draw on information about the school and its performance. This will make the planning process more coherent and less time-consuming.

We remain determined to make sure our policies have the maximum impact on standards with the minimum burden on head teachers. That is why we have announced in the recent Schools White Paper that the independent Implementation Review Unit, (IRU) will continue to serve until at least 2008. The IRU, which is a group of practising head teachers and senior staff in schools will therefore continue to scrutinise our policies and ensure that we understand the impact of our initiatives on schools and how best to introduce them from a schools perspective.

Higher Education

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) the cash cost and (b) the resource cost for income contingent loans for full-time higher education students was in England in 2003–04; and what the equivalent allocations are for (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–07 and (iii) 2007–08. [35187]

Bill Rammell: Student loans are budgeted and accounted for using resource costs: forecasts of future cash expenditure on student loans are used only to help cash management in the Department and across Government.

(a) The cash costs for income contingent loans for full-time higher education students are shown in table 1.

Cash cost/allocations of Maintenance and Fee Loans (England and Wales)

The figures are given for England and Wales because the cash implications of the devolution of student support to the National Assembly for Wales from Academic Year 2006/07 have yet to be completed.

(b) The resource costs for income contingent loans for full-time higher education students are shown in table 2.

[2] DfES DAR 2005, table 12.2, adjusted to take account of Wales Devolution (England only).
Note:
Table 2—Resource costs/allocations for income contingent loans for full-time higher education students.

Resource costs/allocations are shown for England and Wales prior to the devolution of student support to the National Assembly for Wales in financial year 2006–07, and for England only thereafter.

From financial year 2005–06 the student loans resource accounting and budgeting charge is reduced as a result of the change in the Treasury Discount Rate from 3.5 per cent. to 2.2 per cent. This affects comparison of resource costs between financial year 2004–05 and financial year 2005–06.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 598W, on the Learning and Skills Council, why the figure for the administration costs in 2004–05 differs from that provided in Learning and Skills Council Annual Report and Accounts 2003–04. [35824]

Bill Rammell: The apparent difference is presentational and the following table shows the separate components that made up the LSC Administration costs for the 2003–04 LSC Annual Accounts, and the answer of 9 November. The costs in both cases total the same. The difference is that the LSC Accounts show five categories under the Administration heading. The written reply of 9 November has combined three of these categories, Depreciation, Loss on Disposal, and Loss on Impairment categories into one.

	2003–04
	Admin costs LSC accounts	LSC admin costs written answer of 9 November 2005
Staff Costs	149,097	149,097
Other Costs	82,937	82,937
Depreciation	13,946	—
Loss on disposal of obsolete fixed assets	157	—
Loss on Impairment	2,996	—
Depreciation, impairment and losses	—	17,099
Total Administration costs	249,133	249,133

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 178W, on the Learning and Skills Council, what the reason is for the difference between the sum reported for expenditure on Local Intervention and Development in the answer and the total expenditure on Local Intervention and Development reported in the Learning and Skills Council Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05. [36581]

Bill Rammell: The figures in the following table are from the statutory accounts and are correct. The reason for the discrepancy with the figures quoted pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 178W on the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is that, for operational purposes, the LSC combine the Learner Participation and Local Intervention and Development Fund (LIDF) into one budget. The reporting of these budgets separately is purely for statutory reporting purposes and cannot be accurately disaggregated.

Financial year 2004–05	Statutory accounts	Answer 28 November 2005
Learning Participation	6,396.6	6,548.7
School Sixth Forms	1,654.8	1,654.8
Local Intervention and Development	278.0	125.9
Capital	372.3	372.3
Administration	233.2	232.9
AME	20.8	20.8
Total	8,955.7	8,955.4

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 178W on the Learning and Skills Council, what the reason is for the difference between the figures reported and the figures in the Learning and Skills Council Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05. [36582]

Bill Rammell [pursuant to the reply, 28 November 2005, Official Report, c. 178W]: On the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) I confirm that the figures in the following table from the LSC 2004–05 statutory accounts and are correct. The reason for the discrepancy with the figures quoted in the answer on 28 November is that for operational purposes the LSC combine the Learner Participation and Local Intervention and Development Fund (LIDF) into one budget and some £152.1 million appropriate to LIDF was included under Learning Participation. The disaggregation of these budgets is purely for statutory reporting.

Missing Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in local authority care were reported missing from care to the police in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by (a) local authority area, (b) age and (c) sex. [36475]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not collected centrally by the Department. Details of looked after children with at least one missing placement, in the years ending 31 March 1994–2004 may be found on the Department's website at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000569/index.shtml.

National Curriculum

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will amend the national curriculum in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools to include a section that informs students of the benefits of wearing seat belts; and if she will make a statement. [36189]

Jacqui Smith: There is sufficient scope within the non-statutory framework for personal social and health education for schools to explore road safety, including the wearing of seat belts. The Department has issued "Safety Education: Guidance for Schools" to support schools in developing effective approaches to teaching and learning in safety education.

Parental Rights

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether she plans to shift the legal presumption in legal disputes concerning parental rights towards providing a more equal balance between mothers and fathers; and if she will make a statement. [26999]

Maria Eagle: There is no statutory presumption concerning parental rights in the Children Act 1989. Instead, the Act requires the court to have the welfare of the child as its paramount consideration in determining any question relating to his or her upbringing. It is clear that, in general, the children of separating parents will benefit from ongoing meaningful relationships with both of their parents, so long as these are safe and in their best interests. However, we believe that the addition to the Children Act 1989 of a statutory presumption focused on parental rights would lead to a move away from the current clear focus on the needs of children and towards focusing on the wishes of parents. We consider such a move to be harmful to the interests of children.

Post-16 Education

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of teenagers in Doncaster North have stayed in education after reaching 16 years of age in each year since 1995. [35600]

Bill Rammell: The percentage of 16-year-olds in full-time education at the end of 2004 was estimated to be 73.3 per cent.—the highest ever rate. Percentage figures on participation in education by young people are not available for parliamentary constituencies, but are available for local authorities—including Doncaster LEA. These were published in the Statistical First Release "Participation in education and training by 16 and 17-year-olds in each local area in England"—SFR11/2005 published on 31 March 2005.

The publication is accessible on the DfES website via the link, http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000568/index.shtml

The specific figures are available through the following link: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000568/SFR11-2005tables_lea.xls

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the learning participation and school sixth forms categories of the grant letter equate to the adults and young people categories of the Learning and Skills Council annual report and accounts 2004–05. [36605]

Bill Rammell: I confirm that the learning participation and school sixth forms categories of the 2004–05 LSC grant letter do equate to the adults and young people categories in the LSC annual report and accounts 2004–05.

Prison Education

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2005, Official Report, column 946W, on prison education, what proportion of the £1.05 million for higher education and access to higher education courses for offenders in custody is expected to be spent on fees for external tutors attending prisons. [35737]

Phil Hope: On the basis of information up to June, the Open University have estimated that up to £140,000 may be spent on fees for external tutors during 2005.

School Buildings Repair

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the backlog of school buildings repair and maintenance work in Southend; and if she will make a statement. [34132]

Jacqui Smith: Based on data supplied to the Department by the Authority in 2003, schools in Southend have repair and maintenance requirements of £20 million. Costs have been updated to current costs.

In addition to backlog repair work, the figure covers work needed over a five year period from the dates of the assessments, including cyclical and scheduled maintenance.

Southend and its schools have been allocated nearly £26 million of capital support over the next three years (2005–08).

School Improvement Partners

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) pay levels and (b) gender balance will be of school improvement partners who (i) are also serving head teachers and (ii) are not head teachers but are drawn from the complement of local authority educational advisory and related staff. [35145]

Jacqui Smith: Pay levels are not determined centrally, because school improvement partners work under contract to the maintaining authorities of the schools with which they work. In each case it is for the authority to negotiate the pay level, either with the school improvement partner or with the school improvement partner's employer. We have no plans to set up central records of pay levels.

The gender balance of the school improvement partners is not determined in advance. At present there are school improvement partners for about one fifth of the secondary schools in England. The numbers, broken down by gender, are given in the following table.

	Women	Men
Serving head teachers	28	57
Local authority educational advisory staff	39	39
Independent consultants	6	7
Total	73	103

Among those who are not head teachers, there is no gender imbalance. Among the head teachers, the proportions of men and women match closely the proportions among secondary head teachers as a whole:

	Women	Men
Percentage of secondary head teachers (2003)	32.5	67.5
Percentage of secondary head teacher school improvement partners	32.9	67.1

School Nursing

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school nurses there were in England in each of the past 10 years. [24431]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

School nurses were counted fully for the first time in the September 2004 national health service work force census, which showed that there were 2,409 qualified nurses working as school nurses. The next count will be available from the September 2005 census.

Schools (Haringey)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Hornsey and Wood Green are expected to run a deficit in the 2005–06 financial year; what the reasons given for a forecast deficit are in each case; and if she will make a statement. [36758]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is due to collect the section 52 outturn data relating to the 2005–06 financial year from October 2006.

Secondary Schools (Ethnic Composition)

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the ethnic composition is of the pupil population at each secondary school in the (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Greater Manchester Metropolitan area. [34709]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

Sector Skills Bodies

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills why the Learning and Skills Council received more grant-in-aid in 2004–05 from her Department than initially set out in the grant letter for that period. [36580]

Bill Rammell: Following the issue of the grant letter for 2004–05 we identified the need for additional resources to enable the LSC to deliver what the Department required. The key components of this additional resource were for local infrastructure and development, school sixth forms, learner participation, education maintenance allowance and a technical increase in the administrative budget to cover depreciation and cost of capital (previously carried on the Department's accounts). This increased the LSC's overall funding form the grant letter budget of £8,674 million to a total expenditure of £8,955 million.

Student Loans

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people normally resident in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland in the last six years applied for a student loan through the Student Loans Company. [36210]

Bill Rammell: The number of students domiciled in England, and Wales receiving a student loan from the Student Loan Company in academic years 2000/01 to 2005/06 (provisional as at 23 November 2005) is given in the table.

Domicile of student

Thousand

	England	Wales
2000/01	605	38
2001/02	646	41
2002/03	670	42
2003/04	683	43
2004/05	692	42
2005/06 (provisional)	691	42

Data include loans taken out for both mortgage style loans and student support scheme loans but exclude fixed rate part-time loans as equivalent data are not available.

The numbers of loan applications which the question asks for are not available for mortgage style loans, therefore, the number of full-time loans taken out has been provided for both loan types included in the table; applications for loans will be marginally higher than loans taken out

Data relating to students domiciled in Scotland are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive and have not been included with the answer.

Student Violence

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the frequency of violent acts committed by students in (a) England and (b) London; [23554]

(2) what estimate she has made of the percentage of violent acts committed by students (a) previously disciplined for violent acts or other disciplinary infractions and (b) who have no previous disciplinary record in 2004–05. [23556]

Bill Rammell: Information on violent acts committed by Further and Higher Education students is not collected centrally.

Sure Start

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what total public expenditure has been on Sure Start in the period 1999 to 2005; and how much the national evaluation of Sure Start has cost to date. [36325]

Beverley Hughes: Details of annual expenditure since 1999 on Sure Start, child care and nursery education are published in Table 12.2 of the Department for Education and Skills' Departmental Report (Cm 6522), as follows. To reflect the increasing integration of services for young children and families, from 2003–04 funding for child care and nursery education was merged into Sure Start.

Financial year	Sure Start	Child care	Nursery education	Total
1999–2000	7	56	150	213
2000–01	56	65	247	368

2002–03	216	158	306	680
2003–04		721		721
2004–05[1]		927		927

[1] Outturn in DfES Resource Accounts 2004–05 (HC 686)

A comprehensive national level evaluation of Sure Start local programmes (SSLPs) is examining the implementation, cost-effectiveness and impact of Sure Start for children, families and communities. It also provides support to SSLPs on their local evaluations. The National Evaluation runs from 2001 to 2008 and will cost £20.3 million in total.

Teachers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 192W, on teachers, what assessment she has made of the reasons for some schools not yet successfully introducing planning, preparation and assessment time. [36206]

Jacqui Smith: We have now validated the successful implementation of planning, preparation and assessment (PPA) time in 95 per cent. of all schools in England. However, we are aware of only three schools that are not yet fully compliant. Each case identified has been very different and colleagues from the National Remodelling Team—and its network of regional and local advisers—have worked and continue to work with individual schools to find workable, practicable and sustainable solutions to particular difficulties or issues they may have encountered.

This support has been supplemented by advice and guidance from our social partners on the Workforce Agreement Monitoring Group.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers on extended sick leave are within (a) six months, (b) one year, (c) eighteen months and (d) two years of the official retirement age. [36949]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not held centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-related Crime

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made by the British Transport police for (a) selling alcohol or attempting to sell alcohol to a person who is drunk, (b) selling alcohol or attempting to sell alcohol to an individual under 18 years, (c) being drunk and disorderly, (d) being drunk and incapable and (e) violence against the person, broken down by British Transport police area in each year for which figures are available. [31170]

Derek Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

The number of arrests for being drunk and disorderly, being drunk and incapable, and for violence against the person is given in the following table. The information requested in parts (a) and (b) can be provided by the British Transport police only at disproportionate cost. There is no offence of drunk and disorderly behaviour in Scotland.

[1] It should be noted that changes in the National Crime Recording Standards (NCRS) in 2002 led to a rise in the number of crimes recorded.

Asylum/Immigration

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 14 July 2005, Official Report, column 1215W, on asylum seekers, what recent reassessment he has made of this policy. [35323]

Mr. McNulty: The situation is unchanged. Asylum seekers who make their application for asylum in Northern Ireland may receive support, including accommodation, there. However Northern Ireland is not currently a dispersal area.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many calls made to the hotline for hon. Members at the immigration and nationality directorate were made by each hon. Member in each year since 2001. [35586]

Mr. McNulty: The number of calls made to the immigration and nationality directorate's (IND) MPs' hotline are as follows:

	Number
2002	23,712
2003	26,952
2004	31,393
2005 (to 30 November)	31,546

Border Management Programme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to evaluate the effectiveness of the border management programme. [34729]

Mr. McNulty: The White Paper "One Step Ahead—A 21st Century Strategy to Defeat Organised Crime" tasked HM Revenue and Customs, IND and the police to work together to develop options for providing more effective border controls through enhanced inter-agency co-operation.

The border management programme is intended to develop this capacity for more effective working between the agencies in order to maximise border security whilst minimising the impact on legitimate traffic. The programme commenced a number of trials in early 2005 to test various aspects of shared working at the border.

Emerging findings are being considered and plans for further development of the programme and implementation are currently being established. These will include arrangements for further review, and ongoing monitoring and evaluation processes.

Chronic Back Pain

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34972]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office with its Executive agencies has put in place a number of initiatives and arrangements to help civil servants with chronic back pain and promote employee health and wellbeing more generally. These initiatives include fast-track access to assessment and treatment for those with back pain and other musculoskeletal disorders, workstation assessments to ensure correct posture, and manual handling training to reduce the risk of back injury.

Correspondence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green of 5 July, 19 July and 5 October 2005, regarding a constituent Mr. Rastgouy; what the average response time to hon. Members' inquiries to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate is; and if he will make a statement. [28844]

Mr. McNulty: The Director-General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) wrote on 21 November 2005. The average time taken in 2004–05 to answer Members' letters on IND-related matters was 32 days.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 10 August from the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham about Mr. and Mrs. Bloxham of Sompting, West Sussex. [34197]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 2 December 2005]: I replied to the hon. Member on 6 December 2005.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters of 9 September and 9 November 2005 from the hon. Member for Richmond Park concerning Mr. John Maurice Mubita, reference: M1203172. [35623]

Mr. McNulty: I replied to the hon. Member on 30 November 2005.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister of State for Immigration will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green of 28 September 2005 on behalf of Mr. Fredjan Prenga (Home Office ref: P1044999/correspondence reference PREN004/CJB). [36399]

Mr. McNulty: The Director-General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the hon. Member's letter of 28 September 2005 to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate on 27 October. I wrote to the hon. Member in reply to her letter to me of 2 November on 6 December.

Custodial Sentences (Southend)

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) minors and (b) adults normally resident in Southend are serving custodial sentences. [34140]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not recorded centrally on the home address of prisoners in England and Wales. Information is, however, held on the court that a prisoner is committed to or sentenced at.

On 31 October 2005 there were 1,006 sentenced prisoners held in prison establishments in England and Wales who were sentenced at courts in Essex, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system. 880 of these were adults and 126 were young adults or juveniles (i.e. aged between 15 and 20).

Custody Leavers (Judicial Review)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many judicial reviews have been carried out in the last three years of local authority decisions about the care of young people coming out of custody. [35058]

Fiona Mactaggart: The requested information in not held centrally.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35944]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally and could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35989]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally and could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Deportation

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals residing in Scotland have been (a) issued with deportation orders and (b) subject to forced returns to Iraq in each month since May 2003; and if he will make a statement. [34737]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not currently hold or record this specific data required and is unable to collate data by areas within the United Kingdom to the level of detail requested to give an accurate response to this request.

Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration cases there have been involving alleged domestic violence in a foreign country in the past three years. [35065]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

There are no statistics kept on entry clearance applications made overseas by individuals who might have been involved in domestic violence.

Although it is possible that some individuals seeking entry clearance for the UK may be victims of domestic violence, there is no provision under the immigration rules for entry to the UK on these grounds. There is therefore no requirement or incentive for an applicant seeking entry clearance at any of our visa issuing missions overseas to declare that they have been subject to domestic violence, as their applications will be considered on other grounds.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made under the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [21977]

Fiona Mactaggart: The measures within the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 are being introduced gradually and as resources become available. The new powers of arrest, which the Act creates under section 10(1) have not been implemented in England and Wales, so data on the number of arrests for domestic violence related incidents under these powers are not available. However, once the new powers of arrest are implemented data will be routinely collected.

Currently, as part of the Police Performance Assessment Framework, all police forces are required to collect data on the percentage of arrests for domestic violence where a power of arrest already exists. Additionally, from April 2005 we have introduced a Key Diagnostic Indicator, which will compare these figures against the Crown Prosecution Service figures for the number of prosecutions related to domestic violence. An analysis of the figures will be available on a quarterly basis from each Local Criminal Justice Board area.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Milton Keynes are electronically tagged on early release from prison. [20829]

Fiona Mactaggart: As of 13 October, the number of prisoners released on the Home Detention Curfew scheme (HOC) from HMP Woodhill was 12. The area in which electronically tagged prisoners reside upon release is not recorded centrally.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Freedom of Information applications his Department has received; how many have taken more than 20 days to process; and how many of these gave rise to complaints about the time taken. [31218]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Freedom of Information Act came into effect on 1 January 2005. Between January and June 2005 the Home Office received 1,047 Freedom of Information requests. Of these requests 486 (46 per cent.) were replied to within deadlines permitted within the Act, 358 (34 per cent.) being within the 20 working day period. It took longer than 20 working days to process 561 (54 per cent.) of requests for information. The Department is aware of 11 internal review requests solely in relation to the time taken to respond to requests.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) is committed to publishing quarterly updates in relation to departmental performance under Freedom of Information, including information on both the volume and outcomes of requests. The bulletin for the second quarter was published on 30 September 2005 and can be found on the DCA website at http://for.gov.uk/statsapr-jun05.htm and in the Library. The next bulletin will be published before Christmas, while an annual report will be published in early 2006.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners released on the Home Detention Curfew Scheme in each year between 1999–2000 and 2004–05 had re-offended as at 31 August 2005; and how many offences such prisoners committed in each year. [30404]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information as to re-offending while subject to Home Detention Curfew (HDC) is set out in the following table. Statistics as to re-offending by prisoners released on HDC once they have left the scheme are not available.

	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005[1]	Total
Number released on HDC	14,760	15,515	13,649	20,457	21,197	19,311	11,598	116,487
Number of offenders who committed an offence while subject to HDC	319	231	218	394	1,196	1,349	348	4,055

Number of offences committed by those offenders	648	372	408	699	2,138	2,269	537	7,071

[1] To 31 August 2005.

Independent Monitoring Boards

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many current independent monitoring board members have served (a) less than one year, (b) between one and three years and (c) more than three years; and if he will make a statement. [16381]

Fiona Mactaggart: On 3 October 2005, 274 current Independent Monitoring Board members had served less than one year; 509 members had served between one and three years; and 1,023 members had served more than three years.

Judicial Proceedings (Rights)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards his Department's target of increasing year on year the satisfaction of victims and witnesses while respecting the rights of defendants. [26697]

Fiona Mactaggart: Performance against my Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available in the Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

Life Prisoners

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conditions need to be met by a life prisoner to enable him or her to be considered for parole. [34499]

Fiona Mactaggart: The question of a lifer sentence prisoner's suitability for release cannot be considered until the prisoner has served the minimum period of imprisonment considered necessary for the purposes of retribution and deterrence (the tariff period). Exceptionally, the Secretary of State may release a life sentence prisoner prior to tariff expiry where he is satisfied that exceptional circumstances exist to justify such action on compassionate grounds. All life sentence prisoners are entitled to have their suitability for release considered by the independent Parole Board on, or shortly before, the expiry of their tariff. They will then be entitled to further reviews of their detention at no more than two yearly intervals thereafter.

There is no other specific condition imposed on a life sentence prisoner in relation to his or her consideration for release. Once the tariff has been served, the general issue governing release is the level of risk of serious harm that the prisoner may pose to others. The responsibility for assessing such risk and for directing the release of a tariff expired life sentence prisoner is now a matter for the Parole Board. The board is required by statute to satisfy itself that "it is no longer necessary for the protection of the public that the prisoner should be confined", and to direct release when it is so satisfied.

The Parole Board will take relevant factors into account when making its assessments of risk in individual cases. The various key factors are set out in Directions given by the Secretary of State under section 32 (6) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. Copies of the latest Directions are available from the Library.

Murder Statistics

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women have been (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted and given a custodial sentence for (A) killing and (B) murdering a child under 16 years in each of the past 20 years. [35278]

Fiona Mactaggart: It is not possible to identify those people prosecuted and convicted of killing and murdering a child under the age of 16 as the data collect on the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform does not have details as to age of the victim.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the business case for the National Offender Management Service. [19224]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 18 October 2005]: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) Strategic Business Case was published on the NOMS website www.noms.homeoffice.gov.uk on 20 October.

Offenders

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how frequently he met his colleagues from other Departments to discuss the (a) education and training, (b) work prospects and (c) healthcare of offenders in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [34322]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since his appointment, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has had a programme of regular bilateral meetings with his colleagues in other Departments to discuss cross cutting issues including those impacting on offenders. In the last 11 months, the Home Secretary met bilaterally with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Ruth Kelly) on one occasion: my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Hutton) on three occasions and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health (Ms Hewitt) on one occasion. These meetings are supplemented by regular and detailed discussions with Junior Ministers. The Government are committed to reducing re-offending by tackling accommodation, education and health issues that affect offenders as set out in the National Reducing Re-Offending Delivery Plan launched on 22 November.

Prison Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money the Prison Service has paid out in (a) out-of-court settlements and (b) other compensation for complaints of assault brought by inmates against staff in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [16362]

Fiona Mactaggart: During the financial year 2004–05, the Prison Service paid £69,083 in out-of-court settlements to prisoners following alleged assaults by staff. This figure excludes payments to prisoners alleging mistreatment at Wormwood Scrubs during the 1990s.

Statistics available centrally indicate that no other form of compensation was given to prisoners in response to complaints of assault by staff during the same period. Figures for previous financial years could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Prisons

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Essex are electronically tagged on early release from prison. [19056]

Fiona Mactaggart: As of 13 October, the number of prisoners released on the Home Detention Curfew scheme (HDC) from Her Majesty's Prison Bullwood Hall and Her Majesty's Prison Chelmsford was 17.

The area in which electronically tagged prisoners reside upon release is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask Jamie Oliver to assess prison food and suggest ways of improving it. [20500]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Audit Office (NAO) is currently undertaking a study of catering and physical exercise within prisons. Part of the study includes research by Professor John Edwards into the nutritional qualities of meals for prisoners. The Prison Service always welcomes suggestions on improving catering and is currently waiting on the NAO report to see what action may be needed.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average cost per (a) breakfast, (b) lunch and (c) dinner is in prisons. [20501]

Fiona Mactaggart: The average public sector Prison Service daily food cost per prisoner for 2004–05 was £1.85. The average cost per meal per prisoner is based on the understanding that breakfast, lunch and dinner account for approximately 20 per cent., 40 per cent. and 40 per cent. respectively of the daily food cost. Using these figures the average cost per meal per prisoner was: breakfast 37.5p; lunch 73.8p; and, dinner 73.8p. But these percentages may vary from one establishment to another dependant on a variety of issues including seasonal choices of product and the local regime.

Daily food costs per prisoner are based on average national figures as individual governors of prisons have had the authority to set their own catering budgets since 1994. Prisons are required to meet the minimum nutritional standards as laid down in Prison Service Order 5000 (Catering Manual) but there is no set financial formula that prisons are required to follow on the cost of each meal.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to prison governors in respect of the dietary requirements of diabetic inmates; and if he will make a statement. [20874]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 1 November 2005]: The Prison Service Catering Manual provides general food policy guidance to all prisons. The manual, Prison Service Order 5000, provides full guidance on hygiene and food safety, nutritional requirements and diets for special groups. Prisons and their national health service (NHS) partners are implementing the National Service Framework (NSF) for diabetes. In line with the NSF, improvements in the treatment of diabetics in prison include: better identification on reception into prison; assuring an appropriate diet; the establishment of specialist diabetes clinics in prison; closer links with NHS diabetes services; the introduction of retinopathy screening and practice-based registers as well as improved continuity of treatment on transfer or release.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to minimise the effect of passive smoking on prison (a) employees and (b) inmates; what guidance he has issued to prison governors in respect of his policy on the sharing of cells between smoking and non-smoking inmates; and if he will make a statement. [20876]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 1 November 2005]: Each prison develops its own "no smoking" policy in line with current health and safety advice and taking into account the type of establishment it is, its population and the special needs of that population. Such local arrangements also require staff to be protected from the effects of passive smoking. Wherever possible prisoners should not be required to share accommodation with a smoker if they so request.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many girls under the age of 18 years there are in adult prisons in England and Wales. [29913]

Fiona Mactaggart: On 30 September 2005, there were 80 females under the age of 18 in prison establishments in England and Wales as recorded on the Prison Service IT system. These were all aged 17 and were located in separate juvenile units attached to female establishments that hold young adult or adult women, or in designated juvenile accommodation on young adult wings within such establishments. Females under the age of 17 who are committed to custody are not normally placed in prison or YOI accommodation but in secure children's homes or secure training centres.

Probation Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many trained probation officers there were in each probation area in each of the last five years. [23831]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to 1 April 2003 is unreliable, and is not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented in the table show full-time equivalent (FTE) figures at the close of each quarter from 1 April 2003 to 30 June 2005.

In addition, the information required to breakdown the number of Probation Officers in post by Area in Quarter 1 2003–04 is no longer held. As a result, only the total figure has been provided for this period.

Re-offending

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent re-offending rates are of (a) minors and (b) adults from Southend. [34025]

Fiona Mactaggart: Re-offending rates are not currently available on a regional basis.

Secure Training Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children in secure training centres have been referred under the Children Act 2004 to local social services departments for reasons of child protection in each of the last three years. [35060]

Fiona Mactaggart: References are made under the Children Act 1989. Each secure training centre has a protocol, agreed with the local authority, which governs referrals. The protocol is ratified by the local Area Child Protection Committee. Where a young person (or any other person) makes a complaint which raises child protection issues, it is passed to the local authority social services department for its consideration. It is for the social services department to decide whether an investigation is warranted under section 47 of the Children Act 1989. The following table lists the number of referrals made by each centre over the last three years.

Travellers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many travellers have been convicted for not paying tax on their motor vehicles in each of the last eight years; [33867]

(2) how many travellers were convicted of criminal offences in the last five years, broken down by crime. [33868]

Fiona Mactaggart: It is not possible to provide the information requested, as travellers cannot be identified on the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform.

Voter Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the population is registered to vote in each constituency in the United Kingdom (a) ranked in descending order and (b) broken down by region and ranked in descending order. [36887]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 12 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the percentage of the population who are registered to vote in each Parliamentary Constituency. I am replying in her absence. (36887)

I am placing in the House of Commons Library tables showing the requested information.

Population data by Parliamentary Constituency are not available on an annual basis, consequently the tables have been prepared from 2001 Census data. Constituencies in Scotland, therefore, are those that were in place prior to the last election.

In order to give an estimate of the number of electors on Census day (29 April 2001), a weighted average is taken of the 1 February 2001 and 1 December 2001 electoral data. Data are given for Parliamentary electorate. Data for the local/European electorate, by Parliamentary Constituency are not readily available for 2001.

For the purposes of answering this question, we have assumed that you are interested in the percentage of the population aged 18 and over who are registered to vote. However it should be noted that the percentage of residents who are registered to vote in each Constituency is not a reliable estimate of the registration rate of the eligible population: the resident population aged 18 and over is not the same as the number of people eligible to vote.

The UK Parliamentary electorate excludes residents of countries other than the UK and the Commonwealth and includes UK citizens resident abroad. In addition not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth. prisoners, etc, are not eligible) and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place. Also there is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. This latter is the main reason why in some Constituencies the population aged 18 and over is less than those registered to vote. These factors may have a different impact from place to place.

Furthermore, you should note that the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has revised the mid-2001 population estimates since the publication of the 2001 Census results. In September 2003, revisions were made that added approximately 193,000 to the population of England and Wales. This revision primarily related to the addition of a number of young males that were not captured by the Census. In September 2004, ONS made further revisions as a result of concluding studies designed to improve population estimates in the areas that proved hardest to count in the 2001 Census in England and Wales. The results of this work showed that the Census worked well in most areas, but that there were a few cases where it was not able sufficiently to adjust for exceptional circumstances. The analysis showed that there was a need for revisions to the 2001 Census based population estimates of around 107,000 for England and Wales as a whole. The adjustments were included in the new mid-year population estimates for 2001, published in 2004. The census database itself was not revised following the publication of these adjustments. More details on these issues can be found at: www.statistics.gov.uk/lastudies

Any comparison of these data with figures for other years should be made carefully as electoral legislation and other changes (such as EU expansion) can change the size of the electorate.

Vulnerable Witnesses

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vulnerable witnesses used intermediaries provided for in the special measures for vulnerable witnesses under the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 in each of the pilot schemes; and if he will make a statement. [29342]

Fiona Mactaggart: Examination of a witness through an intermediary under section 29 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 is currently available in six pathfinder areas: Merseyside; West Midlands; Thames Valley; South Wales; Norfolk; and Devon and Cornwall. Evaluation of the pathfinders will be completed by the end of March 2006 after which plans will be made for further roll out of the scheme in England and Wales.

The latest available information about the number of times that intermediaries have been used is given in the attached table.

We have issued recently information packs entitled 'What's my story?' and 'Intermediaries: Giving a voice to vulnerable witnesses' copies of which have been placed in the Library. These materials are being used to promote awareness and understanding of the intermediary scheme in the pathfinder areas.

Area	Intermediary scheme start date	Number of witnesses assisted by an intermediary as at 15 November 2005[1]
Merseyside	23 February 2004	11
West Midlands	13 September 2004 (Wolverhampton area) 1 November 2004 (all courts in West Midlands)	20
Thames Valley	2 October 2004	51
South Wale[2]	1 February 2005	2
Norfolk	1 February 2005	5
Devon and Cornwall[3]	20 June 2005	9
Total		98

[1] Data refer to the number of witnesses for whom the Office for Criminal Justice Reform has provided a registered intermediary where the intermediary has, or is expected to, carried out a communication needs analysis relating to the witness or has assisted them to understand questions or to make their answers understood during a criminal investigation or trial. Data refer only to pathfinder areas where notification of availability of the intermediary special measure has been made in accordance with section 18(2) of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

[2] In South Wales trials are restricted to Cardiff Crown Court, Cardiff Magistrates' Courts, The Vale of Glamorgan Magistrates' Courts, Newcastle and Ogmore Magistrates' Courts, Miskin Magistrates' Courts.

[3] In Devon and Cornwall trials are restricted to Plymouth Crown Court and Plymouth Magistrates' Court.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders have been intensively supervised in the community in each year since 1997. [35431]

Fiona Mactaggart: The numbers of young offenders who have been intensively supervised under the Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme in each financial year since its introduction in July 2001 are shown in the following table.

Financial Year	Number
July 2001 to March 2002	876
April 2002 to March 2003	3,342
April 2003 to March 2004	4,705
April 2004 to March 2005	4,960
March 2005 to September 2005	2,760
Total	16,643

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Barker Review (Government Response)

Martin Horwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) calculations and (b) data sets his Department used for the (i) price and (ii) supply elasticity of housing in working out a response to the Barker Review of Housing Supply. [33693]

Yvette Cooper: The Government published as part of the response to the Barker Review a major study on the relationship between housing supply and affordability. This underpins the Government's response to the Barker Review.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

As part of the project, a nine-region model was developed to examine the relationship between housing supply and affordability (specified as the ratio of lower quartile house prices to lower quartile earnings). The model consists of three interrelated modules: demographic module, housing module and a labour market module.

This model is a step forward from previous analysis, including the Barker Review. For the first time we are able to model nationally and regionally the relationship between housing supply and affordability. Previous analyses looked only at prices at national level and were not able to take into account the interactions between the demographics and housing and labour markets.

The report and its technical annex give details of all the key relationships and elasticities. The report is available at www.odpm.gov.uk.

Designated Growth Areas

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1688–89W, on designated growth areas (1) what plans his Department has to make available to local authorities information regarding infrastructure costs in designated growth areas; [31847]

(2) what assessment he has made of (a) the adequacy of existing infrastructure in designated growth areas and (b) whether the infrastructure is sufficient to support planned growth; and if he will make a statement; [31852]

(3) what (a) assessment will be made of infrastructure requirements and (b) infrastructure will be put in place in designated growth areas before planned development begins; [31853]

(4) what assessment (a) has been made and (b) is planned to be made of (i) the age profile of those expected to move into designated growth areas and (ii) the effect of that profile on the (A) infrastructure and (B) housing needs of those areas. [31854]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have stated on a number of occasions that building sustainable communities means more than building new houses and that additional infrastructure and services will be required in support of a growing population as well as the existing population.

Infrastructure results vary widely from one area to another and from one development to another, and so it is not possible to apply a general formula to growth plans. In order to underpin the plans for the growth areas, studies were commissioned on the growth areas (e.g. the 2002 Milton Keynes and South Midlands study undertaken by Roger Tym and Partners) and on individual locations within the growth areas (e.g. the 2003 Milton Keynes and Aylesbury Growth Area studies, also prepared by Roger Tym and Partners). These studies have included information on infrastructure requirements and costing and have been made public in order to inform the regional planning documents relevant to the growth areas (e.g. the Milton Keynes South Midlands Sub-Regional Strategy). The sub-regional strategies are now being taken forward at local level and local partners are doing their own work to prioritise and cost the infrastructure associated with growth. The Government are not planning to commission additional studies to estimate infrastructure requirements and costs for each of the growth areas.

Both housing development and infrastructure investment are on-going activities. The allocation of individual houses and expenditures on infrastructure to "growth" and "background levels" is not a practical option. Nor is it practical or desirable to halt all development until all of the investment contemplated in support of that development is in place. Indeed, infrastructure requirements will change over time, reflecting, for example, the detailed geography of housing and jobs, as well as changes in technology, consumer preferences and service provision. Rather, infrastructure needs to be put in place on a timely basis to support growth in a locality and needs to be planned for on a dynamic basis. We look to local partners, in particular the local delivery vehicles, to construct their business plans accordingly and to work with regional and national bodies in prioritising funding towards timely provision of infrastructure.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has produced variant population projections for the four growth areas. These were done at local authority level and projected forward population projections based on current population trends and likely additional housing due to the area being a growth area. The assumed additional population was based on past trends regarding births, deaths, household formation rates and migration.

Government looks to regional and local partners to plan dynamically for changing demographics. For example, the Learning and Skills Councils in the Milton Keynes South Midlands sub-region have collaborated on a study on the long-term learning and skills needs of the area. This study embraces a variety of demographic scenarios and recognises the need to take a strategic approach to planning infrastructure which is adaptable to a range of scenarios.

Fire Services

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list occasions since 1975 when fire and rescue authorities have been unable to cope with (a) a major fire or rescue incident and (b) civil disturbance; and which Fire and Rescue Authority fire control room was involved in each case. [36056]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many call outs each retained fire service in North Nottinghamshire has had in each of the last five years. [36231]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times out-of-county fire appliances have been called to emergencies in Nottinghamshire due to Nottinghamshire services being already engaged in each of the last 10 years. [36232]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost will be of removing the Wiltshire Fire Services Control Room from the joint services control room at Devizes when the Regional Control Room in Taunton has been completed. [35683]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Specific figures are not yet available for moving individual fire control rooms, as the FiReControl business case only exists at national level. The one-off gross cost of implementing networked regional control centres in England is forecast to be £160 million.

For Wiltshire Fire and Rescue Authority there may be a financial penalty associated with withdrawing from the tri-service arrangements at Devizes. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is in discussion with the authority about meeting such costs under the "new burdens" rules.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many IT and communication systems are used by the South West Fire Services; how he will unify them; and how much this will cost. [35684]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold central information on all the IT and communication systems used by the South West fire and rescue services. There are no plans to unify them all, though the services will have a common radio system under Firelink, and share a regional control centre under FiReControl.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the budgets are for setting up the regional fire control centres located at (a) Belmont Business Park, Durham, (b) Lingley Mere Business Park, Warrington, (c) Cambridge Research Park, (d) Willow Farm Business Park, Castle Donnington, (e) Wolverhampton Business Park, (f) Paragon Business Park, Wakefield, (g) Blackbrook Business Park, Taunton and (h) Kite's Croft, Fareham; and if he will make a statement. [34587]

Jim Fitzpatrick: FiReControl is a national project. There are no separate budgets for each regional control centre. For information on the one-off costs of delivering FiReControl, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for North Thanet (Mr. Gale) on 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 358W.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many cases were recorded of attacks on firemen while working on emergencies in each year since 2003–04; how many have been recorded in 2005–06; how many prosecutions were pursued; and what sentences were imposed on those found guilty in each case in which all proceedings are complete. [35862]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information is as follows:

(a) The office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) has been maintaining records of attacks on firefighters since April 2004. Prior to that date their was no requirement for the fire and rescue service to report attacks on firefighters.

Since April 2004 there has been in place a procedure for attacks on firefighters to be notified to the ODPM using the Fires and Incidents of Special Interest (FOSI) reporting procedures as detailed in Dear Chief Fire Officer (DCOL) letter 3/2004 issued 1 April 2004. This procedure was updated by the issue of Fire and Rescue Service Circular 5/2005 issued on 15 February 2005.

(b) ODPM to date has no available information on the numbers of prosecutions pursued and what sentences were, if any, imposed on those found guilty.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) part-time and (b) full-time firefighters serviced (i) Suffolk and (ii) Bury St. Edmunds constituency in each year since 1997. [35464]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of firefighters employed by Suffolk fire and rescue service between 1997 and 2005 is set out as follows:

Number

Date[1]	Retained duty system firefighters	Whole-time firefighters
1997	423	256
1998	414	252
1999	400	256
2000	396	249
2001	404	248
2002	401	253
2003	415	250
2004	399	244
2005[2]	428	257

[1] Information provided refers to the work force at 31 March.
[2] Figures are provisional.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's annual returns.

Information on the number of firefighters employed at constituency level is not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Growth Areas Directorate

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister to whom the Head of the Department's Growth Areas Directorate reports. [34076]

Yvette Cooper: The Head of Growth Areas Division reports to the Director, Sustainable Communities Directorate.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister with which division in the Department for Transport the Head of the Department's Growth Areas Directorate liaises on transport matters. [34078]

Yvette Cooper: Growth Areas Division liaises mainly with Regional and Local Transport Delivery Division in the Department for Transport.

Homelessness

Grant Shapps: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of individuals made homeless in the last 12 months following private landlords obtaining (a) an order of possession and (b) a bailiff's order from the courts. [32722]

Yvette Cooper: The number of individuals made homeless due to an order of possession or a bailiff's order from the courts is not collected centrally. Information is collected quarterly from local authorities about the number of households accepted as homeless, in priority need and consequently owed a main homelessness duty. This includes reasons for loss of the last settled home, and distinguishes those involving rent arrears on a private dwelling, the ending of an assured shorthold tenancy, and other reasons for the loss of tied accommodation or a rented dwelling (including local authority owned accommodation). As shown in the following table, some 23,200 households became homeless for one of these reasons (around 20 per cent. of all acceptances) between July 2004 and June 2005.

Reasons for loss of rented settled home: July 2004 to June 2005—England

	Total households[1]
Rent arrears on private sector dwellings	1,570
Loss of rented/tied accommodation due to:
Termination of an assured shorthold tenancy	15,280
Other reasons	6,370
Total of above reasons	23,220

[1] Households found to be eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in a priority need category, and consequently owed a main homelessness duty.

Housing

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the (a) housing action trusts, (b) European Structural Fund Objective 3, (c) Connexions Grant, (d) Neighbourhood Renewal, (e) Housing Investment Programme and (f) London Development Agency grant funding stream from the Government office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [35224]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information is as follows.

(a) In 2004–05 the London borough of Croydon received no funding under the Housing Action Trusts programme. Only the Stonebridge Housing Action Trust in the London borough of Brent received funding in that year.

(b) Total ESF Objective 3 funding allocated to London in 2004–05 was £132,350,629, of which schemes in the London borough of Croydon received £5,051,705.

(c) Total funding of £73,014,270 was available for Connexions Partnerships in London in 2004–05. The South London Connexions Partnership, which covers the London boroughs of Croydon, Bromley, Kingston, Merton, Richmond and Sutton, received £10,842,518 in 2004–05. Some of this funding was allocated to projects working across the sub-region, from which Croydon would have benefited, while the South London Connexions Partnership allocated £2,393,051 specifically to Connexions services in Croydon.

(d) In 2004–05 the London borough of Croydon received Neighbourhood Renewal Funding of £824,387. Total Neighbourhood Renewal Fund for London 2004–05 was £110,087,967.

(e) Croydon received Housing Investment Programme funding of £4.53 million in 2004–05, from a total of £208 million allocated to London boroughs on a formulaic Generalised Needs Index basis in that year.

(f) In 2004–05 Government grant to the London Development Agency was £329,337,081. The total funding made available by the London Development Agency to projects in the London borough of Croydon was £1,073,112 in that year. In addition the London Development Agency funds a number of areas of work which benefit the whole of London, including work to promote tourism, employment and business, social inclusion and regeneration.

Integrated Regional Strategy

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of producing the Integrated Regional Strategy for the East of England; how many copies have been made; and how many copies were downloaded from the internet each month since it was published. [35169]

Yvette Cooper: The total cost of producing the Integrated Regional Strategy (IRS) in the East of England is £12,601, including the 1,000 copies that have been printed to date.

It is impossible to state how many copies of the IRS have been downloaded from the East of England Regional Assembly's website. The web page that contains the link to the document has received 3,020 hits since publication.

Local Government

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to review the operation of procedures for deciding who is in a politically restricted post in local government. [35115]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister consulted last year on a review of the regulatory framework governing the political activities of local government employees. We intend to publish our conclusions on this shortly.

Mobile Phone Companies

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to publish Professor Phil Allmendiger's report with Arup on codes of best practice for mobile phone companies. [19683]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned the University of Reading and Arup to undertake an independent study to assess the impact that the Code of Best Practice on Mobile Phone Network Development has had since its introduction, how local authorities have implemented the code and how the public perceives its operation. Plans are to publish this report in the new year.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to make the Arup report on mobile telephone masts publicly available. [32381]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned the University of Reading and Arup to undertake an independent study to assess the impact that the Code of Best Practice on Mobile Phone Network Development has had since its introduction, how local authorities have implemented the code and how the public perceives its operation. Plans are to publish this report in the new year.

Planning

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the average length of time to process a (a) planning application, (b) major planning application and (c) planning appeal in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [33501]

Yvette Cooper: The information available from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the time taken by local authorities to process planning applications are the percentages of applications for planning permission and related consents which are decided within eight weeks, between eight and 13 weeks and in more than 13 weeks. The statistics are used to monitor performance against the government targets that 60 per cent. of applications for major development should be decided within 13 weeks, that 65 per cent. of applications for minor development should be decided within eight weeks, and that 80 per cent. of applications for other development (predominantly householder applications) should be decided within eight weeks.

In 1996–97, local authorities determined on average 57 per cent. of major applications within 13 weeks, 57 per cent. of minor applications within eight weeks and 69 per cent. of other applications within eight weeks.

In the year ending June 2005, the latest data available, local authorities determined on average 61 per cent. of major applications within 13 weeks, 69 per cent. of minor applications within eight weeks and 84 per cent. of other applications within eight weeks.

The Planning Inspectorate's performance in processing a planning appeal is measured against ministerial targets which are reviewed annually.

Time taken to decide 80 per cent. of planning appeals—1996–97

	Written representations	Hearings	Inquiries
Target	22 weeks	43 weeks	51 weeks
Outturn	25 weeks	47 weeks	56 weeks
Number of appeals decided	9,686	1,512	831

Change to target introduced in 2004–05—now measured against a 50 per cent. target

	Written representations	Hearings	Inquiries
Target	16 weeks	30 weeks	30 weeks
Outturn	30 weeks	40 weeks	43 weeks

Regional Policy

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has evaluated on whether regional (a) economic and (b) social differences have changed since 1997. [31855]

Yvette Cooper: To support the 2004 PSA target to make sustainable improvements in the economic performance of the English regions, independent research to summarise the economic base was commissioned in 2004. The report of this work "Regional Growth Report" was published in September 2004 and is available from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1139483.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in his Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if he will make a statement. [34314]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Statutory instruments are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where SIs amend primary legislation, parliamentary counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training on the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the parliamentary scrutiny committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of SIs and provide frequent feedback and on the job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an on-going process and part of the continuing education of government legal advisers.

Tax Revenue

Chris Huhne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the annual tax revenue from applying business rates to the land holdings of development and property companies. [36032]

Mr. Woolas: None.

Thames Gateway

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 820W, on Thames Gateway, if he will place in the Library copies of the strategic flood risk assessments held by (a) his Department and (b) the relevant Government office for the regions. [22296]

Yvette Cooper: Copies of the Strategic Flood Risk Assessments for the Thames Gateway will be publicly available on the internet. The document requested is an external publication produced by the Thames Gateway London Partnership. At the present time, Strategic Flood Risk Assessments have been completed for the London area of the Thames Gateway. This is available on the Thames Gateway London Partnership website at http://www.thames-gateway.org.uk/social-inc-content.

asp?id:=16. Copies of the Strategic Flood Risk Assessments for North Kent and South Essex will be publicly available when the final reports are produced.

Town and Parish Councils

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of town and parish councillors gained office as a result of a contested election. [35381]

Mr. Woolas: Information about the proportion of town and parish councillors that have gained office as a result of a contested election is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many town and parish councils in England have achieved Quality Parish Council status. [35382]

Mr. Woolas: There are currently 230 town and parish councils in England which have achieved Quality Parish status.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many town and parish councils there are in England, broken down by district or unitary level local authority area; and how many levy their own precept in each case. [35383]

Mr. Woolas: There are about 8,700 parish and town councils in England. Volume 2 of the latest edition of the Municipal Year Book lists parishes under the relevant county and district council area. Information about how many parish and town councils levy their own precept is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many town and parish councillors there are in England. [35384]

Mr. Woolas: There are approximately 70,000 town and parish councillors in England.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the main local services funded through the levy of town and parish council precepts are. [35388]

Mr. Woolas: Town and parish councils have powers to provide various services which are funded by precept. A list of their main statutory functions is as tabled. Principal authorities have powers to delegate services to town and parish councils. Central Government do not hold centrally a breakdown of spending by town and parish councils.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the average total combined cost of clerking, insurance and audit fees for town and parish councils in England in the last year for which figures are available. [35389]

Mr. Woolas: Information about the cost of employing parish council clerks and the cost of insuring town and parish councils in England is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information provided by the Audit Commission shows that parish and town councils and parish meetings collectively paid approximately £1.9 million in audit fees for the year 2003–04.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average precept at band D levied by town and parish councils in England was in each of the last 10 years. [35390]

Mr. Woolas: Reliable figures for the average band D council taxes set by parish and town councils in each of the last 10 years are not available. This is because—although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister collects information on the total amounts of council tax precepted by parish and town councils—information on the taxbases (numbers of band D-equivalent dwellings) to which the precepts relate, which is needed to calculate average figures, is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

As stated in Table A2b of "Local Government Financial Statistics England No. 16 2005", the average band D council tax set by parish and town councils for 2005–06 has been estimated to be £42. But this is dependent upon an estimate of the taxbase for the area to which the precepts relate which is not robust enough to give a reliable set of figures over time.

The total amount of council tax precepted by parish and town councils in England in each of the last 10 years are tabled as follows. While this gives a broad indication of the trend in average precepts, it also reflects an increase in the number of parish and town councils, with about 150 new ones having been created since 1997.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cataract Operations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cataract operations were carried out by the NHS in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36383]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of cataract operations carried out in acute hospitals in Northern Ireland in each year from 1995–96 to 2004–05 (the latest year for which data are available) is shown in the following table.

	Number of cataract operations
2004–05	8,381
2003–04	8,501
2002–03	7,666
2001–02	7,187
2000–01	7,178
1999–2000	6,746
1998–99	6,487
1997–98	6,224
1996–97	5,556
1995–96	5,677

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time is in Northern Ireland for a cataract operation. [36384]

Mr. Woodward: Waiting list information is collected by time band. It is therefore not possible to calculate the arithmetic mean (average) length of time waiting. It is however possible to identify the median or mid-point waiting time band.

The median waiting time band for in-patients who were waiting for a cataract operation at 30 September 2005 was 3–5 months.

Child Abuse Allegations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much government funding has been set aside by the Council of Catholic Maintained Schools to meet the cost of potential child abuse allegations in the maintained sector of schooling in Northern Ireland. [36507]

Angela E. Smith: The Council for Catholic Maintained Schools does not set aside specific funding for the handling of child abuse allegations. Such matters are dealt with as part of the council's duties from within its annual recurrent budget.

Class Sizes

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average class size for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the integrated sector in Northern Ireland was in each of the last 10 years. [36315]

Angela E. Smith: The average class size for primary schools in the integrated sector in Northern Ireland was as follows:

1995–96	23.0
1996–97	22.8
1997–98	23.2
1998–99	23.8
1999–2000	24.3
2000–01	24.7
2001–02	24.9

2002–03	24.9
2003–04	24.5
2004–05	24.8

Notes:
1. The average class size quoted refers to year 1 to year 7 pupils in composite and non-composite classes.
2. The figures include controlled integrated and grant maintained integrated schools.

The requested information in respect of secondary schools was not collected at the time, and any attempt to do so retrospectively would be problematic and could be done only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average class size is in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area. [36316]

Angela E. Smith: The average class size in primary schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area in 2004–05 was 22.7 pupils.

The requested information in respect of secondary schools was not collected at the time, and any attempt to do so retrospectively would be problematic and could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Note:
The average class size quoted refers to year 1 to year 7 pupils in composite and non-composite classes.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average class size was in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the (i) Banbridge, (ii) Lurgan and (iii) Portadown area in each of the last 10 years. [36317]

Angela E. Smith: The requested information is as follows:

	Schools in
	Banbridge	Portadown	Lurgan
1995–96	24.6	23.6	24.9
1996–97	25.9	23.6	25.2
1997–98	25.9	23.4	24.9
1998–99	25.4	23.2	24.8
1999–2000	25.5	23.0	24.6
2000–01	255	23.8	243
2001–02	24.7	24.1	24.4
2002–03	25.1	24.2	23.8
2003–04	26.7	23.3	23.7
2004–05	26.5	23.3	24.1

Note:
1. The average class size quoted refers to year 1 to year 7 pupils in composite and non-composite classes.
2. Data refers to schools located within the specified towns. Schools that are no longer open have not been included (except in the case of amalgamations).

The requested information in respect of secondary schools was not collected at the time, and any attempt to do so retrospectively would be problematic and could be done only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the ratio of children to computers in each primary school in (a) Banbridge, (b) Lurgan and (c) Portadown was in each of the last 10 years. [36318]

Angela E. Smith: Information in the form requested is not readily available.

Neither the Department of Education (DE) nor the Education and Library Boards hold this level of detail. The only information available relates to the computers provided by DE under the Classroom 2000 Initiative (C2k).

The C2k service is provided as a core allocation to schools at no charge to their delegated budgets. It provides almost 40,000 PCs to all grant-aided schools in Northern Ireland. Rollout of the C2k service began in December 2001 and was completed in June 2004. C2k computers were provided to primary schools based on pupil numbers strictly in accordance with the following ratios:

Key Stage	Ratio (computers:pupils)
KS2	1:10

In aggregate, this equates to one PC is for every 12 pupils in each grant-aided primary school. Individual schools may also purchase additional ICT equipment from their delegated budgets or from other sources. Schools are not required to provide an inventory of this additional equipment. This means that the ratios quoted above represent the absolute minimum in any grant-aided school.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average class size was for (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in the (i) controlled and (ii) maintained sector in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36505]

Angela E. Smith: The average class size for primary schools in the controlled and maintained sectors in Northern Ireland was as follows:

	Controlled sector	Maintained sector
1995–96	24.0	24.1
1996–97	24.1	24.0
1997–98	23.8	23.8
1998–99	24.2	23.9
1999–2000	24.2	23.6
2000–01	24.0	23.4
2001–02	23.6	23.2
2002–03	23.5	23.1
2003–04	23.4	22.9
2004–05	23.2	22.8

Notes:
1. The average class size quoted refers to year 1 to year 7 pupils in composite and non-composite classes.
2. The figures for the controlled sector do not include controlled integrated schools.

The requested information in respect of secondary schools was not collected at the time, and any attempt to do so retrospectively would be problematic and could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessments

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the office holders in the Northern Ireland Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessments at the time the current guidance for relationships and sexuality education was drawn up. [36257]

Angela E. Smith: Membership of the Northern Ireland Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment at the time the current guidance for relationships and sexuality education was drawn-up (1999–2000) was as follows:

Chairman

Dr. Alan Lennon

Members

Mr. Brian Carlin

Mr. John Ellison

Mr. Donal Flanagan

Mr. Brian Henry

Miss Christine McGowan

Mr. Wilbert McKee

Professor Harry McMahon

Dr. Paul Madden

Mrs. Margaret Martin

Mr. Denis Moloney

Dr. Wilfred Mulryne

Ms Anne Murray

Miss Sheila Shanagher

Mr. Gordon Topping

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public funding the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessments has received in each of the last five financial years. [36258]

Angela E. Smith: The information sought is as follows:

	Public funding received
2000–01	11,230
2001–02	12,317
2002–03	13,996
2003–04	16,275
2004–05	17,302

These figures relate to funding provided by the Department of Education and, from 2003–04, also from the Department of Employment and Learning.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of preparing and publishing the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessments' current guidance for relationships and sexuality education in primary schools and post-primary schools. [36259]

Angela E. Smith: The cost of preparing and publishing the current guidance on relationships and sexuality education was £14,585.00.

Dentistry

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dentists in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Upper Bann are accepting NHS patients; and if he will list the dentists concerned in Upper Bann. [36333]

Mr. Woodward: During the quarter ending November 2005, there were:

(a) 686 dentists in Northern Ireland with new NHS patient registrations and;

(b) 41 dentists in Upper Bann parliamentary constituency with new NHS patient registrations. The names of these dentists can be found in Table 1.

These new NHS patient registrations refer to patients who had not been registered with the dentist at the end of the previous quarter. These may have resulted from patients moving between dentists or may have been re-registration of patients who have not attended the dentist for some time and whose registrations will therefore have expired. Registrations may also have been due to registering for the first time, for example, children or people coming to reside in Northern Ireland.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 10 highest-paid employees in his Department; what the (a) job title and (b) salary including bonuses is of each; and whether the individual concerned is (i) a civil servant and (ii) a contractor in each case. [27576]

Mr. Woodward: The 10 highest-paid employees in the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) are civil servants. Their salary ranges can be found in the NIO Departmental Report 2005 (Table 7—Senior Civil Service Salaries), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Information on civil service reward, including colleagues at senior levels, is available at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/index.asp

Examinations (Remarking)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils in Northern Ireland have requested to have their (a) GCSE and (b) A level examination papers re-marked in each of the last 10 years; and how many pupils had their grade improved as a result of re-marking in each year. [36319]

Angela E. Smith: The Council for the Curriculum, Assessment and Examinations has supplied details for candidates taking its examinations from 2001 when the information was computerised. This does not include candidates taking examinations with a number of other awarding bodies that offer GCSEs and A levels in Northern Ireland.

Floral Displays

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent by local authorities on floral displays in each council area in the Province in each of the last five years. [36354]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Fugitives

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the cost of setting up the system for dealing with terrorist fugitives from justice proposed in the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill. [34780]

Mr. Hain: The overall cost of the scheme envisaged in the Bill will depend on the numbers of eligible individuals. This is not known at this stage. It is therefore not possible to fully predict the costs of the scheme. The costs will be met from within the NIO's existing resources.

GPs

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prior booked general practitioner appointments members of the public in Northern Ireland failed to keep in each of the last five years. [36380]

Mr. Woodward: The Department does not centrally hold information on missed appointments at GP surgeries. This could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hospital Admissions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people resident in the Republic of Ireland have been admitted to hospital in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36378]

Mr. Woodward: The total number admissions[1] classified as an in-patient, day case or regular day/night admission at hospitals in Northern Ireland where the patient was recorded as a resident in the Republic of Ireland is given in the following table. Patients may have been admitted on more than one occasion.

Number of admissions[1] to hospital in Northern Ireland for residents of the Republic of Ireland

Residents of countries within the European Union are entitled to treatment if they are taken ill while visiting another European Union state. Patients may also be transferred to another country under formal contractual arrangements between individual hospitals or health boards if the treatment required is not available locally. Consequently residents from the Republic of Ireland are sometimes treated in Northern Ireland and vice versa.

Hypothyroidism

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the public have complained about their NHS treatment for hypothyroidism in the Province in the last year for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made of the level of satisfaction with NHS treatment of hypothyroidism in the Province. [36350]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available.

Influenza Vaccine

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the percentage uptake of vaccine for influenza was by those who were eligible in the Province in each of the last five years; and what the uptake has been to date in 2005. [36351]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the percentage uptake of vaccine for influenza in each of the last five years is detailed in the following table.

Percentage

	Uptake in over-65s	Uptake in under-65s 'at risk'
2000–01	68	n/a
2001–02	72	n/a
2002–03	72	56
2003–04	73	64
2004–05	73	65
2005–06[1]	59	51

n/a = There was no requirement to monitor uptake in this category during these years.

[1] The figures for 2005–06 only included those vaccinated up to the end of October 2005. The vaccination campaign does not end until 31 January 2006. Final 2005–06 influenza vaccination uptake figures will not be available before the beginning of April 2006.

Irish Language Policy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland during which periods the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development has pursued an Irish language policy since 1997. [36352]

Angela E. Smith: The UK Charter for Regional or Minority Languages is an international convention designed to protect and promote regional and minority languages. In Northern Ireland it applies to Irish and Ulster-Scots. The UK Government signed the Charter on 2 March 2000 and it was ratified on 27 March 2001. The Charter came into force on 1 July 2001.

As Inter-departmental Charter Implementation Group, chaired by the Department of Culture, Arts & Leisure and comprising all Government Departments that operate in Northern Ireland, developed guidance for public servants to help them meet their obligations under the Charter. Interim guidance on Irish was issued to departments on July 2001 to assist in handling approaches to and from the public. Further guidance on both Irish and Ulster-Scots was issued in January 2005 and was revised in June 2005.

Since May 2005, the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development has been using this guidance in drafting its own Language Policy for Irish and Ulster-Scots and it is hoped to have this finalised by early next year.

National Industrial Symbiosis Programme

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why Northern Ireland is not included in the National Industrial Symbiosis Programme. [36019]

Angela E. Smith: I understand from my noble Friend, Lord Rooker, that Northern Ireland received Barnett consequentials as part of the 2004 Spending Review. They were received as a result of funding allocated to DEFRA for increases in the standard rate of landfill tax. As part of the priorities and Budget process, decisions on the allocation of resources have to be taken in the context of local needs and priorities. Therefore, in this instance, it was decided to allocate these resources elsewhere within the Northern Ireland Block where the need is greatest.

NDPBs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those of his Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies which the Government is required to (a) consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) publish its response to advice from. [34684]

Ms Angela E Smith: The Government are required to (a) consult prior to legislative proposals the following advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office:

The Drainage Council for Northern Ireland

The Statistics Advisory Committee

Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside

Northern Ireland Clinical Excellence Awards Committee

The Poisons Board

Boundary Commission (not required to consult but legislation is not possible without the Commission having reported recommendations following a review)

The Northern Ireland Building Regulations Advisory Committee

Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what public consultation was conducted before the Government presented the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill; [34628]

(2) if he will discuss with mental healthcare professionals the impact of the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill. [35042]

Mr. Hanson: The Government's proposals to deal with terrorist suspects 'on the run' were published in May 2003 alongside the Joint Declaration. This issue had arisen in the context of talks with the parties.

Discussions about the technical operation of the scheme envisaged by the Bill have been conducted with interested authorities, including the PSNI.

A number of victims groups, church leaders, political parties and relevant staff associations were informed of the legislation in the 24 hours preceding introduction. Ministers have subsequently met with a number of those organisations to discuss the legislation.

There have been no discussions with healthcare professionals. However, Ministers will consider any requests for such meetings or discussions.

Nursing Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why nursing staff in Northern Ireland have been matched and banded differently from nursing staff in England and Wales. [36358]

Mr. Woodward: The Agenda for Change matching and banding processes are not yet fully completed in England, Wales or Northern Ireland. In the absence of final outcomes, it is impossible to make any meaningful comparisons at this stage.

PricewaterhouseCoopers

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Government Departments in Northern Ireland which have worked with PricewaterhouseCoopers on their e-business strategies and e-government requirements (a) were and (b) are represented on the Project Board for the Northern Ireland Civil Service Electronic Human Resources contract. [34336]

Angela E. Smith: The Government Departments which have worked with PricewaterhouseCoopers on their e-business strategies/e-government requirements and (a) were and (b) are represented on the Project Board for the Northern Ireland Civil Service e-HR contract are; the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure, the Department of the Environment, the Department for Regional Development, the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister, the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Department of Enterprise Trade and Industry and the Department of Education

Public Administration (Savings)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will break down the £200 million annual savings that were indicated would be achieved in Northern Ireland as a result of the implementation of the Review of Public Administration by main budget heading. [36610]

Angela E. Smith: Consultants have estimated savings from the RPA decisions at £140-£200 million per year. These estimates are based on benchmarks of best practice achieved by other organisations and can be broken down as follows.

£ million

Organisation	Estimated savings
Local government	54–73
Education	18–30
Health	41–71

Note:
It is also estimated that a further £27 million could be saved through joined up working arrangements.

The estimates are very tentative and the actual figures will depend on how the proposals are implemented. The actual savings achieved will be available for reallocation to front line services in Northern Ireland.

Punishment Attacks

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many punishment attacks have been attributed by security forces in Northern Ireland to (a) the UDA, (b) the UVF, (c) the LVF, (d) the Provisional IRA, (e) the Continuity IRA and (f) the Real IRA for each of the last 15 months. [32139]

Mr. Woodward: I have been advised by the PSNI that 'punishment attacks', (known officially as 'Casualties') by attribution to specific organisations is not possible. However, you may find the following table on 'Casualties as a result of paramilitary style shootings and assaults' for each month since June 2004 to September 2005 of use. You may also find reports of the Independent Monitoring Commission a useful resource. Website: www.tsoshop.co.uk. You should note that the attribution is as perceived by the PSNI and that statistics are provisional and may be subject to minor amendment.

Quangos

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of (a) the Ulster Unionist Party, (b) the SDLP, (c) the Alliance Party, (d) the DUP and (e) the former Women's Coalition are members of a quango in Northern Ireland. [36560]

Angela E. Smith: Those appointed to the boards of public bodies in Northern Ireland are not required to declare if they are members of a political party. However, they are asked to declare any significant political activity they may have undertaken in the five years prior to the date of their application.

Information on the declared political activity of applicants and appointees to bodies sponsored by 'Northern Ireland's 11 Government Departments and the Northern Ireland Office can be found in the Public Appointments annual report for 2004–05 and the NIO departmental report for 2005. These reports are available from the Library of the House and can be found on the internet at www.ofmdfmni.gov.uk/public-appointments and www.nio.gov.uk/departmental_report2005.pdf .

Road Upgrades

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to initiate an upgrade of the main road from Belfast International Airport to the M1 Moira Junction. [35851]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service Dr. Malcolm McKibbin has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcom McKibbin, dated 12 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what plans he has to initiate an upgrade of the main road from Belfast International Airport to the M1 Moira Junction. I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

The main road from the Belfast International Airport to the M1 is via the A57 Templepatrick Road to Killead Roundabout and then the A26, joining the M1 at the Moira junction. The A26 is one of five Key Transport Corridors in the Province.

The Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan (RSTN TP) announced by the then Minister for Regional Development, John Spellar MP, on 22nd March 2005, presented a range of multi-modal transport initiatives to manage, maintain and develop Northern Ireland's Key Transport Network up to the year 2015.

During preparation of the RSTN TP, the transport links to Belfast International Airport were examined and it was concluded that the three roads radiating from the Killead Roundabout, including the A26, provided good links to the strategic road network, servicing Northern Ireland and beyond.

Nevertheless, three widened single carriageway schemes on the A26 have been included in the Plan to improve safety and provide overtaking opportunities.

Differential Acceleration Lanes have been contructed at the Nutts Corner roundabout at a cost of approximately £800k and a 0.8 kilometre climbing lane has been provided on the south bound section of this route at Carnkilly Road and Furze Road at a cost of £260K. A further climbing lane is planned on the A26 near Glenavy.

It is also proposed to provide part time signals at the junction of the eastbound off-slip from the M1 and the Moira roundabout at a cost of £40k to improve traffic management.

Although the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan (BMTP) did not recommend any specific major improvements to the A26/A57, it did recommend that route management strategies be undertaken on all key strategic routes. I can advise that it is planned to commence a route management strategy along the A26 during 2006/07, which will consider what other improvements may be necessary.

Schools (Abuse Claims)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of (a) physical abuse and (b) sexual abuse were forwarded to the police by (i) Roman Catholic Diocesan officials and (ii) schools in the maintained sector in Northern Ireland in each year for which figures are available. [36314]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland do not hold this information on a central record. To obtain such details would require a manual trawl of crime files which would be at disproportionate cost.

Secondary Teachers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many secondary school teachers in Northern Ireland have (a) a first class degree, (b) a 2:1 degree, (c) a 2:2 degree, (d) a third class degree and (e) no degree. [36310]

Angela E. Smith: The number of current teachers in secondary schools in Northern Ireland who have (a) a first class degree, (b) a 2:1 degree, (c) a 2:2 degree, (d) a third class degree and (e) no degree are as follows:

Table 1: Teachers currently employed in secondary schools

	School type
	Secondary	Special	Total
Higher degree	286	17	303
First class degree	179	23	202
2:1 degree	1,949	206	2,155
2:2 degree	1,863	168	1,031
Third class degree	160	8	168
Pass degree	1,838	207	2,045
No degree	1,174	245	1,419
Total	7,449	874	8,323

Notes:

1. Contains full-time and pro-rata teachers.
2. "Pass degree" column includes teachers' records with one of the following degree classifications: no classification, unknown classification and Pass degree classification.
3. "No degree" column refers to teachers with no degree details recorded on Teachers' Pensions, Pay and Administration system or teachers whose only degree qualification held is unverified; these teachers hold other teaching qualifications.
4. These figures have been compiled from the teachers paid in relevant schools in November 2005.

Table 2: Current temporary/substitute teachers

	Number
Higher degree	380
First class degree	320
2:1 degree	2,945
2:2 degree	2,973
Third class degree	268
Pass degree	2,835
No degree	6,534
Total	16,255

Notes:

1. Contains ALL temporary and part-time hourly paid teachers.
2. "Pass degree" column includes teachers' records with one of the following degree classifications: no classification, unknown classification and Pass degree classification.
3. "No degree" column refers to teachers with no degree details recorded on Teachers' Pensions, Pay and Administration system or teachers whose only degree qualification held is unverified; these teachers hold other teaching qualifications.
4. These figures have been compiled from ALL substitute/temporary teachers currently held on the system.

Sperrin Lakeland Trust

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to ensure a fair representation from the Omagh area in filling vacancies within the Board of Sperrin Lakeland Trust. [35847]

Mr. Woodward: Appointments to the board of Sperrin Lakeland Health and Social Services Trust will be made in accordance with the Department's appointment procedures, which are governed by the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland.

I have the ultimate responsibility for these appointments which will be based solely on merit. Non-executive directors are not appointed to represent any particular interest or group but because of the personal skills and experience they possess which will assist the running of the trust.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) the criteria are and (b) selection process is for filling the vacancies for the Board of Sperrin Lakeland Trust. [35849]

Mr. Woodward: The information is as follows.

(a) For the position of trust non-executive director in Sperrin Lakeland HSS Trust, candidates had to meet five standard essential criteria, namely:

Making an impact with others;

Committing to the non-executive role;

Thinking strategically;

Analytical thinking; and Learning and self-development.

Shortlisting was required and the specific desirable criteria for these posts were experience in the fields of:

Human resources; or

Finance; or

Health and social care.

(b) The standard departmental public appointments selection process, which is consistent with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland, is underway to fill the non-executive director vacancies. The outcome is expected in the near future.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are on the public appointments list to be considered for vacancies on the Board of Sperrin Lakeland Trust; and when he expects the vacancies within the Board of Sperrin Lakeland Trust to be filled. [35850]

Mr. Woodward: The Department advertises appointment opportunities widely and has established a database of potential candidates, who have been assessed as suitable to be considered for a range of appointments. Two-hundred and twelve candidates were contacted about the vacancies on the board of Sperrin Lakeland Trust. Interviews took place on 28 November and 5 and 6 December 2005 and a decision will be made in the near future.

Sustainable Development

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how often the group of deputy secretaries known as the sustainable development champions within the Department of the Environment met in each of the past 12 months; and if he will list the occasions on which the Permanent Secretary of the Department of the Environment chaired such a meeting. [35342]

Angela E. Smith: A Sustainable Development Champion has been nominated from each of the 11 departments within the Northern Ireland Civil Service. A meeting of the champions as a group was held on 7 June 2005 shortly after their nominations were finalised. The Permanent Secretary of the Department of the Environment chaired the meeting on 7 June 2005 and also chaired bilateral meetings with Champions on 2 and 4 August 2005 and the 8 and 13 of September 2005.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the sustainable development strategy for Northern Ireland will be published by the Department of the Environment. [35345]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of the Environment proposes to publish the Sustainable Development Strategy for Northern Ireland by the end of March 2006.

Tyrone County Hospital

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the (a) correspondence, (b) meetings and (c) discussions he has had with those (i) against and (ii) in favour of his plans for acute services and accident and emergency at the Tyrone County Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [35319]

Mr. Woodward: In recent months there have been a large number of meetings with local communities and their representatives in relation to the future provision of acute services in the Sperrin Lakeland area. These meetings are ongoing.

On 11 October I issues for consultation the paper Making Services Safer in Sperrin Lakeland Trust. The consultation period lasted for six weeks, ending on 25 November.

A significant volume of written comment has been received in response to the proposals set out in the consultation document. This also must be set in the context of three years of consultation about services across Northern Ireland and including Sperrin Lakeland. My officials are now collating and analysing those recent comments for consideration and the Department will publish a summary of the responses received in the near future.

Ulster Scots and Gaelic

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to reconstitute the membership of the Ulster Scots Agency Board. [34771]

Mr. Hain: The provisions for making appointments to the Boards of the North South Implementation Bodies are made in the North/South Co-operation (Implementation Bodies) (Northern Ireland) Order 1999. The British and Irish Governments have decided to extend the periods of appointment of all current Board members by a further year until 12 December 2006, but on the understanding that, since both Governments are committed to an early restoration of devolution and the institutions, the terms of office may be subject to review in the event of political progress.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure equality of funding between Ulster Scots and Gaelic. [36546]

Mr. Hanson: Her Majesty's Government remains wholly committed to affording equal respect and recognition to the Irish and Ulster Scots languages and culture. The funding provided to each reflects their differing ranges of projects, programmes and supported organisations and is determined on the basis of the approved actions in their respective annual business plans.

Vehicle Excise Duty

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland paid the (a) full rate of vehicle excise duty and (b) reduced rate for carbon emission vehicles in each of the last 10 years. [36508]

Angela E. Smith: In 2001, a system of relating the rate of vehicle excise duty payable by cars and light vans to the level of CO_2 emission was introduced. Cars and light vans registered before 1 March 2001 pay excise duty according to their engine size. Breaking down the CO_2 category by band could be undertaken only at disproportionate costs.

The number of cars and light vans licensed in these categories at 31 December each year since 2001 is set out in the following table.

	Category
	By CO_2 emission	By engine size	Total
31 December 2001	55,519	589,449	644,968
31 December 2002	126,011	540,720	666,731
31 December 2003	200,728	511,185	711,913
31 December 2004	274,411	462,787	737,198

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorists in Northern Ireland have been found guilty of non-payment of vehicle excise duty in each of the last 10 years. [36509]

Angela E. Smith: It is the policy to offer out of court settlements to motorists detected driving unlicensed vehicles. Summons are only issued where this course of action has failed.

The number of cases which attracted payment for vehicle excise duty offences over each of the past 10 years were:

	Number
1995–96	27,611
1996–97	26,116
1997–98	24,802
1998–99	14,897
1999–2000	13,158
2000–01	15,428
2001–02	15,966
2002–03	13,932
2003–04	10,876
2004–05	24,464

Vehicle Licence Detection Units

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many mobile vehicle licence detection units were in operation in Northern Ireland in (a) 2000 and (b) 2005. [36766]

Angela E. Smith: Wheel-clamping units were introduced in Northern Ireland in 1998 and camera detection units in 2001. The number of detection units for each of the two years are:

2000

1 wheel-clamping

2005

2 wheel-clamping

3 permanent camera, and

3 temporary camera units

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to determine the siting of mobile vehicle licence detection units in Northern Ireland. [36767]

Angela E. Smith: Mobile vehicle detection is undertaken by automatic number plate reader (ANPRs) units. ANPRs are deployed on a rolling programme across Northern Ireland. The main criterion is to maximise the potential to detect unlicensed vehicles but recognising the need to ensure that the siting does not cause a traffic hazard.

ANPRs are also deployed as requested by PSNI to assist in joint exercises with other enforcement authorities.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicle owners were prosecuted as a result of mobile vehicle licence detection units in Northern Ireland in each year since 2000. [36768]

Angela E. Smith: Units to wheel-clamp unlicensed vehicles were introduced in Northern Ireland in 1998 and camera detection units in 2001. Output from the wheel-clamping units is measured in the number of vehicles clamped not prosecutions. Separate recording of prosecutions arising from enforcement action by camera units did not begin until 2003–04. For vehicle excise duty offences it is the normal policy to offer out of court settlements rather than proceed direct to court. Resulting from camera detections, in 2003–04 1,695 people paid out of court (OCS) settlements and 217 were prosecuted in court. In 2004–05, 1,830 paid OCSs and 306 were prosecuted in court.

Violent Offender and Sex Offender Register

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Police Information Technology Organisation's roll out of the Violent Offender and Sex Offender Register in Northern Ireland. [34557]

Mr. Hanson: The Violent Offender and Sex Offender Register (ViSOR), is a secure, confidential, fully auditable national database which allows the police, probation and prison services to monitor and manage sexual and violent offenders and others who may cause serious harm to the public. The Police Service of Northern Ireland has full connectivity to ViSOR and will be implementing it throughout the organisation within the next few weeks. Northern Ireland Prison Service is considering how they might use ViSOR in the future and the Probation Board for Northern Ireland is also investigating access to ViSOR.

Zebra Mussels

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to deal with the outbreak of zebra mussels in Lough Neagh. [36556]

Angela E. Smith: I can confirm that zebra mussels have become established in Lough Neagh at Kinnego Marina. They are expected to spread and reach maximum numbers in three or four years time. This will have uncertain implications for fish, birds, water abstraction, navigation and other interests within the Lough. Nothing can be done to eradicate them or prevent their spread within Lough Neagh.

Officials are investigating their present distribution and putting in place a monitoring programme to track their future expansion and impact on other biological elements in the lake. Users have been alerted to the situation and we will work closely with them to develop mitigation measures.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Legislative Consultation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list those of his Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies which the Government are required to (a) consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) publish their response to advice from. [34671]

Nigel Griffiths: The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons does not sponsor any advisory non-departmental public bodies.

Pay Rise (Hon. Members)

Bob Spink: To ask the Leader of the House what recent representations he has received regarding the pay rise for hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [35654]

Mr. Hoon: As Leader of the House, I receive comments on a regular basis from a range of Members on the next SSRB Review of Parliamentary Pay and Allowances.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Archbishop Peter Smith

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had with Archbishop Peter Smith about the operation of the Mental Capacity Act 2005; and if she will make a statement. [33786]

Ms Harman: The Mental Capacity Act is about helping vulnerable people, and those who care for them, to make decisions. It provides a clear legal framework and safeguards to ensure that decisions will always be taken in the individual's best interests.

Throughout the development of this legislation the Government have listened to those with an interest in it. This includes Parliament, people who may lack capacity and their carers and families, many voluntary organisations and the Catholic Church. There have been no recent discussions with the Catholic Church on the operation of the Mental Capacity Act.

The Act is due to be fully implemented by April 2007. The Government will continue to work closely with all stakeholders who have an interest up to that date and beyond to ensure that we deliver the real benefits that the legislation sets out.

Chelmsford Crown Court

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will place in the Library a list of the cases tried by each of the Crown court judges sitting at Chelmsford Crown Court in each of the last five years for which information is available. [36187]

Ms Harman: A list of the cases tried by each of the Crown court judges sitting at Chelmsford Crown Court in each of the last five years has now been placed in the Library.

Information Commissioner

Peter Law: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the adequacy of resources made available to the Information Commissioner to carry out his responsibilities; and what discussions she has had with the Information Commissioner on ways to speed up the processing of Freedom of Information Act appeals made to his office. [35802]

Ms Harman: The Secretary of State is in regular dialogue with the Information Commissioner about his responsibilities under the Freedom of Information Act. The Information Commissioner has analysed his current workload and concluded that the high volume of appeals that he is processing at present are a result of the initial influx of requests that public authorities experienced in the first few months of FOI implementation.

Legal Costs

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what limits apply to legal costs for personal injury cases; and what plans there are to raise the limits. [33414]

Ms Harman: Certain limits apply to the costs recoverable in cases under the small claims track and in relation to trials in fast track cases. In addition, Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules also provides for other fixed costs and fixed success fees in certain circumstances. The Government have no current plans to raise these limits.

National Security Appeals Panel

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the judgments have been published in each case decided by the National Security Appeals Panel under (a) section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 and (b) section 60 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in each calendar year since its inception; and if she will make a statement. [31830]

Ms Harman: I refer the member for Hornsey and Wood Green to the answer I gave on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 643W.

Royal Household

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1058W, on state prayers, what constitutes the Royal Household for the purposes of her reply; to which (a) members of HM the Queen's family and (b) officials it extends; and if she will make a statement. [36261]

Ms Harman: For the purposes of the reply quoted, The Royal Household is taken to include those employed by members of the Royal Family who are authorised to act on behalf of the member of the Royal Family in fulfilling his or her public and official roles. When the term Royal Family is used in an official context it refers to The Queen and those members of Her Majesty's family who regularly undertake official duties and functions on Her Majesty's behalf.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Adviser Discretionary Fund

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average payment was from the Adviser Discretionary Fund in each year since July 2001; and how many people received payments from the fund in each year; [35080]

(2) what maximum amount can be claimed under the Adviser Discretionary Fund in any 12-month period; when this was last revised; and how he notifies the House of such changes; [35081]

(3) how much his Department spent on the Adviser Discretionary Fund in each year since July 2001; and how much his Department has budgeted to spend on it in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08. [35082]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking what the average payment was from the Adviser Discretion Fund (ADF) in each year since July 2001, how many people received payments from the fund, what maximum amount can be claimed from the fund in any 12 month period, when this was last reviewed, how the House is notified of such changes, how much the Department spent on ADF in each year since July 2001, and how much the Department has budgeted to spend on it in the current year and 2006–07 and 2007–08. These areas fall within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information relating to the total spend, the average value of a payment and the number of awards made for each year since ADF was introduced in July 2001 is contained in the table below. The number of individuals that have received an award of ADF is not available because a customer may access the ADF more than once if necessary.

	Total spend	Average payment	Number of awards
2001–02	5,687,775	60	104,388
2002–03	16,285,006	76	138,370
2003–04	33,621,757	97	345,189
2004–05	40,543,285	99	409,389

£28,044,000 has been allocated for the ADF in this financial year. Jobcentre Plus has not yet agreed final ADF allocations for the 2006–07 and 2007–08 financial years.

On 9 May 2005 the procedures governing the administration of the ADF changed. The maximum amount that can be paid to a customer through ADF in any 12 month period without a business case to support the payment was reduced from £300 to £100. As this relates to a change of operational procedures and not a change in the nature of the ADF, it was not considered necessary to notify the House.

I hope this is helpful.

Agency Staff

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by (a) the Employment Service, (b) the Benefits Agency and (c) Jobcentre Plus in each of the last five years; and what the projected staff levels are in each organisation for the next three years. [34385]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning how many full time equivalent staff were employed by a) the Employment Service b) the Benefits Agency and c) Jobcentre plus in each of the last five years, and the projected staff levels in Jobcentre Plus for the next three years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The tables below show full time equivalent staff for each organisation for the last five financial years.

Year ending 31 March	Employment Service	Benefits Agency
2001	34,110	70,510
2002	34,040	68,081

In 2002, following the formation of the Department for Work and Pensions, the Benefits Agency and Employment Service ceased to exist. As work from the Benefits Agency was divided between the Pensions Service and Jobcentre Plus, a direct comparison of total staffing before and after this change cannot be made.

Year ending 31 March	Jobcentre Plus
2003	78,512
2004	79,044
2005	73,900

The projected staffing levels for Jobcentre Plus the next three years are:

	Projected staffing levels
31 March 2006	71,008
31 March 2007	68,350
31 March 2008	66,461

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Exit Rates

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have come off benefits and entered work in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Normanton constituency since 2001. [31564]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the format requested.

The Department for Work and Pensions Research Report No 244—Destination of benefit leavers 2004—showed that nationally, 62 per cent. of claimants leaving income support, incapacity benefit or jobseekers allowance entered employment of 16 hours or more a week. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Benefits Helpline

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions why the automated response on the (a) income support and (b) incapacity benefit telephone helpline was in Welsh only on 30 November. [34596]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning why the automated response on the (a) Income Support and (b) Incapacity Benefit telephone helpline was in Welsh only on 30 November. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

For those customers who wish to contact the Wrexham Processing Centre there are two telephone numbers they can use, one for those wanting to speak in Welsh and the other for those preferring to use English. I am not aware that there was a problem with the English Language line on 30 November. Having investigated this matter, I can confirm that the English Language line is operating correctly.

There is an issue with the Welsh Language telephone line incorrectly providing an English greeting, although once the customer has selected the option for the benefit they wish to discuss, they are transferred to a Welsh speaking member of staff. We are working with British Telecom to rectify this problem as a matter of urgency.

I hope this is helpful.

Customer Management Systems

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the areas where the customer management system is in use; and when he expects the system to be rolled out to all areas. [34286]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to reply to your question concerning the deployment of the Customer Management System (CMS) in the Jobcentre Plus network. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The following list shows the areas where CMS is in full or partial use. CMS is being implemented in tandem with the wider rollout of the Jobcentre Plus service and I expect this to be substantially completed by Summer 2006.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average number of days taken (a) to call back and (b) from call back to interview date for each Customer Management System centre was in the last period for which figures are available. [34273]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what the average number of days taken is (a) to call back and (b) from call back to interview date for each Customer Management System centre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our aim is to call customers back within 24 hours of the inbound call. The latest data we have available is for week ending 25 November 2005 where the average across all contact centres is 1.6 days. The call back data for each CMS contact centre operating call-backs for the same period is listed in the table below.

Week ending 25 November 2005

Contact Centre	Time taken to call customer (days ahead or day ahead)
Blackburn	2
Bootle	4
Bridgend	1
Coventry	3
Derby	1
Dundee	3
Garston	1
Grimsby	1
Halifax	Within 1
Hastings	1
Lincoln	1
Marton Mere	3
Middlesbrough	1
Newcastle	3
Paisley	1
Pembroke Dock	2
Poole	2
Sheffield	1
Taunton	3
Telford	1
Torquay	Within 1

We have an internal standard to complete work-focused interviews within 4 days of initial contact with the customer. Twelve of our centres captured data from 273 Local Service Outlets over a sample period from 16th September 2005 to 25th November 2005 on the waiting times for these interviews. This information is in the table.

Week ending	Average waiting time in days
16 September 2005	7.2
23 September 2005	7.7
30 September 2005	8.0
7 October 2005	7.8
14 October 2005	8.5

Debt Advisers

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many debt advisers are working in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency; and whether staffing levels are planned to increase over the Christmas period. [35406]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many debt advisers are working in (a) West Yorkshire (b) Wakefield district and (c) Normanton constituency and whether staffing levels are planned to increase over the Christmas period. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

No debt advice is given by Jobcentre Plus staff in any Jobcentre including West Yorkshire. In addition to dealing with general benefit entitlement and providing help to customers to move into work, staff handle Crisis Loan and Budgeting Loan applications but do not offer or give debt advice.

Staff resources over the Christmas period has been finalised, with staffing levels set in order to deal with anticipated numbers of benefit claims and predicted Crisis Loan applications.

I hope this is helpful.

Denise Christina Arathoon

Andrew Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much the Department has spent on (a) administrative and (b) legal proceedings in relation to Denise Christina Arathoon. [24520]

Mrs. McGuire: It is not possible to accurately quantify the administrative costs as all administrative work resulting from the court case will be absorbed within normal work processes.

The Department spent an estimated £10,350 on the legal proceedings. This includes Mrs. Arathoon's legal costs in the Court of Appeal, but does not include work done by the Department's staff.

Departmental Reviews/Publications

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list (a) reviews undertaken and (b) departmental publications issued on (i) housing benefit and (ii) council tax benefit since 1997. [23447]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department keeps both housing benefit and council tax benefit under constant Review.

The Department publishes a number of handbooks and guidance manuals, together with necessary amendments, to aid local authorities in the administration of these benefits. In addition, the Department issues circulars and bulletins to local authorities, which provide necessary information on a more immediate basis. Since 1997, the Department has issued 407 administration circulars, 175 fraud circulars, 64 subsidy circulars, 18 general bulletins and 19 urgent bulletins.

The Department also publishes research and statistical reports. A list of reports relating to housing benefit and council tax benefit, together with details of relevant web sites, has been placed in the Library.

Economic Regeneration (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the Department's contribution to economic regeneration in Ribble Valley. [34069]

Margaret Hodge: Since 1997 claimant unemployment has fallen by 34 per cent., long term unemployment by 68 per cent. and long term youth unemployment by 67 per cent. in Ribble Valley. The number of out of work lone parents has fallen by 33 per cent. and those claiming incapacity benefits has fallen by 8 per cent. over the same period.

East Lancashire Jobcentre Plus district has made a significant contribution to these successes. In addition to the new deals, which have helped 840 people in to work, they also operate Action Team for Jobs, Progress2Work Linkup and Workstep helping a broad range of the local community to improve their skills and find work.

Specific success stories include the Ethnic Minority Outreach programme. This small team works with the local Asian community by, for example, announcing recruitments in mosques and placing adverts in local businesses. Since May 2005, 116 people have been helped in to jobs by this team.

The Pathways to Work Incapacity Benefit Reforms Pilot has been operational in East Lancashire since April 2004 and is already achieving excellent results and feedback. The district achieved 1,179 job entries from the sick and disabled group of customers during the period April 2004 to March 2005 in comparison with 384 for the same period the year before.

The district is also involved in the Extension of the Pathways to Work Pilot. The Extension Pilot has been operational In East Lancashire from 7 February 2005 and to date has resulted in 70 customers returning to work.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 14 July 2005, Official Report, column 1271W, on housing benefit, what factors explain the variation in the proportion of tenants whose local housing allowance is being paid direct to the landlord in each of the nine Pathfinder authorities. [29994]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department has not undertaken any further analysis to identify additional factors that influence the variation in the proportion of tenants whose local housing allowance is being paid directly to the landlord in Pathfinder areas.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of raising the restriction on the number of hours a week a housing benefit recipient can study to (a) 20 hours and (b) 24 hours. [33027]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available from which to make such an estimate.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will meet representatives of the Foyer Federation to discuss the impact of housing benefit regulations on the ability of young people in housing need to achieve qualifications below degree level; [33028]

(2) what assessment he has made of the merits of ending the restriction on the number of hours a week a housing benefit recipient can study if they are retaking GCSEs, studying for A-Levels or for an NVQ at level 3 or below; [33029]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effects of the 16 hour housing benefit rule on the number of young people over the age of 19 who are able to take up education and training opportunities without losing their homes; and if he will make a statement; [33046]

(4) if he will amend the 16 hour rule for housing benefit for young people between the ages of 19 and 21 years. [34171]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Work to review the interaction between study rules and benefits is on-going.

Ministerial colleagues have already met and discussed through correspondence a wide range of issues relating to the rules on study and housing benefit with representatives from the Foyer Federation.

Individuals receiving housing benefit can currently study for qualifications below degree level, as long as it is for less than 16 guided learning hours a week. This is not always a significant barrier as many full-time Learning and Skills Council courses are just over 12 guided learning hours a week.

It is a matter of record that the policy of both this and previous Governments has been to exclude most, but not all, full-time students from entitlement to housing benefit; since 1990 financial support for those students opting to study full time has been seen as the responsibility of the education system, rather than the benefit system.

One of the outcomes of the recent Social Exclusion Report "Review of Financial Support, Supporting Young People to Achieve" is that from April 2006, if someone is in non-advanced education when they turn 19 they can continue to receive certain benefits, including income support, and therefore housing benefit, and education maintenance allowance until they have completed their current course of study or reach age 20.

This is clearly an improvement on the previous situation, but it is likely that there will still be some young people who have had to abandon their attempts to catch up on learning because they reach 20 before they have finished their course. Because of this, the Government are committed to keeping this new age limit under review.

Additionally, we recognise that for some a different approach may be needed. Consequently, from next September as part of the New Deal for Skills we will be piloting in some Jobcentre Plus districts the effect of allowing low skilled jobseekers to take up full-time further education courses as a route into work when a lack of skills is considered to be a significant barrier.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average administration cost per claimant was of housing benefit in each of the last five years in each benefit authority. [34283]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department does not collect management information relating to the cost to local authorities of administering housing benefit under the existing national scheme. The Department has recently commissioned a research project looking into the overall administration costs of housing benefit and council tax benefit which may help us obtain an indication of these costs in the future.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of removing the single room rent upper limit on housing benefit provisions for those aged under 25 years. [36041]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The cost of removing the single room rent upper limit on housing benefit for those aged under 25 years in the private rented sector has been estimated to be at least £60 million per year.

Inactive Benefits

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many recipients of inactive benefits in Coventry South moved back to work in 2004–05. [33510]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The information is not available in the format requested. The Department for Work and Pensions Research Report No 244—Destination of benefit leavers 2004—showed that nationally, 62 per cent. of claimants leaving income support, incapacity benefit or jobseekers allowance entered employment of 16 hours or more a week. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many existing incapacity benefit claimants who voluntarily entered the Pathways to Work pilots had been claiming benefit for (a) one month, (b) two to three months, (c) three to six months, (d) six to 12 months, (e) 12 to 24 months and (f) 24 months and over prior to entering the pilot; and what proportion found work. [25136]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 7 November 2005]: The available information is in the tables.

Incapacity benefit claimants who have volunteered to enter Pathways to Work—Total

Length of claim prior to entering pilot	Pathways starts	Job entries	Job entry proportion (percentage)
Less than three months	910	230	26

Income Support

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will apply the same rules for payment of carer's allowance and income support to carers of people who are in receipt of low rate disability living allowance while applying for a higher rate due to their condition worsening as applies to the payment of those benefits to carers of people whose application for disability living allowance is still being processed; and if he will make a statement. [36598]

Mrs. McGuire: The rules governing entitlement to carer's allowance and any consequent entitlement there might be to a carer premium in the income-related benefits or to a carer's additional amount in pension credit, are the same in both circumstances.

Integrated Benefits

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the failed call rate has been for Jobcentre Plus areas operating integrated benefit system pilots; [28387]

(2) what is the average duration of telephone benefit applications in integrated benefit system pilot areas. [28390]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning failed call rates and durations of calls for new claims to working age benefits. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I explain that, to make a claim in an area operating the new Jobcentre Plus model, the customer calls a contact centre. Contact centre staff ask the customer a series of questions to assess their potential eligibility to Jobcentre Plus benefits. They then arrange to call the customer back to complete the claim form, which is sent to the customer to check and sign. They will also arrange a work focused interview at the customer's local Jobcentre Plus office where this is appropriate.

Our aim is to answer 90% of calls made to the contact centre. The most recent information we have is for week ending 4 November 2005 when we answered 81.5% of calls.

With regard to the duration of telephone benefit applications, we do not hold information on the average length of telephone calls to gather all the information necessary to complete a claim form. However we do have the average length of the initial call made by the customer. The most recent information shows that this is taking an average of 12 minutes.

I hope this is helpful.

Job Vacancies

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many job vacancies there are in Tamworth constituency; how many there were on the same date last year; and what the vacancy rate in England is per 1,000 of population. [35670]

Margaret Hodge: Nationally the number of vacancies remains at a historically high level. The latest vacancy survey by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) estimates there were 605.1 thousand unfilled vacancies in the quarter to October 2005, compared to 638.4 thousand this time last year. The ONS vacancy ratio for the UK for October 2005 (the latest data) is 2.3. This is the number of vacancies per 100 employee jobs. The specific information requested on the vacancy rate for England is not available.

More than 10,000 new vacancies are placed at Jobcentres every working day and at least as many again come up through other recruitment channels. In the Tamworth constituency 427 vacancies were notified to Jobcentre Plus in November 2004, rising to 662 in October 2005.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest estimate is of the cost of rolling out the Jobcentre Plus programme; what the annual running cost will be; and what the cost of running Jobcentre offices was in the last year of their operation. [28700]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning: the latest estimate of the cost of rolling out the Jobcentre Plus programme; what the annual running cost will be; and what the cost of running Jobcentre offices was in the last year of their operation. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The latest cost estimate for completion of the rollout programme is just in excess of £2 billion against an original budget of £2.2 billion. The latest estimate of the running costs for the whole of Jobcentre Plus for 2005–06 is £2,592 million. The latest estimate on the annual savings on running costs that can be expected once the rollout programme is completed amounts to £20 million per annum.

Running costs are not monitored at the level of individual Jobcentre offices so I am unable to answer the final question raised. The information is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what consultations have been undertaken to assess (a) the impact of Jobcentre Plus's Response to Displayed Vacancies system on (i) employment figures and (ii) local communities and (b) the effectiveness of the system; [30361]

(2) what analysis has been undertaken to assess the cost of implementing Jobcentre Plus's Response to Displayed Vacancies system. [30362]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning Jobcentre Plus' Response to Displayed Vacancies (RDV) system. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Prior to the creation of Jobcentre Plus, the Employment Service embarked on its Modernising Employment Service (MES) programme. Part of this programme was to change RDV (card vacancies) to touch screen kiosks or "Jobpoints", whilst ensuring that the needs and expectations of individual customers were met. As RDV was the preceding system, I have taken your question to be referring to Jobpoints.

A wide variety of research has been carried out to assess the impact of these changes, and the use of Jobpoints, on local communities and the effectiveness of Jobcentre Plus systems. This includes:

a Jobseeker Direct Customer Satisfaction Survey;

a quantitative telephone survey of over 3,000 Jobcentre Plus customers;

Greater London Enterprise carried out three sweeps of the Qualitative Employer Survey and the Customer Service Centre Case Studies;

an Econometric/Statistical Analysis of the impact of MES;

Jobcentre Case Study research and analysis of the Jobseeker Surveys;

a follow-up national telephone survey of 3,411 Jobcentre Plus customers to provide representative data on customers' experience of, views on, and satisfaction with, Jobcentre Plus services; and a Jobcentre Plus National Customer Satisfaction Survey.

Furthermore, an independent evaluation of customers' reactions to these changes, carried out in January 2003, showed that between 31% and 48% of jobseekers reported an increase in the numbers and types of vacancies they looked at, the number of applications made, and their confidence in getting a job.

An analysis of the costs to Jobcentre Plus of introducing Jobpoints was included in the overall MES evaluation in 2003. When set alongside reduced resources for operational delivery during MES implementation, this supported the conclusion that MES enabled improved efficiency, accuracy, flexibility and responsiveness of work processes.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the national performance targets are for Jobcentre Plus; and what the performance of Jobcentre Plus offices in (a) Torquay, (b) Paignton and (c) Brixham has been against those targets. [32063]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding what the National Performance Targets are for Jobcentre Plus; and what the performance of Jobcentre Plus offices in (a) Torquay, (b) Paignton and (c) Brixham has been against those targets. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

For the April 2005 to March 2006 operational year, Jobcentre Plus has been set six targets. They are:

Job Entry Target—to achieve a total points score of 6,659,148 based on the job entry outcomes Jobcentre Plus achieves;

Monetary Value of Fraud and Error (MVFE) Target—by March 2006, to reduce losses from fraud and error in working age Income Support (IS) and Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) to no more than 5.2 percent of the monetary value of these benefits paid during the year;

Customer Service Target—to achieve 81 percent customer service level in the delivery of the standards and commitments set out in the Customers' and Employers' Charters;

Employer Outcome Target—at least 84 percent of employers placing their vacancies with Jobcentre Plus will have a positive outcome;

Business Delivery Target—to ensure that specified key Jobcentre Plus business processes are delivered efficiently, accurately and to specified standards in 90.3 percent of cases checked.

You asked for specific performance information against National Performance targets at the Jobcentre Plus offices in Brixham, Paignton and Torquay. Because of the way in which Jobcentre Plus is structured, and the way information on performance is collated, we cannot provide target information at local office level.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1664W, on benefits, which Jobcentre Plus contact centres are operating some clerical processes due to problems with the customer management system; how many were operating such processes in each week since 1 June; and if he will make a statement. [32939]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning which Jobcentre Plus contact centres are operating some clerical processes due to problems with the CMS system and how many were operating such processes in each week since 1st June. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Since the 1st June, none of our CMS contact centres have been operating clerical processes as a direct result of problems with the CMS system. Customers have experienced difficulties getting through to some of our contact centres because our business has been going through significant change. We have taken steps to address this by introducing temporary adjustments, including some clerical processes, to streamline business processes whilst we go through this transitional period. These temporary adjustments have been implemented as follows:

August 2005 in three contact centres: Derby, Lowestoft and Sheffield;

September 2005 in five contact centres: Coventry, Derby, Hastings, Lowestoft, Sheffield; and October 2005 in nine contact centres: Coventry, Derby, Hastings, Lincoln, Lowestoft, Pembroke Dock, Poole, Sheffield and Torquay.

The nine contact centres that implemented temporary adjustments in October continue to operate these. Plans are in progress to reintroduce the non-clerical process to these centres during the course of the operational year.

I hope this is helpful.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent meetings he has had about the performance of Jobcentre Plus. [33915]

Margaret Hodge: Ministers meet with the chief executive and senior officials of Jobcentre Plus on a regular basis to discuss all aspects of Jobcentre Plus business.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken is for (a) callback and (b) interview under the Customer Management System for customers who contact Jobcentre Plus through the medium of (i) Welsh and (ii) English; and what the average time taken was in each of the last three months. [34172]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 2 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the average delay for callback and interview under the Customer Management System for customers who contact Jobcentre Plus through the medium of Welsh and English; and what the average delays were in each of the last three months. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our aim is to call customers back within 24 hours of the inbound call. The current average waiting time for a call back in November across all contact centres is 1.9 days. In the week ending 25 November the average waiting time for a call back is 1.6 days. This is a significant improvement on the average of 4.9 days in September and 3.3 days in October.

We do not collect information on average call back times specifically for customers speaking the Welsh language. These call backs are made by our Bridgend contact centre, along with those to English language speakers. Currently the average call back time in Bridgend is one day, in September this figure was 3.8 days and in October it was 4.5 days.

We have an internal standard to complete work-focused interviews within 4 days of initial contact with the customer. Twelve of our centres captured data from 273 Local Service Outlets over a sample period from 16th September 2005 to 25th November 2005 on the waiting times for these interviews. This information is in the table.

2005
16 September	7.2
23 September	7.7
30 September	8.0
07 October	7.8
14 October	8.5
21 October	8.0
28 October	7.6
4 November	7.3
11 November	6.2
18 November	5.0
25 November	5.3

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning which areas Jobcentre Plus offices have replaced Benefit Agency offices and when he expects the remaining Benefit Agency offices to be replaced by Jobcentre Plus offices. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Since the inception of Jobcentre Plus in 2002 we have been refurbishing and replacing the offices of the former Benefits Agency and Employment Service, on a rolling programme, to enable us to deliver the new, integrated Jobcentre Plus service. We are now in the final phase of rollout and every Jobcentre Plus district has live Jobcentre Plus offices and some districts are already completely rolled out. The following table lists all Jobcentre Plus districts, and where they are in the rollout programme.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which Jobcentre Plus contact centres are operating some clerical processes; and if he will make a statement on the (a) reasons for and (b) extent of clerical processing in each case. [34384]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning which Jobcentre Plus contact centres are operating some clerical processes; and if he will make a statement on the (a) reasons for and (b) extent of clerical processing in each case. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus is undertaking a massive change programme. By making substantial investment in improved IT, including the introduction of the Customer Management System (CMS), we are modernising and improving our service to customers which enables us to provide easier access to our services for all our customers, irrespective of their geographical location.

Change on this scale does create challenges in maintaining levels of service. We know that some customers experienced difficulties in getting through to some of our contact centres in August and September. Robust plans were developed and implemented to improve performance. These include the introduction of clerical processes in some contact centres and the combining of the inbound and outbound call where appropriate. We have also strengthened recruitment plans supported by robust training programmes. These plans have been successful and we have seen week on week improvements in customer service since the beginning of September.

On 30 November 2005 nine contact centres were using some clerical processes to process claims. The numbers shown below are the percentage of claims being processed in contact centres using these clerical processes.

Coventry	70
Derby	14
Hastings	53
Lincoln	32
Lowestoft	20
Pembroke Dock	14
Poole	12
Sheffield	48

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on the measures used to assist Employment Service and Benefits Agency staff in the cultural transition to Jobcentre Plus; [34387]

(2) what assessment has been made of staff views on the transition to Jobcentre Plus; and if he will place copies in the Library. [34388]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning the measures used to assist Employment Service and Benefits Agency staff in the cultural transition to Jobcentre Plus and the assessments made on staff feedback related to this transition. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive.

The Jobcentre Plus programme, called 'Pulling Together', was at the heart of our aim to create and sustain a unified culture within Jobcentre Plus. It was delivered in every Jobcentre Plus site and its objectives were:

Embedding the DWP Values in all teams—Our Values are, Achieving the Best, Making a Difference, Looking Outwards and Respecting People

Developing leadership skills

Giving our people the tools and support to build the new culture

Improving the level of customer service

Sharing good practice so that teams would take forward the best of both legacy agencies

The spirit of Pulling Together was established as being something for local units to implement, with a deliberately 'light touch' from the centre. Fundamental to Pulling Together activity was the development of action plans to address local issues linked to the programme's key objectives. Facilitated planning sessions provided the opportunity for our people to consider issues relating to their transition to Jobcentre Plus. Any issues which could not be resolved locally, were fed up the line for resolution at either regional or national level.

Following the success of the Pulling Together programme we have recently launched our new Culture Change programme, called Working Together which focuses on providing our managers with the support, resilience and tools they need to lead their people through change. It also addresses the cultural issues emerging from our staff survey results.

The annual DWP Staff Attitude Survey provides a key mechanism for our people to comment on a range of important issues. I will arrange for a copy of the 2004 survey and the key actions we took in response, to be placed in the House of Commons Library. This feedback enables us to identify those areas where we can take action to address emerging issues and improve our working environment.

These annual surveys provide a good picture of how things are working and changing across our business. We place great importance on the feedback received from our people and are always looking to improve the way we capture this information.

I hope this is helpful.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what services are provided by Integrated Jobcentre Plus customer-facing offices. [34389]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding what services are provided by integrated Jobcentre Plus customer facing offices. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus is gradually replacing social security offices and Jobcentres. Our customers can now make enquiries about their benefits and about job opportunities in one place.

The services available in our customer facing offices include:

Personal Advisers to provide tailored support to our customers and help with job readiness;

telephone contact facilities through dedicated 'customer access phones' giving access to other Jobcentre Plus services;

a new appointment system to reduce queuing and waiting times; benefit assessment at the new claims stage;

touchscreen 'Jobpoints' giving access to the largest database of vacancies in Europe;

general advice and direction; and

'employer suites' in some offices—providing recruitment facilities for employers.

The design and layout of the Jobcentre Plus offices also provides a modern, professional and welcoming environment for all our customers.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls have been made by claimants from 'warm phones' within Jobcentre Plus offices to Jobcentre Plus call centres in each month since 2003; how many of these calls (a) were handled by an adviser and (b) received an engaged tone; and what the average wait was to speak to a call centre adviser in each month. [35362]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many calls have been made by claimants from 'warm phones' within Jobcentre Plus offices to Jobcentre Plus call centres in each month since 2003; how many were (a) handled by an adviser and (b) received an engaged tone, and what the average wait was to speak to a call centre adviser in each month. This is something, which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

We do not hold centrally the information required to answer your question on calls from Jobcentre Plus 'warm phones' and this could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many crisis loan applications have been received from people who are waiting for their benefit claims to be processed by JobCentre Plus, broken down by contact centre. [34272]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many Crisis Loan applications have been received from people who are waiting for their benefit claims to be processed by Jobcentre Plus, broken down by Contact Centre. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information is not available in the format requested, as Crisis Loan delivery is not part of the Contact Centre network. Jobcentre Plus is in the process of moving its Crisis Loan application process to a telephony service, for all but exceptional cases. This service will be operated by Social Fund personnel, outside the Contact Centre network. Many Districts are already operating in this way.

I hope this is helpful.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total processing times are for new (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) income support claims in (i) JobCentre Plus areas and (ii) areas where JobCentre Plus is not yet rolled out. [34274]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to reply to your question concerning the total processing times for (a) Jobseeker's Allowance and (b) Income Support claims in (i) Jobcentre Plus areas and (ii) areas where Jobcentre Plus is not yet rolled out. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Department is currently rolling out its integrated Jobcentre Plus offices with 680 sites currently completed. At the same time, we are rationalising and centralising the sites where benefit processing is carried out.

The information is not available in the format requested because processing centres keep statistics about the number of claims that are cleared and how long it took. The statistics show where the claim was processed, not where it originated so processing centres have no means to differentiate between claims that have been made via the new integrated Jobcentre Plus offices and the existing Jobcentres.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what instructions have been issued to Jobcentre Plus and Customer Management System staff on the advice they should offer to customers who state they are suffering financial hardship while awaiting an interview and processing of their claim. [34275]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the instructions issued to Jobcentre Plus and Customer Management System staff on the advice they should offer to customers who state they are suffering financial hardship while awaiting an interview and processing of their claim. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as chief executive of Jobcentre Plus.

If a customer states that they are suffering financial hardship during the inbound call to a contact centre then staff are advised to try to book an immediate call back to complete the claim form. If this is not possible then staff will notify the relevant benefit processing centre to ask them to consider an interim payment or Social Fund referral.

If a customer states that they are suffering financial hardship when we complete the outbound call then contact centre staff aim to arrange for an emergency interview at the local office to progress the claim urgently. If this is not possible then contact centre staff will book the first available appointment and then pass the customers details onto the relevant benefit processing centre for them to consider an interim payment or Social Fund referral.

The instructions issued to staff if Jobcentre Plus advises them of the method of meeting the urgent need and should be considered in order:

hastening the payment of the customer's main benefit;

considering an Interim Payment on account of benefit: (an Interim Payment can be considered paid even if there are delays in arranging a Work Focused Interview);and/or considering a Social Fund Crisis Loan

Jobseekers Allowance (Musicians)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the amount of Jobseeker's Allowance claimed by self-employed musicians since 1998. [36230]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

New Deal

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many long-term unemployed people have been trained in each month of the new deal 50+ scheme in the Canterbury travel-to-work area. [34137]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Information on the number of people being trained through new deal 50 plus in the Canterbury travel to work area is not available. new deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme designed to help people aged 50 or over who have been claiming benefits for six months or more back into the labour market. It is one element of the Government's strategy to address age discrimination and improve the employment prospects of older people. In the constituency of Canterbury, new deal 50 plus has helped around 200 people into work up to August 2005.

Although the new deal 50 plus programme does not contain a training element, personal advisers can refer people on the programme who are interested in training to opportunities offered either by other Jobcentre Plus programmes, or those offered by colleges and other organisations.

Once in work, new deal 50 plus customers can claim a training grant of up to £1,200 for training and development related to the job, and a further £300 for life-long learning.

Pension Credit

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claiming pension credit have (a) enrolled with Jobcentre Plus services, (b) joined welfare-to work programmes and (c) moved into work with Jobcentre Plus support in (i) the UK, (ii) England, (iii) Wales and (iv) Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [34740]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding how many people claiming pension credit have enrolled with Jobcentre Plus services, joined welfare-to work programmes and moved into work with Jobcentre Plus support in the UK, England, Wales and Scotland and if he will make a statement. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Unfortunately, I am not able to provide the information you have requested. We are, however, working to identify Pension Credit recipients as a separate customer group in the future.

Pensions

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the total costs in 2004–05 of (a) basic state pension, (b) second state pension and (c) other benefits paid to UK pensioners in other countries of the European Union. [34788]

Mr. Timms: The available information is in the following tables.

£ per week

Benefit	Total benefit
Basic state pension	12,042,200
Additional state pension	77,700

£ per year

Benefit	Total benefit
Winter fuel payments	4,535,000

Notes:

1. The figures are based on data from the 5 per cent. samples, but they have been adjusted to make their totals consistent with the WPLS data. These figures are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. The data are taken from an extract of PSCS as at 31 March 2005.
3. In certain cases, caseload figures for certain countries are nil or negligible, hence the expenditure has also been suppressed.
4. Certain caseloads produced from the 5 per cent. sample data are under 500 and are subject to a high degree of sampling error, hence the associated expenditure values should only be used as a guide to the current situation.
5. The winter fuel payment estimate includes Gibraltar, Norway, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Switzerland.
6. State pension information is recorded on a weekly basis.
7. Total weekly benefit figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred pounds.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of women aged between (a) 40 and 44, (b) 45 and 49, (c) 50 and 54 and (d) 55 and 59 years would receive less than a full basic state pension if from 2006–07 until their retirement it was assumed they made full national insurance contributions. [35374]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is shown in the following table:

United Kingdom

Age in 2006–07	Number of women with less than a full BSP at SPA, based on own contribution record	Proportion (percentage)
40 to 44	355,000	16
45 to 49	333,000	17
50 to 54	670,000	36
55 to 59	1,304,000	66

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the Lifetime Labour Market Database 2, 2003–04. This is a 1 per cent. sample of the national insurance records.
2. It has been assumed that individuals accrue entitlement to basic state pension between 2003–04 and 2006–07 at the same rate at which they have accrued basic state pension over their working life to date.
3. Every year between 2006–07 and state pension age is treated as a qualifying year for basic state pension.
4. Women who have interacted with the national insurance recording system at some point during their working lives, but who are not estimated to be resident in the UK in 2003–04, are excluded.
5. It is assumed that all women who appear on the Lifetime Labour Market Database 2 in 2003–04 and who are estimated to be resident in the UK, survive until state pension age, and that there is no migration.
6. Figures are given as a proportion of the total number of women in each age group estimated by the Government Actuary's Department to be resident in the UK in 2004.
7. Entitlement to basic state pension is based on women's own national insurance records. Entitlement that may be derived from husband's records is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of paying a full basic state pension, regardless of contributions, to all pensioners aged 75 years or over in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2010, (c) 2020, (d) 2030, (e) 2040 and (f) 2050. [35375]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is in the following table.

Great Britain (£ billion, 2005–06 price terms)

	Gross cost	Net of IRBs	Net of IRBs and tax
2006	2.0	1.4	1.4
2010	2.2	1.6	1.5
2020	2.7	1.9	1.9
2030	2.2	1.6	1.6
2040	2.1	1.5	1.5
2050	2.3	1.7	1.6

Notes:

1. The policy change is assumed to take place from 2006–07.
2. Gross costs are estimated by the Government Actuary's Department and are consistent with the pre-Budget report 2004 assumptions.
3. Savings in income-related benefit (IRBs) such as pension credit and housing benefit, and potential increases in tax revenue, are estimated using the DWP policy simulation model and April 2006 benefit rates. Savings are assumed to be a constant proportion of the estimated gross cost over time.
4. It is assumed that the rate of basic state pension is uprated in line with prices growth (plus underpin) from year to year.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of men in the UK who will reach the age of 65 years in (a) 2006, (b) 2017 and (c) 2027 will have national insurance contributions of (i) 44 years or more, (ii) 41 to 43 years, (iii) 36 to 40 years, (iv) 31 to 35 years, (v) 26 to 30 years, (vi) 21 to 25 years, (vii) 16 to 20 years, (viii) 11 to 15 years, (ix) 6 to 10 years, (x) 1 to 5 years and (xi) 0 years. [35981]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information that is available is in the following table:

National insurance contribution years for men reaching state pension age in the 2004–05 tax year—United Kingdom

	Men
Years	Number	Percentage
0	[1]—	[1]—
1 to 5	[2]1,000	[1]—

36 to 40	14,000	5
41 to 43	15,000	5
44 or more	228,000	81
Total	282,000

[1] Nil or negligible.
[2] High degree of sampling error.

Notes:

1. Figures are shown to the nearest thousand and may not add up due to rounding.
2. Figures exclude people who have interacted with the National Insurance Recording System at some point during their working lives but who are not estimated to be resident in the UK in 2003–04.

3. Figures are based on the Lifetime Labour Market Database 2, which is a 1 per cent. sample of the national insurance records. It is not possible to use this historical information to predict numbers of qualifying years for basic state pension with sufficient accuracy to answer this question for future years as requested. The model used by the Government Actuary's Department to forecast entitlement to basic state pension is based on aggregate level data, that does not permit accurate distributional analysis in the manner requested.
4. Figures refer to the number of qualifying years accrued by men at state pension age in the 2004–05 tax year. For the purpose of this table a year of Home Responsibilities Protection (HRP) is treated as a qualifying year. (Although strictly HRP acts to reduce the requisite number of qualifying years needed for a full basic state pension (BSP), therefore men and women will not always require 44 and 39 qualifying years respectively).
5. For the reason noted in 2, and others, this table should not be used to infer entitlement to BSP. For example:
The first and second contribution conditions must be satisfied to qualify for BSP. The first contribution condition is satisfied through paid contributions from earnings or by paying voluntary Class 3 contributions during one tax year (either must be equivalent to 52 weeks at the Lower Earnings Limit (LEL)). Having satisfied this first contribution condition, a person must acquire a further 9 (for women) or 10 (for men) qualifying years through a combination of contributions and NI credits. This second contribution condition is also known as the 25 per cent. de minimis rule.
The table does not represent any entitlement to BSP that may be derived from a partner's contribution record.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of women in the UK who will reach the age of (a) 60 in (i) 2006 and (ii) 2017 and (b) 65 in 2027 respectively will have national insurance contributions of (A) 44 years or more, (B) 41 to 43 years, (C) 36 to 40 years, (D) 31 to 35 years, (E) 26 to 30 years, (F) 21 to 25 years, (G) 16 to 20 years, (H) 11 to 15 years, (I) 6 to 10 years, (J) 1 to 5 years and (K) 0 years. Winter Fuel Payment

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria were used to decide that the winter fuel payment (a) would not be means-tested and (b) would be paid to British pensioners overseas; and if he will make a statement. [37139]

Mr. Timms: The winter fuel payment is not means-tested because we want a simple and cost effective payment that ensures all pensioners can turn up their heating in the winter months without worrying about the cost.

The payment was introduced to help pensioners in Great Britain with their fuel bills. We are obliged under European law to continue paying the winter fuel payment to people who qualify for a payment in Great Britain and then move to another European Economic Area country or Switzerland.

Unemployment

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of economically inactive (a) men and (b) women are (i) aged 18 to 34, (ii) aged 35 to50 and (iii) aged 51 to 64 years; and how many of each sex in each age range have expressed an interest in working. [31628]

Margaret Hodge: The information requested is in the tables.

Work-based Learning

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been allocated to work-based learning for unemployed adults in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08 at (i) Level 1, (ii) Level 2 and (iii) Level 3. [33357]

Margaret Hodge: The amount allocated for Work-Based Learning for Adults (WBLA) and Short Intensive Basic Skills for this year is set out as follows:

WBLA/SIBS forecast expenditure 2005–06

	National forecast
WBLA	94,432,659
SIBS	11,626,851
Total	106,059,510

Notes:
1. Allocations for the 2006–07 and 2007–08 financial years are not yet available.
2. Figures exclude allowance payments, associated admin costs and nationally funded expenditure.
3. Allocations are not broken down by different levels of training.

Wrexham Benefit Processing Centre

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls to the Wrexham Benefit Processing Centre concerning (a) income support, (b) jobseeker's allowance and (c) incapacity benefit were (i) unanswered and (ii) answered outside the length of time recommended by the Department since closure of the Rhyl Benefits Office. [34622]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 12 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many telephone calls to the Wrexham Benefit Processing Centre concerning (a) Income Support (b) Jobseeker's Allowance and (c) Incapacity Benefit have gone (i) unanswered and (ii) answered outside the length of time recommended by the department since closure of the Rhyl Benefits Office. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As you know, the processing of Jobseeker's Allowance, Income Support and Incapacity Benefit, previously undertaken at Rhyl Social Security Office, transferred to the Wrexham Processing Centre at the beginning of August.

The Processing Centre has a customer service target to answer telephone calls within 30 seconds and to answer 90% of all calls made. The tables below detail the average performance in the period from August to November.

	Total number of:			Percentage of calls offered which are answered
Benefit type	Inbound calls	Calls answered	Calls abandoned
Income Support	87,781	79,660	8,121	91
Jobseeker's Allowance	30,677	27,974	2,703	91
Incapacity Benefit	44,092	41,063	3,029	93
Total	162,550	148,697	13,853	91

Benefit type	Average number of calls not answered within 30 seconds (percentage)
Income Support	47
Jobseeker's Allowance	27
Incapacity Benefit	34

Incoming telephone calls to the Processing Centre are monitored on a daily basis and extra staff have recently been allocated to both the Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance Teams, to process benefits and answer telephone calls. Additionally, we are currently training a number of extra Incapacity Benefit Processors, who are scheduled to take up post in early January. We are confident these steps will help us to significantly reduce the number of calls that are answered outside the customer service target of 30 seconds.

I hope this is helpful.

TREASURY

Child Benefit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rates of child benefit were for (a) the first child and (b) subsequent children in each year since 1980–81; and if he will make a statement. [36184]

Dawn Primarolo: The rates of child benefit since November 1980 are shown in the following table:

£ per week

Date	First child	Other children	One parent benefit
24 November 1980	4.75	4.75	3.00

[3] From 6 July 1998 CHB (LP) ceased for new lone parents. Transitional Protection for existing recipients and some lone parents in receipt of other specified social security benefits.

The rate for the first child has increased by 25 per cent. in real terms since 1997.

Child Trust Fund Accounts

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many child trust fund accounts have been opened using initial vouchers worth (a) £250 and (b) £500. [36811]

Dawn Primarolo: All children eligible for the child trust fund receive a £250 voucher. Children from low income families receive an additional £250 paid directly into their child trust fund account when the family's child tax credit award has been finalised.

Information on the number of child trust fund vouchers issued and the number of accounts opened are published on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child_trust_funds/child-trust-funds.htm. The latest set of figures was published on 30 November 2005.

Closed Religious Orders

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of the tax relief associated with the charitable status of closed religious orders in the last period for which figures are available. [36974]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs do not maintain figures on the cost of tax relief associated with closed religious orders.

Clubs

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) working men's clubs and (b) other private members' clubs there were in (i) Barnsley, East and Mexborough and (ii) South Yorkshire in (A) 1997 and (b) 2004. [35622]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many (a) working men's clubs and (b) other private members' clubs there were in (i) Barnsley East and Mexborough and (ii) South Yorkshire in (A) 1997 and (B) 2004. (35622)

The number of working men's clubs and other private members' clubs recorded on the Inter Departmental Business Register (IDBR) in the specified areas are detailed in the table below. The figures include only such clubs that are registered for VAT.

	Standard Industrial Classification
	55401—Licensed clubs	91330—Activities of other membership organisations not elsewhere classified
Barnsley East PC
1997	10	10
2004	20	20
South Yorkshire county
1997	130	330
2004	145	320

Working men's clubs are included within licensed clubs. Private members' clubs are included within activities of other membership organisations not elsewhere classified. The classification system does not identify working men's clubs and other private members' clubs separately.

These figures are based on the same criteria as used in NS publication "UK Business: Activity. Size and Location" and are consistent with that publication and can be found at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/ukbusiness

All figures have been rounded to the nearest five to avoid disclosure.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35875]

John Healey: Staff costs and administration costs for the Treasury in 2004–05 are shown in Schedule 2 on page 20 of the Department's resource accounts http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/3A6/1E/resource_accounts_2004-5.pdf.

The resource accounts consolidate the costs of the core Treasury, the Debt Management Office and the Office of Government Commerce. All costs for the Treasury and the DMO arise in London. The staff costs of the OGC are analysed by country and region for the purposes of the annually published public expenditure statistical analysis, and the analysis for 2004–05 was as follows.

£000

	OGC	Core Treasury and DMO	Total
Scotland	407	—	407
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,150	—	1,150
Eastern	5,689	—	5,689
London	11,160	60,730	71,890
Total	18,406	60,730	79,136

As a small Department, the Treasury is not required to supply country and regional analyses of other administration costs. The accounting system is not designed to capture costs other than staff costs on a country and regional basis and therefore this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35995]

John Healey: The Treasury paid £1,710,000 in rates in 2004–05, all to the City of Westminster.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35895]

John Healey: Details on individual Departments' non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) are set out in the annual Cabinet Office publication, "Public Bodies". Copies of the 2004–05 publication are available in the Library and can be accessed via:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_public_bodies/public_bodies_directory/index.asp

Information relating to staff employed in Departments and agencies, including by region, is set out in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Civil Service Statistics", which is available in the Library of the House and can be accessed via:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/mangement_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/list_of_tables_and_charts/index.asp

The latest figures are as at 1 April 2004. It is expected that the data as at 1 April 2005 will be published early in the new year.

England and Scotland Expenditure

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the mechanism employed in public expenditure statistical analyses to differentiate between spending that can only be identified on a national basis between Scotland and England and expenditure that can also be identified on a regional basis within England; and how this mechanism affects the allocation of identifiable and non-identifiable expenditure between Scotland and England; [35856]

(2) if he will list programmes in the public expenditure statistical analyses where it is possible to provide a spending comparison between Scotland and England but not between the English regions; how these are allocated in terms of identifiable and non-identifiable expenditure for Scotland and England; and if he will make a statement. [35857]

Mr. Des Browne: Public expenditure statistical analyses (PESA) shows figures for expenditure that can be identified as benefiting a particular statistical region of the UK. Statistical regions include Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and the English regions.

PESA also shows expenditure that cannot be identified as benefiting a particular statistical region of the UK. This is generally expenditure that is deemed to be non-identifiable across the UK. But it also includes some spending in England or England and Wales, where the equivalent spending in Scotland is devolved, and is therefore classified as identifiable for the benefit of Scotland.

This mainly affects certain public order and safety expenditure. Other programmes of expenditure similarly affected but with small effects on the aggregates include elements of enterprise and economic development, environment protection, general public services, science and technology, and agriculture, fisheries and forestry.

The overall effect of treating these spending programmes as non-identifiable is not likely to be substantial when comparing spending per head in the countries and regions of the UK.

In July 2005 HM Treasury sought views from readers for the further development of PESA. The Treasury will be publishing a response to the consultation in the new year. The response will include options for further improvements in the country and regional analysis in PESA, such as whether to increase the extent to which expenditure is attributed to regions—together with a preliminary assessment of the effects of chances and the costs and difficulties of doing so.

Enterprise Summer School (Wales)

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to hold an Enterprise summer school in Wales. [36063]

John Healey: Enterprise summer schools will be rolled out across England, Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales in summer 2007.

EU Budget

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the UK's net contribution to the EU budget in each of the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [36728]

John Healey: The Government's latest forecast of UK net contributions to the EC Budget, which covers the period to 2007–08, was included in footnote 3 to Table B17 of the pre-Budget report (Cm 6701, page 257) published on 5 December 2005.

EU Legislation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the proportion of the burden of administration on business that arises from EU legislation; by how much this burden has been reduced by the European Commission during the EU's presidency; and whether this reduction meets Government targets. [34934]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have been asked to reply.

The Government announced on 15 September this year that a cross-government project to identify, measure then cut the admin burden placed on businesses, charities and the voluntary sector by Government regulation, which includes European Union regulation, had begun.

We have had an active dialogue with the European Commission during our presidency, and are already showing them the benefits of our approach. One third of the legislative proposals that the Commission screened for impacts on competitiveness were withdrawn in September 2005 and a month later, the Commission adopted a simplification programme involving over 1,400 legal instruments.

In addition my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister announced on the day of the CBI conference on Tuesday 29 November that the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Department of Trade and Industry and the Health and Safety Executive are publishing initial draft simplification plans. The results of the measurement exercise, targets and further initial plans for reductions will be published as part of the Budget next year.

Iraq

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of the intervention in Iraq from the beginning of operations until the end of this financial year (a) in total and (b) broken down by each service; and from what budgets that cost has been met. [36060]

Mr. Des Browne: The net additional costs of operations in Iraq, as recorded in the Ministry of Defence's Annual Reports and Accounts total £3,068 million as follows:

Financial year	£ million
2002–03	847
2003–04	1,311
2004–05	910

The costs of operations in Iraq in 2005–06 will depend on force levels and operational tempo.

The net additional costs of operations nave been met from the Reserve. The Treasury does not capture costs for each service.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what activities have been made unlawful by legislation introduced by his Department since 1 May 2001; and if he will make a statement. [36058]

John Healey: The following activities have been made unlawful by legislation made by the Treasury since 1 May 2001:

Making funds available to a person listed under one of the financial sanctions regimes without a licence;

Knowingly or recklessly providing false information in order to obtain a licence to make funds available to a person listed under one of the financial sanctions regimes;

Supplying restricted goods to a person listed under the al-Qa'ida and Taliban (United Nations Measures) Order 2002 (S.I. 2002/111);

Providing technical assistance or training to a person listed under that Order.

The following further activities have been made unlawful by legislation made by the Treasury since 1 May 2001, unless a person has authorisation from the Financial Services Authority:

Issuing electronic money;

Arranging and advising on regulated mortgage contracts;

Dealing as agent and arranging deals in contracts of insurance;

Assisting in the performance and administration of contracts of insurance;

Advising on the merits of buying or selling contracts of insurance.

National Insurance (Musicians)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date his Department informed the Department for Culture, Media and Sport that self-employed musicians were liable to pay Class 1 National Insurance contributions. [36227]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department of Social Security, which was then responsible for policy on National Insurance Contributions issued a press release on 15 July 1998 to announce the revised National Insurance arrangements for actors and musicians and changes to legislation from 17 July 1998. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport were closely involved in the discussions leading up to the changes announced which covered actors and musicians.

Nuclear Energy

Peter Law: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has conducted on the costs of nuclear energy. 35838 [35838]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The 2003 Energy White Paper published the results of extensive modelling of the costs of different options for reducing carbon dioxide emissions over the period to 2050. The analysis is available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/whitepaper/phase2.pdf.

The Department is also aware of other recent studies providing estimates of the costs of nuclear energy, notably those by the Royal Academy of Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Chicago.

In November 2005 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that there would be a review of energy policy which would report in summer 2006. This will involve further analysis of the costs of different options, including nuclear energy, for meeting the Government's long-term targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

Oil Tax

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) jobs and (b) investment in the oil industry in the North Sea of the proposed increase in supplementary oil levy. [36861]

John Healey: The changes announced in the pre-Budget report were subject to detailed analysis to ensure that they delivered the Government's objectives of striking the right balance between oil producers and consumers, by promoting investment and ensuring fairness for taxpayers.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions his Department held with (a) the UK Offshore Operators Association, (b) the trade unions and (c) other interests on (i) oil taxation and (ii) the impact of a supplementary levy for corporation tax on the oil industry. [36862]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have regular meetings with oil industry representatives including UKOOA, the trade unions and individual oil companies. Such meetings will cover a range of issues relating to the oil industry, including the North Sea fiscal regime.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he informed the First Minister of Scotland of the proposed changes to the supplementary levy for corporation tax on the oil industry in advance of his pre-Budget report statement; and what discussions his Department held with the Scottish Executive on the impact on jobs and investment in Scotland of the proposed increase to the levy. [36863]

John Healey: The Chancellor of the Exchequer does from time to time hold discussions with the First Minister of Scotland on a range of subjects. Decisions on taxation are a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Pensions Commission

Lorely Burt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the public expenditure implications of the proposals in the Pensions Commission's second report; and if he will make a statement. [35625]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the affordability of the pension proposals made in the second report of the Pensions Commission; and if he will make a statement. [35695]

Mr. Des Browne: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for East Dunbartonshire (Jo Swinson) on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1445W.

Rent Costs

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35893]

John Healey: The Treasury paid £456,000 in rent in 2004–05, all for properties in London.

Self-invested Personal Pensions

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans (a) to prohibit investment by self-invested personal pensions directly into a residential property, (b) to prohibit such investments if they are for personal use and (c) to allow such investment only through an institutional fund. [36262]

Mr. Des Browne: The Chancellor announced at the pre-Budget report (PBR) that self invested personal pensions (SIPPs) and all other forms of self-directed pensions will be prohibited from obtaining tax advantages when investing in residential property, and certain other assets from April 6 2006.

The Government remain committed to encouraging investment in a range of assets as part of pensions saving and is therefore minded to allow SIPPs to invest in genuinely diverse commercial vehicles that hold residential property, such as the proposed UK Real Estate Investment Trust model (UK-REIT) that was outlined at PBR.

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the chronology was for the development of Government policy in relation to the use of self-invested pension schemes for investment in residential property over the last five years; [36074]

(2) how many (a) Treasury and (b) HM Revenue and Customs staff have worked on the new residential self-invested personal pension proposal over the last four years, broken down by grade; [36062]

(3) what assessment he has made on the likely effect of the changes to self-invested personal pensions announced in the pre-Budget report on (a) take-up and (b) anticipated cost of tax revenue contained in the relevant Regulatory Impact Assessment [36067]

Mr. Des Browne [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Like all policy developments, announcements on pension tax simplification have been made in pre-Budget reports and Budgets and a number of Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs staff have worked on the policy. The Regulatory impact Assessment focused on the impact of pension tax simplification of which self-invested personal pensions are only a small part.

Silent Calls

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 525W, on silent calls, what estimate the Inland Revenue made in 2004–05 of the number of silent calls made from its offices and those of its contractors using predictive dialler technology. [35054]

Dawn Primarolo: Full information is not available on the number of calls where contact was made but operators were not available and it is therefore not possible to make meaningful estimates.

HMRC recognises that silent calls can cause people concern which is why, when using an outbound dialler, a caller line identity is always displayed so anyone missing a call would have the option of calling the number back. Additionally HMRC configures its predictive diallers to ensure the minimum of silent calls in line with Ofcom guidelines.

Tax Allowances

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the tax allowances that have been introduced since 1997; by what percentage each such allowance has changed since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [36464]

Dawn Primarolo: The main rates and allowances are set out each year in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report and Financial Statement and Budget Report. Copies of this are available in the House Library. More detailed information on individual tax allowances and reliefs with an estimate annual cost of at least £50 million can be found in the HM Treasury publication, "Tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs". Recent versions can be found on the HM Treasury website and historic copies are held in the House Library.

Information on minor tax expenditures and structural reliefs where the costs are less than £50 million is published on the HMRC website. Historic versions are published in "Inland Revenue Statistics".

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many tax credit overpayments were disputed in each month from January to October; and if he will make a statement; [19255]

(2) how many disputed cases of overpaid tax credits there were in (a) 2004–05 and (b) each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement. [20013]

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answers to the hon. Member for Tatton of 12 September 2005, Official Report, columns 2385–86W, on tax credits, if he will update the tables to include figures for the months of August to November. [35339]

Dawn Primarolo: For the number of disputed overpayments of tax credits in 2004–05 and for the period 1 January 2005 to 31 May 2005, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2385W to the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Osborne).

The number of disputed tax credits overpayments in each month from June 2005 to October 2005 were around:

Month	Number
2005
June	28,000
July	35,000
August	30,000
September	30,000
October	33,000

The number of disputed overpayment requests for June 2005 has been updated. The figure given in my previous answer only included receipts to the last Friday in the month of June rather than to 30 June 2005.

Information for November 2005 is not yet available.

For the number of appeals recorded against tax credits decisions in each month:

Month	Number of appeals received (UK)
2005
July	2,175
August	2,465
September	1,305
October	1,380

Note:
Rounded to the nearest five cases.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff at the Tax Credits Office have received bonus payments in each month from January 2003 to October 2005; what the total amount of bonuses paid has been; what has been the largest single payment; and if he will make a statement. [28212]

Dawn Primarolo: The (former) Inland Revenue introduced a Team Bonus scheme from 1 April 2003. Team Bonus payments were paid annually to directorates of the Inland Revenue which had contributed exceptionally towards achievement of the Department's PSA targets.

The Tax Credit Office (TCO) qualified for team bonuses in 2003–04 and 2004–05. The maximum amount each individual in the TCO could receive was set centrally for the inland Revenue, according to grade.

In 2003–04 all relevant targets were met and people received the maximum available bonus.

For 2004–05 the targets and achievement were:

Percentage

	Percentage of maximum bonus payment available for achievement of target	Target to qualify for team bonus	Associated PSA Key Target	TCO Performance against Bonus Target
Decide 97 per cent. of claims, change of circumstances and renewals within 30 working days of receipt —excluding ceased household cases.	60	97	95	95.9
Deliver quality casework of which 90 per cent. is fully satisfactory or better than standard	20	90	90	97
Decide 94 per cent. of claims, changes of circumstances and renewals accurately	20	94%	90	96.5

As the first target was not met, bonus payments in 2004–05 were only 40 per cent. of the maximum available.

The number and value of Team Bonus payments made to staff who had worked or were working in the Tax Credit Office (TCO), in 2003–04 and 2004–05 was around:

	Number of individual staff in receipt of annual team bonus payment	Value (£)	Average payment (£)
31 July 2004	3,850	938,542	243
31 July 2005	3,755	425,229	113

The largest single annual payment made was £520, made in 2004.

The Director of TCO has the discretion to award special bonuses to recognise exceptional performance and the dates and values of payments made are:

Quarter ending	Total value of directors bonuses awarded
2003
April	3,700
November	5,650
2004
February	2,925
May	3,750
August	6,500
November	2,550
2005
March	300
May	4,340
September	14,500

The total number of Director's Special Bonus awards for this period was 162, representing around 5 per cent. of staff working in the TCO. The average payment was around £300.

The largest single payment made during this period was £1,000.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average unit cost of processing new claims for tax credits including capital costs was in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05; and what it has been in 2005–06. [31544]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 24 November 2005]: The information requested is not available.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is his policy that money owed to members of the public through the tax credit system may be paid as a lump sum. [33592]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what dates HM Revenue and Customs (a) requested and (b) received a written agreement from Electronic Data Systems to proceed with the compression of testing time for the new tax credit system; and if he will place this correspondence in the Library. [36219]

Dawn Primarolo: Electronic Data Systems (EDS) carried out a range of testing in the run-up to the introduction of the tax credits system on 7 April 2003, with the testing arrangements reviewed regularly. EDS provided a certificate on 4 April 2003 to confirm that the release of software was fit for purpose to deliver new tax credits.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will establish an independent inquiry into the introduction of the new tax credits following the settlement between HM Revenue and Customs and Electronic Data Systems. [36220]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no plans to set up an inquiry into the introduction of new tax credits.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the expected annual cost is of the measures announced by the Paymaster General for the reform of tax credits on 5 December. [36812]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is available in the Pre-Budget report 2005, Table 1.2, "Estimated costs of pre-Budget report policy decisions and others announced since Budget 2005".

Taxation (EU Accession Workers)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of how much workers from the EU accession countries paid in tax in the financial year 2004–05. [36848]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the amount of income tax, VAT and other taxes paid by workers from the EU accession countries is not available from HM Revenue and Customs' records except at a disproportionate cost.

However, in November 2004 the Home Office initially estimated that, for the period May to September 2004, migrants from the accession countries under the Worker Registration Scheme made a fiscal contribution of £20 million in tax and national insurance contributions. The Home Office's research document is available on their website: http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/ind/en/home_news/press_releases/new_figures_show_accession.

Unemployment Rate

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the unemployment rate in (a) Doncaster North and (b) each ward of the constituency was in each year for which figures are available. [35678]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 December 2005:

As National Statistician. I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment. (35678)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment from the Labour Force Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions. Table 1. attached, shows unemployment rates for persons aged 16 and over resident in the Doncaster North constituency. The table covers the 12 month periods ending in February each year from 1997 to 2004 and the 12 month period ending in March 2005.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to sampling variability. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

Estimates of unemployment are not available for wards as the survey sample size for such areas is too small.

However, ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (ISA). Table 2 shows statistics for the number of ISA claimants expressed as a percentage of the resident working age population for the Doncaster North constituency from 1996.

Comparable percentages for constituency wards of Doncaster North are only available from February 2004. Table 3 shows these statistics for the months available to date.

HEALTH

Acute Beds

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute beds have been closed in 2005–06 in each hospital trust in each strategic health authority. [30789]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not centrally collected. However, data on the average daily number of occupied and available beds up to 2004–05 are available on the Department's website at www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Ambulance Service

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from regional ambulance services regarding the impact of the Ambulance Service reconfiguration. [30316]

Mr. Byrne: Ministers and the Permanent Secretary have received correspondence from Cumbria Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust, and Coventry and Warwickshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust.

Officials held a meeting on 13 September 2005 to discuss the proposed reconfiguration of ambulance trusts in England, to which all ambulance trust chairs and chief executives were invited.

The Secretary of State met with the chair and chief executive of Staffordshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust on 28 November 2005.

Officials have also been in contact with ambulance trusts on an adhoc basis.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she intends to make publicly available to assist the relevant authorities in responding to the consultation on Ambulance Service reconfiguration. [30318]

Mr. Byrne: A national consultation document is due to be issued shortly. Strategic health authorities (SHAs) will co-ordinate consultation locally and ensure that relevant authorities and interested parties are able to express their views. SHAs may choose to produce additional local information to assist them in doing this.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the process and methodology used for the Ambulance Service reconfiguration in the Yorkshire region consultation will be the same in each of the four strategic health authorities concerned. [30319]

Mr. Byrne: A national consultation document will be published at the start of the consultation period. Local consultation will be led by strategic health authorities (SHAs). Guidance will be issued to SHAs to support them in this task.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the four ambulance services affected by the reconfiguration in the Yorkshire region will have an opportunity to respond to the strategic health authority response to the consultation before its submission. [30320]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) will lead local consultation on the Department's proposals for the configuration of ambulance trusts in England. SHAs will be expected to consult with local stakeholders, and feed back their views to the Department. The Department would expect this feedback to include the views of ambulance trusts.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time to an emergency call to the Ambulance Service was in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in 2004–05. [31604]

Mr. Byrne: Average ambulance response times to emergency calls are not collected centrally. The data which the Department does collect on ambulance response times is published in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2004–05". This is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf

Anti-cancer Drugs

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of (a) the cost per patient treated with and (b) the effectiveness of clofaribine in achieving remission of acute myeloid leukaemia; [32609]

(2) if she will list the options available to patients recommended for treatment with (a) clofaribine and (b) other expensive new anti-cancer drugs whose local hospital trusts lack the funds to purchase them. [32610]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 30 November 2005]: No estimate has yet been made of the cost per patient treated with, and the effectiveness in achieving remission of, acute myeloid leukaemia (AML) of clofaribine.

Clofarabine is not yet licensed in the United Kingdom and is currently being tested in patients with AML who are older and not able to withstand the usual intensive chemotherapy.

As with other unlicensed treatments, it will be for the clinicians and funding authorities concerned, in discussion with patients, to decide whether to prescribe clofarabine for AML in individual cases.

Where a decision is made not to prescribe clofarabine or any other new cancer treatment, it will be for the clinicians concerned to advise patients on the alternative options for treatment.

We are already putting record amounts of new investment into the national health service—between 2003 and 2008 NHS expenditure in England will increase on average by 7.5 per cent. each year. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) to decide how best to spend these resources taking into account local circumstances.

PCTs have many competing priorities but cancer is a national and local priority. Every PCT will have a sizeable number of people in their area who will be diagnosed with the disease, live with the disease and who die from the disease each year. PCTs will need to ensure they allocate sufficient resource to meet their local contribution to tackling cancer care or other areas.

Birmingham Children's Hospital

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the closure of 10 beds in Ward 3 for children under 12 years with severe mental health problems at the Birmingham Children's Hospital is planned. [31476]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 21 November 2005]: As part of an on-going review of child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS) in Birmingham, some changes in the CAMHS service based at the Birmingham Children's Hospital are being considered in the light of best practice and the needs of the children and young people involved.

Any changes that are proposed will be the subject of formal consultation by the Birmingham Children's Hospital National Health Service Trust under Section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001.

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a person who has been assessed as having above the capital limits for a care home can request (a) regular reviews of their care by social services and (b) social services to arrange the care. [31639]

Mr. Byrne: Local authorities (LAs) have a duty under section 47 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 to assess the needs of a person who appears to them to require community care services. Having decided in the light of that assessment to provide services, they should develop a care plan for that individual. As an individual's need for community care services will vary over time, LAs are required to provide a review date in the care plan. Where a LA decides to provide community care services, it may provide the services itself, or make arrangements for those services to be provided. If a LA decides not to provide services following an assessment, because a person's needs are not eligible for support, the LA should inform individuals that, if their circumstances change, they can apply for re-assessment. Individuals can request a review or re-assessment at any time regardless of the funding position.

An individual's financial circumstances should have no bearing on whether a LA carries out a community care assessment or not. Once an individual's care needs have been assessed and a decision made about the care to be provided, an assessment of his/her ability to pay charges should be carried out promptly. Written information about any charges payable, and how they have been calculated, should be communicated to the individual. The individual is entitled to request the LA to arrange his/her care, regardless of whether he/she or the LA is paying for it.

Chase Farm NHS Hospital Trust

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings took place in her Department in the 2004–05 financial year at which the future funding of (a) Chase Farm NHS Hospital Trust and (b) its accident and emergency department were discussed; and if she will make a statement. [26193]

Mr. Byrne: There were no meetings during the 2004–05 financial year regarding funding of Barnet and Chase Farm National Health Service Hospital Trust and its accident and emergency department.

Dacorum Primary Care Trust

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) syphilis, (b) HIV, (c) lymphoedema and (d) tuberculosis have been diagnosed in the area covered by Dacorum Primary Care Trust in each month since January. [22844]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of cases of lymphoedema and tuberculosis are not held centrally. Data for 2004 on diagnoses of syphilis made within Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) (and not by the patients' area of residence) are shown in table 1. The diagnoses of syphilis were made at genitourinary medicine (GUM) clinics (and excludes primary care).

Damages Payments

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 largest amounts of damages paid out by her Department in the last year for which figures are available, indicating in each case the nature of the claim. [27729]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has made no payments that can be constructed as damages during 2004–05.

Dentistry

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how bad debt to dentists from patients will be dealt with under the new National Health Service (General Dental Services Contracts) regulations; and if she will make a statement. [26808]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new contractual arrangements, dentists will—as now—be responsible for collecting national health service patient charges. The new general dental service and personal dental service contract regulations give primary care trusts new powers of assistance, including financial support to help dentists who are unable to recover the necessary patient charge as a result of a patient's failure to pay the advertised patient charge for NHS services.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the new rules for patient charging for NHS dental services, with particular reference to the bodies responsible for collecting bad debts. [28072]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the proposed new arrangements for patient charges, dentists will—as now—be responsible for collecting national health service patient charges. The new general dental service and personal dental service contract regulations give primary care trusts new powers of assistance, including financial support, to help dentists who are unable to recover the necessary patient charges as a result of a patient's failure to pay the advertised patient charge for NHS services.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the proposed system of units of dental activity was piloted. [32485]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The pilot personal dental services arrangements now cover over 30 per cent. of dentists. These pilots have shown how dentists' behaviour and treatment patterns alter when the item of service payment system is removed and instead dentists receive a fixed income over a 12 month period. We have taken account of these changes in designing the new system of units of dental activity and the proposed system of banded patient charges.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists are foreign nationals, broken down by nationality. [29463]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 21 November 2005]: Data on the nationality of dentists are not centrally available. However, the table shows the numbers of dentists in England who qualified outside the United Kingdom, as at 30 September 2005. Dentists have been counted only once, even if they have contracts in both the general dental service (GDS) and personal dental service (PDS).

Public Involvement

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to publish the results of her Department's strategic review of patient and public involvement in health. [26854]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 10 November 2005]: The Department's review of patient and public involvement (PPI) in health is part of the wider White Paper consultation, "Your health, your care, your say". The results of the review are being fed into the development of the White Paper proposals. The results of the PPI review activities will be made available in the new year and will appear on the Department's website on the policy page for patient and public involvement. Hard copies of the results will also be available on request.

Primary Care Trust Assets

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she expects (a) hospitals and (b) other assets providing clinical services owned by primary care trusts to be treated under her plans for commissioning a patient-led NHS. [28481]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) today.

Hospital Facilities

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts (PCTs) run (a) community and (b) other hospital facilities; and if she will list each such facility, broken down by PCT. [21918]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not centrally available.

Health Services (West Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what process will be used to transfer the services provided by primary care trusts to alternative providers in West Lancashire. [27703]

Mr. Byrne: In our proposals sent out on 28 July, we indicated that we were minded to require primary care trusts (PCTs) to reduce their service-provision functions by the end of 2008. Since that document, we have listened to stakeholders. The policy moving forward, in relation to service-provision, is that this will be a matter for PCTs to determine locally, so any move away from direct provision of services will be a decision for the local national health service within the framework set out in the forthcoming White Paper and after local consultation, including professions allied to medicine.

We will support PCTs who want to do that, but we will not instruct PCTs to do it nor will we impose any timetable. What matters is getting the best services for each community—and that is what the White Paper will focus on.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in (a) the Uxbridge constituency and (b) England received (i) laser eye surgery, (ii) cataract removal, (iii) bladder keyhole surgery, (iv) coronary artery bypass graft, (v) knee replacement, (vi) hip replacement, (vii) ingrown toenail operations and (viii) varicose vein treatment in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average cost was of each type of operation to the national health service. [29771]

Operations

Mr. Byrne: Data on the costs of national health service hospital services are gathered at healthcare resource group (HRG) level, and not at the level of individual procedures. These data are collected as part of the annual reference cost collection.

The following table shows the relevant HRG category aligned with the information requested for the following procedures:

cataract removal
bladder keyhole surgery coronary artery bypass graft knee replacement
hip replacement
varicose vein treatment

All data come from the 2003–04 reference cost collection.

Information on laser eye surgery and ingrown toenail operations is not shown as these costs are not separately identified within the reference cost collection.

Hospital Readmissions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital re-admissions within 28 days have taken place in each of the last 10 years; and how many were of patients aged over 65 years. [28447]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is available only at a disproportionate cost. Similar information on annual trends in re-admission rates including rates for patients aged over 75 years for the six years from 1998–99 to 2003–04, is available on the National Centre for Health Outcomes Development website at www.nchod.nhs.uk.

Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals Trust

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations have been performed by the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals Trust on behalf of other NHS trusts in each year since 1997; [32948]

(2) how many patients have received treatment in private sector hospitals on referrals from the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust in each of the last five years; [32958]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the end of year financial deficit or surplus for the Hull and East Yorkshire NHS Trust was in each year since 1997. [32949]

Mr. Byrne: Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust was established in 1999. The table shows the information requested since 1999.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available in the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust in the last period for which figures are available; and what the occupancy rate was in that period. [32959]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

The average daily number of available beds and occupancy rate for the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust for 2004–05.

Department of Health form KH03

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals Trust has made in integrating services for stroke patients with community health providers and social services. [32963]

Mr. Byrne: The Hull and East Riding stroke service set up its organised stroke care in December 2000. This includes comprehensive facilities for stroke patients in community settings, including three inner city rehabilitation units working in partnership with private nursing home providers and a social services residential home. These are three, eight bedded units one at Rossmore Nursing Home, one at St. Marys Nursing Home and one at Alderson Resource (Social Services). The service has well established neurotherapists working in the community across the rehabilitation facilities.

Work is also underway in the East Riding to develop partnership working further with Social Services to provide day rehabilitation facilities utilising the skills of therapy and health care professionals working together with Social Services.

A service re-design is currently underway to strengthen community health provision for stroke patients further. Community stroke nurse specialists will work together with a team of stroke support workers to support the nurse consultant in stroke with the continuing physical and clinical requirements of stroke patients in community rehabilitation settings and also to develop more support in nursing and residential homes by providing training and expertise to support staff working in those settings.

Hull Royal Infirmary

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many outpatients have been waiting more than 13 weeks for an appointment at the Hull Royal Infirmary following GP referral. [32953]

Mr. Byrne: Information is only available for the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust. As at September 2005, 513 people were waiting more than 13 weeks for a first outpatient appointment. There were no patients waiting more than 17 weeks.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures Hull Royal Infirmary has in place to prevent the spread of MRSA; and whether these meet national best practice. [32960]

Mr. Byrne: The Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust has signed-up to the "Saving Lives" delivery programme which is a key element in reducing methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus and avoidable health care associated infections at a local level. It comprises a number of mutually reinforcing activities which will help the trust implement best practice to reduce infection rates. More detail about local action should be set out in the director of infection prevention and control's report.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients have been admitted to Hull Royal Infirmary Stroke Unit in each year since 1997; [32964]

(2) how many beds there were in the Stroke Unit at the Hull Royal Infirmary in each year since 1997. [32965]

Mr. Byrne: The Stroke Unit at the Hull Royal Infirmary was established in December 2000 and has 24 beds. The number of patients who have accessed the Acute Stroke Unit are as follows:

	Number
2001	668
2002	638
2003	566
2004	559

The Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of Hull Royal Infirmary post-heart treatment rehabilitation services; and how many patients have (a) attended rehabilitation appointments, (b) stopped smoking and (c) made appropriate dietary and exercise changes since the services commenced. [32967]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. Responsibility for local health services lies with the local national health service. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in conjunction with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to plan, develop and improve services according to the needs of the local people.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether patients have access to specialist heart failure nurses at the Hull Royal Infirmary. [32969]

Mr. Byrne: The Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust does provide a heart failure service at the Hull Royal Infirmary, which has benefited from further expansion this year.

Independent Treatment Centres

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of (a) orthopaedic procedures and (b) cataract surgery has been in each independent sector treatment centre carrying out such operations under contract with the NHS. [21495]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The average cost of orthopaedic procedures and cataract surgery cannot be disclosed as the information is commercially confidential.

Influenza Pandemic

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the capacity of NHS isolation facilities and single rooms to isolate cases where necessary in the event of an influenza pandemic reaching alert level 2 in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [22126]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Full information on the availability of isolation facilities is not available but departmental guidance states that new buildings should ideally contain at least 50 per cent. of their beds in single rooms. NHS Estates published guidance in February 2005 to assist local planning for isolation facilities and the Department is considering the need for guidance on ventilated isolation facilities. During a pandemic it is likely that patients would be cohorted rather than kept in isolation.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the proposed changes to primary care trusts on the capacity of the NHS to respond to an influenza pandemic. [30095]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: The Department has formed a national influenza pandemic committee (UKNIPC) to provide specialist advice supported by a scientific advisory group to provide detailed scientific advice on the response to an influenza pandemic. Strategic health authorities, in England, are responsible for overseeing health planning and coordinating the local response. This remains the case irrespective of proposals for service reconfiguration.

Medical Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the (a) three-month staff vacancy rate as a percentage, (b) three-month staff vacancy rate as a number of posts, (c) number of staff in post as a full-time equivalent and (d) number of consultants in post in each (i) strategic health authority, (ii) NHS trust and (iii) NHS mental health trust in London on 31 March (A) 2003, (B) 2004 and (C) 2005, broken down by speciality. [18648]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not hold information in the format requested.

However, information is collected on staff vacancy rates and the number of staff in post which has been placed in the Library. This shows that the number of consultants in England has increased by nearly 3,200 (full-time equivalent) between March 2003 and March 2005 or 12 per cent. The three-month vacancy rate reduced from 4.7 per cent. to 3.1 per cent. in the same period for England as a whole for hospital doctors, excluding those in training and equivalents.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2005, Official Report, column 622W, on medical staff Salaries, what the average salary of a (a) consultant, (b) junior doctor and (c) nurse was in 2004. [29855]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Average annual earnings	Average annual basic salary
Consultants	94,700	74,600
Doctors in training and their equivalents (junior doctors)	47,900	28,800
Nursing and midwifery (qualified)	26,400	22,700
All NHS staff	26,300	22,300

Midwives

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people (a) were employed as midwives in the NHS for the first time and (b) left NHS midwife posts in each year since 1980. [30481]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

However, the following table shows the number of midwives employed in the national health service in each year since 1980.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Registered midwives in England as at 30 September each year

[1] A new system of occupation coding for NHS non-medical staff was introduced in 1995. The new codes classify staff according to what they do rather than the terms and conditions under which they are employed i.e. national pay scales. Figures based on new occupation codes are not directly comparable with those based on the old pay scale classification. Therefore figures since 1995 are not comparable with earlier years.

[2] From 1982 onwards data is taken from the Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census. Prior to 1982 data is taken from the Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England (HPSSS). Data from HPSSS contains hospital-based staff only and is therefore not directly comparable with later years.

Notes:
Figures are rounded to the nearest whole number.
All figures exclude learners and agency staff.

Modernising Medical Careers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of the modernising medical careers training structure on (a) junior and (b) middle-ranking doctors; [30312]

(2) how many positions for junior and middle-ranking doctors were available (a) immediately before and (b) immediately after modernising medical careers was introduced. [30313]

Mr. Byrne: The launch of the foundation programme as the first phase of modernising medical careers (MMC) in August this year saw some senior house officer (SHO) posts converted to SHO equivalent foundation year two posts but this conversion did not affect the overall number of posts available for doctors working at the SHO level.

The MMC proposals for specialist training have yet to be agreed in detail. The proposals would see the gradual phasing out of the SHO grade to be replaced by structured programmes of training leading to the award of a certificate of completion of training.

Current SHOs will not be disadvantaged in the new training system and MMC will be working closely with the Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board and Medical Royal Colleges to ensure that all are treated fairly.

We have consulted widely on these proposals and will continue to engage with stakeholders, including the British Medical Association, to manage transition.

In the September 2004 census, the number of medically qualified SHOs and equivalents was 20,094 in England. This was an increase of 1,882 (10 per cent.) from the previous year and an increase of 5,514 (38 per cent.) since 1997. The census is a count of doctors on particular salary scales or their equivalents, not a count of doctors with a particular job description. These figures therefore include trust doctors, clinical fellows and other such posts.

NHS Bursaries

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many eligible students who applied for NHS bursaries for their courses had not received their bursary by (a) the first week and (b) the first month of their course in 2005–06. [24546]

Mr. Byrne: I am informed by the NHS Pensions Agency who are responsible for the NHS student grants unit that it is not possible to pay bursaries within one week of the start of their course. The other information requested is not available but I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Steve Webb) today.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long on average an individual waited when claiming an NHS bursary from the point of application to the point of receiving the allowance in 2004–05. [26559]

Mr. Byrne: I am informed by the NHS Pensions Agency that for new students in the academic year 2004–05, the average waiting time from claiming a national health service bursary to payment was 53 days.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken to reduce the time taken for an individual to receive the NHS bursary. [26560]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Billericay (Mr. Baron) on 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1233W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff are employed to deal with applications for NHS bursaries. [26561]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS student grants unit is part of the NHS Pensions Agency. The NHS Pensions Agency employs 67 staff (65.71 whole-time equivalent) to deal with applications from national health service bursaries.

NHS Capital Expenditure

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total NHS capital expenditure has been in each year since 1990. [25283]

Mr. Byrne: The table shows public capital expenditure from 1990–91 to 2004–05.

In addition, private sector investment through the private finance initiative in national health service facilities is estimated to have reached £4 billion to date. Of the 139 hospital schemes authorised to go-ahead, 56 are complete with 32 under construction. The estimated total value of schemes authorised to proceed is over £19 billion.

41 NHS local improvement finance trust schemes totalling around £700 million have reached financial close.

NHS Executives

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS executives will be paid more than £200,000 in 2005–06. [30672]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally.

Information on salaries of executives of national health service organisations are published in their annual reports and accounts.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what spending on the NHS in England has been in (a) real terms and (b) nominal terms in each year since 1990; and what estimate she has made of expenditure on the NHS in England in each year until 2007–08. [18378]

Mr. Byrne: The information in the table shows the growth in total net national health service expenditure in nominal and real terms (2004–05 prices).

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria she uses to determine when she intervenes in individual funding decisions taken by (a) primary care trusts and (b) other NHS bodies; and what steps she is taking to ensure NHS organisations are informed of these criteria. [28712]

Mr. Byrne: Revenue allocations are made directly to primary care trusts (PCTs) and it is for PCTs to determine how to use the funding allocated to them to commission services to meet the health care needs of their local populations.

The Secretary of State would only intervene in funding decisions made at a local level in very exceptional circumstances. There are no pre-determined criteria for intervention; rather it is a matter of judgment and full consideration of the issues in any given situation.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library the most recent month's forecast of financial position for each NHS organisation submitted to the Department by each strategic health authority. [29826]

Mr. Byrne: The 2005–06 forecast financial position at month six for all national health service organisations was announced on 1 December and copies placed in the Library. This information is also available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 266W, on NHS finance, whether it is her intention that control totals for each strategic health authority are set so that the net sum of control totals nationally is œ0; and from which budgets deficits are met when all the control totals set across England add up to a sum of less than œ0. [31118]

Mr. Byrne: Decisions on the individual control totals for all strategic health authorities or their net sum have not been finalised.

NHS Pension Scheme

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether pensionable service of women doctors in the NHS scheme between 1972 and 1988 is taken into account when calculating the eventual widowers' pensions. [21255]

Mr. Byrne: In line with the 1986 Social Security Act, the pensionable service of female scheme members between 1972 and 1988 is not taken into account in calculating a widower's pension unless an option was made to purchase pre 1988 service.

NHS Postholders

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) chairmen and (b) chief executives of (i) strategic health authorities, (ii) special health authorities, (iii) primary care trusts and (iv) NHS (provider) trusts have been in post for (A) less than one year, (B) one to three years, (C) four to six years, (D) seven to nine years and (E) 10 or more years. [29957]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 21 November 2005]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Professionals

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost to the NHS is for a week's work from (a) a nurse and (b) a doctor employed through (i) an agency and (ii) NHS professionals. [25825]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

NHS Reorganisation

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many requests she has received to refer NHS reorganisation to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel; how many she has agreed; and if she will make a statement. [20404]

Mr. Byrne: As at 30 November 2005 there have been eight referrals to the Secretary of State. The overview and scrutiny committee right of referral is to the Secretary of State who may choose to seek advice from the Independent Reconfiguration Panel (IRP). Since its establishment, the IRP has provided formal advice to the Secretary of State on one case-in East Kent.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the redundancy costs of the latest proposals for the reorganisation of the NHS. [25726]

Mr. Byrne: Local consultation on proposals for reconfiguration of strategic health authorities and primary care trusts is due to start on 14 December 2005 and will last for 14 weeks. Until this process has been completed and decisions taken, it is not possible to calculate reliable redundancy costs.

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) ambulance trusts, (b) primary care trusts and (c) strategic health authorities she expects to complete reconfiguration by the end of this financial year; and how many in each category will be reconfigured during the course of the next financial year. [31203]

Mr. Byrne: Changes to strategic health authorities will precede changes to primary care trusts, and any changes to the latter will not commence before April 2006.

We expect that most ambulance trusts will begin to be established from 1 July 2006.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the proposed re-configuration of primary care trusts is still expected to deliver a 15 per cent. reduction in costs as set out in the letters of 28 July from Sir Nigel Crisp to primary care trusts. [30777]

Mr. Byrne: Each strategic health authority has confirmed that reconfiguration proposals will achieve their share of the national management cost savings of £250 million or 15 per cent.

NHS Staff Training

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what ways the private medical sector participates in the training of NHS (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) other medical staff; and if she will make a statement. [29773]

Mr. Byrne: The private and independent sectors have traditionally taken an active part in training doctors, for example, by offering training placements, in palliative care, plastic surgery, occupational health medicine and latterly in pharmaceutical medicine. The national health service takes advantage of training opportunities in all these specialties.

We have told independent sector treatment centres providing a service to the NHS that they will be expected to provide appropriate training for doctors and for other staff whether employed directly by them or on secondment from the NHS.

NHS Student Grant Unit

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications have been (a) received and (b) processed by the NHS student grant unit for students starting their courses in September 2005; and how many grants have been awarded to date. [25539]

Mr. Byrne: I am informed by the NHS Pensions Agency who are responsible for the NHS student grants unit that the unit received over 25,000 applications for new students starting their courses in September 2005. All of these applications have been processed.

As at 5 December 2005, over 77,000 grants in total have been awarded by the NHS student grants unit.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the performance of the NHS Student Grant Unit in processing application forms for grants for the 2005–06 academic year. [25540]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS student grants unit is part of the NHS Pensions Agency. As a special health authority, the NHS Pensions Agency is independent of the Department, and the chief executive and board are responsible for the operational affairs and the day to day management of the authority.

I am aware that there have been some delays in processing applications for students starting their studies in the academic year 2005–06. As at Friday 25 November 2005, the NHS student grants unit was back within the target of processing 95 per cent. of bursary applications within 20 working days of receipt, providing they receive a correctly completed application form.

Nurses

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of hospital trusts' deficits on nurse recruitment. [23705]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 15 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1175–76W.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applicants' fees the Nursing and Midwifery Council accepted from overseas nurses in each of the last five years, broken down by country of origin. [21223]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 October 2005]: The Department does not hold the information requested. The Nursing and Midwifery Council is an independent body. The hon. Member may wish to approach the Council for this information.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many decision letters have been issued by the Nursing and Midwifery Council to prospective candidates for the Overseas Nursing Programme in each of the last two years, broken down by (a) positive and (b) negative decisions. [29318]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 November 2005]: The overseas nurses programme was introduced by the Nursing and Midwifery Council on 1 September 2005.

Data on registrations is not collected by the Department.

PCT Mergers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the possible effects on funding for local charities and health advisory organisations of the proposed merger of primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement. [31374]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect any information on grant funding of the voluntary and community sector by primary care trusts (PCTs), therefore I am unable to comment on possible effects on funding for local charities and health advisory organisations of the proposed reconfiguration of PCTs.

For those strategic health authorities, who propose change to the boundaries of PCTs, we have asked for evidence to demonstrate how existing successful partnerships with local partners and local responsiveness can be maintained and improved.

PCT Professional Executive Committees

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which staff groups are represented on the professional executive committees of primary care trusts; whether she expects this composition to change following the reorganisation of primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement. [31012]

Mr. Byrne: The membership of the professional executive committees (PECs) of primary care trusts (PCTs) is as follows:

the chief executive and director of finance of the PCT

two persons who are employed by a relevant local social services authority at least one public health member at least one, but no more than seven of each of:

medical practitioners

such other professional members as, in the opinion of the PCT, reflect the functions carried out by the trust

There are currently no plans to change the composition of PECs. No decisions on the reorganisation of PCTs will be taken until a full three month consultation has been completed.

Premature Babies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether an assessment of the impact of post traumatic stress and time off work for parents whose premature babies have contracted bronchiolitis or chronic lung disease has been made; and if she will make a statement. [30156]

Mr. Byrne: No assessment has been made by the Department into the impact of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and work absence on the parents of premature babies who have contracted bronchiolitis or any of the respiratory illnesses associated with the respiratory syncytial virus.

National health service organisations were given guidance on the management of PTSD in adults and children in primary and secondary care by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) in March 2005. Local NHS organisations should review their existing clinical guidelines, care pathways and protocols in the treatment and management of PTSD in the light of this guidance, and revise them accordingly.

The NICE guidance is available on its website at www.nice.org.uk/CG026NICEguideline. This guideline should be used in conjunction with the national service framework for mental health, which is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/07/72/09/04077209.pdf.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it remains her policy to require primary care trusts to divest themselves of their provider status by 2008; and if she will make a statement. [24824]

Mr. Byrne: Any move away from direct provision of service will be a decision for the national health service locally, within the framework to be set out in the forthcoming White Paper and after local consultation with a range of stakeholders including staff. We will support primary care trust (PCTs) who want to make such a change, but we will not instruct PCTs to do it, nor will we impose any timetable. What matters is securing the best services for patients locally, which is what the White Paper will focus on.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has withdrawn the July advice to primary care trusts to divest themselves of the staff who provide services to patients. [25614]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 November 2005]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice), today.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her policy on the (a) commissioning and (b) provider roles of primary care trusts. [26296]

Mr. Byrne: Any move away from direct provision of services by primary care trusts (PCTs) will be a decision for the local national health service within the framework set out in the forthcoming White Paper and after local consultation, including staff.

We will support PCTs who want to do that, but we will not instruct PCTs to do it, nor will we impose any timetable. What matters is getting the best services for each community—and that is what the White Paper will focus on.

Private Patients

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total revenue derived from private patients in the NHS was in each of the last 10 years; [31347]

(2) what the total cost of providing private patients with care in NHS hospitals has been in each of the last 10 years. [31348]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not collect information on the cost of providing private patients with care in national health service hospitals. Income from private patients treated in NHS hospitals are shown in the following table:

£000

	Total income from private patients treated in the national health service
1995–96	207,448
1996–97	235,733
1997–98	273,232
1998–99	290,840
1999–2000	304,826
2000–01	316,660
2001–02	341,763
2002–03	369,073
2003–04	386,481
2004–05	316,081

Public Engagement Contracts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 991W, on public engagement contracts, what the value is of the contract tendered to run the consultation exercise "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say"; how many and which companies bid for the contract; and on what date it was decided to award the contract to Opinion Leader Research. [18127]

Mr. Byrne: The current value of contract with Opinion Leader Research (OLR) for the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" consultation is £952,104. Three companies responded to the tender, ICM Research, Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) and OLR. The contract was awarded 25 July 2005.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she has defined a personalised care plan for the purposes of measuring the achievement of 2004 public service agreement target number 4. [29806]

Mr. Byrne: A key aim of public service agreement target number 4 is to improve health outcomes for people with long term conditions by offering a personalised care plan for those people with the most complex conditions. The initial focus for achievement of the target has been on the recruitment and training of the case managers who will be responsible for drawing up and agreeing care plans with patients. Further work on defining the care plan and how this should be measured is in progress and the outcome will be shared with the national health service early in 2006.

Quality and Outcomes Framework

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact that the quality and outcomes framework has had on the treatment of conditions which are not covered by quality and outcomes framework clinical indicators, with particular reference to osteoporosis. [29387]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 November 2005]: The Department has commissioned the National Primary Care Research and Development Centre at the University of Manchester to undertake an evaluation of the impact of the quality and outcomes framework (QOF) on quality of patient care. The study covers three clinical conditions: asthma, angina and type two diabetes, which are all covered by the QOF. However, the range of indicators against which quality of care will be assessed includes some that are outside the QOF; it does not include osteoporosis. This study will be able to assess the extent to which QOF and non-QOF elements of clinical management of these conditions are provided in general practice.

Student Nurses

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to speed up the distribution of NHS bursaries for student nurses. [25440]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Billericay (Mr. Baron) on 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1233W.

Temporary Medical Staff (Costs)

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the NHS of (a) agency nurses, (b) agency doctors and (c) total agency staff in (i) England, (ii) each strategic health authority and (iii) each NHS trust have been in each year since 1997. [22118]

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS spent on temporary (a) nurses and (b) doctors in each of the past five years. [25823]

Mr. Byrne: The Department collects expenditure information on non-national health service staff for primary care trusts (PCTs), NHS trusts and strategic health authorities (SHAs). Non-NHS staff expenditure figures include all agency staff and any other staff not directly employed by these bodies.

Expenditure on agency staff in the NHS in 2004–05 dropped to four per cent. of the NHS pay bill. This information with explanatory notes has been placed in the Library. The rise in agency staff spend over the years covered in the tables has tracked the rise in established posts over the period.

Reducing agency spend is part of the Department's contribution to the 6.5 billion Gershon Efficiency target and the 10 human resource high impact changes as highlighted in "A workforce response to local delivery plans; a challenge for NHS Boards".

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time in hospitals in (a) Staffordshire, (b) the West Midlands and (c) England has been in each year since 1997. [22155]

Mr. Byrne: The median waiting times for inpatient admission at hospitals in Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority, the West Midlands and England in each year since 1997 are shown in the table.

Estimated average time patients have been waiting for elective admission, March 1997 to June 2005—Provider based

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1160W, on waiting lists/times, whether the statement on page 57 of the NHS Improvement Plan that there would be 100 per cent. e-booking by December ever had the status of a Government target. [29871]

Mr. Byrne: No, the statement never had the status of a Government target.

School Nurses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many additional school nurses have been employed since the publication of the Public Health White Paper. [30785]

Mr. Byrne: School nurses were counted fully for the first time in the September 2004 national health service workforce census, two months before the 'Choosing Health' White Paper was published in November 2004.

The census showed that there were 2,409 qualified nurses working in school nursing, the next count will be available from the September 2005 census which will be published in March 2006.

Western General Hospital

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to bring payment by results for emergency procedures at Western General hospital into force as soon as possible. [30935]

Mr. Byrne: Final decisions on the scope and structure of the tariff in 2006–07 have not yet been made. These will be made once Ministers have considered the recommendations of departmental advisory groups.

Providers will only be operating at full tariff by 2008–09. In the meantime, the introduction of the tariff will be gradual, with transitional adjustments to provider's tariff income.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 13 December 2005

TREASURY

British Film Industry

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what financial assistance the UK Government have provided to the British film industry in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [36463]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1323W to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess).

Cancer

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for cancer in each of the last five years in Forest of Dean constituency. [36247]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 13 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what the (a) diagnosis and (b) mortality rate was for cancer in each of the last five years in the Forest of Dean constituency. I am replying in her absence. (36247)

The most recent available information on registration of newly diagnosed cases (incidence) and mortality are for the years 2003 and 2004, respectively. As population estimates by age and sex are not available for parliamentary constituencies, age-standardised incidence and mortality rates (directly standardised to the European standard population) are given in the table below for all malignant cancers in the Forest of Dean local authority between 1999 and 2004.

Directly age-standardised incidence and mortality rates per 100,000 population[1] for all malignant cancers[2] in the Forest of Dean[3] local authority, 1999–2004

	Incidence	Mortality
1999	398.7	194.6
2000	341.3	160.1
2001	320.8	183.5
2002	323.1	185.4
2003	375.7	186.2
2004	—	175.5

[1] Rates are directly standardised to the European standard population. In detailed analyses of trends in incidence and mortality over time for a particular cancer, ONS use age-standardised rates. These control for differences in the size and age structure of the population and allow unbiased comparison of rates over time.
[2] Figures for malignant cancer incidence are based on the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10), codes C00-C97, excluding non-melanoma skin cancer code C44. Cancer mortality figures are based on the Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 140–208 for the years 1999–2000, and ICD-10 codes C00-C97 for the years 2001–2004. Deaths were selected using the original underlying cause.

Child Poverty

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to increase the financial support available to large families as recommended in the Treasury's 2004 child poverty review. [36778]

Dawn Primarolo: Between 1998–99 and 2003–04, the risk of poverty for children in families with three or more children has fallen more quickly than the average risk. However, the Child Poverty Review highlighted the fact that these families remain at greater risk of poverty than other families, and that nearly half of children in poverty live in large families.

Since the review, the Government have increased the child element of the child tax credit (CTC), which is paid in respect of each and every child in a family and so of particular benefit to large families. The child element rose by £65 a year in April 2005 and will rise by a further £75 a year in April 2006, to £1,765. As a result of these and other Government reforms to the personal tax and benefit system since 1997, by April 2006 families with three or more children with an income of between £10,000 and £20,000 per year, for example, will be on average £100 per week better off in real terms.

The Government have committed to increasing the child element at least in line with earnings in 2007–08. The Government have also commissioned research into poverty in large families to inform future policy, which is expected to report in 2006.

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the savings from freezing the family element of child tax credit over the next three years. [36739]

Dawn Primarolo: Government forecast for spending on tax credits assume the family element remains at the same nominal rate. There are therefore no such savings.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional costs arising from changes to the childcare tax credit over the next three years. [36740]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government want families to be able to afford flexible, high quality child care that is appropriate for their needs. Therefore, the 2004 pre-Budget report announced that:

> the limits of the child care element of the working tax credit would be increased to £300 a week (£175 for one child) from April 2005; and > the maximum proportion of costs that can be claimed would increase from 70 per cent. to 80 per cent. from April 2006.

The costs of these measures were published in table B4, p201, in the 2004 pre-Budget report.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications for child tax credit awards have been made by families with (a) one disabled child,

(b) two disabled children, (c) three or more disabled children, (d) one severely disabled child, (e) two severely disabled children and (f) three or more severely disabled children in each month since April 2003. [36806]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on applications for child tax credit awards made by families with disabled and severely disabled children, on a monthly basis, is not available.

Information on awards to in-work families with disabled children are detailed in Tables 5.2 and 5.4 of the HMRC publication 'Child and Working Tax Credits Provisional awards at April 2005'. This details the number of in-work families benefiting from the disabled child element and the number of in-work families benefiting from the severely disabled child element. This publication can be found on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm

Children's Deaths

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children died in hospital of an infection in each of the last 10 years; and what proportion of children's deaths such deaths comprised in each year. [37332]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many children died in hospital of an infection in each of the last 10 years; and what proportion of children's deaths such deaths comprised in each year. (37332)

The most recent year for which information on deaths is available is 2004. Figures are given in the table below for all infectious and parasitic diseases in each year from 1995 to 2004.

Number of deaths from infectious or parasitic diseases[1] which occurred in hospital[2] in children aged under 16, England and Wales, 1995 to 2004[3]

Calendar year	Number of deaths	Percentage of all deaths in children
1995	223	3.8
1996	217	3.7
1997	218	3.9
1998	226	4.2
1999	227	4.3
2000	188	3.8
2001	178	3.7
2002	130	2.8
2003	149	3.1
2004	140	3.0

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 001–139 for the years 1995 and 2000, and Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes A00-B99 from 2001 onwards.
[2] NHS and non-NHS general hospitals.
[3] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.

City Academies (VAT)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of extending the provisions of section 33 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994 to city academies. [37330]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No estimate has been made.

Citygate Public Affairs Ltd.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings the Department has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36752]

John Healey: The Department does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Company Regulations

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the meetings held between his Department and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister at which the decision to remove the obligation on businesses to publish operating and financial reviews was discussed. [36722]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In line with the Government's commitment to simplifying company law and reducing the regulatory burden on business, the Government have decided to replace the requirement for quoted companies to produce a statutory Operating and Financial Review with a requirement to produce an enhanced Business Review. This aligns the reporting requirements of quoted companies with the requirements of the European Accounts Modernisation Directive and demonstrates the Government's ongoing commitment to strategic forward-looking narrative reporting.

The Chancellor consulted with ministerial colleagues prior to making this decision. There were no meetings between the Treasury and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on this issue.

Consumer Debt

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average level of consumer debt was in (a) Essex, (b) England and (c) Wales in the last period for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the level of debt in other parts of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [37555]

John Healey: Figures from the Bank of England showed that the level of unsecured consumer debt in the UK in October 2005 was £191,406 million, of which £56,334 million is credit card debt and £135,072 million other. Official regional and average data are not available. The growth in unsecured lending is now at its lowest in over 10 years.

Death Rate (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the death rate was for (a) cancer and (b) heart disease in (i) Lancashire, (ii) the North West and (iii) Chorley in the last period for which figures are available. [36772]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 13 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what the death rate was for (a) cancer and (b) heart disease in (i) Lancashire, (ii) the North West and (iii) Chorley in the last period for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence. (36772)

The latest year for which the figures requested are available is 2004. These are given in the attached table.

Death rates[1] from cancer and coronary heart disease[2] in the county of Lancashire,[3,4] North West government office region and the local authority of Chorley,[4] 2004

Age standardised death rates per 100,000 population[1]

	Cancer	Coronary heart disease
Lancashire	195	123
North West	195	131
Chorley	199	124

[1] Rates per 100,000 population standardised to the European Standard Population.

[2] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10). The codes used are listed as follows:

Cancer (malignant neoplasms)—ICD-10 C00-C97;

Coronary Heart Disease—ICD-10 120–125.

Deaths were selected from those registered in 2004 using the original underlying cause.

[3] The figures provided relate to the current county of Lancashire. This excludes the unitary authorities of Blackburn and Darwen, and Blackpool, created in 1998, which were part of the former county.

[4] Usual residents of these areas.

Defined Benefit Schemes

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the factors affecting a change in tax relief on pension contributions going into defined benefit schemes; and if he will make a statement. [37147]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Following extensive consultation the Government are introducing a single regime for the taxation of pensions with a single set of rules for all pensions schemes, including defined benefit schemes, from 6 April 2006 There will be two key controls within the new system—a lifetime allowance—initially set at £1.5 million and an annual allowance, initially set at £215,000.

The impact of any further change for defined benefit schemes would depend on a number of factors such as the specific funding, demographic and accruals of any individual scheme.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) higher rate tax relief and (b) basic rate tax relief was applied to (i) defined benefit private sector schemes, (ii) defined benefit public sector schemes and (iii) approved pension schemes in the last year for which figures are available. [37148]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Chris Huhne) on 24 October 2005, Official Report, column 52W.

It is not possible to provide such a breakdown for defined benefit private sector schemes or defined benefit public sector schemes.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [37402]

John Healey: Requests for Treasury Ministers or officials to give oral or written evidence to the devolved legislatures are considered on a case by case basis. Account is taken of the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" (July 2005), the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note No.12 "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the Devolved Legislatures" and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles governing the provision of information to select committees of the House of Commons are contained in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

Departmental Relocation

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [32262]

Mr. Des Browne: Details of the number of departmental civil service jobs relocated to Scotland by HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) prior to April 2004 are not available.

In delivering against its commitment to relocate jobs following the report by Sir Michael Lyons, HMRC have moved 44 posts from London and the South East to Scotland since April 2004.

HM Treasury has not relocated any posts to Scotland in the years in question.

Departmental Skills Development Plan

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's Skills Development Plan. [23859]

John Healey: A copy of the Department's Skills Development Plan has been deposited in the House of Commons Library.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36277]

John Healey: The Treasury has taken the following steps to provide support to staff with mental ill-health: advice and practical support from the Department's welfare officer providing access, where necessary, to accredited counsellors, psychotherapists and referrals to mental ill health units via the NHS; alternative working patterns as part of the department's work-life balance policy; phased and monitored return to work after sick-absence; and adjustments to workloads and objectives.

All employees benefit from the Department's work-life balance policy and have access to the welfare officer and to the Treasury's Supporters Network—a group of staff, independent of management, trained to support and offer advice to colleagues. Additional support is available from the Department's Disability Advisory Group, and other staff representative groups as well as from a confidential helpline administered by an external company.

The Treasury has an effective disability strategy in place to support all employees with disabilities and to provide for reasonable adjustments as required under the Disability Discrimination Act. The next Department-wide disability awareness-raising seminar in January 2006 is on stress awareness and mental health.

Domestic Fuel Bills

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate (a) the yield of an extension of the climate change levy to domestic household fuel bills in the 2005–06 financial year and (b) the average increase in such bills which would result. [37056]

John Healey: Extending climate change levy, at full current rates, to all taxable fuel use by the domestic sector in 2005–06 would have yielded approximately £1 billion. The average increase in fuel bills would have been around £40 per household.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34043]

John Healey: The number of HM Treasury's employees who have taken early retirement in each year since 1997 is as follows:

	Number
1997	4
1998	7
1999	6
2000	9
2001	6
2002	7
2003	8
2004	8
2005	8

These figures include those who have retired early on compulsory, flexible, ill-health or approved grounds.

e-Government

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps HM Revenue and Customs has taken in the last 12 months in conjunction with the US Administration to advance electronic government. [36280]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC is a member of the OECD (Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development) and an active participant in the Forum on Tax Administration's Taxpayer Services group. Through this forum, we share information and best practice with other fiscal authorities including the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

In addition, in July 2005 I asked Lord Carter of Coles to advise Ministers on measures to further increase the use of HMRC's key online services, building on his previous review of payroll services.

During the course of the review, Lord Carter and his team met a wide range of customers and agents, and spoke to those overseas tax authorities where there are high levels of online filing and some interesting and innovative approaches. This included discussions with the US Internal Revenue Service.

Lord Carter has completed his review but wishes to assess the progress of HMRC's online services over the next few months, before finalising his conclusions by early spring 2006.

Employment (Forest of Dean)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of employment was in Forest of Dean constituency in each of the last five years; and how many people in the constituency were not in education, employment or training in each year. [36871]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 13 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. I am replying in her absence. (36871)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of employment from the Labour Force Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions. Table 1 shows the estimated number of people aged 16 and over in employment resident in the Forest of Dean constituency.

Table 2 shows the number of people of working age resident on the Forest of Dean constituency who are not in full-time education, employment or training.

Both tables cover the 12 month periods ending in February each year from 2001 to 2004 and the 12 month period ending in March 2005.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

Equitable Life

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the parliamentary ombudsman on the time scale for the completion of his investigation into the prudential regulation of Equitable Life. [37452]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The parliamentary ombudsman's investigation into the prudential regulation of Equitable Life is, like all such investigations, being conducted in private. The Treasury is co-operating fully with the investigation.

The timetable for the completion of the parliamentary ombudsman's investigation is a matter for her.

EU Budget (UK Rebate)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of the UK rebate within the EU Budget. [36698]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the House on 5 December.

Game Rearing Farms

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 10 October 2005, Official Report, column 292W to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South, (Mr. Hancock) on game rearing farms, what estimate he has made of the amount of revenue which has been lost due to game farms in Scotland not being accurately registered for non-domestic rates. [36801]

Dawn Primarolo: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Gershon Review

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in reassigning 13,500 civil service posts to frontline services as identified by the Gershon Review. [36622]

Mr. Des Browne: The PBR 2005 announced that over 5,700 reallocations to the frontline had been made by the end of September 2005. The Department for Work and Pensions made 4,211 reallocations and Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs made 1,560 reallocations.

Government Borrowing Requirements

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the Government's borrowing requirements for the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [36694]

John Healey: Tables B9 and B10 in annex B of the pre-Budget report 2005 set out the Government's latest projections for public sector net borrowing up to 2010–11.

Insurance Premium Tax

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the level of fraud cases relating to the insurance premium tax since 1997. [37153]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Treasury is not aware of any continuing or growing level of fraud in relation to insurance premium tax. However, as with all taxes, the situation is kept under close scrutiny.

Nuclear Power

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the use of public funds (a) to support existing nuclear power generation capacity, (b) to deal with (i) past and (ii) future nuclear waste arising from power generation and (c) to support the construction of new nuclear plant generation capacity. [17136]

John Healey: The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made a statement to the House of Commons on 7 March 2003 setting out the basis on which Government was prepared to provide support to British Energy. The documents setting out the relationship between British Energy and the Government are available on the Department for Trade and Industry website and on 23 November 2005 the Secretary of State was questioned by the Environmental Audit Committee about Government's relationship with British Energy.

The liabilities from past and present nuclear generation will be managed by the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. The Energy Act 2004 allowed for the creation of this body and it began operating in April 2005.

The future of nuclear power will be considered by the Energy Review led by the Energy Minister, Malcolm Wicks. The Review will be taken forward in the context of the Government's commitment to sound public finances and will take account of all short-term medium-term and long-term costs and liabilities to both the taxpayer and energy user.

Oil Tax

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's share in tax was of the average value of a barrel of North sea oil in (a) May 2002 and (b) November 2005. [37122]

Dawn Primarolo: All North sea oil taxes are profit related. Direct tax is estimated to have accounted for 27 per cent. of the average value of a barrel of oil produced in May 2002 compared with 33 per cent. in November 2005 which reflects the increased share per barrel of oil accounted for by producers' profits between the two periods.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the net financial impact on the UK oil and gas industry of the proposed changes to the North sea tax regime. [37125]

Dawn Primarolo: The changes in tax liabilities for the UK oil and gas industry resulting from the reform of the North sea fiscal regime announced in the 2005 pre-Budget report are shown in table 1.2 of the 2005 pre-Budget report.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he expects to be the value to the oil and gas industry of the new ring fenced expenditure supplement contained in the pre-Budget report. [37126]

Dawn Primarolo: The ring fenced expenditure supplement is targeted at North sea oil companies that do not have sufficient profits to take immediate advantage of the 100 per cent. capital allowances for investment in the North sea. These are likely to be new entrant companies or others who invest heavily in the North sea and are an important sector for the continued vitality of oil and gas production in the UK. The value of the supplement will build up over time and is forecast to reduce tax liabilities by around £25 million by 2011–12.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the increase in corporation tax supplementary charge on oil company future investment in the North Sea. [37160]

Dawn Primarolo: The changes announced in the pre-Budget report were subject to detailed analysis to ensure that the North Sea tax regime delivers the Government's objectives of striking the right balance between oil producers and consumers by promoting investment and ensuring fairness for taxpayers.

Personal Debt

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men, (b) women and (c) households in (i) England and Wales, (ii) Northamptonshire and (iii) Kettering constituency are estimated to have personal debts excluding housing mortgages of over £10,000; and what the equivalent figures were (A) 10 years ago and (B) in 1997. [36139]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 December 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the number of (a) men, (b) women and (c) households in England and Wales, (ii) Northamptonshire and (iii) Kettering Constituency that were estimated to haye personal debts excluding housing mortgages of over £10,000. (36139)

The information requested is not available.

The only information available is national data on household debt. The household debt (excluding mortgage debt) was £319.8 billion at the end of 2004 compared with £156.8 billion at the end of 1997 and £132.4 billion at the end of 1994. On a per head basis, the household debt (excluding mortgage debt) was £6,727 at the end of 2004 compared with £3,439 at the end of 1997, and £2,935 at the end of 1994.

Public Appointments

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36692]

John Healey: The Treasury has not made any such appointments.

Science Cities

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the number of science cities. [37128]

John Healey: In the 2004 pre-Budget report and in Budget 2005, the Government supported plans by the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) to develop six "science cities" in Manchester, Newcastle, York, Birmingham, Nottingham, and Bristol. These science cities are developing plans that respond to their particular strengths in terms of research and economic development. It is for RDAs to take the lead role in identifying science cities and detailed implementation plans, in line with their wider strategies for regional economic development, science and innovation.

Self-invested Personal Pensions

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government is taking to encourage investment in self-invested personal pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [36810]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Pensions tax simplification replaces eight different sets of rules with a single unified regime. It removes unnecessary obstacles to retirement planning and saving across the whole spectrum of pension saving. Lifetime allowances give much more flexibility about when a person can save, so if a person can only afford to start saving for a pension late in life, there is plenty of headroom to boost those savings when it is affordable for a person to do so.

All pension savers, including the lower income groups, will benefit from the lower administration costs of simplifying the numerous existing regimes into one, so the cost savings can be passed on via increased pension benefits.

Legislation (Sunset Clauses)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [37405]

John Healey: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the false use of Department for Work and Pensions staff identities in fraudulent tax credit claims. [35727]

Dawn Primarolo: I am aware that a number of DWP staff appear to have had their details used by others to claim tax credits. This matter is now the subject of a criminal investigation involving HMRC and DWP therefore it would not be appropriate to comment further at this stage.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been employed by his Department in dealing with complaints about tax credits in each month since April 2003. [20014]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

It is not possible to isolate the total number of people employed by HM Revenue and Customs to deal with complaints about tax credits. Staff in various parts of the Department may handle complaints about tax credits, but for most this would be in addition to other work.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the reasons why people have been overpaid tax credits; [23213]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reasons why people have been overpaid tax credits in Northern Ireland. [25780]

Dawn Primarolo: Analysis of overpayments suggests that they result from a number of factors: income rises from one year to the next; families overestimating the extent to which their income has fallen when they seek extra support during the year; provisional payments made at the start of the tax year, which are based on out-of-date information that is subsequently updated when the award is renewed; and delays in reporting changes in families' personal circumstances to HMRC.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent performance of the tax credits system. [36087]

Dawn Primarolo: I would refer the hon. Member to my statement to the Treasury sub-committee of 26 October 2005, HC 524-ii and my written statement of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 55WS.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of meetings (a) held between HM Revenue and Customs and the former Inland Revenue and the HMRC Tax Credits Consultation Group and (b) of the related working parties since 2003. [36225]

Dawn Primarolo: The work of the Consultation Group is covered by a confidentiality agreement. HMRC values the skills and expertise of the group and does not wish to lose the ability to discuss policy matters in confidence.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many notifications of a change of address by recipients of tax credit awards have been received in each month since April 2003. [36794]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely cost of paying tax credits from April 2006 to claimants when their income rises by less than £25,000, as announced by the Paymaster General on 5 December. [36826]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of increasing the income disregard for tax credits to £25,000 in each of the next three years; [36839]

(2) what estimate he has made of the savings arising from requiring families to return their tax credit renewal forms by the end of August in each of the next three years; [36840]

(3) what estimate he has made of the effect on public funds over the next three years of assuming a family's income rises in line with average earnings while waiting for income information relating to the renewal of a tax credit award. [37143]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of the measures announced on 5 December, including the rises in the disregard to £25,000 and shortening the renewal date to the end of August, are set down in table 1.2 of the 2005 pre-Budget report (Cm6701). It is not possible to produce robust estimates of the impact of individual elements of the package of measures as there are significant interactions between the different components.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of families receiving tax credits he expects HM Revenue and Customs to contact over the next three years to check if there have been any changes in income or circumstances. [36841]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to him on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 83W regarding HM Revenue and Customs' (HMRC) pro-active pilot. HMRC will consider the findings of the pilot carefully to determine the benefits of introducing pro-active customer contact as part of its day-to-day business, how many families to contact and when.

As I stated in my written statement to the House on 5 December 2005, from 2007 HMRC plan to contact key groups of claimants near to the renewals window to obtain more up-to-date information on which to base the next year's payments while the finalisation process is completed. Information on the numbers that HMRC will contact is not yet available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the National Audit Office has informed him that it intends to begin an investigation into the introduction of the new tax credits. [37144]

Dawn Primarolo: I have not been informed of any plans to conduct such an investigation. The content of the National Audit Office's work programme is a matter for the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints have been received by the hon. Members' tax credit hotline in the last 12 months. [37238]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) does not keep separate records of the number of calls to its MP Hotline facility that involve a complaint.

Tax Returns

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax returns were filed incorrectly by individuals in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004; and what measures were undertaken by HM Customs and Revenue to ensure that those individuals who filed incorrect statements and subsequently paid too much tax were reimbursed promptly and efficiently. [36279]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC assess the accuracy of filed self assessment tax returns using its automated risk assessment system and through an annual random inquiry programme. Figures are not yet available for the years requested because all inquiries must be completed before analysis. If, upon capture of the information on the return, a repayment of tax is found to be due, the repayment is made automatically from the computer system.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average (a) direct and (b) indirect cost per Pay as you Earn return was in the last period for which figures are available; and what the average cost per self-assessment online return was in that period. [36284]

Dawn Primarolo: The current averaged direct cost (paybill) of processing a paper self assessment return is £5.46. Indirect costs (overheads excluding IT) are a further £4.42. (HMRC are unable to differentiate costs between those self assessment tax returns relating to PAYE taxpayers and those returns relating to others).

The current averaged cost of processing an online self assessment return are direct costs £0.97 and indirect costs a further £0.62.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the loss of tax revenue in a year consequent on errors in tax returns; and what guidance he (a) has issued and (b) plans to issue to reduce the number of such errors. [36297]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC assesses the accuracy of filed returns using its automated risk assessment system and through an annual random inquiry programme. This was reported in the NAO report "Filing of Income Tax Self- Assessment Returns" that was published on 22 June 2005 and can be found on the NAO's website at http://www.nao.org.uk/.

HMRC helps taxpayers file accurate returns through the information and support available on its website, telephone call centres and helplines, inquiry centres, written guidance, and through its tax offices. HMRC's enabling programme seeks to improve the accuracy of future tax returns through targeted intervention and guidance.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make available guidance to those who make a mistake when completing on-line self-assessment tax returns; [36298]

(2) what steps his Department takes to offer guidance to an individual who makes a mistake when completing an on-line self-assessment tax return. [36299]

Dawn Primarolo: Guidance for completing self-assessment returns is available online at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/individuals/tmaself-assessment.shtml.

Customers completing a self-assessment return online are guided through the return and are only asked questions that are relevant to their return. Help is available through help buttons on questions and context sensitive help for technical terms and phrases.

There are on screen validation checks as the user moves between pages and the whole return is validated before submission to ensure that the data provided is arithmetically correct and that all relevant questions have been completed.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) why HM Revenue and Customs reduced the target e-filing tax returns by 2005 to 25 per cent.; and what recent assessment he has made of whether that target will be reached; [36302]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of progress towards the national target of 35 per cent. of electronic filing of tax returns by 2007–08. [36303]

Dawn Primarolo: The Modernising Government White Paper initially set a target that 100 per cent. of all Government services were to be available online by 2005, and a 50 per cent. take-up of those services should be achieved. This was reflected in the Inland Revenue Public Service Agreement 2001–04.

The Inland Revenue revised this overarching target based on their understanding of the market and set specific targets for each of the services it provides. These were agreed with the Treasury.

The departmental Public Service Agreements for 2003–06 and 2005–08 are posted on the HMRC Internet site. HMRC has a target of 25 per cent. of SA returns filed electronically 2005–06 and 35 per cent. by 2007–08.

HM Revenue and Customs expects to achieve its target of 35 per cent. of Self Assessment tax returns received online by March 2008.

Tender Specification Documents

Tim Farron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has conducted into the quality of tender specification documents issued by public bodies to private organisations bidding for public contracts; and if he will (a) conduct a sampled investigation into (i) the quality of these documents and (ii) what additional costs and inefficiencies are created in the bidding process due to poorly written documents and (b) produce guidance to assist public bodies in drafting clearly comprehensible tender specification documents. [37579]

John Healey: No such research has been conducted by the Departments and agencies responsible to Treasury Ministers, neither is any planned. Guidance on best practice in procurement, and project and programme management (including model terms and conditions for the purchase of goods and services) is available for public authorities on the Office of Government Commerce's website www.ogc.gov.uk.

Trust Schools (VAT Status)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value added tax status will be of the trust schools proposed in the White Paper, Higher Standards, Better Standards for All. [37331]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Trust schools, as with any other school, will be subject to the VAT rules set out in the VAT Act 1994.

Unclaimed Assets

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the funds that will be recovered in unclaimed assets from bank accounts held by (a) account holders whose last known residence was in Scotland and (b) banks in Scotland. [36710]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As announced in the pre-Budget report 2005, based on the definition that unclaimed assets should generally cover accounts where there has been no customer activity for a period of 15 years, initial record searches by the industry suggest that several hundred million pounds may currently lie unclaimed.

This figure is for the UK as a whole.

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how unclaimed assets from dormant bank accounts of account holders last known to be resident in Scotland will be used. [36711]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As announced in the pre-Budget report 2005, the Government believes that where owners and their assets cannot be reunited, the money should be reinvested in the community, particularly in deprived communities, in a sustainable way, through a co-ordinated delivery mechanism, with a focus on youth services that are responsive to the needs of young people, and also on financial education and exclusion. There would be an option for small locally-based financial institutions to focus on these needs in their local communities.

The Government and the industry will continue to work together, to develop the best structure to deliver this approach, and will consult with stakeholders such as organisations representing the interests of young people and the Commission on Unclaimed Assets.

VAT (Charities)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government will implement the European Sixth VAT Directive Article 13A(1)(f) to enable charities to claim tax relief when they work collaboratively. [37290]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) have considered a number of cases where it was claimed that Article 13A(1)(f) of the Sixth VAT Directive applied. In each case VAT exemption was already available under UK law, or the transactions in question did not meet all the conditions of Article 13A(1)(f).

However, the Government keep all taxes under review and HMRC are in discussion with the charitable sector about a range of VAT issues.

Working Tax Credits

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) are eligible for and (b) have received the working tax credits in the Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency. [36987]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the numbers of those entitled to working families' tax credit are not available at constituency level.

Estimates of the number of recipient families of working families' tax credit from 2001–02 broken down by constituency appear in the quarterly WFTC and DPTC geographical analyses. These publications can be found on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Figures for the child and working tax credits can also be found at this address.

SCOTLAND

Air Passengers (Financial Protection)

8. Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Department for Transport about the financial protection of air passengers on flights to and from Scotland. [35564]

Mr. Darling: Financial protection for air passengers is dealt with through UK and EU legislation.

Reserved Matters

9. David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with chief constables in Scotland on reserved matters. [35565]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend has had no such discussions other than in June this year when he met the chief constables of two Scottish police forces to receive oral briefings on security preparations for the G8 summit at Gleneagles.

Energy Needs

10. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister on Scotland's energy needs for winter 2005–06. [35566]

Mr. Darling: I have regular discussions with the First Minister on a range of issues.

Shipbuilding

11. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent steps the Government have taken to help the shipbuilding industry in Scotland. [35567]

David Cairns: Scottish shipbuilders compete on a commercial basis and I congratulate the two yards who won orders for civilian ships in recent weeks. The Government itself is a significant customer for Scottish shipyards engaged in military shipbuilding. The Ministry of Defence and members of the shipbuilding industry are working closely together to develop a comprehensive maritime industrial strategy to sustain maritime capability in the long-term.

Asylum and Immigration

13. Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues and the First Minister on asylum and immigration issues in Scotland. [35569]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend meets Cabinet colleagues and the First Minister regularly to discuss a wide range of issues.

Electoral Arrangements

14. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the report from the Arbuthnott Commission on electoral arrangements in Scotland will be published; and if he will make a statement. [35570]

Mr. Darling: I expect to receive the Arbuthnott Commission report in the course of January.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Parliamentary Questions

34. Ben Chapman: To ask the Leader of the House what recent representations he has received from hon. Members regarding tabling of parliamentary questions during the summer recess. [36661]

Nigel Griffiths: This issue has been raised in business questions and my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House remains open to other representations.

Ministers remain accountable for the work of their Department in recesses, and Members can and do correspond with them during recesses.

Constituency Office Staff

Sarah Teather: To ask the Leader of the House how many cases of violence towards hon. Members' staff in constituency offices have been made known to House authorities in each year since 1997. [35579]

Nigel Griffiths: This information is not recorded centrally. Members should report cases of violence towards them, to the House authorities.

A central House of Commons budget may contribute to the costs of security measures taken in the constituency to safeguard Members' staff, their equipment and themselves.

Ex Members of Parliament (Service Provision)

Barbara Follett: To ask the Leader of the House what recent assessment he has made of the level of services available to hon. Members who lose their seats. [36663]

Nigel Griffiths: Members who lose their seats are eligible for assistance through the Resettlement Grant and through the Winding Up Allowance.

The Administration Select Committee has been conducting an inquiry on this subject. Its report will be presented to the House in due course.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Cleaners (Pay Dispute)

35. David Taylor: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what recent discussions the Commission has had with contractors and trade union representatives on the dispute with cleaners in the House. [36664]

Nick Harvey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Cardiff North (Julie Morgan).

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Victims of Crime

19. Mr. Simon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what measures her Department has introduced to improve support for victims of crime. [36646]

Ms Harman: We have invested over £3 million this year to improve the safety and comfort of victims of crime.

We will give bereaved relatives of victims of homicide a right to speak to the court after conviction but before sentence. At present, though they are the people most affected by the crime, they are the only ones who have to remain silent throughout the court proceedings.

I met last month with the Deputy Lord Chief Justice and have today written to him to tell him that we are considering piloting allowing victims relatives to speak in courts in about five courts from April next year.

Under consideration are

London

Nottingham/ Sheffield/ Leeds.

Birmingham

Cardiff

Exeter and Winchester

Liverpool/Manchester

Compensation Culture

20. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she is taking to tackle the potential growth of a compensation culture. [36647]

Bridget Prentice: The Government are taking forward a wide programme of work to prevent a compensation culture from developing; to tackle perceptions that can lead to a disproportionate fear of litigation and risk averse behaviour; to discourage and resist bad claims; and to improve the system for those with a valid claim for compensation. The Compensation Bill is an important part of that work.

Community Law Centres

22. Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the role of community law centres. [36649]

Bridget Prentice: Community law centres play a key role in helping some of the most vulnerable and disadvantaged people in society. Their benefit to local communities is made possible by committed and dedicated staff.

Freedom of Information Act

23. Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the response of local authorities to applications under the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [36650]

Ms Harman: My Department does not formally monitor local authorities' performance in responding to applications under the Freedom of Information Act, to avoid imposing an administrative burden.

However, the impression from independent surveys is that under the Freedom of Information Act the public are accessing a huge amount of new information.

Data Protection Act

24. Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the Data Protection Act 1998. [36651]

Ms Harman: The Data Protection Act provides a robust framework of protection for individuals' data which properly balances that right with the legitimate interests of other individuals and organisations.

Union of Democratic Mineworkers (Industrial Injury Claims)

25. John Mann: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to regulate the activities of the Union of Democratic Mineworkers as a claims handler for industrial injuries. [36652]

Bridget Prentice: The Compensation Bill will provide the legislative framework to introduce the statutory regulation of claims management activities. We intend to use the secondary legislation to exempt trade unions regulated by the Certification Officer from the new provisions, probably subject to conditions such as having regard to the regulators code of practice. Any claims management company established, owned or run by a trade union would not be included in any exemption.

Domestic Violence

26. Mr. Flello: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on specialist domestic violence courts. [36653]

Ms Harman: This is a joint initiative. My Department wrote to all magistrates courts committees on 15 December 2004 asking for expressions of interest in setting up a specialist DV court (SDVC). The responses were analysed, and a selection process established the first 25 specialist domestic violence court systems across England and Wales.

Legal Professions (Diversity)

27. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she is taking to increase diversity in the legal professions. [36654]

Bridget Prentice: On 23 November I published a report setting out the actions that the Government will take to ensure that talent in the legal profession is drawn from all sections of society, regardless of background.

Voting Systems

28. Andrew Miller: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of voting systems used in the United Kingdom. [36655]

Ms Harman: An internal review of the experiences of the new UK voting systems introduced for the devolved Administrations, the European Parliament and London Assembly elections is being conducted by officials within my Department. It is at an early stage, and any decisions regarding the next steps for the review will be taken in due course.

Coroners

29. Jon Trickett: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on her review of the role of coroners. [36656]

Ms Harman: Our review of the coroner service is due to conclude soon and I will be in a position to make a full statement on our proposals for reforming the service next year.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the sentinel birds at the quarantine centre in Essex were treated for avian influenza virus after the death of other birds was reported. [31472]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 24 November 2005]: The sentinel birds at the quarantine centre in Essex were not treated for the avian influenza virus. However, they were culled and tested for the disease, as is required by the quarantine rules. All were found to be negative.

Beef Imports (Brazil)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of imported Brazilian beef on (a) British farmers and (b) the UK beef industry. [33575]

Jim Knight: The United Kingdom is not self-sufficient in beef and requires supplies from third countries such as Brazil to meet consumer demand. Each year, around half of the beef imported into the UK from outside the European Union comes from Brazil. Such imports are a valuable source of raw material for our processing industry.

Our beef industry currently faces a number of challenges, including those arising from the ending of production based CAP subsidies and also in relation to the ending of the Over Thirty Month Scheme for cattle. My noble Friend, the Minister for Food and Farming (Lord Bach) recently hosted a high level meeting to bring the supply chain together to discuss the future, at which he also announced a package of measures worth around £8 million to help the beef sector move forward.

Cockle Beds (Pilling Sands)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Minister for Nature Conservation and Fisheries will make an official visit to Pilling Sands before a decision is taken by the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee to re-open cockle beds there. [34871]

Mr. Bradshaw: The decision to re-open cockle beds at Pilling Sands rests with the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. I have no plans to make an official visit to Pilling Sands.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 30 November 2005, Official Report, columns 505–06W, on the Countryside Stewardship Scheme, if she will list the additional green spaces that have become accessible in Worcestershire as a result of the Access Management Grant Scheme. [36244]

Jim Knight: A new right of public access on foot to open country and registered common land was created by the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, and was commenced in Worcestershire on 31 October 2005. The Access Management Grant Scheme is intended to facilitate public access to this land, by helping to pay for local management planning/consultation, and for on-site infrastructure such as gates, stiles and signage. Public access to the following areas of access land in Worcestershire has been facilitated through the provision of on-site infrastructure under the Scheme:

Area
Upper Ham, Kempsey	Signage
Pursall Green, Elmbridge	Signage, gate
Uckinghall Meadow, Ripple	Signage
Lower Ham, Kempsey	Signage
Ankerdine Common, Doddenham	Signage
Pipers Hill Common, Dodderhill	Signage, gate, fencing
Pound Green Common, Upper Arley	Signage
Hartlebury Common, Hartlebury	Signage, path
Powick Hams, Powick	Signage
Waseley Hills, Romsley	Signage, gates, linear route
Asharn Meadow, Birlingham	Signage

Dairy Herds

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average size is of a dairy herd in England. [35225]

Jim Knight: The average size of a dairy herd in England is 88 cows.

Notes:

1. The figure is the total number of dairy cows divided by the number of holdings with dairy cows.
2. Dairy herd classified as all dairy cows and heifers that have calved.

June Agricultural Survey.

Since 1984 UK production has been constrained by milk quota where penalties are incurred if total production goes over pre set limits. During this period cow numbers have declined while average milk yield per cow has increased allowing total production to remain relatively stable at the level of quota.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK dairy farmers have cattle herds of over 1,000. [35231]

Jim Knight: There a very few (under five) holdings with more than 1,000 dairy cows. To protect confidentiality of individual holding information as required by the Agricultural Statistics Act (1979), we are not able to release the precise number given the small numbers involved.

Figures for the other UK countries fall under the jurisdiction of the devolved authorities.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of her Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34045]

Jim Knight: Defra was created in June 2001 and the following table shows the number of employees who have taken early retirement since then.

	Defra	Executive Agencies
2001[1]	22	5
2002	57	7
2003	72	9
2004	64	14
2005[2]	53	19
Total	268	54

[1] 9 June to 31 December.
[2] 1 January to 30 November.

The above figures include those who have retired voluntarily with an actuarially reduced pension, those who have retired with benefits under the civil service compensation scheme and those who have retired on ill-health grounds.

Fishing Jurisdiction (Isle of Man)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent (a) discussions, (b) meetings and (c) correspondence she has had with the Isle of Man Government in relation to the extent of its fishing jurisdiction; and if she will make a statement. [35318]

Mr. Bradshaw: There have been no discussions, or meetings between the Isle of Man Government and DEFRA Ministers in relation to its recent proposals to extend the Isle of Man's fishing jurisdiction from 3 to 12 miles. I have had correspondence from the Isle of Man Government regarding the proposals and DEFRA, along with the devolved Administrations in Scotland and Northern Ireland, consulted stakeholders on them in the summer. A decision on the outcome of the consultation will be communicated to the Isle of Man Government in due course.

Milk Price

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average retail price is of a litre of milk in the (a) UK and (b) each EU member state; and if she will make a statement. [35226]

Jim Knight: Average retail prices per litre of milk from 1975 to 1993 are shown in the following table. More recent prices of milk are only available from the statistical offices in the member states and would take disproportionate cost to collate.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the relationship between supermarkets and dairy farmers; and if she will make a statement. [35230]

Jim Knight: Supermarkets and dairy farmers have an indirect commercial relationship largely through intermediary companies such as milk buyers and processors. We are encouraging dialogue between all parts of the supply chain through the Dairy Supply Chain Forum, chaired by my noble Friend, the Lord Bach, as we believe the challenges facing the sector can be solved only by collaborative action.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the average real terms retail price per litre of milk in the UK in each year since 1975. [35232]

[1] Average prices have been calculated from separate monthly surveys of milk purchasers conducted in England and Wales by Defra, in Scotland by SEERAD and in Northern Ireland by DARD. The surveys were introduced following changes to the milk marketing arrangements in 1994–95. The farm gate price is the average price received by producers, net of delivery charges. No deduction has been made for the superlevy.

Poultry Farming

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department has issued to poultry farmers about making preparations to comply with any future instruction to contain their poultry under cover; what financial assistance her Department is making available to assist poultry farmers to comply with such an instruction; and if she will make a statement. [37283]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has issued guidance, agreed with industry representatives, to keepers on how they might comply with a requirement to keep their birds separate from wild birds, where practicable.

The guidance can be found on the Defra website at: http://defraweb/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/ai/pdf/separating.pdf

There are no plans to provide financial assistance to poultry farmers or others who might be required to separate their birds from wild birds as a result of a threat or the event of an outbreak of avian influenza.

Racehorses (Whipping)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of whipping on racehorses; and if she will make a statement. [36157]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department has not evaluated or commissioned any research on the effect of whipping racehorses.

Rights of Way

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) byways and (b) bridleways have been added to the definitive map in England and Wales since the enactment of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 as a result of (i) a statement of action in a Rights of Way Improvement Plan and (ii) a Definitive Map Modification Order under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. [36827]

Jim Knight [holding answer 12 December 2005]: It is unlikely that any byways or bridleways have been added to the definitive map in England and Wales as a result of a statement of action in a Rights of Way Improvement Plan. These plans do not need to be completed until November 2007.

The majority of authorities have begun work on a plan, but only three have completed their plan—Cambridgeshire county council, Devon county council and the City of York. These plans have only recently been adopted and have not, as yet, resulted in any new byways or bridleways being added to the definitive map.

Information about the total number of Definitive Map Modification Orders under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 is not collected by DEFRA. This information is held by local highway authorities and could be gathered only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what total area of land has been dedicated for equestrian access under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [36828]

Jim Knight [holding answer 12 December 2005]: No landowners in England have yet dedicated land for horse riding under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. However, I have recently approved a £1.2 million Countryside Agency research project which will explore and demonstrate how the dedication mechanism can be used to improve public access to the countryside. The project will raise awareness of dedication as well as deliver a number of actual dedications. Most dedications are likely to be for access on foot, but the agency will encourage landowners to consider dedicating suitable land for access by horse riders.

Access for horse riders features strongly in the Strategy for the Horse Industry in England and Wales, which I launched last week, and I am keen to explore with the horse industry a wide range of ways in which opportunities for safe, off-road riding can be increased.

Waterways (Moorings/Marina Berths)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions British Waterways has had with the British Marine Federation on disputes over the provision of moorings and marina berths alongside waterways; and if she will set up a protocol to deal with such disputes.[36931]

Jim Knight [holding answer 12 December 2005]: This is an operational matter for British Waterways. However, I recently met its Chairman who confirmed that both he and his executives have had a number of discussions with the President of the British Marine Federation and its executives to explore their differing views on the interpretation of competition law in respect of British Waterways' marina operations. British Waterways has developed a protocol and put in place a wide range of processes and procedures to demonstrate that its marina subsidiary is operating within the law. There still remain differences of opinion which both sides are working to resolve.

Winter Snowfall (Worcester)

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the predicted total winter snowfall in Worcester is for (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030 and (d) 2050. [32983]

Mr. Touhig: I have been asked to reply.

During the 21st century, snowfall is expected to decrease over the United Kingdom as a whole. This is a consequence of further warming of climate expected as a result of past and future emissions of greenhouse gases and aerosols into the atmosphere. However, the predicted changes vary with location, and are subject to considerable uncertainties arising from the natural variability of climate, errors in the representation of physical processes in climate models, and uncertainties in future emissions. Therefore, it is possible that some parts of the UK could experience periods of increased snowfall during the next few decades. During the second half of the century, however, snowfall is very likely to be lower than at present, in all parts of the country.

For Worcester, the latest climate model predictions are expressed as percentage changes relative to the climate of the past 30 years. The predictions show a wide range of possible values, due to the uncertainties previously noted. For a typical year around 2010, snowfall could range from about 15 per cent. above the recent recorded levels to about 30 per cent. below. For 2020, values range from a 10 per cent. increase to a 35 per cent. reduction. For 2030, values range from a five per cent increase to a 40 per cent. reduction. For 2050, values range from a five per cent reduction to a 60 per cent. reduction. Within these ranges, the best estimates are for reductions of about five per cent, 10 per cent, 20 per cent. and 30 per cent. at 2010, 2020, 2030 and 2050 respectively.

TRANSPORT

Airspace (Extraordinary Rendition)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers he has to deny access to UK airspace. [34631]

Ms Buck [holding answer 12 December 2005]: UK law on civil air operations is governed by the UK's obligations under the Chicago Convention on Civil Aviation 1944. These obligations are translated into UK law principally through the Civil Aviation Act 1982 and the Air Navigation Order 2005 (S.I. 2005/1970).

Under the Convention, contracting States may for reason of emergency, military necessity or public safety, restrict or prohibit uniformly the aircraft of other States from flying over the whole or part of its territory (Article 9).

The Convention also provides that scheduled international air services and State aircraft of another contracting State may only fly over or land in UK territory with the permission or authorisation of the UK (Articles 3 and 6),and this can be denied. The UK also requires non-scheduled services where payment is made for carriage, and passengers and cargo are embarked or disembarked, to seek prior permission.

All other aircraft have the right to land in or to fly across UK territory without the need to obtain prior permission from the UK (Article 5). However, the commander of each aircraft operating in controlled airspace in Europe is required to file a flight plan with Eurocontrol, the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation. The flight plan is passed to each air navigation service provider along the route.

Crossrail Project

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the recent progress of the Crossrail Project. [34158]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The motion to appoint the Crossrail Bill Select Committee was passed on 5 December, opening the way for the Committee to start its scrutiny of the Bill shortly.

In preparation for the Committee detailed work is currently under way to consider and, where possible, resolve issues raised by petitioners.

The Secretary of State has recently published an Access Option Policy Paper which has been sent out for consultation with the rail industry. This sets out the principles by which Crossrail will share the capacity with other traffic on the existing rail network.

In parallel, a cross-industry timetabling working group is examining the timetable developed for the introduction of Crossrail services.

Driving Test

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average waiting time for a driving test was in the last period for which figures are available. [36792]

Dr. Ladyman: The national average waiting time for a practical car driving test was six weeks on 5 December 2005.

EU Rail Regulation

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional powers will be granted to the European railway industry as a result of the review of Regulation 881/2004 and Directives (a) 2004/49/EC, (b) 2001/14/EC and (c) 95/18/EC. [32895]

Derek Twigg: The Commission has not published any plans to review any of these measures. However, there are a number of proposals under discussion or planned by the EC institutions that involve minor amendments to Regulation 881/2004 and Directives 2004/49/EC and 2001/14/EC. None of these proposals would grant additional powers to the European rail industry. There are no proposals to amend Directive 95/18/EC.

First Great Western

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the (a) reliability and (b) punctuality of First Great Western services between London and Worcestershire in (i) the most recent period for which figures are available and (ii) the equivalent period in the previous year. [35667]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport does not keep records on the reliability and punctuality of First Great Western services between London and Worcestershire. However, in the year to 30 June 2005, the Public Performance Measure for FGW passenger train services overall was 77.8 per cent.

Highways Agency

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the national targets are for the Highways Agency; and what the performance of its offices in South Devon has been in relation to those targets. [36888]

Dr. Ladyman: The national targets for the Highways Agency are as published in its annual business plan and reported to the House on 24 March 2005, Official Report, column 94WS. The Highways Agency is a national organisation and work is divided between its offices in different ways for different functions, to match staff resources and changing work loads. Performance of individual offices is not therefore separately monitored.

Ladbroke Grove Crash

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the implementation of Lord Cullen's recommendations after the Ladbroke Grove crash. [35438]

Derek Twigg: On 24 November, the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) published its tenth and final progress report on the recommendations made following recent rail public inquiries, including Lord Cullen's inquiry into the Ladbroke Grove collision. Of the total of 295 recommendations arising form the four public inquiry reports only four recommendations remain to be completed. Work continues on implementing the remaining recommendations.

HSC's report is available in the House Library and on the Health and Safety Executive's website at: www.hse.gov.uk/railways/railpublic4.pdf.

Leeds Supertram

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his statement of 3 November 2005, Official Report, columns 60–62WS, on Leeds supertram, what funding his Department plans to provide for a Leeds rapid bus scheme. [35473]

Derek Twigg: We expect to put significant investment into transport in West Yorkshire in the coming years. We are talking to West Yorkshire passenger transport executive about working up proposals for a Leeds rapid bus scheme, and we expect advice on regional priorities in January, so it is too early to say what the funding will be.

Light Rail Systems

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the study into the wider benefits of light rail systems is expected to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [34707]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The Department does not currently have a study into the wider benefits of light rail systems or any other single mode.

The Department published guidance in July 2005 on wider benefits, including agglomeration and increases in employment and productivity, and how they can be appraised (http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_econappr/documents/page/dft_econappr_038893.pdf). The Government intend to test this new approach by asking bids for the Transport Innovation Fund to estimate these wider benefits as part of the appraisal.

In addition, the benefits arising from additional jobs in regeneration areas can be captured in Economic Impact Reports. These have been submitted alongside appraisals for a number of schemes, including light rail schemes.

Low-carbon Vehicles

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps have been taken under the UK's EU Presidency to encourage vehicle manufacturers to speed up the development of low carbon vehicles. [36618]

Dr. Ladyman: The UK Government have made climate change one of the main priorities of its EU and G8 presidencies this year, and has sought wherever possible to highlight the importance of improving the fuel efficiency of vehicles as a way of reducing emissions of carbon dioxide from the transport sector. The communique that was agreed at the G8 Gleneagles summit on 8 July, for example, included a climate change, clean energy and sustainable development action plan. This contained a commitment to a package of measures to encourage the development and uptake of clean, low carbon vehicles. A copy of the full communique text is available at http://www.g8.gov.uk.

The UK also hosted an international Environmentally Friendly Vehicles (EFV) conference on 10–11 November 2005, providing a forum for global dialogue on the promotion and uptake of cleaner, more fuel efficient vehicles. Over 250 delegates from more than 30 countries attended, and the chairman's conclusions, together with copies of the presentations and other supporting material, are available at http://www.livegroup.co.uk/efvc.

The UK has also been actively involved in the European CARS 21 initiative this year. This has considered ways to encourage further development of low carbon vehicles as part of an integrated approach towards reducing CO_2 emissions in the transport sector.

Within the UK, we have continued to incentivise the development and uptake of clean, fuel efficient vehicles as set out in our 2002 Powering Future Vehicles Strategy, which is available via the Department for Transport's website. We also launched during 2005 a new system of colour-coded fuel efficiency labels for cars to raise consumer awareness and help boost demand for fuel efficient vehicles. The labels are now in the majority of new car showrooms in the UK.

M6

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average daily volume of traffic was on the M6 motorway in the last period for which figures are available. [36791]

Dr. Ladyman: Average daily traffic flows during the 12 months to the end of October 2005 are available at several locations on the M6.

Flows on the M6 vary according to the location along the motorway. On the first section west of the M1 there are 78,000 vehicles per day (vpd) rising to 129,000 vpd on section 4a-5 in Birmingham and 145,000 vpd on junction 30–31 north of Manchester. The lowest levels are in Cumbria, on junction 38–39, at 39,000 vpd.

The two highest flows on the M6 in the Bolton area are 140,500 vpd between junctions 21 and 21 a and 145,000 vpd between junctions 31 and 31a. The lowest is 78,000 vpd between junctions 29 and 30.

Ports (Security)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Department's review of ports policy will include a comprehensive assessment of security. [36619]

Dr. Ladyman: The ports policy review will take account of the security regime at UK ports but will not include a comprehensive assessment of it.

Railways

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on funding arrangements for the rail network. [35540]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 8 December 2005]: There have been frequent discussions with our counterparts in the Treasury. The result is that an unprecedented £87 million a week of public money is being invested in the rail network. A similar sum is being attracted from the private sector.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much additional funding has been paid to South West Trains for operating the direct services between Bristol and London Waterloo since they took over the service; and if he will make a statement. [31195]

Derek Twigg: No additional sums have been paid to South West Trains (SWT) in respect of this service. However, the arrangements under which SWT pay back a proportion of revenue and profit to the Department have been adjusted to take account of their operation of Bristol to Waterloo trains. The effect has been to reduce the payment to the Department by £1,068,084 in 2005–06.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on capacity on the rail freight network. [34692]

Derek Twigg: The Office of Rail Regulation is responsible for ensuring that track capacity is allocated fairly and efficiently, taking into account the needs of both passenger and freight operators. For the longer term, Network Rail's Utilisation Strategies will establish the capacity available for freight and how it might be developed.

The amount of freight moved by rail has increased by nearly 60 per cent. since privatisation in 1995. In 2004–05, 20.7 billion net tonne kilometres of freight was moved on the railway.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions South Eastern trains have had with Govia since the award of the Integrated Kent franchise; and what representations he has received on the award since the bidding process began. [36595]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The first meeting to discuss the transition between South Eastern Trains and the new franchisee was held on 1 December 2005. These meetings are continuing.

Around 100 letters about proposed service patterns and other aspects of the Department's franchise specification have been received from MPs, local organisations or councils since January 2004. I have met Kent MPs to discuss these issues. Over the same period, around 1280 letters on the subject of the Integrated Kent Franchise were dealt with by the Strategic Rail Authority, principally from members of the public.

The Department have also received around 150 letters from MPs, local organisations or councils supported by a postcard campaign, on the related issue of South Eastern Trains being retained in the public sector.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the competitive procurement process for the replacement of high speed trains will begin. [37042]

Derek Twigg: The Department is committed to developing proposals for new high speed trains. The proposed date for invitations to tender is March 2007.

Speed Cameras

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 328W, on speed cameras, for what reasons the number of safety camera partnerships increased between 2000–01 and 2003–04; what assessment he has made of whether they have been effective in reducing the number of road traffic injuries; and how the revenue of fines from safety cameras that was not spent on safety measures was spent in each year from 2000–01 to 2004–05. [36907]

Dr. Ladyman: The increase in the number of safety camera partnerships between 2000–01 and 2003–04 was due to the safety camera programme rolling out nationally to all but two police force areas.

The following independent evaluations have been undertaken for the Department into the effectiveness of the programme and are available in the Library of the House, and on the Department's website:

"A cost recovery system for speed and red-light cameras—two year pilot evaluation" 11 February 2003), and

"The national safety camera programme—Three year evaluation report" (15 June 2004).

A fourth-year evaluation report will be published shortly.

The rules governing the national safety camera programme require surplus revenue to be passed to the Consolidated Fund.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 328W, on speed cameras, which independent academics are looking at regression to the mean effect on the statistics relating to the number of accidents on roads with speed cameras; and when he expects their report to be (a) completed and (b) published. [36909]

Dr. Ladyman: The fourth year evaluation of the National Safety Camera Programme is being undertaken by the PA Consulting Group and University College London. As part of the evaluation they commissioned Linda Mountain, University of Liverpool, and Mike Maher, Napier University, to assess the effect of regression to the mean. The fourth year report is now complete and will be published shortly.

Traffic Accidents

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were involved in traffic accidents in each of the last five years in (a) England and (b) Forest of Dean constituency; and what the mortality rate was in each year. [36870]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the number of people that were involved in traffic accidents is not available. However, the number of casualties that resulted from personal injury road accidents and the fatality rate per 100,000 population in accidents are given in the table.

	(a) Number of casualties[1]				(b) Fatalities in personal road injury accidents per 100,000 population
	England		Parliamentary constituency[2] Forest of Dean		England	Parliamentary constituency[2,3] Forest of Dean
	Fatal	All	Fatal	All	Rate		Rate
2000	2,915	285,721	10	425	5.9		11.9
2001	2,916	279,678	11	474	5.9		13.1
2002	2,980	269,020	9	453	6.0		10.7
2003	3,004	257,899	10	445	6.0		11.9
2004	2,714	248,762	11	477	5.4		13.1

[1] Killed, serious and slightly injured casualties in personal injury road accidents.
[2] The casualties are those which resulted from personal injury road accidents with the 2004 boundary of the Forest of Dean constituency.
[3] Mid year 2002 population estimates for the constituency of Forest of Dean has been used to calculate the fatality rate.

Travel (Disability Rights)

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will take steps to extend the coverage of disability discrimination legislation to cover (a) air and (b) sea travel; and if he will make a statement; [36781]

(2) if the Department will support the proposed EU regulation on the rights of persons with reduced mobility when travelling by air; [36782]

(3) what plans the Department has to commence talks with international counterparts on the accessibility of aircraft and airports for disabled people. [36783]

Ms Buck: We have said that we will legislate for those modes if the voluntary codes which are currently in place prove ineffective. The provision we made in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 allowing the exemption in part 3 of the DDA to be lifted for transport services provides us with the legal base.

With our statutory advisers, the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, we have commissioned research to monitor compliance with the codes. We will have all the results of that work early next year and those will inform our decision on whether to legislate.

In the meantime during our presidency of the EU we have given priority to the EC proposal on air passenger rights for disabled people and people with reduced mobility. We have made good progress and a draft of the proposal agreed by the Transport Council is due to be considered by the European Parliament in Plenary this week.

We are also at the heart of discussions on access to air travel for disabled people. The UK chairs the European Conference of Civil Aviation's Facilitation Sub-Group on air travel for people with reduced mobility which promotes good practice in this field.

Trunk Roads/Motorways

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of (a) trunk roads and (b) motorway there are in each local authority; and what estimate he has made of the number of miles of (i) other A roads and (ii) other roads in England. [36342]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list departmental projects conducted by consultants in each year since 2000; what the cost was in each case; and what the total cost of employing consultants was in each year. [29068]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Credit Card Fraud

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been convicted of credit card fraud in each of the last 10 years. [36554]

Mr. Hanson: Data for credit card fraud is not available. There are no specific offences relating to fraud using credit cards and it is not possible to determine if a credit card was involved in any fraud and forgery or theft offences.

Crime

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of whether there was paramilitary involvement in the (a) manufacturing and (b) distribution of the viagra-type drugs seized in North Belfast in July. [36498]

Mr. Woodward: One individual has been charged with illegal importation of medicinal products and possession with intent to supply in connection with the seizure of a significant quantity of Viagra-type drugs in July. As the matter is sub-judice it would be inappropriate to comment further.

Departmental Building

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the costs will be of each project. [34758]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office and its Agencies currently have 12 building and refurbishments projects underway in the 2005–06 fiscal year, and 12 planned for 2006–07. The associated costs can be found in tables 1 and 2 respectively.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service is currently conducting a review of its longer term estate strategy as part of its strategic development programme. It is likely that decisions on projects for 2006–07 will be taken both in that context and as a result of maintenance requirements.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available. [31732]

Mr. Woodward: There has been no relocation of Northern Ireland Office staff into London and the South East in the last five years.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to relocate staff in his Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31733]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office has no plans to relocate any staff into London and the South East.

Integrated Schools

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of development proposals for new integrated schools in relation to their impact on established (a) controlled and (b) maintained schools within the same catchment areas. [35864]

Angela E. Smith: In reaching decisions on proposals for new integrated schools the Department of Education must consider a number of factors including the projected enrolments for the proposed schools and the potential impact on neighbouring schools. The development proposal process provides the opportunity for all schools in the surrounding area to comment on the proposal and the comments are considered by the Department before decisions on new schools are made.

Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been made by the Human Rights Commission to the Government on issues that would fall under its remit in connection with the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill. [36609]

Mr. Hanson: I discussed the proposals in the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill at a meeting with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. The Commission offered to write to me following their consideration of the Bill.

Police Officers (Sickness)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers in Northern Ireland on average were off work as a result of sickness at any one time in each of the last five years. [36486]

Mr. Woodward: A chart showing the number of police officers off work as a result of sickness since April 2000 to December has been placed in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Police Service of Northern Ireland officers are on long-term sick leave. [36539]

Mr. Woodward: The PSNI defines long-term sick absence as 28 days.

The number of Police Service of Northern Ireland officers on long-term sick absence as at 7 December 2005 was 276.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers in Northern Ireland have completed a period of sick leave of more than 30 days in each of the last 10 years. [36540]

Mr. Woodward: Due to the way this information was recorded, figures prior to 2001–02 could only be retrieved disproportionate to cost. The number of police officers in Northern Ireland who were on sick leave for a period of more than 30 days since the financial year 2001–02 is as follows:

Financial year	Number of absence over 30 days
2001–02	2,096
2002–03	1,417
2003–04	1,006
2004–05	1,123
2005–06 (to date)	863

Postal Voting

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to reform the postal voting system in Northern Ireland. [2192]

Mr. Hanson: The Electoral Administration Bill, currently before Parliament, includes measures that relate to applications for postal and proxy voting. In particular the Bill will make it a criminal offence to apply for a postal or proxy vote with the intention of stealing another person's vote or gaining a vote to which the applicant is not entitled. These measures will extend to Northern Ireland.

Schools (Weapon Confiscation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) knives, (b) guns and (c) other weapons were confiscated in schools in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36312]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Education does not collect the information requested. The Department collects statistics on the reasons why pupils are suspended from school but the current categorisation does not enable specific identification of those pupils who were suspended for carrying an offensive weapon.

Prosecutions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland were prosecuted for shoplifting in each of the last five years. [36253]

Mr. Hanson: Table 1 provides figures for the number prosecuted for shoplifting between 1999 and 2003. Data beyond 2003 will become available in early 2006.

Table 1: Prosecutions for shoplifting 1999–2003

	Number of prosecutions
1999	709
2000	858
2001	730
2002	669
2003	674

Note:

Figures are based on the principal rule, thus only the most serious offence for which an offender is charged is recorded.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many cases of shoplifting files were sent to the Northern Ireland Public Prosecution Service and were subsequently returned recommending no prosecution in each of the last five years. [36254]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The information sort is not available in the form requested. The Public Prosecution Service (PPS) does not differentiate cases of shoplifting from other offences of theft. Further, until the commencement of the PPS in June of this year, virtually all minor offences dealt with in the magistrates court were prosecuted by the police. That continues to be the case in those areas of Northern Ireland which are not yet covered by the new service.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many cases of indecent exposure files were sent to the Northern Ireland Public Prosecution Service and were returned recommending no prosecution in each of the last 10 years. [36255]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply. The information is not available in the form requested. Indecent exposure may only be tried in the magistrates court. Until the commencement of the Public Prosecution Service (PPS) in June of this year, virtually all minor offences dealt with in the magistrates court were prosecuted by the police and files for this offence would not normally have been sent to the DPP. That continues to be the case in those areas of Northern Ireland which are not yet covered by the new service.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been fined for non-wearing of seat belts in the last 10 years. [36524]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following table. The earliest figures available are from 1 October 1997.

	Number of fines
1997 (from 1 October)	973
1998	6,381
1999	8,626
2000	8,255
2001	10,522
2002	9,804
2003	18,189
2004	21,092
2005 (to date)	15,715

Republican Violence Arrests

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arrests were made in relation to Republican violence in (a) Ardoyne and (b) Dunloy on 12 July. [36537]

Mr. Woodward: The information is as follows:

To date:

Ardoyne

23 charged with riotous assembly and four with Obstructive sitting.

Dunloy

No arrests, but DCU Commander advises he anticipates reporting up to 26 people to the PPS for various public order offences.

Road Traffic Accidents

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) road traffic accidents and (b) fatal road traffic accidents there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years where the major contributory factor has been (i) speed, (ii) excess alcohol and (iii) failure to maintain the vehicle. [36526]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is contained in the following tables:

Injury road traffic collisions due to excessive speed

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	Number Total

Total	25	39	32	29	27	31	28	27	16	19	273

[1] Failure to maintain vehicle is comprised of the following factors: defective brakes, defective steering/suspension, defective front lights, defective rear lights and defective tyres.

Roads Service

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what penalty clauses are normally included as part of Roads Service contracts. [36339]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 13 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what penalty clauses are normally included as part of Roads Service contracts.

I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

Penalty clauses are not included in Roads Service contracts as a means of recovering damages, as they are not enforceable in law. Where a loss is incurred through the failure of a contractor to fulfil their obligations under a contract, redress is sought through a liquidated damages clause. The amount included in a liquidated damages clause is a genuine pre-estimate, at the time of the issue of tender documents, of the loss that will be incurred in the event of a breach of contract.

I hope this information is helpful.

Alcohol Sales (Under-age Children)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) publicans and (b) off licence proprietors in Northern Ireland have been (i) prosecuted for and (ii) convicted of selling alcohol to underage children in each of the last five years. [36335]

Mr. Hanson: It is not possible to identify separately prosecutions brought against publicans and off licence proprietors. The prosecutions and convictions included in Table 1 are for the offences of 'selling intoxicating liquor to a minor' and 'licensee selling intoxicating liquor to a minor'.

Figures are provided for 1999 to 2003. Data beyond 2003 will become available in early 2006.

Table 1: Prosecutions and convictions for selling alcohol to a minor 1999–2003

	Number of prosecutions	Number of convictions
1999	0	0
2000	3	2
2001	1	0
2002	4	2
2003	5	3

Note:
Figures are based on the principal rule, thus only the most serious offence for which an offender is charged is recorded.

Speed Cameras

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much revenue has been generated in Northern Ireland by speed cameras in each of the last 10 years. [36525]

Mr. Woodward: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for South Antrim (Dr. McCrea) on 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1381W, which advised that figures were only available from 2001 and detailed the revenue raised by speed cameras in each year since then.

Teachers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teachers in Northern Ireland left the profession in the last five years after (a) less than 10 years and (b) between 10 and 15 years. [36552]

Angela E. Smith: The information is as follows.

Number of teachers in Northern Ireland who have left the profession in Northern Ireland after (a) less than 10 years and (b) between 10 and 15 years

	Number of teachers
Less than 10 years	932
Between 10 and 15 years	102
Total	1,034

Notes:
1. The figures supplied are based on permanent teachers employed in primary and secondary schools in Northern Ireland since April 1987 who left the profession after (a) less than 10 years and (b) between 10 and 15 years.
2. Excludes teachers who commenced service on or before 1 April 1987.
3. Excludes teachers with a retirement indicator against their record.
4. Excludes substitute/temporary and part-time teachers and those employed in voluntary grammar and FE colleges.
5. Service has been calculated from pay history, on the basis of permanent pay type only and excludes any periods that a teacher was on unpaid leave.

Arlene Arkinson

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to extend the remit of the forensic expert in Northern Ireland in relation to the recovery of the disappeared to include recovery of the remains of Arlene Arkinson. [35071]

Mr. Woodward: The Senior Investigating Officer (SIO) has in place a comprehensive search strategy as part of the overall investigation into the murder of Arlene Arkinson. The Chief Constable will ensure that the resources required to properly conduct the investigation are in place. Should the PSNI believe that any expert or specialist could add value to the investigation they will, of course, be considered.

University Students (Science)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students attending university in Northern Ireland have studied a science subject in each of the last 10 years, broken down by subject. [36551]

Angela E. Smith: The following table provides enrolments on science courses at NI Higher Education institutions from 1994–95 to 2003–04.

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99

A new subject coding system was introduced for the 2002–03 academic year in which single enrolments are split over one or more subject groups reflecting the programme of study. Comparisons between 2002–03, 2003–04 and previous years is therefore not recommended. For comparability over the 10 years, figures are based on a snapshot of enrolments at 1 December within the academic year.

Information on full-year enrolments on all higher education courses at NI institutions is available to view at: http://www.delni.gov.uk/index.cfm/area/information/page/SRHEEnrolments.

Vehicle Check Points

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicle checks points the police set up in each month of 2005. [36536]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland does not record the number of vehicle checkpoints conducted.

DEFENCE

Al-Jamiyat Prison

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Royal Military Police are investigating alleged human rights abuses at the al-Jamiyat prison. [33914]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Military Police are not investigating alleged human rights abuses at the al-Jamiyat prison. We have impressed upon the Iraqi authorities the importance of investigating prisoner abuse, wherever it is alleged to have occurred.

Anthrax Vaccines

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been commissioned on the effects on British forces of anthrax vaccines. [35786]

Mr. Touhig: A research project published under the title "Adverse Medical Events in British Service Personnel Following the Anthrax Vaccination" (J. Enstone, M. Wale, J. Nguyen-Van-Tarn & J. Pearson—Vaccine 2003, 21:1348–1354) was funded by the Ministry of Defence and endorsed by the Advisory Group on Medical Countermeasures. The MOD had no editorial input into the conduct, methodology or findings of this study—the editorial rights to the study belong to the University of Nottingham Medical School. The study concluded that the anthrax vaccine is a safe vaccine with minimal side effects.

The anthrax vaccine is a MHRA (Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency) licensed medical product and therefore fully satisfies the responsible UK regulatory body in matters of vaccine safety and efficacy.

Armed Forces (Morale)

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of morale in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [35349]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The most recent Continuous Attitude Surveys, conducted by the Services in 2004 and 2005, show the following responses on morale:

Percentage

	Royal Navy Officers	Royal Navy Ratings	Royal Marine Officers	Royal Marine Other Ranks
Good and Very Good	58.3	43.8	78.2	63.9
Average	28.8	31.9	17.4	21.8
Poor and Very Poor	12.9	22.8	4.3	13.2
Unanswered	—	1.4	—	1.0

Percentage

	Army Officers	Army Other Ranks	RAF Officers	RAF Air men/women
High and Very High	69	57	49	41
Neither High nor Low	22	25	31	32
Low and Very Low	10	18	20	27

The latest Survey was published in October 2005 and is available on the MOD Freedom of Information website. Copies are also held in the Library of the House.

Ministers and Chiefs of Staff remain fully committed to maintaining and improving morale in all the Services.

Army Regiments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on renaming Army regiments; and when he expects the process to be completed. [36770]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 129WS, which gives details of all the new infantry titles and formation arrangements.

Asian Earthquake

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) agencies and (b) other Governments using helicopters provided by his Department for relief work in the wake of the recent earthquake in Pakistan and Kashmir have been charged for this use. [36326]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 December 2005]: No other Governments or agencies have been, or will be, charged for using the three RAF Chinook helicopters deployed to Pakistan to support the earthquake relief effort.

British Armed Forces (Fijians)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Fijians serving in the British armed forces have been absent without leave in the last 12 months. [36936]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 12 December 2005]: There were approximately 10 trained Regular Army personnel whose nationality at birth is recorded as Fijian and who were reported as having gone long-term absent without leave during the period 1 October 2004 to 30 September 2005. In the same period none of the serving Fijians in the Royal Air Force were recorded as having gone long-term absent without leave. It is not possible to provide the equivalent figures for the Royal Navy as the figures are not held centrally.

The records for those who have been absent without leave for a short period of time (less than 21 days) are not held in such a way as to allow a nationality to be cross checked with those absent without leave without incurring disproportionate cost.

British Troop Deaths (Iraq)

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops have been (a) killed and (b) injured in the war with Iraq. [34122]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 December 2005]: As at 5 December 2005, a total of 98 British Service personnel have died while serving on Operation TELIC since the start of the campaign in March 2003.

Of these, 75 are known to have been killed as a result of hostile action, and 23 are either known to have died as a result of illness, accident or from other non-combat injuries, or have not yet been officially assigned a cause of death pending the outcomes of ongoing coroners investigations into the circumstances pertaining to these deaths.

The total number of UK personnel admitted to Shaibah Field hospital and classified as wounded in action (WIA) is 189. A larger number have, however, sustained non battle injuries or succumbed to illness whilst serving in Iraq.

Building/Refurbishment Projects

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37397]

Mr. Touhig: The information requested is currently being obtained from a number of separate sources and will take a little time to collate. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

C17 Aircraft

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to lease more C17 aircraft. [29607]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has no plans to lease additional C-17 aircraft.

Colchester Garrison

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made for a permanent church building as part of the new Colchester Garrison. [36161]

Mr. Touhig: It is the Ministry of Defence's intention to maintain a church within Colchester Garrison, in the first instance by converting an existing building. The relevant plans have been lodged with Colchester borough council.

Commonwealth Second World War Veterans

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures his Department plans to take to assist Commonwealth Second World War veterans; and if he will make a grant to the Royal Commonwealth Ex-Service League. [34199]

Mr. Touhig: The Government recognises the sacrifices of those from Commonwealth nations who supported the allied effort in World War II and has publicised this through the 'We Were There' exhibition and its schools programme. However, it has been the policy of successive Governments over many years that Departments do not contribute public funds to individual charities in this way.

Deepcut Barracks

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of the Media Facilitation Day at Deepcut Barracks on 26 October, broken down by main budget heading; if he will list the media organisations represented at the event; and how much press coverage resulted, broken down by (a) newspaper column inches and (b) broadcast minutes on (i) television and (ii) radio. [32942]

Mr. Ingram: The open day for the media event at Deepcut on 26 October incurred no additional costs to those that would have otherwise been incurred in the running of that part of the Defence College of Logistics.

Information detailing press coverage is not available in the format requested. The open day featured in news bulletins on BBC News, BBC News 24, BBC London News, Sky News and Radio Five; was reported on by The Times and The Telegraph; was covered by internal Garrison Radio broadcasts and the MOD's in-house FOCUS magazine; and was reported on by a range of regional media.

A list of the media organisations who registered to attend the event are presented in the following list.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the defined objectives for the Media Facilitation Day at Deepcut Barracks on 26 October. [32943]

Mr. Ingram: Media open days at a range of Defence training establishments, including at the Defence College of Logistics, Deepcut, aim to explain to the public how the Services train their recruits and to explain the duty of care and welfare support provided to trainees.

Defence Headquarters

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to collocate RAF HQ Strike Command and HQ Personnel and Training Command; and how he intends to announce his plans. [35721]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to my written statement of 16 June 2005, Official Report, column 22WS. Following completion of the Trade Union consultation, the staff affected and Members in the immediate localities, were informed that my decision remained unchanged.

Departmental Call Centres

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many call centres were run by his Department and its agencies in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 to date; and how many and what proportion of calls (i) were handled by an adviser, (ii) were received but abandoned and (iii) received an engaged tone in each year. [23306]

Mr. Touhig: There are a number of internal 'help desk' points within the Ministry of Defence but details are not held centrally and information could be collated only at disproportionate cost and effort. Inquiries indicate that the Department does not operate any public facing 'call centres' within the accepted definition.

Dr. Dafydd Alun Jones

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the Welsh Assembly Government regarding the funding of the work carried out by Doctor Dafydd Alun Jones. [26153]

Mr. Touhig: I have had no such discussions.

Helmand, Afghanistan

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the written statement of 14 November 2005, Official Report, columns 41–42WS, on the international security assistance force, what his most recent assessment is of the security situation in the Province of Helmand, Afghanistan; and whether there have been (a) US and (b) allied casualties in that Province since the invasion in 2001. [35475]

Mr. Ingram: The security situation in the south of Afghanistan is more challenging than in the ISAF's current area of operation. The Taliban are still active in the area, as are drug traffickers.

While United States casualties are a matter for the US, we are aware of three US casualties (but no other allied casualties) in Helmand Province.

Inquests

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inquests remain to be heard in relation to members of Her Majesty's armed forces who lost their lives as a result of military duties in Iraq (a) since 2003 in total, (b) in 2004 and (c) in 2005; and in how many cases an inquest has not been concluded a year after death. [35853]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 December 2005]: Since 2003 a total of 98 British personnel have lost their lives in support of Operation Telic with 70 inquests still outstanding.

In 2004, 22 British Military personnel lost their lives with 15 inquests still outstanding

As at 7 December 2005, 23 British Military personnel have died during 2005; all inquests remain outstanding.

A total of 65 inquests have not been concluded a year after death.

The Coroner is under remit to conduct an independent inquest into reported deaths of a violent, natural or unknown cause, including those of military personnel. The Ministry of Defence continues to assist the Coroner as necessary.

Iraq

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Iraqis have been (a) detained by UK forces in each month since March 2003 and (b) convicted in Iraqi courts of offences connected to insurgent activity since March 2003; and if he will make a statement. [28804]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 November 2005]: Iraqis detained by UK forces are either criminal detainees or security internees. Criminal detainees are transferred as soon as practically possible into Iraqi custody on their detention by UK forces, usually within eight hours. Security internees are detained and then held at the Divisional Temporary Detention Facility (DTDF) at Shaibah.

The table gives a monthly breakdown of the number of internees entering the DTDF from its opening in December 2003 to the present. Once security internees are no longer judged to be an imperative threat to security they are released. There are currently 35 internees in the DTDF.

Before the DTDF was opened, security internees detained by UK forces were transferred into US custody at Camp Bucca. In total, around 1,000 individuals detained by UK forces were interned at Camp Bucca. We do not hold a monthly breakdown for this period.

We do not have a record of the number of Iraqis convicted in Iraqi courts. This is a matter for the Iraqis.

The Ministry of Defence does not keep any record of the number of Iraqis convicted in Iraqi courts of offences connected to insurgent activity since March 2003. This is a matter for the Iraqi Ministry of Justice.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when armed services personnel were first informed that members of the Royal Military Police had been taken hostage in Majar-al-Kabir; and what assessment was made at that time of the prospects of a successful rescue operation. [36935]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement made on 17 November 2004, Official Report, columns 90–91WS by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon).

An Army Board of Inquiry examined the circumstances leading up to the deaths of the six Royal Military Policemen in Al Majarr Al Kabir. Details of what actions were taken when it first became known that there were members of the coalition force in the police station are contained within the Board's Opinion, Findings and Recommendations, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House in November 2004.

Kenya (Military Training)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made on securing the future of military training facilities in Kenya. [36136]

Mr. Ingram: Detailed negotiations about the continuation of British Army training in Kenya and the adjustment of restrictions placed on that training are being led by the British high commissioner in Nairobi. However, as a result of the recent referendum in Kenya we anticipate a delay in the proceedings while new members of the Cabinet are appointed. In the meantime, the current memorandum of understanding between the two Governments, which expired in December 2004, has been extended to allow the British Army to continue to conduct training in Kenya.

Military Establishments (Wales)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) acreage and (b) purpose is of each military (i) establishment and (ii) site in Wales; and what plans he has to dispose of establishments and sites in Wales. [35781]

Mr. Touhig: The defence estate in Wales comprises approximately 23,077 hectares. Tables providing details of operational Ministry of Defence (MOD) sites in Wales with areas in hectares and indicative uses have been placed in the Library of the House.

Sites presently in disposal in Wales are Kinmel Park (5.91 hectares), Llanbedr (229.95 hectares), RAF Sealand (100 hectares), land adjacent to Hayston Farm at Castlemartin (1.21 hectares) and Poor Wood at Caerwent Training Area (11.13 hectares).

A snapshot of surplus defence land and property currently listed for disposal is available in the Library of the House. The need to retain land and property is continually reviewed. A revised list is currently being prepared and will be placed in the Library by the end of the year. This will include details of all disposals which have been confirmed.

Naval Pensions

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals would currently qualify for a full naval pension if they had retired after 31 March 1975 but do not qualify because they retired before that date with fewer than 22 years of pensionable service. [27309]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Overseas Military Bases

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British armed forces personnel are stationed at British military bases abroad, broken down by country. [35330]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is contained in Tri Service Publication 6, Global Location of UK Regular Forces (TSP 6).

TSP 6 is published quarterly; the most recent publication shows the numbers of Service personnel at 1 July 2005.

Copies of TSP 6 are available in the Library of the House and also available on www.dasa.mod.uk.

Parliamentary Question

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer Question reference 23306 tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [33639]

Mr. Touhig: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Royal Irish Regiment

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason members of the Royal Irish Regiment were refused permission to wear uniform for the annual laying of wreaths on the morning of Remembrance Sunday, 13 November, in the Castlederg area of west Tyrone; and if he will make a statement. [35863]

Mr. Touhig: As a result of a review of Regimental policy on Memorials, Rolls of Honour and Books of Remembrance it was decided that the Royal Irish Regiment should only be represented at and take part in acts of remembrance at national and principal sites of remembrance in Northern Ireland. Where this happened, including in Tyrone, the Royal Irish Regiment paraded in uniform.

Where individual members of the Regiment carried out an act of remembrance, for the most part in conjunction with members of the local Ulster Defence Regiment Associations, for security reasons it was deemed necessary that they should not wear uniform.

Stevens Express Leasing

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates aircraft registered in the US by Stevens Express Leasing have landed at military UK airfields in each of the last five years. [35998]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Thermobaric Weapons

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on (a) the procurement and (b) the deployment of thermobaric weapons; and if he will make a statement. [31625]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The UK does not possess, and has no plans to procure, so-called thermobaric weapons.

Underwater Storage

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the Checkmate underwater storage system devised by International Underwater Storage Ltd of Balcombe, West Sussex. [34036]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has given the "Checkmate" system careful consideration. However, at present we have no requirement for it. The threat that might be posed by a system like "Checkmate" has also been assessed.

US Air Force

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the arrangements are under which the US Air Force operates in the United Kingdom; and whether there is a legal agreement covering those arrangements. [36363]

Mr. Ingram: The presence of the United States Visiting Force (USVF) in the United Kingdom is at the invitation of the UK Government. The legal basis for the USVF's UK presence is primarily the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) Status of Forces Agreement (SOFA) of 1951 and the Visiting Forces Act of 1952. These establish the legal status of the USVF and its personnel in the UK and help to maintain the relationship that exists between the UK and the US for the purposes of our common defence.

US-registered Aircraft

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1 January 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, and (b) N313P operated in UK military airspace. [34632]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Civil aircraft are not permitted to operate in the areas of reserved airspace allocated to the Ministry of Defence by the Civil Aviation Authority.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Broadcasting (Illegal Jamming)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether any aid and development provided by (a) the UK and (b) the European Union to Libya is (i) dependent and (ii) conditional on broadcasting access to the country unimpeded by official agencies in accordance with the UN's International Telecommunications Union Agency's agreements and treaty provisions; and if he will make a statement. [34917]

Mr. Thomas: None of the UK's or EC's development assistance to Libya is dependent or conditional on unimpeded broadcasting access to the country.

The UK provides funding to Libya under the Global Opportunities Fund and the Global Conflict Prevention Pool. Under the Global Opportunities Fund in 2005–06, the UK is providing £200,000 to fund projects related to the rule of law and good governance. Under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, in the same period, £285,000 will fund projects aimed at building mutual confidence between the UK and Libya. This includes educational exchanges, the training of Libyan officers in the UK and closer military liaison.

The EC does not have a direct bilateral programme with Libya. However, it will provide €1 million for an HIV/AIDS package over the next-year.

CDC/Actis Capital

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list CDC/Actis Capital-funded (a) new investments and (b) disposals in (i) agribusiness, (ii) telecoms, (iii) infrastructure, (iv) minerals, oil and gas, (v) financial institutions, (vi) education and health sectors, (vii) retail and (viii) energy in each year since 1999, broken down by country. [35450]

Hilary Benn: I have arranged for the document entitled, "List of CDC's New Investments and Disposals 1999–2004", which gives the information requested, to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Central Asia

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much UK bilateral aid he expects will be allocated to (a) Kyrgyzstan, (b) Tajikistan, (c) Uzbekistan, (d) Armenia, (e) Georgia and (f) Moldova between 2005–06 and 2007–08. [31655]

Mr. Thomas: For the financial year 2005–06, UK bilateral aid allocations are as follows:

(a) Kyrgyzstan:	5.6 million
(b) Tajikistan:	3 million
(c) Uzbekistan:	750,000
(d) Armenia:	3.2 million
(e) Georgia:	3 million
(f) Moldova:	2.5 million

We have also committed £50,000 to Azerbaijan to support the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative and £30,000 to Kazakhstan for residual activities, following the closure of our bilateral programme there earlier this year.

In addition to this, the UK is providing £4.52 million of bilateral aid through a regional programme in Central Asia to prevent the spread of HIV and AIDS.

DFID's total planning figures for these countries are £20 million for 2006–07 and £22.5 million for 2007–08. Specific country allocations for those years are currently being finalised.

Corporate Responsibility

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his policies to promote corporate responsibility among UK companies operating abroad. [36706]

Mr. Thomas: The Government encourages the highest standards of business behaviour by UK companies wherever they operate, locally, regionally and internationally.

Our priority is to ensure that UK companies operating in developing countries should be accountable to the Government and citizens of those countries. At the local level, DFID recognises that, in many developing countries, the systems for monitoring and regulating business activity are weak. We provide support to countries' efforts to develop an appropriate legal framework, including protection of the environment and community rights, and to strengthen their capacity to enforce these laws. An example is the Pathways to Environmental Action in Kenya where DFID supports work with local regulatory authorities and the private sector to find the best means of meeting environmental standards.

At the international level, we encourage business participation in initiatives such as the UN Global Compact, the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises and the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative. DFID also encourages companies to participate in ethical trade schemes such as the Ethical Trading Initiative (ETI) which DFID has funded since it began in 1998. ETI members adopt a code of conduct that includes the core labour standards of the International Labour Organisation. They work with their suppliers, in collaboration with trade unions and non-governmental organisations, to improve working conditions in their supply chains and develop and disseminate best practice.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36263]

Mr. Thomas: In DFID, when staff develop or are diagnosed with mental ill-health the department provides appropriate assistance to help them to remain at work or, where there has been absence due to illness, to return to work. This can include the support of the welfare and counselling service, reference to the occupational health service for assessment of longer term needs, and for those who have been on long term absence a phased return to their normal working pattern over a period of up to three months.

Any member of staff who is covered by the Disability Discrimination Act for mental illness is assessed for reasonable adjustments to be made to their work and working environment.

DFID recognises work-related stress as an occupational health and safety issue and is currently putting the Health and Safety Executive Management Standards for tackling work-related stress into practice.

DFID encourages staff to maintain a work-life balance and provides on-site fitness and wellbeing centres.

Developing Countries (Exploitation)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what role his Department plays in tackling exploitation of workers in developing countries. [36202]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has current commitments of over £46 million to support activities to address the exploitation and improve the treatment of workers in developing countries.

DFID is supporting the implementation of labour standards in a number of ways. The main channel for our support is the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the leading international body in this field. Our current partnership agreement with the ILO, worth £15 million over the period 2001–06, helps fund their programme of technical assistance to developing countries. In addition our country and regional programmes are supporting a number of ILO projects that focus on the elimination of child labour and the prevention of trafficking of women and children for forced and exploitative labour. For example in the South East Asia we are providing nearly £9 million over 10 years to a project aimed at reducing trafficking in the Greater Mekong Sub-region.

DFID is also supporting efforts by businesses to set and uphold labour standards in their operations and supply chains through organisations such as the Ethical Trading Initiative. Further support is provided through the work of civil society organisations such as: a War on Want project in Asia that aims to improve the working conditions of women garment workers; and, the UNISON Global Network project that seeks to support the participation of working men and women in debates on international development.

HIV/AIDS

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with his counterpart in the United States on (a) the promotion of abstinence as a means of tackling HIV/AIDS in developing countries and (b) the effectiveness of this approach in assisting developing countries to slow the spread of the disease. [35739]

Mr. Thomas: I am in regular contact with the US Global AIDS Co-ordinator, Ambassador Randall Tobias, and there is established dialogue at both international and country level between UK and US colleagues. The UK and the US are the two largest bilateral donors on AIDS and have shared views on a range of key issues. For example, together we have emphasised the importance of county ownership for more effective national responses, by securing the 'Three Ones' harmonisation principles and developing the recommendations of the Global Task Team on Improving AIDS Co-ordination among Multilateral Institutions and International Donors. The UK maintained close dialogue with the US to secure the agreements made at Gleneagles and the World summit on getting as close as possible to Universal Access to AIDS Treatment by 2010.

The US does have different policies from the UK in a number of areas related to international development, including on some HIV prevention issues. We have different policy positions on issues including promotion of abstinence, sexual and reproductive health and rights, as well as access to clean needles and syringes as harm reduction measures. We have made the US aware of our views, yet we do, as we always have, continue to work with them to tackle HIV and AIDS.

There has been discussion of these different views both bilaterally and in global meetings. The UK encouraged the US to adopt the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) policy position paper "Intensifying HIV prevention", agreed at the UNAIDS Programme Co-ordinating Board (PCB) in June 2005. This is an excellent basis for action, stressing the importance of countries implementing the most effective, comprehensive prevention programmes.

The UK remains committed to accelerating action on prevention. Globally, less than one person in five has access to basic HIV prevention services. This 'prevention gap' is fuelling the spread of HIV. Improving comprehensive HIV prevention services has never been more important, and this is what DFID supports—not abstinence-only programmes.

As EU President, we steered and secured agreement on the first EU-wide policy Statement on HIV Prevention. This Statement was launched by the Secretary of State on the eve of World AIDS Day 2005. It affirms the commitment of all European member states to comprehensive, evidence-based HIV prevention programming, including:

Universal access to sexual and reproductive health information and services;

Provision of harm reduction programmes and supplies to drug users to prevent transmission of HIV through dirty needles;

Challenging and combating HIV-related stigma and discrimination through legislation, awareness campaigns and education;

Providing universal access to prevention services, including voluntary counselling and testing for HIV;

Reliable access to essential Sexual and Reproductive Health commodities including condoms (male and female) and kits for the diagnosis and treatment of sexually transmitted infections and to essential harm reduction commodities including clean needles and syringes; and

Continued support to the research and development of new prevention technologies including microbicides and vaccines.

The UK will continue to work closely with our US counterparts on tackling the global AIDS crisis.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Uganda on the impact of abstinence in tackling HIV/AIDS. [35740]

Mr. Thomas: The UK is working with other development partners to help the government implement a comprehensive approach to fight HIV/AIDS that includes the three elements of abstinence, being faithful and condom use. We believe in doing more to make all prevention efforts more effective. We are concerned about emphasis on a single component of this strategy and do not agree with abstinence-only programming. In our discussions with the Government and other development partners we promote comprehensive HIV programmes based on evidence.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of (a) reports that there is a grave shortage of condoms in Uganda and (b) the impact this might have upon efforts to control the spread of HIV/AIDS in that country. [35741]

Mr. Thomas: There was a chronic shortage of condoms earlier this year after a large shipment of poor quality condoms were withdrawn from the market in October 2004. The UK responded by providing an emergency supply of 20 million condoms at the beginning of 2005. Other development partners including the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), the World Bank, the United Nations Population Fund, and the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria are supplying condoms in large numbers. The latest information I have is that there is no immediate shortage of condoms in the country as a whole, but more work is required to ensure their effective distribution. DFID is helping to address this problem through support for the distribution of condoms and their use. DFID is also working with the Government and other development partners to maintain an updated picture of all condom supplies in Uganda.

The Government of Uganda's HIV/AIDS prevention policy includes the three elements of abstinence, being faithful and condom use. The long term supply and effective distribution of condoms are essential parts of a comprehensive strategy to fight HIV/AIDS.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to tackle the spread of HIV/AIDS in southern Sudan following the end of the north-south conflict. [35742]

Mr. Thomas: The UK supported the Joint UN/World Bank Assessment Mission (JAM) to South Sudan that looked at the state of basic social services and assessed future needs across several sectors including HIV/AIDS. The JAM concluded that $62 million would be needed to help combat HIV/AIDS in the south over the next six years. DFID's initial contribution to meet the needs identified by the JAM is £23.5 million over the next three years. A proportion of this money will be spent on HIV/AIDS.

In addition, DFID contributes £3.6 million towards the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS which covers the Democratic Republic of Congo, Ethiopia, Somalia and Sudan. This programme aims to improve knowledge, practice and behaviour of the general population, young people and those most vulnerable; develop and expand treatment, care and support for HIV/AIDS victims; and build the capacity of the National AIDS Council and NGOs to manage and monitor the HIV/AIDS programme.

Sugar Regime

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with representatives of (a) Barbados, (b) Belize, (c) Guyana, (d) Jamaica, (e) St. Kitts and Nevis on the impact upon their economies of the EU proposals to reduce sugar prices over the next four years. [36340]

Mr. Thomas: My right hon. Friend, Hilary Benn met the Prime Ministers of the Caribbean at the recent Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Malta where their discussions focused largely on the changes to the EU sugar regime. As the DFID Minister with responsibility for the Caribbean, I have met a number of times with Government and sugar industry officials from Jamaica and Guyana to discuss the impact of the proposed reforms on their economies, their concerns about the timescale and the extent of the price reductions. During my visit to Jamaica a year ago, I also listened to the concerns of sugar workers in Clarendon.

Mt right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, Mr. Tony Blair, has also recently met with the Prime Ministers from Belize, Guyana, Jamaica, Barbados, St. Kitts and Nevis and Jamaica in London and in Malta. In addition, other ministerial colleagues at the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) have met regularly with representatives from the countries in question to discuss these issues.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what steps he will take to ameliorate the impact of European Union reforms to the sugar sector on Caribbean sugar producing nations; [36493]

(2) what steps he will take to ensure the EU provides sufficient funds to meet the restructuring needs of (a) Jamaica, (b) Guyana and (c) Belize arising out of the reduction in sugar prices set for the next four years. [36570]

Mr. Thomas: We are working to ameliorate the impact of the EU reforms to the sugar industry by providing support for development of the national sugar action plans and by pressing for an appropriate amount of EU transitional assistance.

It is important that each country's sugar action plans sets a clear framework for donor support and private sector investment. DFID is supporting five of the six sugar protocol countries in the Caribbean (Belize, Jamaica, St, Kitts and Nevis, Guyana and Trinidad and Tobago) in the development of these plans and will shortly be providing technical assistance to Barbados as well. We will also ensure that, where possible, our ongoing bilateral support to Jamaica and Guyana, and our work with Caribbean regional organisations, respond to the needs created by the sugar reform.

DFID, as part of a wider UK Government effort, continues to do all it can to push for an adequate transitional assistance package for those countries affected by the EU reduction in sugar prices. We funded a study to estimate the impact of EU sugar reform on the sugar protocol countries, and through our support for the action plans are helping to identify the financing needs for each country. Lobbying of other member states is likely to secure an initial €40 million for 2006. DFID will continue to play an active role in the wider UK efforts to lobby both member states and the European Commission to ensure adequate levels of transitional assistance for the period 2007–13.

We will also be exploring, with other Government Departments, how we might help promote inward investment to the sugar producing countries.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the number of people who may become unemployed in (a) Jamaica, (b) Guyana and (c) Belize as a result of the EU's decision to reduce sugar prices over four years; and what assessment he has made of the social impact this may have. [36569]

Mr. Thomas: DFID commissioned consultants (LMC) estimated in June 2005 that the proposed 39 per cent. price cut for sugar would put 44,800 jobs at risk in these three countries—33,000 for Jamaica, 1,200 in Guyana and 10,600 in Belize (assuming that the current sugar quotas allowing duty free access for the African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries (ACP) producers are maintained). These figures are hotly contested in the region and the national Sugar Action Plans currently being developed by the Governments of these countries seek to identify both alternative employment opportunities and training programmes for those made redundant. The full social impact of the price changes, and mitigating measures, will be set out in the completed plans. DFID is funding an analysis of the social impact in Jamaica to contribute to the Jamaica Plan.

Trade Liberalisation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what position he will take at the forthcoming World Trade Organisation talks on the extent to which developing countries should undergo greater market liberalisation and privatisation. [36930]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government will continue to work hard to support the poorest and most vulnerable producers, be it through multilateral negotiations in the World Trade Organisations (WTO) or regional trade agreements such as the Economic Partnership Agreements. In the context of the WTO negotiations, we are firmly committed to ensuring that developing countries are given appropriate flexibility to adjust to trade reforms, i.e. special and differential treatment (SDT). These include proposals for special products in developing countries, which may require protection due to their importance for rural development and food and livelihoods security. They also include proposals for a special safeguard mechanism for developing countries to temporarily protect vulnerable sectors if affected by import surges.

In the negotiations poor countries are not being forced to open their market through any trade negotiations, multilateral, bilateral or otherwise. The UK Government believes that developing countries should be allowed to choose the best policies for the poor and the environment. New trade rules made in the WTO have to be agreed by consensus and thus all countries have the right to veto any agreement they do not consider to be in their best interest.

The UK Government believes that trade rules should take account of different countries' development needs. The answer, however, is not greater protectionism in the form of higher tariff barriers as these will limit the opportunities for poor countries to trade with each other, and with developed countries, and thus exclude them further from the benefits of international trade. Instead, we believe that existing and new trade rules should be made flexible enough so that they meet developing countries' needs. This is the policy the Government is pursuing in the WTO.

In services such as water, education and health, increasing access, coverage and quality is vital if countries are to reach the Millennium Development Goals. In March 2005, DFID published a policy paper entitled 'Partnerships for Poverty Reduction: changing aid conditionality', which shows that we are committed to helping Governments of developing countries make their own decisions about how to develop their economies and provide services to their people, based on evidence of what works best in reducing poverty. The policy makes it clear that DFID will not make aid conditional on specific policy decisions by partner Governments or attempt to impose policy choices on them, including in sensitive economic areas such as privatisation or trade liberalisation.

DFID also encourages developing countries to make their own decisions about service delivery, including whether or not to open their service sectors to foreign providers. However developing countries are not obliged to accept any request or to open up their services sectors. It all comes down to which option is the most effective in reducing poverty, a decision for Governments of developing countries to make through their own political process.

The WTO Ministerial Conference taking place in Hong Kong this week, represents an important opportunity to make a significant contribution to reducing global poverty. The UK Government is working to achieve an outcome that delivers real gains for developing countries, including the poorest.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document she gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to (1) the Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [37399]

Mr. Lammy: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case by case basis. The consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance Departmental Evidence and response to Select Committees (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note #12 Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of at Committees of the devolved legislature; and the requirements of the Freedom information to House of Commons Select Committee are set out in Departmental Evidence and response to Select Committees, particularly sections 4B and 4C.

Legislation (Sunset Clauses)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [34249]

Mr. Lammy: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which her Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [32249]

Mr. Lammy: It is the policy of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, its agency and non-departmental public bodies to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting.

The information you requested is set out in the following table:

Department for Culture, Media and Sport

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Departmental Contracts (Direct Mail)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contracts for direct mail were signed by her Department in (a) 2005–06 to date and (b) 2004–05; and what the value was in each case. [27791]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many and what percentage of pupils at academy schools (a) received free school meals and (b) were special educational needs children (i) before and (ii) after academy status was gained; [35326]

(2) how many and what proportion of special educational needs pupils (a) were at academy schools at the point they were designated as academies, (b) have been admitted since designation and (c) were admitted in the present term; [36287]

(3) how many and what proportion of pupils were eligible for free school meals in academy schools (a) at the point of designation and (b) in admissions since designation; and how many are eligible in the present term. [36293]

Jacqui Smith: The following table gives this information.

Special educational needs

	Predecessor school—last year before closure	Academy First year after opening	2005
Average number on roll	740	935	1,031
Average number of pupils with special needs with statements	25	29	33

Average number of pupils known to be eligible for free school meals	315	374	409
Average percentage of pupils known to be eligible for free school meals	45	40	40

Note:
Unless stated, averages are for 14 open academies and their respective predecessor schools. 13 academies have been omitted; three as they were 'new schools' and 10 as they had only just opened in September 2005 and therefore data are not yet available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills at what point in establishment of a sponsored academy school the sponsor's £2 million contribution has to be paid; if she will list the academy schools which have been established; and what (a) the total committed by each sponsor, (b) the total paid by that sponsor to date, (c) the total contributed by Government to date and (d) the total estimated public funding to come is in each case. [36283]

Jacqui Smith: Academies' sponsors make their financial contribution within the timescale agreed with the Secretary of State through the Funding Agreement for each project. The information requested is shown in the following table. The third column records where we have clear evidence from the Academy Trust that a sponsor's contribution has been spent—there will be additional funding from the sponsor which has been provided to the Trust but not yet spent by them, or where the Department has not yet received evidence of that expenditure.

Note:
Academies listed in order of opening.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many academy schools are in the lowest 5 per cent. of Super Output areas according to deprivation indices. [36289]

Jacqui Smith: Decisions on where Academies open are based on criteria which include not only deprivation indices, but also educational need. We calculate deprivation statistics using the ODPM Multiple Indices of Deprivation, which are based on the 8,414 wards in England. Of the 27 Academies currently open, five are in the lowest 5 per cent. of Super Output areas in terms of deprivation indices.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many academy schools have been established and are operating; how many are in the course of being set up; how many applications are awaiting approval; and how many she expects to approve in the next two years. [36291]

Jacqui Smith: There are currently 27 open academies; a further 43 are in the course of being set up, either in feasibility or implementation; there are many more projects in pre-feasibility, and there will be at least 40 academies open by 2006 and further projects opening by 2007, but it is too early to give a precise number for these. We are committed to there being 200 academies open or in the pipeline by 2010.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many academy schools require pupils to wear school uniform; how many of these are in local education authority areas where grants are provided for uniforms; and how many of these schools provide grants themselves. [36294]

Jacqui Smith: Academies are independent state schools, and so they are free to adopt the school uniform policies they consider appropriate. The Department does not hold information centrally about which local authorities offer school uniform grants to schools, nor do we require schools to tell us how they allocate their own funding for items such as school uniform grants.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expenditure by her Department was on centrally financed local initiatives in (a) Essex, (b) Hertfordshire and (c) Southend West constituency in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [34229]

Bill Rammell: The following table shows the expenditure incurred by the Department in Essex and Hertfordshire. The Department cannot give figures for Southend West constituency because it does not hold information on funding at constituency level; instead we have provided information for Southend-on-Sea.

In addition to centrally financed local initiatives, local authorities also receive formula funding from ODPM for schools and children's services. These figures are not included in the following table. In the schools sector there have been regular transfers between the grants paid by the Department and formula funding paid by ODPM.

Amount spent by DfES on centrally financed local initiatives[1,2]

£ million

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Essex	43.53	113.63	104.55	143.48	140.35	159.56
Hertfordshire	31.19	77.93	83.14	111.46	105.11	139.33
Southend-on-Sea	4.96	15.79	18.74	21.79	24.48	29.32

[1] Centrally financed local initiatives are taken to be specific programmes funded directly by the Department and exclude funding for schools and children's social services paid through ODPM.
[2] Excludes payments made by NDPBs which could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Educational Attainment (Houghton and Washington, East)

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of working age people in (a) Houghton and Washington, East constituency and (b) England hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above. [36886]

Bill Rammell: From the 2004/05 Annual Local Labour Force Survey, the percentage of the working age population in (a) Houghton and Washington, East constituency and (b) England that hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above are (a) 14.2 per cent. (8,000 people) and (b) 26.1 per cent. (7,948,000 people).

Foundation Stage Profiles

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the foundation stage profile results were for (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004, broken down by (i) local education authority and (ii) socio-economic group. [34118]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 2 December]: My Department has no plans to publish foundation stage profile (FSP) results prior to 2005 by local authority or by socio-economic group. National summary FSP data was first published in 2003 as 'Experimental Statistics' and since 2004 as 'National Statistics'

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000566/index.shtml

Data for 2003 and 2004 at local authority level are not reliable enough. There is evidence that ongoing improvements to the assessment process were less advanced for some local authorities and as a result the data may not properly reflect the precise outcomes of all children in these authorities.

Figures for socio-economic groups can only be derived using the 10 percent. pupil level sample dataset supplied by local authorities (LAs). However, the sample was not designed for compiling estimates at these levels. In February 2006, the final data for 2005 will be published in a statistical first release.

This will include a limited local authority version of the table recently published in the 2005 provisional SFR in October http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000608/index.shtml.

The final 2005 dataset represents the most reliable set of information on the outcomes of children on the foundation stage profile for local authorities and reflects the fact that ongoing improvements to the assessment process are at their most advanced and have been applied more widely.

This SFR will also include broad figures on the proportion of children who are achieving a good level of development in England for some of the most disadvantaged areas in England. The figures will be derived from the pupil level sample and will form the baseline for the SR 2004 public service agreement 1 which aims to improve children's communication, personal, social and emotional development.

Learners (Accidents)

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many accidents have been recorded to learners within the (a) Millennium Volunteers, (b) Children's Fund, (c) Positive Activities for Young Persons, (d) Neighbourhood Support Fund, (e) Sure Start and (f) Local Network Fund programme since each was established, broken down by (i) fatal, (ii) major and (iii) those requiring over three days' absence. [28900]

Beverley Hughes: Each programme has its own arrangements for reporting accidents. However, days absent are not recorded because the programmes are not compulsory and attendance is flexible and often irregular. For example a participant in PAYP might only attend one session during a holiday period.

The following table gives details of accidents reported to DfES since the programmes began.

	(i) Fatal	(ii) Major	(iii) Those requiring over three days' absence
(a) Millennium Volunteers	0	0	n/a
(b) Children's Fund	0	0	n/a
(c) Positive Activities For Young People	0	0	n/a
(d) Neighbourhood Support Fund	0	0	n/a
(e) Sure Start	0	0	n/a
(f) Local Network Fund	0	0	n/a n/a = Not available.

Meetings (Refreshments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance is issued by her Department to officials on ordering refreshments for meetings at which (a) officials only will be present and (b) non-civil servants will be in attendance; and if she will make a statement. [36190]

Bill Rammell: The following guidance is issued by my Department to staff when ordering refreshments for meetings.

There is a general principle that refreshments should not be provided at public expense when only civil servants are present.

Mid-morning and mid-afternoon refreshments (coffee or tea and biscuits) may be provided at public expense either with or without the presence of non-civil servants for meetings to which some of those attending have travelled and when it is more efficient to continue the business of the meeting without a break; or at training courses where it is more efficient to keep the delegates together and continue the course without a break.

Outreach Services

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what outreach services are available to young people in the (a) Normanton and Sharlston and (b) Ossett wards of Normanton constituency (i) within and (ii) outside the sure start plus scheme. [35415]

Beverley Hughes: The local sure start plus programme—branded locally as 'young families'—works across all wards in Wakefield MDC. Young families provides one-to-one support to young parents and pregnant teenagers and is developing a new teenage parents' support group in partnership with local health visitors. This group is based at Chesney's and is open to young parents from Featherstone and its surrounding districts, including Normanton and Sharlston.

Over and above the services provided by young families, the local authority 'young people's service' has outreach provision targeting hard-to-reach young people in Normanton and Sharlston, including:

street work in Normanton one afternoon a week; and

A Connexions personal adviser who provides outreach services on the outreach van.

A new outreach project is about to start in Normanton, run jointly by the young people's service and the local teenage pregnancy team.

The young people's service also delivers outreach services in Horbury and Ossett, again targeting hard-to-reach young people, including:

Detached youth work two nights a week; and

One health and information session per week run by a Connexions PA

Finally, the West Yorkshire Youth Association provides the following outreach services targeting hard-to-reach young people:

An outreach van working at the Freeston Business and Enterprise college one afternoon a week, which has been there since August and will remain until Christmas. If the college is closed, the van operates from Normanton park.

An outreach van that moves to different venues across the district on a rota basis. The van did operate in Sharlston earlier in the year, but it was moved to another part of the district as the service was not well accessed by young people.

Policy Framework

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made towards implementing the initiative set out in Information, Advice and Guidance for Adults: The National Policy Framework and Action Plan. [36195]

Phil Hope: My Department has made good progress in implementing the National Policy Framework, working with the Learning and Skills Council and Ufi learndirect:

(i) Every adult in England can access a free, integrated information and advice service on learning and work through the national learndirect telephone and on-line advice service, and 47 local nextstep partnerships providing face-to-face information and advice;

(ii) The services which the integrated service provides to users, including the priority for advice services for those who do not have a full level 2 qualification, are clearly defined in a national customer entitlement leaflet;

(iii) All integrated service providers have achieved the national matrix quality standard, or are working towards achieving this. From January 2006, they will also be inspected by the Adult Learning Inspectorate; and

(iv) Availability of on-line labour market information has improved through Directgov, and a continuous professional development strategy is in place for service practitioners and managers.

School Nurses

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools within Normanton constituency have a school nurse providing practical advice on preventing and dealing with teenage pregnancy; and whether she plans to increase the number of schools with such nurses. [35416]

Beverley Hughes: All four mainstream high schools within Normanton constituency (Normanton Freeston high school, Ossett Technology college, Outwood Grange college of technology, and Horbury school), the hospital school (Pinderfields and Pontefract hospital school), and the special school for students of secondary school age (Highfield school), have access to a school nurse for approximately half a day a week.

The recent Public Health White Paper: "Choosing Health", recognises the important contribution that school nurses can play in improving young people's health and calls for a new and relevant role for school nurses on a wider scale than in recent years.

We are, therefore, providing new funding so that by 2010 every primary care trust (PCT)—working with children's trusts and local authorities—will be resourced to have at least one, full-time, year round, qualified school nurse working with each cluster of primary schools and their related secondary school, taking account of health needs and school populations.

Schools Finance

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average amount spent on (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupils was in each of the last 30 years at today's prices. [36912]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The available information is contained within the following table. We do not have comparable information for earlier years:

School based expenditure[1, 2, 3] per pupil[2] in local authority maintained primary and secondary schools

	Primary[4]	Pre-primary/primary[4]	£ per pupil Secondary
2003–04	2,810	n/a	3,620
2002–03[3]	2,650	n/a	3,380
2001–02	2,690	2,780	3,410
2000–01	2,450	2,520	3,130
1999–2000[4,5]	2,250	2,300	2,930
1999–2000[4,5]	2,250	2,300	2,930
1998–99[6]	n/a	2,140	2,800
1997–98[6]	n/a	2,040	2,780
1996–97	n/a	2,100	2,840
1995–96	n/a	2,120	2,880
1994–95	n/a	2,140	2,930
1993–94	n/a	2,110	2,930
1992–93	n/a	2,090	3,030

n/a = Figures are not available.

[1] School based expenditure includes only expenditure incurred directly by local authority schools. This includes the pay of teachers and school-based support staff, school premises costs, books and equipment, and certain other supplies and services, less any capital items funded from recurrent spending and income from sales, fees and charges and rents and rates. This excludes the central cost of support services such as home to school transport, local authority administration and the financing of capital expenditure.

[2] The expenditure data to 1998–99 are drawn from the annual RO1 spending returns which local authorities submitted to the ODPM. Figures for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are drawn from Section 52 (Table 3) Outturn statements which local authorities submitted to the DfES. Figures for 2002–03 onwards are taken from Section 52 (Table A) Outturn statements. The change in sources is shown by the blank row. The pupil data are drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[3] From 2002–03 the calculation is broadly similar to the calculation in previous years. However, 2001–02 and earlier years includes all premature retirement compensation (PRC) and Crombie payments, mandatory PRC payments and other indirect employee expenses, while from 2002–03 only the schools element of these categories is included. In 2001–02 this accounted for approximately £70 per pupil of the England total, while the schools element of these categories accounted for approximately £50 per pupil of the England total in 2002–03. Also, for some LAs, expenditure that had previously been attributed to the school sectors was reported within the LA part of the form from 2002–03 and would therefore be excluded, though this is not quantifiable from existing sources.

[4] Expenditure was not distinguished between the pre-primary and primary sectors until the inception of Section 52 for financial year 1999–2000.

[5] The expenditure data for 1999–2000 onwards reflect the return of grant maintained schools to local authority maintenance.

[6] Spending in 1997–98 reflects the transfer of monies from local government to central Government for the nursery vouchers scheme. These were returned to local government from 1998–99.

Notes:

1. Cash figures are adjusted to 2004–05 prices using December 2005 Gross Domestic Product Deflators.
2. Figures are as reported by the LEA in real terms (2004–05 prices) and rounded to the nearest £10.

Secondary Schools (Storage)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many secondary schools in England have failed to reach the minimum standards regarding the provision of storage facilities in each of the last five years. [36818]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills does not set minimum standards for storage facilities in secondary schools. It does, however, in "Building Bulletin 98: Briefing framework for Secondary School Projects" (BB98), offer guidance on storage areas for secondary schools.

No comparison has been made, within the last five years, between the existing amount of storage in secondary schools and that recommended in BB98.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to improve the provision of storage facilities at secondary schools in England. [36819]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has produced guidance in the form of "Building Bulletin 98: Briefing Framework for Secondary School Projects" (BB98) that gives recommended standards for the provision of storage in secondary schools.

The Department's Asset Management Plan, Suitability Assessment Method, enables the reporting and prioritising of any shortfall of storage where it has a direct impact on education, health and safety or security.

The Department's Net Capacity Assessment Method records all spaces in schools including stores. With this data it is possible for schools and local authorities to compare existing storage areas with those recommended in BB98.

The unprecedented level of funding being made available for secondary schools through Building Schools for the Future, Targeted Capital and other funding programmes should ensure that any identified shortfall in the provision of storage facilities in secondary schools can be rectified.

Sector Skills Bodies

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the relationship is between Skills 4 Security and the Learning and Skills Council; and if she will make a statement. [36374]

Phil Hope: Skills for Security is a newly established standards setting body formed after two years of research and consultation within the security industry. The new body will be fully operational from 1 January 2006 and, as the Security Industry Association's successor organisation on skills, will work with the Learning and Skills Council on the industry skills remit including promoting the industry's priorities to the LSC to inform their planning and funding decisions.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's involvement was in the establishment of Skills 4 Security as a sector skills body for the security industry; and if she will make a statement. [36375]

Phil Hope: Skills for Security is an independently established organisation which will become fully operational on 1 January 2006. It will take over the skills remit for the security industry from the Security Industry Association (SIA). Skills for Security is not part of the Skills for Business Network which encompasses 25 employer led Sector Skills Councils and the Sector Skills Development Agency (SSDA). It is anticipated that Skills for Security will work with the SSDA on skills matters in a similar way to its predecessor, the SIA. The SSDA and the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, both non-departmental public bodies, were involved in the industry-wide consultation exercise which led to the formation of Skills for Security, although the Department for Education and Skills itself was not a contributor.

Student Debt

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Cambridge (David Howarth) of 22 June 2005, Official Report, columns 1175–1176W, on student debt, on what date the Student Income and Expenditure Survey for 2004–05 will be published. [36205]

Bill Rammell: It is intended that the Student Income and Expenditure Survey will be published in February 2006.

University Staff (Salaries)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average salary is of a senior university (a) professor and (b) lecturer in England. [35215]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The latest available figures are shown in the table. Figures for 2004/05 will be available in January 2006.

Average salary[1] of full-time HE academic staff with teaching responsibilities HE institutions in England 2003/04

Grade	Average salary (£)
Professors	57,000
Senior lecturers and researchers	41,700
Lecturers	32,500

[1] Average salary is derived from the gross basic salary per annum, in pounds sterling as stated in the contract at the reference date of HESA's staff count (July 31) or at the end date of the contract if earlier. It does not include any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria, regardless of their source.

Note:
Figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.

Source:
Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA).

Youth Opportunity Fund

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the resources likely to be made available to Birmingham city council under her Youth Opportunity Fund initiative. [36155]

Beverley Hughes: Allocations for the resources are not currently available. We expect to make announcements early in the new year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

A21 Upgrade

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the South East of England Regional Development Agency has in the proposed A21 upgrade; and what funding it has received in each year since 1997. [34337]

Alun Michael [holding answer 5 December 2005]: SEEDA leads the Hastings and Bexhill Task Force, the partnership established in 2002 to take forward the regeneration of the Hastings area. The improvement of the A21 is one of the transport priorities identified in the Five Point Plan for the regeneration of Hastings and Bexhill. The role of SEEDA, and the Task Force, has therefore been to advocate the bringing forward of A21 improvement schemes. The Highways Agency is the responsible body for delivering these schemes, SEEDA has no direct role in them. Therefore SEEDA has received no funding for such schemes.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bankruptcies there have been in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [37557]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The regional breakdown available for the insolvency statistics is not directly comparable with standard administrative or electoral geographies. The insolvency "regions" are areas assigned to groups of Official Receivers and are based around the location of county courts where the cases are heard and of courts having jurisdiction over these. The county courts covered in Southend are Southend-on-Sea, Brentwood, Chelmsford, Maldon and Romford. The county courts covered in St. Albans are Amersham, Aylesbury, Harlow, High Wycombe, Hitchin, Luton, St. Albans and Watford. The county courts covered in London are Aldershot and Farnham, Barnet, Bloomsbury, Bloomsbury and Marylebone, Bow, Brentford, Bromley, Chingford, Clerkenwell, Croydon, Edmonton, Epsom, Guildford, Kingston-Upon-Thames, Lambeth, Marylebone, Mayor's and City of London, Reigate, Sevenoaks, Shoreditch, Staines, Wandsworth, West London, Westminster, Willesden and Woolwich. The county courts covered in Croydon are Aldershot and Farnham, Bromley, Croydon, Epsom, Guildford, Kingston-Upon-Thames, Reigate, Sevenoaks, Staines and Woolwich.

Figures for England and Wales are provided as follows, together with those for Official Receivers offices whose coverage is closest to the regions requested. The statistics below national level should not be considered to be a reliable measure of bankruptcies in those regions listed in the question and should, therefore, be interpreted with caution.

Numbers of individual bankruptcies recorded over the last 10 financial years, April 1995 to April 2005

Official receivers office	1995-96	1996-97	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05

Company Audits

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to improve the auditing of British companies. [36204]

Alun Michael: As part of the Government's commitment to promoting high quality auditing. It has:

Established the Auditing Practices Board under the independent regulator, the Financial Reporting Council;

Set new ethical standards that include a requirement to rotate the lead audit partner every five years;

Enhanced powers for auditors to obtain documents and information from directors and employees of companies;

Introduced independent monitoring and oversight of the audit profession through the Public Oversight Board for Accountancy and its Audit Inspection Unit;

Required greater transparency by companies about services purchased from an auditor, including breakdown of types and value of non-audit services.

In addition, the Company Law Reform Bill, introduced in the other House in November, brings the law on company auditing together in one place and restates it more clearly. It also makes a number of changes designed to improve the audit process.

Exports (Developing Countries)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures have been taken to reduce the effects of (a) European tariffs and (b) farm subsidies on the export earnings of developing countries. [35606]

Ian Pearson: The long-term aims of the Government are to abolish all trade-distorting agricultural subsidies and all barriers to agricultural trade in the form of tariffs or quotas, providing increased opportunities for developing countries to trade their way out of poverty. In the context of the current World Trade Organisation trade round, the Doha Development Agenda, the current EU offer envisages a 38.9 per cent. average reduction in EU tariffs, a 70 per cent. reduction in EU AMS (aggregate measure of support) domestic subsidies and the elimination of export subsidies. The recent reform of the sugar sector will reduce substantially the EU's use of export subsidies and the Government are pressing for agreement of a 2010 end date for all export subsidies.

Non-agricultural Market Access

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with his Brazilian counterpart about non-agricultural market access; and if he will make a statement on progress on this issue in advance of the Hong Kong World Trade Organisation negotiations. [35603]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had discussions with his Brazilian counterpart, Celso Amorim, on a number of occasions-both in person, and on the telephone.

The WTO General Council adopted on 2 December 2005 a draft Ministerial declaration for discussion at Hong Kong. The text on Non-Agricultural Market Access (NAMA) text notes that much work remains to be done to conclude the negotiations. It indicates that agreement should be reached by Ministers at Hong Kong on a date by which modalities should be agreed, and by which draft schedules will be agreed.

The Chair of the Negotiating Group also, on his own authority, produced a report, which is annexed to the draft ministerial declaration. This highlights the areas of convergence and divergence between WTO members on NAMA. It also provides guidance on further action at or after the Hong Kong ministerial conference.

Postal Services

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will ensure that the all post offices that want to provide vehicle licensing services are able to do so; and what plans his Department has to make rural post offices more economically viable. [34145]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 2 December 2005]: Decisions on the number of outlets able to issue motor vehicle licences are a matter for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA). Its current contract with Post Office Limited limits the number of post offices providing this facility to 4,500.

The Government are currently considering the future of the rural post office network. No decisions on this will be taken until Government have considered the findings of the Post Office Ltd. report of their pilot programme, trialling new and innovative ways of delivering postal services to rural communities. The Report is due to be presented to Government at the end of the year. This will be considered alongside analysis of the network currently being conducted.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the rural Post Office network. [35527]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The Government have made it clear that they will make informed decisions about the longer-term future of the rural post office network in light of the Post Office Ltd. Report into their trials of new and innovative means of delivering postal services to rural communities. The Report is due to be delivered to Government by the end of this year. This will be considered alongside analysis of the network currently being conducted.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to ensure that the (a) implications and (b) costs of delivering the universal service obligation are shared with postal operators in addition to the Royal Mail. [35769]

Barry Gardiner: The Government's highest priority for the postal sector is to ensure the provision of a universal service. The costs of providing that service, and the appropriate price levels for its delivery, are a matter for Postcomm, taking into account the effects of market liberalisation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish his Department's analysis of other EU states with regard to whether they have a (a) fully state-owned postal service, (b) partially liberalised postal service and (c) fully liberalised postal service. [35773]

Barry Gardiner: A comprehensive study on the development of competition, in the European postal sector was undertaken by Ecorys on behalf of the EU Commission in July 2005. It includes analyses of market share held by the Universal Service Provider in each member state, and of its ownership structure. The study is available on the Commission's web-site at:

http://europa.eu.int/comm/internal_market/post/studies_en.htm

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Postcomm on whether the Royal Mail should end cross-subsidisation of services. [35774]

Barry Gardiner: The issue of cross subsidies within Royal Mail's services is a matter for Postcomm, acting in accordance with to the requirements of the EU Postal Services Directives. These permit cross-subsidies between the different service elements of the universal service, but not between universal services and non-universal services.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the social and economic value of the rural post office network. [35728]

Barry Gardiner: We are working closely with other Government Departments and key stakeholders to assess the social and economic value of the rural network.

As set out in Section 42 of the Postal Services Act 2000, Postcomm, the regulator for postal services, is tasked with providing Government with clear advice about developments in the post office network. Postcomm's annual report to Government on issues relating to the post office network includes consideration of the social and economic value of the rural post office network.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what date negotiations on Government funding for the rural post office network from 2008 onwards are planned to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [35729]

Barry Gardiner: Post Office Ltd will shortly report to Government the findings of pilot activity to test new and innovative ways of providing post office services. Government will consider the implications for future access and funding for the network beyond 2008 at that point.

Power Stations

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of coal-powered power stations' emissions. [34797]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Pollution controls on coal-fired power stations in England and Wales, are a matter for the Environment Agency. Theses controls are set in authorisations issued under the Integrated Pollution Control (IPC) system or in permits under the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (IPPC) system, which is replacing IPC.

Under these systems, the operator has to routinely monitor and report on emissions. This information is placed on public registers at the local Environment Agency offices and the local authority public registers. No change is being contemplated in emission limits for coal-fired power stations. These stations routinely produce their highest output during winter peak demand and controls are set to protect the environment to accommodate this.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent (a) discussions he has had and (b) representations he has received about flue gas desulphurisation at existing power stations. [34800]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Pollution controls on coal-fired power stations in England and Wales, are a matter for the Environment Agency. Theses controls are set in authorisations issued under the Integrated Pollution Control (IPC) system or in permits under the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (IPPC) system, which is replacing IPC.

The Environment Agency is undertaking pre-application discussions with organisations considering flue gas desulphurisation, and applications are expected next year. Once received, the applications will be placed on public registers at the local Environment Agency offices and the local authority public registers. An advertisement will be placed in the local press to indicate that the applications have been received and invite comments from the public. The Environment Agency will also provide copies to statutory consultees.

Royal Mail

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) share capital was received and (b) investment made by the Government in relation to the Royal Mail in each year for which figures are available since 1997. [35770]

Barry Gardiner: The Government have not received any share capital from Royal Mail since 1997.

There was no significant funding for the Post Office Corporation prior to 1999, but since then the Government have invested in the company.

Royal Mail

In December 2002, it was agreed to make available £1,044 million of securities to enable Royal Mail to deliver its renewal plan.

Post Office Ltd.

Government support of almost £2 billion in total has been made available to Post Office Ltd since 1999. Other than support for the rural network at £150 million per year for three years from 2003–04, this funding was not allocated on a yearly basis.

	£ million
Horizon IT project	480
Contribution to "Your Guide" project	25
Support for the rural network to 2006	450
Community post office support	2
Support for urban network reinvention	210
Deprived urban schemes in England	15
Repayment of historic debt (to April 2003)	[1]726

[1] To Royal Mail

The Government have also decided to extend support to the rural network for two further years to 2008, worth another £300 million. This is subject to state aid clearance.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when Sir George Bain is expected to publish his findings following his discussions with those stakeholders involved in the future of the Royal Mail. [35772]

Barry Gardiner: Sir George Bain has been appointed to provide advice to the Secretary of State on Royal Mail issues. There are no plans to publish Sir George's advice.

Security and Homeland Defence Technology

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to fund research into technologies in the field of security and homeland defence. [34406]

Barry Gardiner: In addition to the Department's funding of the science base and the university research, the Department operates our Technology Strategy, the last round of which was launched on Thursday 24 November.

With regard to security and homeland defence, officials work closely with colleagues in the appropriate other Government Departments to align this support for Collaborative Research and Development with their own research needs and programmes. This close working relationship also extends to our support for Knowledge Transfer Networks and Innovation Platforms in security, respectively to optimise the UK exploitation of research and tackle public policy challenges.

A number of the case studies cited at the 24 November launch were for grants to support research on security issues.

Small Business Research Initiative

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many research and development opportunities were disseminated to (a) small and medium-sized enterprises, (b) universities and (c) other organisations through the Small Business Research Initiative in each of the last five years; what the total value of such opportunities was in each case in each year; how many contracts were awarded as a result in each case in each year; and what the value of such contracts was in each case in each year. [35494]

Alun Michael: Not all Government Departments have maintained detailed records in respect of their Small Business Research Initiative opportunities since the initiative's introduction in 2000. Therefore the breakdown requested is not available for the Initiative's voluntary phase.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, has mandated Departments to participate under the initiative in the Budget on 16 March this year and the DTI's Small Business Service will shortly be publishing the overall performance figures and what these represent as a percentage of baseline R and D budgets, where known, for 2003–04 and 2004–05.

South East of England Development Agency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding the South East of England Development Agency has received from Government in each year since 1997 to spend on transport infrastructure schemes in East Sussex. [36592]

Alun Michael [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The South East England Development Agency, like all Regional Development Agencies, receives 'single pot' funding from Government in support of its statutory duties under the RDA Act 1998. Elements in this funding are not ring-fenced, so RDAs have discretion to spend it in line with their statutory duties which are: to promote economic development and regeneration; to promote business efficiency, investment and competitiveness; to promote employment; to enhance the development and application of skills; to contribute to the UK's sustainable development.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the South East of England development agency has in Government funding decisions about transport infrastructure projects in East Sussex. [36594]

Alun Michael [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The statutory role of the regional development agency is: to promote economic development and regeneration; to promote business efficiency, investment and competitiveness; to promote employment; to enhance the development and application of skills; to contribute to the UK's sustainable development.

Through the development of its Regional Economic Strategy and through its membership of the Regional Transport Board, SEEDA has highlighted the need for adequate investment in transport infrastructure in East Sussex and the rest of the region.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Air Weapons

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences involving air weapons there were in (a) England, (b) London and (c) each London borough in each of the last five years. [35420]

Hazel Blears: The available data for England and London are given in the tables.

Table 1: Offences involving air weapons in (a) England and (b) London, 1999–2000 to 2001–02

	Number of offences
	England	London
1999–2000	9,485	1,178
2000–01	9,723	1,228
2001–02[1]	11,828	1,483

[1] Figures for some crime categories may have been inflated by some police forces implementing the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of national implementation.

Table 2: Offences involving air weapons in (a) England and (b) London, 2002–03 and 2003–04

	Number of offences
	England	London
2002–03[1]	13,045	1,333
2003–04	13,005	1,244

[1] The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced on 1 April 2002. Figures before and after this date are not directly comparable.

Data for the London boroughs are not collected centrally.

Antisocial Behaviour

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Doncaster North constituency are subject to antisocial behaviour orders; and how many are aged under 21 years. [35681]

Hazel Blears: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) have been available to the courts since 1 April 1999. From commencement up to 31 May 2000 data were collected, on aggregate numbers only, by police force area. From copies of the orders received, since 1 June 2000, we are able to determine the local government authority areas in which restrictions are imposed. The number of ASBOs issued, as notified to the Home Office, in the local government authority area of Doncaster metropolitan borough council, in which Doncaster North constituency is situated, from 1 June 2000 to 31 March 2005 (latest available) is 43 of which 20 are in respect of people under 21 years old.

Breastfeeding

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given to police officers on their response to public complaints against women breastfeeding in public. [35256]

Hazel Blears: This is an operational matter for chief officers to determine.

Building Safer Communities Fund

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Building Safer Communities Fund funding stream from the Government Office for London was made available to the London borough of Croydon in 2004–05. [34981]

Hazel Blears: The Government Office for London was allocated a total of £12,705,385 from the Building Safer Communities Fund in 2004–05, £474,652 of which was made available to the London borough of Croydon. This included a £25,000 grant towards the cost of an antisocial behaviour co-ordinator.

Cannabis Possession

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average cost of arresting and charging people for cannabis possession in the last 12 months. [33644]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally.

Commission for Integration

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 430W, on the Commission for Integration, which faith leaders and key stakeholders were contacted by him on 21 September 2005; and what assessment he has made of the responses he has received. [37009]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to the following faith leaders and key stakeholders on 21 September 2005:

Bishop of Stepney,
Cardinal Cormac Murphy O'Connor,
Iqbal Sacranie-Muslim Council of Britain,
Dr Zaki Badawi-Muslim College, London,
Jasdev Singh Rai-British Sikh Consultative Forum,
Anil Bhanot-Hindu Council,
Joel Edwards-Evangelical Alliance,
Ramesh Kallidai-Hindu Forum,
Indarjit Singh-Network of Sikh Organisations,
Henry Grunwald-Board of Deputies of British Jews,
Om Parkesh Sharma-National Organisation of Sikh Temples,
Trevor Phillips-Commission for Racial Equality.

The Home Secretary is giving careful consideration to all the views he has received and to nominations for membership of the Commission.

The Home Secretary considers it very important that he gets the shape of the Commission right from the outset and is thinking very carefully about its direction. He hopes to be in a position to make an announcement on the way ahead soon.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent crime figures are for England and Wales according to (a) the British Crime Survey and (b) recorded crime statistics, broken down by (i) constabulary, (ii) region and (iii) basic command unit. [35454]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The most recent crime figures broken down by police force area and region were published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 11/05, 'Crime in England and Wales 2004/2005'. This can be found on the website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm. Online, the Bulletin has accompanying tables which give recorded crime by basic command unit (BCD). The British Crime Survey does not provide data at BCU level.

Criminal Records Bureau Checks

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of criminal record checks were completed within (a) one month, (b) two months, (c) three months, (d) six months and (e) one year in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2004. [34639]

Andy Burnham: Information is not available to answer the question in the format requested. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) reports its performance separately against Standard and Enhanced Disclosures on a monthly and rolling 12 month basis. The Published Service Standard (PSS) for Standard Disclosures is to complete 93 per cent. within two weeks and 90 per cent. of Enhanced Disclosures within four weeks measured from when the CRB receives a fully completed application to the date of issue of the Disclosure.

Over the last period for which information is available, from 1 November to 30 November 2005, the performance against PSS for Standard Disclosures is 99.4 per cent. and 85.1 per cent. for Enhanced Disclosures. For the equivalent period last year, the figures are 93.5 per cent. for Standard Disclosures and 89.1 per cent. for Enhanced. The PSS for Standard Disclosures was revised in April 2005 from 90 per cent. within two weeks to 93 per cent. within two weeks.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how priorities are determined in making criminal records checks; what priority schools have; and whether a distinction is made between different types of school. [34640]

Andy Burnham: Disclosure applications are processed with equal priority. No school or other type of education establishment or organisation receives priority over another.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long on average the Metropolitan police took to process Criminal Records Bureau checks in the last period for which figures are available. [34576]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 6 December 2005]: The Metropolitan Police Service is currently taking on average 26.16 days to process Disclosures. This figure may be compared against the average time taken by the Metropolitan Police Service to process a Disclosure application during the last year, which was over 33 days.

The Metropolitan police have made a number of changes to their IT systems recently which has led to significant and ongoing improvements in the time they are taking to deal with Disclosures referred to them by the Criminal Records Bureau.

Crystal Meth

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the (a) use of and (b) supply of and the risks for recreational drug users from crystal meth. [37014]

Paul Goggins: The use and supply of methylamphetamine in the United Kingdom is estimated to be very low based on the number and size of seizures. The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) published a report on methylamphetamine on 17 November 2005; they recognised the potentially serious harms of taking methylamphetamine to the individual but the overall risk to users remained low given the very limited prevalence. The ACMD also recommended the development of an early warning system centred on ensuring those agencies collecting data on illicit drugs make the distinction between amphetamine and methylamphetamine when recording data. The ACMD recommended the closer monitoring of certain sub groups such as clubbers who are more likely to use methylamphetamine and agreed the subject of methylamphetamine should be a standing agenda item at the ACMD Technical Committee. It was also recommended action should be taken to impose tighter controls on methylamphetamine's precursors to prevent the spread of its misuse. The Government have accepted all the ACMD's recommendations. The ACMD undertook to provide an update to its advice in 12 month's time.

Drugs (Recreational Use)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to monitor the prevalence of recreational use of drugs, with particular reference to methamphetamine; and if he will make a statement. [32866]

Paul Goggins: The British Crime Survey (BCS) is the chief monitoring tool used by the Home Office to measure the prevalence of controlled drugs. The BCS does not currently differentiate between methylamphetamine use and amphetamines in general. The prevalence of methylamphetamine in the United Kingdom is estimated to be very low based on the number and size of seizures.

The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) published a report on methylamphetamine on 17 November 2005 which included recommendations regarding the development of an early warning system centred on ensuring those agencies that collect data on illicit drugs to make the distinction between amphetamine and methylamphetamine when recording data. The ACMD recommended the closer monitoring of certain sub groups such as clubbers, who are more likely to use methylamphetamine, and that the subject of methylamphetamine should be a standing agenda item at the ACMD technical committee meetings.

The Government have accepted all the ACMD's recommendations, including taking preventative action to impose tight controls on methylamphetamine precursor chemicals. The ACMD undertook to provide an update to its advice in 12 months' time.

Drunk and Disorderly

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made in (a) London, (b) Havering and (c) Romford as a consequence of an individual being drunk and disorderly in the last five years. [33917]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available centrally.

European Anti-crime Measures

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the European Commission's proposal that the Border Management Agency should provide intelligence and play a role in investigations relating to the involvement of organised crime in illegal immigration. [35644]

Andy Burnham: The Border Management Agency (Frontex) is a new EU Agency responsible for improving management of the external borders of the member states of the European Union, contributing to a high and uniform level of control on persons and surveillance of the external borders of the member states. Its primary function in terms of combating organised crime will be to ensure effective exchange of information with Europol and other appropriate organisations. Frontex and Europol should also work closely on operational activities where appropriate.

Therefore the Government broadly supports the European Commission's proposal that Frontex should provide intelligence and play a role in co-ordinating operations on illegal immigration related organised crime in co-operation with member states and Europol, but it should not have an investigative role. There also needs to be assurance that Frontex's main focus will remain on strengthening management of the EU external border.

Fireworks (Penalty Notices)

Steve McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many penalty notices have been issued by each police force area in England in relation to the illegal use of fireworks during the last 12 months. [32848]

Hazel Blears: Offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 (made under section 11 of the Fireworks Act 2003) for breach of the national fireworks curfew, the illegal possession of category four fireworks and the possession by a person under 18 of an adult firework attract penalty notices for disorder, as well as the offence of throwing fireworks. The offence of throwing fireworks has been included in the penalty notice for disorder scheme since it was introduced nationally during 2004. The offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 were brought into the scheme with effect from 11 October 2004. The numbers of penalty notices issued by police force area are provided in the table.

Injury on Duty Awards

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his proposals to alter the terms relating to payments of Injury on Duty Awards, with particular reference to former police officers over the age of 65 years. [36829]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 12 December 2005]: We are reviewing the policy on injury awards for the police. In particular we are looking at the procedures for assessing claims and the criteria for receiving awards. We will conduct a public consultation exercise next year before making final decisions. It is not intended that any changes to regulations should apply to officers who have already left the service.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to allow the Independent Police Complaints Commission to conduct full investigations on fatalities caused by police vehicles. [32761]

Hazel Blears: Under the provisions of the Police Reform Act 2002, all complaints and conduct matters which involve death or serious injury must be referred to the Independent Police Complaints Commission. Also, the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 introduced a new category of cases called Death and Serious Injury matters; that is, cases which are not conduct matters and are not the subject of complaints. All such cases must be referred to the Independent Police Complaints Commission. It is a matter for the Commission to determine how a case is investigated, including conducting its own investigation. The Secretary of State has no powers to intervene in that process.

Football Hooliganism

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made at football grounds of (a) premiership, (b) championship, (c) league one, (d) league two and (e) conference clubs in each of the last five years. [35577]

Paul Goggins: Details of football-related arrests for the seasons 2000–01 to 2004–05, presented by the division in which the club the arrested individual supports competed in, is provided in the following table:

	2004–05	2003–04	2002–03	2001–02	2000–01
Premier League	1,339	1,627	1,694	1,355	1,623

[1] Arrest data for the football conference (National Division) was not collated before 2004–05 season.
[2] A The Home Office has published football related arrest statistics since the 2001–02 season. Previously the data was published by the National Criminal Intelligence Service. Their 2000–01 season data only breaks down arrests by club in League competitions. Arrests in cup competitions (771) are presented as totals for each competition, not by club.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has conducted on the lifespan of radio frequency identification tags in documents that may be subjected to intense use in the identity card scheme. [32082]

Andy Burnham: There are no plans to use radio frequency identification tags in ID cards. We have conducted a wide-ranging market sounding study to obtain the market view of the feasibility of an identity card with a ten year life. The survey was distributed to a cross section of suppliers in the smartcard value chain and completed responses were obtained from twelve suppliers. Amongst other questions, suppliers were asked for their views on the durability and costs of contact, contact-less, dual interface and hybrid cards. This survey concluded that a ten year life for a contact-less card incorporating a secure smartcard chip with a radio frequency contactless interface was feasible.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to publish the Concept Viability report on the Identity Cards Project when he receives it. [33032]

Andy Burnham: The Concept Viability report will be published at the commencement of the procurement process.

Knives

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been found to be carrying knives in public without a good reason or lawful authority in (a) Southend, West constituency, (b) Essex, (c) the Metropolitan police area of London and (d) Hertfordshire since the coming into force of the Knives Act 1997; how many of these received a prison sentence; and what the sentence was in each case in which proceedings are complete. [35976]

Hazel Blears: Information from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is provided in the following table. It shows the number of offenders convicted under section 139 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 of 'having a knife or bladed article in a public place' in South East Essex petty sessional area and in Essex , Metropolitan and Hertfordshire police force areas, 1997–2004. The table also shows the numbers sentenced to immediate custody and the length of sentence.

Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

KPMG Review

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 45W, on the KPMG review, for what reasons the whole KPMG report is not being published. [35271]

Andy Burnham: The extract from the KPMG review was published in November 2005. To publish the full report would prejudice the commercial interests of the Identity Cards Scheme as it contains figures from the business case which if published would result in the Department being unable to obtain value for money from prospective suppliers during the procurement process.

London Bombings

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been seconded from each individual constabulary in England and Wales to the Metropolitan police to assist with their investigations into the bombings and attempted bombings in London in July. [16349]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not held centrally. However, the Commissioner of police of the metropolis has provided the following response. 352 officers from county forces were seconded to the Metropolitan police to assist with investigations into the London bombings. As at 30 November 2005,151 officers were still attached to the MPS. 201 county officers have since returned to their original force. Figures by individual force are provided in the following table.

Mobile Phone Theft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of mobile telephone theft there were in (a) Lancashire and (b) England and Wales in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [35503]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with mobile telephone companies about measures to combat the theft of mobile telephones. [35504]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office, mobile phone industry and police have developed a strong and close working partnership in order to tackle mobile phone theft effectively.

The principal forum through which the Home Office engages with the mobile phone industry at a working level is the Mobile Industry Crime Action Forum (MICAF). MICAF is an industry-based forum of mobile phone network operators, retailers and handset manufacturers, set up specifically to tackle the issue of mobile phone crime. It has worked closely with the Home Office and the National Mobile Phone Crime Unit on a number of measures to tackle mobile phone theft, such as the database of lost and stolen phones, legislation to tackle re-programming and the National Mobile Phone Register.

At a ministerial level, several meetings have been held with network operators, retailers and handset manufacturers—these have all proved to be productive. The mobile phone industry are committed to helping the Government and law enforcement agencies tackle mobile phone theft and have worked very positively in partnership with us over the past three years.

Murder Statistics

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) children under 16 years and (b) young people between 16 and 18 years have been murdered in each of the last 20 years. [35277]

Hazel Blears: The available information is given in the following table.

The latest homicide statistics were published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 02/05, 'Crime in England and Wales 2003/2004: Supplementary Volume 1: Homicide and Gun Crime'. This can be found on the website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm

Offences against the Person

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) section 18 and (b) section 20 offences were committed in Essex in each year since 2000; and how many convictions were secured in each year. [34504]

Hazel Blears: The number of offences recorded for 'more serious wounding or other act endangering life' and 'less serious wounding' on the requested basis, are given in the table. Offences specifically relating to sections 18 and 20 cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime series.

Table 1: Number of offences recorded by Essex police, between 1999–2000 and 2001–02

Note:
The data in this table takes account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of offenders found guilty for offences under sections 18 and 20 of the Offences against the Person Act 1861, for Essex Police Force Area 2000 to 2004 are provided in the table.

Overseas Confiscation Orders

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been realised on behalf of other jurisdictions following enforcement of an overseas confiscation order; on behalf of which jurisdiction the order was made in each case; how much was (a) realised and (b) shared with the requesting country once the recovery costs had been deducted in each case; and whether the assets recovered were (i) the proceeds of corruption and (ii) the theft of a foreign state's assets in each case. [35401]

Andy Burnham: The Home Office does not record such information. Information available from the Crown Prosecution Service is as follows.

The Crown Prosecution Service is currently enforcing a total of three confiscation orders, one from the Republic of Ireland and two from the United States of America. The total amount realised to date is £686,000 (plus accrued interest). This comprises £21,000 (plus accrued interest) in respect of the Republic of Ireland order and £665,000 in respect of one of the US cases. These monies have not been shared with the requesting country to date.

In addition the Crown Prosecution Service enforced last year a US order with a value of £4.2 million. This sum was shared equally between the US and the UK.

None of the orders relates to the proceeds of corruption or theft of a foreign State's assets. Data for previous years is not available.

Passports

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether one of the proposed passport centres will be located in the City of Newcastle upon Tyne. [32424]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 28 November 2005] A network of office locations has been designed to provide the optimum balance between convenience and costs. The design took into account customer opinion surveys, modelling of population and consultations with county and regional authorities. It was externally verified. It has resulted in a network of 69 potential locations in which the average two way journey from home to interview office and back will be just under 25 miles and take just under 40 minutes. However, the exact locations cannot be finally confirmed until the availability of premises has been ascertained, which will take several months.

The interview offices will generally be small and most will be able to meet the demand in their area without being open every day. On present plans, 59 offices will have three interview positions or less and 51 will be open for less than five days per week, but all will be open on Saturdays.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis passport fees are calculated. [33879]

Andy Burnham: Passport fees are set in order to recover the full cost of providing the service including an element for non-fee bearing consular services abroad. Fee levels are reviewed annually with Her Majesty's Treasury. The latest fee levels have been calculated as part of a two-year arrangement whereby all costs will be recovered by 31 March 2007.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements will be made for personal interviews for passport applications in the areas of (a) Berwick-upon-Tweed, (b) Alnwick and (c) Rothbury. [32520]

Andy Burnham: A network of offices locations has been designed to provide the optimum balance between convenience and costs. The design took into account customer opinion surveys, modelling of population and consultations with county and regional authorities. It was externally verified. It has resulted in a network of 69 potential locations in which the average two way journey from home to interview office and back will be just under 25 miles and take just under 40 minutes. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of interviewing all first time adult passport applicants. [35380]

Andy Burnham: The UK Passport Service has not yet completed the procurement process for the introduction of the high street network of offices for conducting interviews for all first-time adult applicants for passports. It is therefore unable to release details on costs at this time as it could prejudice the contract negotiations.

As stated in the corporate and business plans, the average unit cost for the production of passports will rise from £42.36 in 2005–06 to £57.93 in 2006–07 to cater for a range of improvement initiatives, among which is the introduction of biometrics and the interview for all first time adult passport applications.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to introduce the e-passport with a chip containing the image of the holder's face; and if he will make a statement. [35385]

Andy Burnham: The new biometric passport is planned to be introduced through a phased incremental approach from February 2006. During the early stages of transition, some customers will receive a biometric passport but most will continue to receive a digital passport. UK Passport Service will only switch over completely to biometric passports once it establishes it is safe to do so without compromising customer service. Both the current digital and new biometric passports will be valid international travel documents.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were prosecuted for passport (a) fraud and (b) forgery in each of the last five years. [35386]

Andy Burnham: The figures recorded by the UK Passport Service (UKPS) for the number of prosecutions made against individuals who have fraudulently applied for passports are given in the following table.

	Number
2001	16
2002	5
2003	16
2004	54
2005[1]	25

[1] until October.

It should be noted that UKPS does not routinely receive feedback from the police or prosecution authorities on cases of passport fraud which are referred to them. The figures given above are therefore likely to be a significant under representation of the number of prosecutions brought. UKPS is working with the police to develop a more effective feedback mechanism. The figures collated by UKPS do not distinguish between successful and unsuccessful prosecutions. Figures relating to prosecutions for passport forgery are not available.

Police

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in implementing detailed rules of engagement across the police force. [34407]

Hazel Blears: Operational tactics when using firearms are a matter for the police. The Association of Chief Police Officers have produced a manual of guidance on the police use of firearms. The policy section of this guidance is available at www.acpo.police.uk.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were on establishment in the Essex police force in each of the last five years. [34497]

Hazel Blears: The published data relates to the actual strength of the police force not establishment which are set by police authorities and chief constables. The data for Essex police is set out in the following table.

Essex police—Police service personnel strength 2001–05

Number

As at 31 March	Police Officer	Police (Support) Staff	Community Support Officer[1]	Designated Officers (S38)[2]	Special Constables
2001	2,887	1,447	[3]n/a	[3]n/a	445
2002	2,946	1,571	[3]n/a	[3]n/a	381

2004	3,098	1,876	86	[4]n/a	349
2005	3,190	1,955	179	65	363

[1] Community Support Officers were introduced in 2002–03.
[2] Designated officers are persons employed to exercise specific powers which would otherwise be available only to police officers (such as Investigation Officers, Detention Officers and Escort Officers). Introduced under s38 of the Police Reform Act 2002.
[3] Not applicable.
[4] Not available.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 457W, what is the evidential base for his statement that police restructuring should be implemented as quickly as possible. [34581]

Hazel Blears: Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary clearly demonstrated in its report, "Closing the Gap" that the vast majority of forces in England and Wales were not providing adequate levels of protective services. In light of such findings it would be irresponsible for the Government not to act and ensure such gaps in services were filled in an effective way and as soon as possible.

Furthermore, we do not want to subject the service to a prolonged period of uncertainty which could lead to loss of morale and distraction from their core task of protecting the public. We cannot allow that to happen to the police service so we need to press ahead as quickly as it is sensible to do so.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the Police Federation, (b) the Association of Chief Police Officers, (c) Taser International and (d) other interested parties regarding possible changes governing the deployment of tasers. [34662]

Hazel Blears: The Association of Chief Police Officers and the Police Federation have suggested that the Taser should be available for use in a wider range of operational situations and by specialist officers. We will be discussing this issue with them shortly. No decisions have yet been taken. Representations have also been received from Amnesty International. No representations have been received from Taser International or other interested parties.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in England and Wales on the latest date for which figures are available, (a) in total and (b) broken down by (i) region, (ii) constabulary and (iii) basic command unit. [35455]

Hazel Blears: The available information is provided in the following table. The figures provided are based on police officer strength as at 31 March 2005.

Note:
This table contain full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number. Because of rounding, there may be an apparent discrepancy between totals and the sums of the constituent items.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms he plans to establish to deal with the personnel issues arising from his proposals to restructure police forces in England and Wales. [35456]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office has established a stakeholder group which includes representatives of the staff associations and trade unions as a forum for discussing the development of personnel issues arising from the restructuring proposals, and officials have held a number of bilateral meetings with the staff associations and unions. I expect that any changes in police officer or staff terms and conditions of service necessitated by restructuring would be handled by the Police Negotiating Board, the Police Advisory Board of England and Wales and the Police Staff Council as appropriate.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the timetable is for the restructuring of police forces in England and Wales. [35458]

Hazel Blears: Forces and authorities will submit their final reports which will include their preferred option for change to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary by 23 December. Detailed assessment of these options will be made before a decision is reached as to the options that are most viable for implementation. No further announcements will be made until next year.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial arrangements he will make to fund the new regional police force for the West Midlands; and what discussions he has had with the Deputy Prime Minister on the resultant changes in council tax bills for band D properties in the area affected. [35660]

Hazel Blears: No decisions have been taken yet about the future structure of policing in the West Midlands area.

The Government will be considering grant arrangements for police authorities in the light of changes to police authority boundaries and in the way the new larger authorities might operate.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the Welsh Assembly Government, Her Majesty's Treasury and police representative bodies have been invited to participate in examining the financial aspects of reorganisation, including the impact of restructuring on budgets, grant and council tax.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police communication systems are interoperable with the (a) local fire service and (b) ambulance service; and what plans he has to ensure that interoperability continues after the proposed amalgamation of police forces. [35687]

Hazel Blears: Airwave is the new radio communications system for the police service in England, Wales and Scotland. Officers across the country using the network are able to communicate directly with each other, regardless of location. The other emergency services are currently updating their radio communication networks on a national basis and have agreed to join the Airwave service. When their new systems are fully operational their communications systems will interoperate seamlessly with the police network. Existing interoperability arrangements on the old radios used by the services will be maintained until the new systems are fully operational. The proposed amalgamation of police forces will have no effect on these arrangements.

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are allocated to each London borough; and how many crimes were committed in each of those boroughs in 2004. [36471]

Hazel Blears: The data for the number of police officers by basic command unit within the Metropolitan police area as at 31 March 2005 are provided in the following table. Data are also provided for the number of offences recorded within these basic command units for 2004–05.

[2] For period 2004–05

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the number of crimes per police officer for each constabulary in England and Wales. [35295]

Hazel Blears: The number of crimes per police officer for the year 2004–05 is given in the following table.

Recorded crime figures can be found in Home Office Statistical Bulletin (HOSB) number 11/05 and police strength figures in HOSB 12/05.

These are available from

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the burden of paperwork faced by the police. [34162]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Frontline Policing Measure for 2004–05 was published on 27 October and indicated that officers in England and Wales spent 64.1 per cent. of their time on frontline duties. Police authorities have set local improvement targets which should deliver the equivalent gain in time of more than 12,000 officers to front line tasks by 2008.

We have made good progress in reducing the bureaucratic burdens on police officers by cutting nearly 9,000 unnecessary forms; civilianising posts; rolling out the penalty notice for disorder scheme; and ensuring that forces have the best scientific and technological support like video identity parades and electronic fingerprinting so that officers spend more time in communities tackling crime and antisocial behaviour and reassuring the public.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will decide the location of the headquarters of merged police forces. [30420]

Hazel Blears: This will be a matter for forces and authorities to consider in due course.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of (a) Level 2 Capability and (b) forensic management in (i) Gloucestershire constabulary and (ii) other police forces in the South West region. [35293]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 6 December 2005]: During the summer of this year Gloucestershire constabulary, like every other Home Office police force in England and Wales, were assessed in relation to their capability and capacity to provide seven 'protective' services. These services are:

Counter terrorism and Domestic Extremism,

Serious and Organised Crime,

Major Crime (Murder) Critical Incidents,

Public Order,

Civil Contingencies and Emergency procedures

Strategic Roads Policing.

The assessment was conducted by officers working for HMIC Denis O'Connor, who reported his findings to the Home Secretary in the report 'Closing the Gap'. While the report identified general issues arising from the assessment, more specific local feedback was given to each chief constable. The 'Closing the Gap' report is available on the Home Office website.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who would bear financial responsibility for the (a) private finance initiative (PFI) payments and (b) compensation payable to PFI contractors for the new headquarters of Gloucestershire constabulary at Quedgeley if it becomes redundant. [36774]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Financial responsibility for the payment to the contractor falls to the police authority. They receive PFI grant support from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), who makes the payment through the Revenue Support Grant. In the event that the new headquarters of Gloucestershire constabulary became redundant the financial responsibility for compensation would pass to the successor authority.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the amount of compensation which would have to be paid to private companies if the new headquarters of Gloucestershire constabulary at Quedgeley is no longer needed as a result of the police restructuring proposals. [36775]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The amount of compensation which would have to be paid to private companies if the new headquarters of Gloucestershire constabulary is no longer needed would be agreed through negotiation at the time of the event. Procedures for this are set out in the Standardisation of PFI Contracts version three (SoPC3), which is published by the Treasury on their website.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the annual cost of maintaining and leasing the new headquarters of Gloucestershire Constabulary at Quedgeley will be under the private finance initiative; [36777]

(2) what the cost was of the new headquarters of Gloucestershire Constabulary at Quedgeley. [36776]

Hazel Blears [holding answers 12 December 2005]: The chief constable of Gloucestershire constabulary is responsible for the operational management of the force. I will ensure that he receives a copy of the questions and replies to you directly.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been employed in (a) Southend and (b) Essex in each year since 1997. [33743]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is set out in the table. Information on strength at basic command unit (BCD) level has only been collected since 2002.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the proposals for the amalgamation of police forces entail changes to the (a) number and (b) boundaries of basic command units. [32863]

Hazel Blears: We anticipate that there will be minimal impact upon basic command units (BCD) as a result of restructuring. We will be in a better position to know what these are once final options for change have been agreed.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the proposed reorganisation of police forces in Wales is expected to cost; and who will pay for the costs of reorganisation. [33180]

Hazel Blears: The consultation process for police force restructuring is currently under way and forces and authorities are working up their business cases proposing their options for change. I have requested authorities to submit their final preferred option including detailed cost/benefit analysis by 23 December 2005. Any proposals for change including from Welsh police forces and authorities, will be carefully assessed after 23 December 2005. I am determined that costs of restructuring will be minimised and benefits arising from mergers should be realised in future years.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the savings accrued from the restructuring of police forces in England and Wales will be retained by the new forces created by the restructuring; [32175]

(2) whether any savings from police force restructuring will be in addition to planned expenditure on the police in England and Wales by his Department as set out in the Spending Review. [32178]

Hazel Blears: We will expect savings made as a result of police force reorganisation to be reinvested by the police service in order to strengthen protective services and support neighbourhood policing.

Religious Cults

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the activities of religious cults, with particular reference to the School of Economic Science; how he plans to respond; and if he will make a statement. [19349]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department considers the matter of cults operating in this country seriously and recently met with the Head of INFORM (Information Network Focusing on Religious Movements) to discuss a range of issues related to cults in the UK.

He has not had any recent representations from the School of Economic Science, but does share the concerns many people have on the activity of cults. He is keen to keep the situation under review.

Schedule 1 Offenders

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his most recent estimate is of the number of Schedule 1 offenders who are at liberty.[32781]

Hazel Blears: A conviction or caution for an offence listed in Schedule 1 to the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 triggers further assessments of risk, by agencies such as the police, probation and prison services and local authority social services, and is used to identify individuals who may pose a risk to children. Practitioners exercise their professional judgement in such assessments and appreciate that not all convicted or cautioned individuals will necessarily pose a continued risk to children and that there are cases where a person without a conviction or caution may pose such a risk.

The offences listed in Schedule 1 range from murder to "any . . . offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person". To calculate the number of people who have committed an offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person and who are currently living in the community could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Speed Cameras

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces use the LTI 20.20 mobile speed camera. [33682]

Paul Goggins: The LTI 20.20 speed enforcement device has been purchased by 50 forces in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been carried out on the impact of atmospheric conditions on the accuracy of speed cameras. [33683]

Paul Goggins: The laboratory and field testing undertaken prior to the type approval of speed enforcement equipment includes an assessment of performance across a wide range of relevant atmospheric conditions. The full range of tests are published in the various Speed meter Handbooks available from Home Office Scientific Development Branch website.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prosecutions for motor speeding offences were discontinued for technicalities relating to the (a) placement and (b) operation of speed limit (i) signs and (ii) cameras in (A) 2003, (B) 2004 and (C) 2005. [33684]

Paul Goggins: This information is not collected centrally.

Stonehenge

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was to Wiltshire constabulary of policing the summer solstice celebrations at Stonehenge in each of the past five years. [34056]

Hazel Blears: The chief constable of Wiltshire constabulary is responsible for the operational management of the force. I will ensure that he receives a copy of the question and replies to you directly.

Strategic Police Forces

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the proposed strategic police forces will be made democratically accountable. [34616]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 5 December 2005]: We continue to see a vital role for police authorities in setting policing priorities for the force and holding the chief officer to account for the delivery of an efficient, effective and responsive policing service. To maintain democratic legitimacy, we envisage that the majority of police authority members will be local councillors, as now. We are considering options for strengthening the accountability arrangements at BCD level to ensure that local communities have a stronger voice in setting local policing priorities. A number of authorities are already piloting various models at this level. One model that seems promising is that of a local policing board. We will be exploring with the association of police authorities how such boards might operate and their relationship with crime and disorder reduction partnerships and local authority scrutiny committees. The establishment of such boards would not affect the current lines of managerial accountability within forces

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the council tax contributions to the proposed strategic police forces will be calculated.[34618]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Government will be considering grant arrangements for police authorities in the light of changes to police authority boundaries and in the way the new larger authorities might operate.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the Welsh Assembly Government, Her Majesty's Treasury and police representative bodies have been invited to participate in working up the financial aspects of reorganisation, including the impact of restructuring on budgets, grant and council tax.

Substance Abuse Offences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 405W, on substance abuse offences, if he will provide (a) tables two and three to which he refers and (b) the relevant figures for 2004 for tables one to four. [33529]

Hazel Blears: The tables are now provided with the 2004 information incorporated.

Tasers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effects of taser use on individuals that have been fired at in England and Wales since 2003. [34661]

Hazel Blears: The Defence Scientific Advisory Council's sub-committee on the Medical Implications of Less Lethal Weapons (DOMILL) has produced three statements on the medical implications of the use of the Taser. Copies have been placed in the Library. DOMILL's view is that the risk of life-threatening or other serious injuries from Taser appears to be very low and certainly very much lower than that from conventional firearms.

A Taser deployment form is completed on each occasion that Taser is used and passed to DOMILL. DOMILL has examined these forms and the available medical reports and is content that the medical issues attributable directly or indirectly to Taser use were not unexpected and are addressed by their statements.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will develop a consultation process involving a wide range of stakeholders to consider proposed changes governing the deployment of Tasers by the police. [35004]

Hazel Blears: No decisions have yet been taken on any possible changes governing the deployment of Tasers by the police service. The Association of Chief Police Officers and the Police Federation have suggested extending the use of the Taser, and discussions are due to take place shortly. We will of course consider consultation with any relevant stakeholders as appropriate.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) title and (b) value of consultancy contracts commissioned (i) by and (ii) in respect of Tamworth borough council in each of the last five years, broken down by consultancy. [32026]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether a permanent (a) shed, (b) kennel, (c) outside lavatory and (d) rabbit hutch may be classed as an outbuilding for the purpose of the assessment of (i) dwelling house code 14 (Outbuildings) and (ii) value significant codes during a council tax valuation by the Valuation Office Agency. [30833]

Mr. Woolas: The structures referred to would not be reflected in the codes.

Departmental Mobile Phones

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many mobile phones are (a) rented and (b) owned by his Department; and at what total cost in 2004–05. [35591]

Jim Fitzpatrick: During the period 19 November 2004 to 17 November 2005 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister purchased 211 phones at a total cost of £17,231.20. ODPM does not rent mobile phones.

Departmental Staff (Chronic Back Pain)

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what initiatives are being taken in his Department to help civil servants with chronic back pain. [34980]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) supports staff with chronic back pain while they are at work, while they are absent because of their illness and during their return to work. The ODPM has a programme of work place assessments for all staff and an Occupational Health Adviser which offers support and advice. Additionally line managers and Human Resources offer support and advice to staff with chronic back pain.

Government Office for London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the (a) housing action trust, (b) European Structural Fund Objective 3, (c) Connexions grant, (d) Neighbourhood Renewal, (e) Housing Investment Programme and (f) London Development Agency grant funding stream from the Government office for London was made available to each London borough in each year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [36467]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested has been made available in the Library of the House.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes have been made since May 1997 to (a) dwelling house codes and (b) value significant codes used by the Valuation Office Agency for council tax liability purposes. [31804]

Mr. Woolas: Valuations for the purposes of council tax banding are based on 1991 estimated values. Dwelling house codes are used as guidance to help this process. Dwelling house codes have been used by the Valuation Office Agency to summarise property attributes since the 1970s. On initial computerisation in the 1980s the system provided for the input of three codes. Codes capable of capture electronically were expanded from three to 10 in April 2002 and from 10 to 17 in March 2003. Value significant codes (VSCs) are part of the 17 dwelling house codes. The number of alternative VSCs available for capture electronically was increased to its present level in January 2005.

Maladministration

Mr. Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many payments for maladministration have been made by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies, (c) its non-departmental public bodies and (d) other bodies for which his Department has responsibility in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [32245]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was established following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002. It is the policy of the ODPM, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in chapter 18.7 and annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting.

The information requested for the period since the establishment of the ODPM is set out in the following table:

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Department (including GOs)	0	0	0
Agencies	7	6	12
Bodies sponsored by Department	0	0	0

Non-Christian Religious Festivals

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps his Department took to celebrate and promote non-Christian religious festivals in 2005. [35590]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Monmouth (David T.C. Davies) on 28 November 2005, Official Report, columns 201–02W.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps his Department is taking to support the provision of smoke alarms in the homes of elderly people. [36790]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The £25 million Home Fire Risk Check Initiative, launched in October 2004, will provide free smoke alarms and fire safety advice to 1.25 million vulnerable households in England by spring 2008. Older people have been identified as the most important target group in guidance and in the Fire and Rescue Service National Framework. The funding is sufficient to provide a free smoke alarm for every pensioner household which does not have one. Many fire and rescue services are also taking up the challenge to work proactively with older people groups through partnership with local authority services and the voluntary sector.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister hosted a national conference on the theme of working with older people for the fire and rescue service and partners on 22 November 2005.

Street Wardens

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many street wardens are employed in each London borough. [35584]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister through the Government office for London, is funding warden schemes across 13 London boroughs over the 2005–06 financial year. The total number of wardens funded across London through this programme is 136. Brent employs seven wardens and two supervisors through their allocation.

Local boroughs also support wardens schemes through mainstream budgets and other Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's funded programmes. Based upon the information currently available, the table below provides the total number of wardens employed within each borough. This information is currently being updated as part of an ongoing national review:

Urban Taskforce Reports

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps his Department is taking to implement the recommendations of Lord Rogers' Urban Task Force reports of 1998 and 2005. [33119]

Yvette Cooper: In 1998 Government asked Lord Rogers of Riverside to set up the Urban Task Force to examine causes of urban decline and recommend practical solutions to identified problems. The task force's report "Towards an Urban Renaissance" was published in June 1999. The Government endorsed the principles behind all of the 105 recommendations, which were fed in to the development of the Government's Urban White Paper. This White Paper, "Our Towns and Cities: the future—Delivering an Urban Renaissance", was published in November 2000 and incorporated the majority of the task force's recommendations. An annex to the White Papers lists specific responses to each Urban Task Force's recommendation.

Significant progress has been made in implementing all of the measures in the White Paper. An implementation plan reporting on progress made between 2000 and 2003 is available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

These achievements have since been built on by the Government's Sustainable Communities Plan, launched in February 2003. This plan sets out a clear set of objectives and actions for the long term development of sustainable communities. It takes forward ideas developed in the Urban Task Force's report and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's subsequent White Paper, creating a robust framework and action plan for delivery.

More recently, Lord Rogers reconvened the task force and prepared an independent follow-up report, "Towards a Strong Urban Renaissance", published on 22 November 2005. As he acknowledges in his foreword to this report,

> "for the first time in 50 years there has been a measurable change of culture in favour of towns and cities, reflecting a nationwide commitment to the Urban Renaissance."

Lord Rogers highlighted how this Government's urban policies have resulted in English cities becoming the "powerhouses" of the UK economy and have become centres for cultural innovation that stand confidently on the international stage.

Government welcome the contribution that "Towards a Strong Urban Renaissance" makes to the continuing and evolving debate on how best to sustain this success. We are currently considering the report and its 53 recommendations, and are exploring how these can best inform our existing and substantive agenda of work already under way to develop world-class, well-designed and sustainable towns and cities that satisfy the demands of residents, workers and visitors alike. The vitality of our towns and cities is an important priority for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and the work under way includes the State of the Cities Report. This is a report to Government from a group of city experts led by Professor Michael Parkinson, due to be published in January 2006 alongside other research and analysis undertaken by the Department such as the findings of the first eight City Summits and research findings from the Framework for City Regions study.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the presence of an (a) orchard, (b) vegetable patch, (c) fish pond and (d) attractive flower arrangement influence the Valuation Office Agency's assessment of value significant codes GG, GN, NA, PS and PL when conducting a council tax valuation. [30837]

Mr. Woolas: The valuation of a domestic property is based on the valuer's estimate of what the capital value of the property is.

Water Supplies (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made as part of the growth area agenda of the need for new reservoir capacity to supply Northamptonshire with water to 2031. [29181]

Yvette Cooper: There is a statutory duty on water companies to provide sufficient water for domestic purposes and the Water Act 2003 made it mandatory for water companies to produce water resource plans for the next 25 years to meet water demand.

Water companies submit their plans as part of the periodic review of prices regulated by Ofwat. In December 2004, the Director General of Water Services determined water and sewerage charges for 2005 to 2010. These allowed for substantial new investment to increase capacity for water supplies to meet predicted need and work to help assess likely need over the full 25 years of water resource plans. The Environment Agency has been engaged with all the local supply companies in producing their water resources plans. These were completed in April 2004, and are subject to regular review.

Anglian Water Services have stated that proposed levels of development over this period will require advancing plans to import water into the Anglian region from the west of the UK by a major increase in the transfer of water from the River Trent and the construction of one or more raw water storage reservoirs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

African Peace Facility

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the African Peace Facility will continue beyond 2007; and how it is proposed to be funded. [35747]

Ian Pearson: The African Peace Facility (APF) has been an effective mechanism for delivering peace support in Africa, and critical to providing support for the African Union mission in Sudan. EU member states agree that the APF should continue beyond 2007. EU member states are now working to ensure a long-term, sustainable and flexible funding arrangement for the APF. Discussions are ongoing on the options for funding the APF.

African Union

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the Government are putting forward within the EU to support the African Union and Regional Economic Communities in strengthening their capacity to (a) prevent conflict and (b) respond to violent conflict. [35754]

Ian Pearson: As presidency, we are proposing an EU Strategy for Africa including proposals to increase the EU's commitment to help the African Union (AU) and Regional Economic Communities (RECs) predict, prevent, mediate and manage conflict, which we hope partners will agree at the European Council later this month. We are seeking to safeguard a significant capacity building element for the AU and the RECs within the EU Africa Peace Facility, and to boost efforts under the European Security and Defence Policy, including support for the African Standby Force, the provision of technical advice and enhanced co-ordination of EU member states assistance to the AU and RECs.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to promote non-conditional annual joint funding to the African Union's Peace Fund during the UK presidency of the EU. [35748]

Ian Pearson: As presidency of the European Union, we are proposing an EU Strategy for Africa including the important principle of providing flexible funding to support African Union (AU) peace support operations and build capacity within the organisation. We hope that partners will agree to the Strategy at the European Council later this month. One of our main priorities is to secure continuing substantial EU assistance to the AU, which is currently given through the Africa Peace Facility.

In addition, the AU have proposed establishing a complementary peace fund to allow contributions from a wider donor pool. They have invited the UK and others to take part in consultations on the modalities of such a fund. We will be able to assess possible contributions following these discussions.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to assist the African Union to have greater control over the disbursal of the African peace facility's funds. [35751]

Ian Pearson: The EU's current contribution agreement with the African Union (AU) already provides for the swift transfer of funds and gives the AU significant responsibility in determining how peace facility money is utilised. The procedures for the African peace facility (APF) also require a request by the AU for APF support before any proposal for expenditure is made. By way of further improving AU control, the APF includes an allocation for capacity building assistance, which is being used to enhance the AU's management of peace support operations. EU member states are also working to ensure a long term funding arrangement for the APF, that safeguards AU control over the disbursal of funds.

Assets (Corruption)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1997 the United Kingdom has (a) deployed forfeiture-related mutual legal assistance experts to states whose assets have been secreted abroad to advise them on the form and substance of their legal assistance requests and (b) contributed to case-specific coordination task forces set up to work through responses to mutual legal assistance and forfeiture requests made by foreign states which are victim to large-scale corruption. [35399]

Ian Pearson: The Home Office is the UK's central authority for processing mutual legal assistance requests. The response to such requests can involve direct contact between asset recovery experts in the UK (from the Serious Fraud Office) and those overseas on an ad hoc basis. It would be inappropriate to reveal details of specific cases as this may prejudice the outcome of legal proceedings.

The UK has used its G8 presidency to encourage more strategic contact between asset recovery experts in the G8 and Africa. The Home Office has organised an asset recovery seminar, to be held in Abuja on 14 and 15 December 2005, which will bring together experts from ten African countries to discuss with G8 experts options for improving co-operation in this field.

The UK is also planning to pilot 'accelerated response teams' to assist the victim countries in making necessary mutual legal assistance requests and provide support, where required, on other matters connected to corruption investigations.

Commonwealth Summit

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the 2007 Commonwealth Summit will be held in Kampala if political unrest in Uganda continues. [35765]

Ian Pearson: The Commonwealth Secretariat will continue to monitor the situation in Uganda over the coming months. It will be for the Commonwealth Secretary-General, Don McKinnon, in consultation with member states, to make a decision on whether the 2007 Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting should be held in Kampala.

Convergence Fund

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the new flexibilities on timing of expenditure and the required level of match funding for the Structural Funds set out in his EU budgetary proposals on Monday 5 December would apply to Convergence Fund regions in the EU-15 in the same way as they apply to the EU-10. [37176]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Under the UK Presidency's proposals of 5 December, a number of changes were introduced to enhance the ability of the new member states to make more effective use of their allocations under the Structural and Cohesion Funds. Under these proposals, the changes would not apply to EU15 member states.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35866]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not identify its expenditure on salaries or administrative costs in the United Kingdom by nation or region.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was paid by his Department in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London in 2004–05. [35935]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) paid a total of £1,117,396 in rent for properties in the UK in the financial year 2004–05. All of these properties are in England. £94,000 was paid in rent for Wiston House, Steyning, Sussex and £1,023,396 for properties in London.

In addition, the FCO occupies part of a Home Office building in Croydon where the annual service charge in the financial year 2004–05 includes a rental element of £422,978, not included in the figure given above.

Departmental Policy

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the recently reported statements of Mockbul Ali, departmental Islamic issues adviser, on the Muslim Brotherhood and Jamaal-e-Islami as pragmatic reformist liberal movements reflect his Department's policy; and if he will make a statement. [36078]

Dr. Howells: I understand my hon. Friend is referring to an article in the 5 December 2005 issue of the New Statesman that draws on leaked documents. My hon. Friend will be aware that the Government do not comment on such documents.

Departmental Staff

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many staff are employed by his Department in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; and if he will make a statement; [35899]

(2) how many and what proportion of each civil service grade in his Department is located in each (a) region and (b) nation of the UK; what the average salary is for each grade; and if he will make a statement; [35900]

(3) what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in his Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to his Department of each payment was in 2004–05. [35901]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) employs approximately 6,000 UK based staff. At any one time, approximately 2,000 staff work in the FCO's buildings in London and about 1,200 at Hanslope Park, near Milton Keynes. Until 31 March 2005 there were separate sets of pay scales for UK based staff working in London and overseas and for those in other parts of the UK. There were, however, no incentive payments as such. Since 1 April 2005 all staff have been on the same pay scale but there is a location allowance of £3,000 for staff working in London.

The average salary for each grade in the FCO for 2004–05, the latest figures available, are in the following table.

Eritrea/Ethiopia

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Eritrean Government to reconsider their decision to expel UN peacekeepers; if he will initiate urgent peace talks between the Eritrean and Ethiopian Governments; and if he will make a statement. [36932]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 6 December 2005]: We remain concerned about the continuing tensions between Ethiopia and Eritrea over their disputed border. Most recently, my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa (Lord Triesman of Tottenham) raised the border issue with the Ethiopian ambassador on 6 December, and with the Eritrean ambassador on 9 December. He will be visiting Addis Ababa on 17 December for further discussions with Prime Minister Meles on various issues including the border dispute. Lord Triesman also made clear, in a statement on 7 December, our condemnation of Eritrea's request to withdraw certain members of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea (UNMEE).

In our frequent contacts, at ministerial and senior official level, with representatives of Ethiopia and Eritrea, we regularly underline that there should be no return to war; that the decision of the Boundary Commission is final and binding, and must be implemented; and that they should engage in dialogue on all issues that divide them. We have also called on both parties to respond promptly and positively to the demands contained in UN Security Council Resolution 1640, which the UK supports fully.

Francophone Africa

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UK diplomatic representation in francophone Africa. [35370]

Ian Pearson: The UK is represented as follows in those African countries where French is an official language.

We have resident embassies or high commissions in Cameroon, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Guinea, Rwanda and Senegal. Cote d'Ivoire is currently covered by our high commission in Ghana due to the security situation.

We have honorary consuls in Chad, Congo, Djibouti, Gabon, Madagascar and Niger, a community liaison officer in Benin, and Liaison offices in Burundi and Mali. Our honorary consul slots in Burkina Faso and Equatorial Guinea are temporarily vacant. We have no resident representation in the Central African Republic, Comoros and Togo.

Haiti

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent elections in Haiti. [35575]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The elections in Haiti have been postponed due to security fears and technical difficulties. The first round of presidential and legislative elections is now scheduled for 8 January 2006, with a second round planned for 15 February. The European Union has agreed to send an election observation mission.

Indonesia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has had made of reports that Indonesian authorities have used British-made arms against civilians. [35764]

Ian Pearson: We have sought information from the Indonesian authorities concerning reports that Tactica water cannon vehicles have been used in Papua. We understand at this stage that the water cannon were used in Jayapura to break up a violent demonstration aimed at an office of the Indonesian Electoral Commission. Two local non-governmental organisations have indicated to British embassy Jakarta staff that they considered this a reasonable level of force for the police to use, and a more appropriate response to public disorder than some of the methods employed by the police in the past.

We consider that the use by a Government within their own borders of proportionate force to maintain law and order, subject to appropriate controls, is legitimate and does not constitute internal repression or a human rights abuse.

Iraq

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Prime Minister's Evidence to the Liaison Committee on 22 November, what steps have been taken by the Government to find out how many Iraqi civilians have been killed as a result of action by coalition forces since the invasion in March 2003. [35783]

Dr. Howells: As the Government have said previously, no definitive measure of civilian casualties exists. There are several estimates available, produced by non-governmental organisations, such as the Iraq Body Count report. However, we believe the Iraqi Government are best placed to monitor the number of civilian casualties and continue to do so through the Iraqi Ministry of Health. It is important to note that acts of terrorism are by far the largest cause of civilian deaths in Iraq.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made since June 2004 to the Iraqi Government on investigating allegations that detainees have been tortured by official agencies or agents of the Iraqi Government. [35785]

Dr. Howells: When we have had reason to suspect that detainees have been ill-treated by the Iraqi authorities we have raised our concerns immediately with the Iraqi Government at senior levels. The Iraqis have told us they do not condone abuse and have taken action to investigate.

Most recently my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, issued a statement on 15 November condemning what appears to have been illegal detention and abuse at a building used by the Ministry of Interior. He welcomed the immediate announcement by the Iraqi Prime Minister of an investigation into this incident and more widely to ensure that abuse was not occurring elsewhere.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London underground in connection with his official duties. [35029]

Mr. Straw: Once.

Nigeria

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in the Bayelsa state of Nigeria. [35574]

Ian Pearson: The British High Commission in Abuja is in close touch with the Nigerian Federal authorities, following the return of the State Governor to the state capital, Yenagoa, on 21 November, after skipping bail in the UK where he has been charged with money laundering offences. The local security situation remains tense. There have been pro and anti Governor protests but no serious disorder. The Nigerian police and army are strengthening their presence as a precaution. We have amended our travel advice to recommend against all but essential travel to Bayelsa state until tensions dissipate.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) have a statutory base, (b) publish their advice to Government, (c) publish an annual report and (d) lay an annual report before Parliament; and if he will indicate in each instance whether this is under a statutory requirement. [34682]

Dr. Howells: None of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's three advisory non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) has a statutory base.

The Wilton Park Academic Council publishes minutes of its meetings on the Wilton Park Website at:

http://www.wiltonpark.org/wpac/index.aspx. The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the purchase of wine has a publication scheme under the Freedom of Information legislation, which acts as guidance for information that is made available. The Diplomatic Service Appeals Board does not publish its advice to Government.

The Wilton Park Academic Council and the Diplomatic Service Appeals Board do not publish annual reports. The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine does publish an annual report.

None of the NDPBs lay an annual report before Parliament.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of its members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings; and whether in each case this is under a statutory requirement. [34683]

Ian Pearson: None of our advisory non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) hold public meetings or conduct public consultation exercises.

Neither the Wilton Park Academic Council nor the Diplomatic Service Advisory Board conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests. The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the purchase of wine does not conduct formal consultations exercises with outside commercial interests but, as it exists to advise on the purchasing of wine, it has no option but to consult with commercial companies.

We do not publish a register of hon. Members' interests or agendas for meetings.

Whilst there is no statutory requirement for them to do so, Wilton Park Academic Council publishes minutes of meetings. These are available at:

http://www.wiltonpark.org/wpac/index.aspx. The Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the purchase of wine publishes a summary of minutes of meetings on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office web site at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket%2FXcelerate%2FShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029390518&action=search&sf=mini&referrer=FCO+Main&stq=0&pubId=1006886514545&q=Government+Hospitality. The Diplomatic Service Appeals Board does not publish the minutes of meetings.

Public Relations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35936]

Ian Pearson: In the financial year 2004–05, the value of UK public opinion research conducted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) including informal qualitative consultations as well as survey research, was £123,350 + VAT. The total mostly comprises studies covering the whole UK, centrally commissioned from London. Within the total, £22,850 was spent on England-only studies (£5,713 in the north east, £5,713 in the north west and £11,424 in London).

The total value of public relations contracts commissioned by the FCO during this period was £534,000 + VAT. These were centrally-commissioned contracts covering the whole UK. A regional breakdown is not therefore available.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each region of the UK and (b) London in that year. [35985]

Ian Pearson: Rates were paid on Foreign and Commonwealth Office buildings to local authorities in the UK in 2004–05 as follows:

Local authority	Site	£ Amount paid
City of Westminster	Old Admiralty Building	718,980.14
City of Westminster	King Charles Street	2,120,400.00
City of Westminster	1 Carlton Gardens	[1]1,089.00
City of Westminster	1 Carlton Gardens	[2]446.40
London borough of Lambeth	89 Albert Embankment	67,233.55
Milton Keynes council	Hanslope Park	567,720.00

[1] Non-domestic rates for apartment.
[2] Council tax on house.

Somaliland

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of (a) European Union governments, (b) South Africa and (c) Somaliland on recognition for Somaliland. [35315]

Ian Pearson: We have had frequent discussions with representatives of Somaliland on the question of recognition, most recently when my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met the Foreign Minister of Somaliland on 20 May. We have not had substantive discussions of this matter with European Union partners, South Africa or any other government.

The international community does not recognise Somaliland as an independent state. We have urged the Somaliland authorities to agree a mutually acceptable solution on their future status with any eventual government in Somalia. We believe that African countries should take a lead in any eventual recognition process.

Torture (Third Party Countries)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had with its counterpart in the US regarding the torture of detainees in third party countries. [36405]

Mr. Straw: My Department discusses counter terrorism and human rights issues with its United States counterpart frequently.

Uganda

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the matter of the conflict in northern Uganda at the UN Security Council during the British presidency. [35759]

Ian Pearson: The UK has supported previous efforts to raise northern Uganda in the United Nations (UN) Security Council. As presidency the UK has invited Jan Egeland, the UN Under Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Co-ordinator to provide a briefing on humanitarian issues in Africa on 19 December.

A number of non governmental organisations have written to my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, advocating a UN Security Council Resolution during the UK's presidency of the Security Council. We are currently considering their ideas and how we can most effectively continue to address the situation in northern Uganda.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision by the Government of Uganda to imprison an opposition politician on progress towards democracy, good governance and respect for human rights in Uganda. [35761]

Ian Pearson: My noble Friend, the Lord Triesman of Tottenham, Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, expressed our serious concerns regarding the arrest of Dr. Kiiza Besigye on charges including treason, to the Ugandan Foreign Minister Kutesa, on 17 November. The UK, on behalf of the EU, also issued a statement on 21 November. We are pressing for a fair and transparent civilian trial. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made this clear to President Museveni at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Valetta.

The move to a pluralist democratic system in advance of the next elections in February or March 2006 is a crucial step in the political development of Uganda. We have consistently encouraged the Ugandan Government to ensure that all parties are able, and are seen to be able, to compete on a level playing field.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to help resolve the conflict in northern Uganda. [35762]

Ian Pearson: Resolving the long-running conflict in Northern Uganda and addressing its humanitarian impact are priorities for the UK. In our discussions with the Uganda Government, we emphasise the need to bring peace to northern Uganda, provide adequate protection for the people of the North and to continue to encourage those Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) members not indicted by the International Criminal Court to seek amnesty and re-integration into their communities. We are also encouraging the governments of the region to work together to ensure that those LRA members who have been indicted are brought to justice.

The UK has provided support for a number of specific peace initiatives, including the recent mediation effort led by Betty Bigombe, a former Ugandan Minister. We are providing practical help to the Amnesty Commission, which is helping to re-integrate former combatants into the community. We have also helped establish a local radio station, MEGA FM, which, through its programming, helps to promote peace. To date we have provided over £2 million and will be doing more.

UN Peacebuilding Commission

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the policy of the Government to support the expansion of the mandate of the UN Peacebuilding Commission to allow for a conflict prevention role. [35731]

Ian Pearson: The Government support a role for the UN Peacebuilding Commission in preventing violent conflict. By tracking peacebuilding efforts and offering advice to UN member states, donors, including the International Finance Institutions, and the wider international community, the Commission should help to reduce the risk of post-conflict countries falling back into conflict. The Government also support the proposal that the Peacebuilding Commission should consider countries on the verge of lapsing into conflict at the request of the country concerned.

United Arab Emirates

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of the United Arab Emirates regarding the fair and equal treatment of homosexuals. [35734]

Dr. Howells: We have had no recent discussions regarding the fair and equal treatment of homosexuals with the United Arab Emirates Government.

Zimbabwe

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the South African Government in respect of (a) its policy towards, (b) financial links with and (c) trade links with Zimbabwe. [15372]

Ian Pearson: South Africa is in no doubt about the Government's views on Zimbabwe, including that all concerned states should be encouraging Zimbabwe to pursue policies which help rather than harm its economy. Ministers and officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office regularly make these views clear to the South African Government, most recently when my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary and South African Foreign Minister Dlamini-Zuma co-chaired the EU/South Africa Co-operation Council in Brussels on 7 November.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Solicitor-General what mechanisms are in place to assess the effectiveness of consultant-led projects in the Law Officers' Departments; what sanctions are available to penalise consultants who run unsuccessful projects; how many projects conducted by consultants were assessed as unsuccessful in each year since 2000; and what sanctions were imposed in each case. [29081]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments have either had no consultant-led projects or none has been assessed as unsuccessful.

The Crown Prosecution Service has adopted the Office of Government Commerce's Gateway review process to provide assurance at critical stages of a programme's or project's lifecycle, whether led by departmental staff or consultants. Best practice project techniques and governance procedures are followed to ensure the consultant(s) meet their terms of reference and deliverables for the project and guidance has been issued to departmental managers on the monitoring and reviewing of consultants performance. Where appropriate, payments are linked to the achievement of milestones. Failure to deliver milestones could result in payment being withheld. No project has been assessed as unsuccessful in the time cited.

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate rarely uses external consultants for analysis, advice, the investigation of problems or assistance in developing new systems, structures or capabilities within HMCPSI.

In the event of a consultant-led project which was completed unsatisfactorily, a reduction or cancellation of fees would be sought. No instance has occurred in the time cited.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Service was created on 18 April 2005 and has not run any projects assessed as unsuccessful. It has arrangements in place, which would evaluate progress during and after project completion.

The Serious Fraud Office has had no consultant-led projects.

During the time cited, the Treasury Solicitor's Office, including the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, has had no consultant-led projects assessed as unsuccessful. The officer commissioning the project has reviewed output. Consultant-led projects in TSol have been relatively small and subject to contractual obligations, with appropriate controls. These included defined deliverables and time scales, options for withholding payment until output is delivered to an acceptable standard or terminating contracts at given stages without penalty. There was also an agreed escalation process for dealing with any contractual issues.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps the Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses while working for his Department and its agencies. [29085]

The Solicitor-General: All the Law Officers' Departments scrutinise expenses claimed by the consultants they employ.

Expenses by consultants working on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service must be approved in advance by the Project Manager. Expenses are reimbursed on the basis of the costs actually incurred and must be supported by original receipts. Costs must be within the ceilings determined by the Departments' travel and subsistence policy. CPS includes these requirements in its letters of appointment.

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate consultancies are agreed on a fee for the work or daily rate with necessary travelling expenses. HMCPSI's prior authority would be required for any further disbursements. Claims for travelling expenses or disbursements which were insufficiently justified would be queried before payment

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Service employs consultants via the Office of Government Commerce's S-CAT service ensuring that procurement of consultancy services accord with the terms and conditions agreed by OGC, Expenses are included in monthly reports, scrutinised by RCPO staff.

In the Serious Fraud Office, authorisation of consultancy fees and any associated expenses are subject to internal SFO governance and authorisation controls applicable to all expenditure, ensuring that invoices are for agreed rates, for services delivered correctly and to standards agreed in the contract. All projects are led by a Senior Responsible Officer and internal project boards regularly monitor performance against planned activity and budget.

The Treasury Solicitor's Office, including the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, applies to appointing the services of consultants and management of their contracts, including charges and cost monitoring, the same government accounting principles on procurement as they do on the engagement of external service providers generally: to achieve value for money, with due regard to propriety and regularity.

Human Rights (Iraq)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to his answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 964W, on human rights (Iraq), whether Mr. Phil Shiner has provided evidence of potential criminal offences to the prosecuting authorities; and if he will place in the Library the correspondence between Mr. Phil Shiner and the Attorney-General's office. [36997]

The Solicitor-General: Mr. Phil Shiner has provided some information to the prosecuting authorities. Investigations are ongoing into these allegations. I will not place correspondence between Mr. Phil Shiner and my office in the Library because it would be inappropriate to do so while these issues are being considered.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what training is given to (a) policy officials and (b) lawyers in the Law Officers' Department responsible for drafting statutory instruments; and if he will make a statement. [34536]

The Solicitor-General: Statutory Instruments are drafted by departmental lawyers based on instructions from policy divisions. Where SIs amend primary legislation, Parliamentary Counsel are consulted.

As members of the Government Legal Service (GLS), departmental lawyers receive extensive training on the preparation and drafting of statutory instruments. This consists of a combination of lectures and practical exercises run by experienced practitioners in the GLS, coupled with training given by legal advisers who advise the Parliamentary Scrutiny Committees. In addition, senior managers in the GLS take a close interest in the quality of SIs and provide frequent feedback and on the job training to those with lead responsibility for drafting. This is an ongoing process and part of the continuing education of government legal advisers.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 14 December 2005

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Concessionary Bus Fares

9. Mr. Harper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding the Government will provide for the concessionary bus fares scheme to Forest of Dean district council and Tewkesbury borough council. [37202]

Mr. Woolas: It is not possible to say since Revenue Support Grant is an unhypothecated block grant. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced in his Budget statement that an extra £350 million would be added for the additional costs of moving to a free-fare scheme.

County Councils

10. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future of county councils. [37203]

Mr. Woolas: The Government are currently engaged in a wide-ranging debate about the role, functions and form of local authorities including county councils. We plan to publish a White Paper on the future of local government in the middle of next year.

House Building

11. Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the additional public amenities required to support new house building in the south west. [37204]

Yvette Cooper: The need for services and facilities—such as transport—to support the development of sustainable communities is currently being considered as part of the review of the Regional Spatial Strategy being undertaken by the South West regional assembly.

14. Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on new house building in the south-east and the infrastructure to support it. [37207]

Yvette Cooper: The South East England regional assembly is completing its draft South East Plan, which includes policies on house building and infrastructure. The Government believe that providing infrastructure is an important part of supporting housing growth and sustainable communities. That is why we have proposed for consultation a Planning Gain Supplement to support infrastructure investment.

Local Government Finance

12. Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received regarding the local government finance settlement. [37205]

Mr. Woolas: There were 369 representations made to the consultation on options of the grant distribution system held over the summer. We have also received a variety of correspondence on the options between the end of this consultation and the announcement of the settlement on 5 December. Since the announcement we have received around 20 representations.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will itemise the costs which comprise the sum (a) spent to date on the council tax revaluation in England; and (b) which of these costs cannot be recouped. [31785]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency incurred approximately £60 million in costs and contractual liabilities in relation to the revaluation in England prior to its postponement. Some £45 million will be of potential use in the future.

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assurances his Department has given to the chair of the Local Government Association regarding extra financial assistance for local authorities relating to (a) licensing, (b) asylum seekers, (c) pensions and (d) disposal of electrical equipment. [35448]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have been working with the Local Government Association (LGA) to consider the pressures which authorities face over the next two years and the ways that those pressures can be managed. We have been moving forward jointly with local government in a number of areas. These include the recent changes to the local government pensions scheme where my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister made clear that the revocation of the 85-year rule would not create extra pressures on local authority spending. The Government have also recently announced that the 2004–05 asylum support costs, as notified through the special circumstances arrangements, will be met in full. The same amount has been set aside to settle any 2005–06 special circumstances bids that are made by local authorities.

The Government have confirmed with the LGA its commitment to the New Burdens procedure. My hon. Friend, the Minister for Creative Industries and Licensing re-affirmed this week that costs incurred by local authorities in meeting their requirements under the new Licensing Act will (provided they have been incurred legitimately and efficiently) be fully met by fees within the national fee regime.

The Government are continuing to work with local authorities to establish the reasonable costs on local government resulting from the waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) directive.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received regarding the Local Government Finance Settlement. [37284]

Mr. Woolas: Consultation on the Local Government Finance Settlement for 2006–07 opened on the 5 December and closes on 11 January 2006. Representations received so far have mainly been about the data used in the formulae.

Barker Report

13. Tony Baldry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with local authority leaders in the south-east on the Government's response to Barker. [37206]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister maintains periodic contact with the chair of the Local Government Association in order to discuss issues of concern to local authorities. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister met the Local Government Association (LGA) on 25 November. The meeting included a discussion of aspects of the Government's response to the Barker Review. Representatives from south-east local authorities were in attendance.

Deprivation Indices

15. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department compiles indices of deprivation at sub-local authority level. [37208]

Mr. Woolas: The Index of Multiple Deprivation 2004 (IMD 2004) has been compiled at sub-local authority district level. It is based on Super Output Area (SOA) level data. SOAs are aggregates of Census Output Areas, with each SOA comprising an average of 1,500 people. There are a total of 32,482 SOAs in England.

Access to Services

Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what information his Department collects on the (a) closure of (i) post offices, (ii) bank branches and (iii) independent retail shops and (b) effects on number of miles travelled to access services. [24773]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not collected by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Cigarette Fires (Deaths)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people died in the United Kingdom in fires caused by cigarettes in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [37391]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following table shows the number of people that died in the UK in a fire caused by smokers' materials (i.e. cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco) in each of the last 10 years.

	Fatal casualties
1995	168
1996	179
1997	167
1998	160
1999	130
2000	143
2001	146
2002[1]	123
2003[1]	123
2004[2]	116

Colchester Borough Council

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 796W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin) on Colchester borough council, if he will ask the chief executive of the Audit Commission to provide the hon. Member for Colchester with a copy of the letter which the chief executive will be writing to the hon. Member for North Essex, in respect of an objection to Colchester borough council's accounts for year ended 31 March 2004. [37253]

Mr. Woolas: A copy of the chief executive of the Audit Commission's reply to the hon. Member for North Essex dated 6 December has been placed in the Library of the House.

Council Tax

Martin Horwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of each local authority's spending was represented by council tax income from householders in each council tax band in the last year for which figures are available. [36341]

Mr. Woolas: A table providing estimates, for each local authority, of the proportion of budgeted revenue expenditure for 2004–05 that was financed from council taxes payable in respect of each council tax band, has been made available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations from pensioner groups he has received regarding council tax in the last 12 months. [37336]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has identified eight written representations from groups exclusively representing pensioners on council tax in the last 12 months. Issues raised include the effect of council tax bills on pensioners on low and fixed incomes; council tax benefit; and reform of the local government finance system.

We recognise the concerns expressed in these representations and many other letters from individual pensioners. Sir Michael Lyons is considering such issues in his Inquiry into the funding of local government within the context of its wider functions and future role. We look forward to receiving Sir Michael Lyons' recommendations at the end of 2006.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice and guidance the Valuation Office Agency has given to local authority IT (a) departments and (b) suppliers in relation to the council tax revaluation in (i) England and (ii) Wales. [29709]

Mr. Woolas: The information is as follows:

(i) The Valuation Office Agency has provided no advice and guidance to local authority IT departments and suppliers in the relation to the council tax revaluation in England.

(ii) Council tax revaluation in Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly Government.

Councillors (Pensions/Income)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes his Department and its predecessors have made to the (a) allowances, (b) salaries and (c) pensions for councillors since May 1997. [33486]

Mr. Woolas: Since May 1997 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made a number of changes to the rules relating to allowances and pensions for councillors. There is no provision for the payment of salaries to councillors.

The principal effects of these changes are as follows:

To give responsibility for the setting of allowances to local authorities.

To allow local authorities to pay allowances for the care of children and other dependants.

To allow councillors access to the local government pension scheme.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1276W, on damages, if he will list the cases where the potential liabilities and damages were of such significance that the cases were brought to ministerial attention. [34395]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No cases fell into this category in the last year.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36266]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) supports staff with mental ill-health while they are at work, while they are absent because of their illness and during their return to work. ODPM has an in-house Counselling and Support Service and a contracted out Occupational Health Adviser both of which offer support and advice. Additionally line managers and Human Resources offer support and advice to staff with mental ill-health.

Fire Services

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Government's plans for regional fire control centres will require London to have a new fire control centre. [31789]

Jim Fitzpatrick: London already has a regional fire control room, which would be capable of being linked into the national network of regional centres. However, the London regional control centre was planned and set up before the events of 9/11 and before the current resilience criteria were drawn up. Consequently, it does not meet the resilience standards that the new control centres in the other regions will meet. Decisions on whether to move the existing regional control centre will be made in discussion with the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority.

LFEPA recently affirmed their support of the Fire Control project.

Firelink Procurement Process

David Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the outcome of the Firelink procurement process will be announced. [37334]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The announcement of the Firelink preferred bidder was made on 11 November 2005. Subject to satisfactory resolution of some outstanding matters it is anticipated that the contract will be signed after the new year.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31121]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The overwhelming majority of the services which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) oversees are administered by local authorities, and ODPM is working with them to develop a business case for authentication and verification management, which could include use of the identity card. ODPM is represented on the ministerial committee on identity cards which oversees the work on benefits planning and realisation.

Land Charge Searches

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will give local councils the power to increase the price of personal land charge searches. [36583]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

Fees payable for personal searches of the local land charges register are set by the Lord Chancellor, with the consent of HM Treasury, under the Local Land Charges Act 1975. Keith Hill announced the Government's intention to review this arrangement on 10 February 2004, [Standing Committee E Report] column 574. We are now re-considering the form and content of the review in the light of the report by the Office of Fair Trading of their study into the market for property searches. The OFT report was published on 21 September.

The Lord Chancellor's fees-setting power for all local land charges services in Wales, including personal search fees, was devolved to the National Assembly for Wales on 31 December 2004.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Office and its predecessor Departments spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35630]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002. Information in relation to its predecessor Departments is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Costs (£000—exclusive of VAT) are as follows:

	National press cuttings	Regional press cuttings	Media monitoring unit (subscription to Cabinet Office)
2002–03 (1 June-31 March)	151.4	54.1	30.1
2003–04	164.1	73.9	41.2
2004–05	204.9	74.6	49.0
2005–06 (1 April-30 September)	110.1	39.4	26.5

Neighbourhood Renewal Fund

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the performance rating is of each local strategic partnership in receipt of neighbourhood renewal fund resources. [37172]

Mr. Woolas: Local strategic partnerships are not awarded performance ratings, rather each LSP carries out a self assessment of performance against national PSA floor targets and local targets in addition to a review of their partnership management arrangements. This self assessment then helps inform the key areas for improvement. Each LSP awards itself an overall "traffic light' assessment which reflects both progress made and challenges faced by each LSP. LSPs are encouraged to share these assessments at a local level—however at a national level we can say that 36 percent. have self assessed as 'green', 46 percent. as 'amber green' and 18 percent. as 'amber red'. The neighbourhood renewal unit plan to produce a full list of all assessments early in the New Year.

Private Sector Investments

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) location, (b) cost and (c) completion date if of each private finance initiative project within his responsibility, broken down by local authorities and grouped by region in England. [36892]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister currently has responsibility for the following private finance initiative projects and the details are as follows.

Regeneration (Thetford)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on funding for and the impact of regeneration schemes in Thetford. [37201]

Yvette Cooper: Since 2000, the Breckland Community Economic Regeneration Scheme has provided some £12.7 million to fund projects in Thetford which are helping to renew the town centre and build on its cultural and heritage attractions. The skills and job prospects of local people are being supported through a range of vocational training schemes.

Rent Restructuring

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has instructed local authorities to introduce rent restructuring in this year's settlement; and if he will make a statement. [36793]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 December 2005]: Rent restructuring was introduced in April 2002. It is a non-statutory scheme, and local authorities are not required to implement it, though they are strongly encouraged to do so by the way the housing revenue account subsidy system operates.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister carried out a three-year review of the policy during 2004 and the decision on the recommendations was announced on 7 November. The draft housing revenue account subsidy determination, which was issued for consultation at the same time, was prepared on that basis. The consultation closes at 10 am on Monday 12 December.

Our intention is to issue the final housing revenue account subsidy determination before Christmas.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many statutory instruments introduced by his Department were (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps he is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [34313]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of statutory instruments introduced since May 2002 (when the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister came into being) which, by reason of defective drafting, were

(a) withdrawn, is two,

(b) amended by further statutory instruments, is seven, and

(c) reprinted, is seven.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is (i) providing additional training for all those involved in drafting SIs. Increased checking is being undertaken by policy officials and the drafting lawyer, (ii) Lawyers in the ODPM are currently considering a further examination of the statutory instrument project planning process. They will also encourage all officials involved in the production of secondary legislation to be especially aware of the need to build in additional time for checking, particularly where there are peaks of activity, such as in February/March, in the run- up to the start of the financial year.

Support Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of the duplication of (a) information collected and (b) needs assessment required for (i) supporting people funding and (ii) the single assessment process for care; [37292]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with the Department of Health about integrating the service provision arising from supporting people assessments and the single assessment process into a single users plan. [37303]

Mr. Woolas: There is currently no standardised approach to information collection and needs assessment for the receipt of housing-related support through the supporting people programme. Nor are there currently standardised arrangements which cover supporting people and care assessments together. Arrangements are instead set by, and vary between, local authorities and between providers. There may be some duplication between the information collected for supporting people services and that collected through the Single Assessment Process, but in some cases this is already being handled in an integrated way.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's initial supporting people strategy—"Creating Sustainable Communities: Supporting Independence"—makes clear our commitment to continue to move towards a streamlined and integrated assessment process which includes supporting people, care and other relevant services. This also takes forward the intention set out in "Independence, Well-being and Choice" to build upon the Single Assessment Process and streamline assessments across agencies, and we will continue to work with Department of Health and other Departments as we take this work forward.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what discussions his Department has had with the Department of Health about training of health and social care assessment staff in housing-related support services; [37293]

(2) what plans he has to promote the development and delivery of joint training on supporting people to health, care and housing staff. [37301]

Mr. Woolas: With support and sponsorship from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, a pilot project has been carried out to test the desirability and practicability of establishing a professional qualification for those working in housing, care and support sector. This pilot concluded in March 2005, and we are considering as part of our work to develop a strategy for supporting people how to build on its success. We will continue to discuss this, and other aspects of the strategy work, with Department of Health.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to revise supporting people guidance to give greater coverage of health and care related needs. [37305]

Mr. Woolas: Supporting people is a grant programme for the provision of housing-related support services (or, in excellent authorities, welfare services). It does not fund health or care services. The power of the Secretary of State to issue guidance relates to the administration and application of supporting people grants and, as such, guidance on the use of supporting people funding does not directly discuss meeting health or care related needs.

Guidance is, however, clear on the need to ensure that supporting people services are properly aligned and linked with other relevant services, including health and care services. The work of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to develop a strategy for supporting people will allow us to consider whether and how guidance may be strengthened in this regard.

Vacant Property

Chris Huhne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the annual value of the exemption from council tax of vacant property. [36033]

Mr. Woolas: Properties may be exempt from council tax for a limited or indefinite period for a number of reasons, for example because the owner has recently died or because they are occupied only by students. Both vacant and occupied properties may be exempt. The information that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister collects from local authorities does not enable us to identify the number of properties in each band by type of exemption. We are not able therefore to calculate the value of exemptions granted in respect of those classes that relate only to vacant properties.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance the Valuation Office Agency has given its staff on respecting religious and cultural traditions of householders and shopkeepers when conducting an internal inspection for council tax or business rate valuation purposes. [30835]

Mr. Woolas: Valuation Office Agency staff are aware of the Race Relations legislation.

TREASURY

Cash Machines

Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with banks and building societies on encouraging the use of cash machines on which fees for use are not charged; and if he will make a statement. [37138]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Treasury Ministers hold regular meetings with UK banks and building societies. These meetings have covered a range of issues, including free cash machines.

There are over 32,000 free ATMs in the UK and 96 per cent. of cash withdrawals are free. Virtually all banks and building societies do not charge LINK cardholders for use of their ATMs.

Devolution

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what adjustments were made to the Scottish budget as a result of the agreement with the Scottish Executive referred to in Funding the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly in each year of its operation; and what policy decisions resulted in each adjustment. [37532]

Mr. Des Browne: The funding arrangements for the Scottish Parliament are set out in the Statement of Funding Policy. Details of changes in the Scotland DEL are set out in figure 10 of the 2005 Scotland Office Annual Report.

Barnett Formula

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in his Department have worked on policy matters related to the Barnett formula in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [36939]

Mr. Des Browne: The funding arrangements for the devolved administrations, including policy work related to the Barnett formula, are managed by the devolution branch of the Devolved Countries and Regions team in the Treasury. In the last five years the staffing of the branch has varied slightly and is currently 1 range E, 2 range D, 1 range C and 1 range B.

Asbestos

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have died of an asbestos-related illness in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [31197]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

The number of mesothelioma deaths in South Tyneside, the North East, and the United Kingdom each year from 1997 is given in the following table.

Death from mesothelioma, 1997 to 2003

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002[1]	Number 2003[1]
South Tyneside	15	12	8	15	18	9	8
North East	126	100	119	123	154	127	112
United Kingdom	1,406	1,582	1,661	1,671	1,919	1,908	1,922

[1] provisional.

HSE GB mesothelioma register, Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI).

Lung cancer deaths caused by asbestos are clinically indistinguishable from those caused by other agents such as tobacco smoke. It is estimated that about the same number of lung cancer deaths due to asbestos occur each year as mesothelioma deaths.

The number of deaths where asbestosis was specified as the underlying cause of death in South Tyneside, the North East, and the United Kingdom each year from 1997 is given in the following table.

Death with asbestosis specified as underlying cause, 1997 to 2003

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002[1]	Number 2003[1]
South Tyneside	3	0	0	0	1	2	5
North East	11	8	10	13	14	20	19
United Kingdom	70	70	68	80	94	126	122

[1] provisional.

Death statistics for mesothelioma and asbestosis are not held in a form which allows data for individual UK constituencies to be readily available.

Contracted-out Rebate

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of the contracted-out rebate was in the last year for which figures are available; what proportion of UK gross domestic product that figure represents; and what the projected figures are in each case for (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030, (d) 2040 and (e) 2050. [34866]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available in the format required. Such information as is available is in the table.

Tax year	Cost of contracted-out rebate (£ billion)	Cost expressed as percentage of GDP
2003–04	11.5	1.1
2010–11	11.2	0.9
2020–21	11.0	0.7
2030–31	10.3	0.5
2040–41	10.4	0.5
2050–51	11.3	0.4

Notes:

1. More up-to-date figures on the cost of the contracted-out rebate are available but the most recent for the GDP are those published in the Quinquennial Review of the National Insurance Fund. For comparison purposes it has been necessary, therefore, to use the same source for the cost of the rebate.
2. Costs are for GB receipts and are in 2003–04 prices terms—the basis for projections in the Quinquennial Review of the National Insurance Fund.
3. The Quinquennial Review does not extend to the Northern Ireland Insurance Fund so the figures provided are for GB rather than the UK.

Departmental Staff (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff are employed by his Department in Coventry. [37040]

John Healey: The Treasury employs no staff in Coventry.

EU Budget (UK Contribution)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the United Kingdom has contributed to European Union funds as a percentage of its gross domestic product in each year since 1975. [37528]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government does not as a matter of course produce figures for the United Kingdom's net contributions to the EC Budget as a percentage of its Gross Domestic Product. The following table has been produced by taking outturn figures for the UK's net contribution to the EC Budget in each of the years 1975–76 to 2004–05 and dividing these by the latest available GDP data for the year in question.

	UK net contribution as percentage of GDP

Income Tax

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons paid income tax at the higher rate in each financial year since January 1995; and how much was raised by the higher rate in current prices in each year. [34588]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the estimated number of individuals who paid income tax at the higher rate in each financial year since 1990–91 is shown in table 2.1 'Number of individual income taxpayers' on the HM Revenue and Customs internet website, http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/table2-1.xls.

Information on the estimated amount of income tax liabilities in constant (20[illegible]6) prices, before deducting tax credits, is in the tab[illegible]

Income tax l[illegible] higher rate taxpayers[1]

	£ billion
	[illegible]nts in constant (2005–06) prices

[2] 2002–03 is the latest year for which data are available.

[3] Estimates for 2003–04 to 2005–06 are based on the 2002–03 SPI projected forward in line with Budget 2005 HM Treasury assumptions.

Similar information for the years 1995–96 and 1996–97 is not available.

The income tax information is based upon the Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI).

Inland Revenue Staff (Computer Misuse)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue staff in Northern Ireland have been dismissed as a result of misuse of computer systems in each of the last five years. [37600]

Dawn Primarolo: The former Inland Revenue started recording computer misuse information on a central database in 2003. It does not hold figures for earlier years. The periods shown are calendar years.

	Number
2003	4
2005	0

The statistic for 2005 is the information held as at 12 December 2005. It is possible there may be more cases for 2005.

Iraq

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money the British Government have spent on military operations in Iraq since 20 March 2003; and if he will make a statement. [30101]

Mr. Des Browne: The net additional costs of military operations in Iraq are captured on an annual basis and published by the Ministry of Defence in their annual report and accounts. The costs in fiscal years 2002–03 through to 2004–05 were:

Net additional costs of military operations

	£ million
2002–03	847
2003–04	1,311
2004–05	910

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) original estimated and (b) actual cost of the war in Iraq and ancillary operations has been in each year since the beginning of operations; what the reasons were for the difference in each year; whether the costs were met from (i) the Ministry of Defence budget and (ii) elsewhere in each year; from which budget lines costs were met in each year; and what economies have been made to offset those costs. [37043]

John Reid: I have been asked to reply.

The costs of operations are calculated on a net additional basis and audited figures are published each year in the Ministry of Defence's Annual Report and Accounts. Costs for financial years 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05 for operations in Iraq were:

	£ million
2002–03	847
2003–04	1,311
2004–05	910
Total	3,068

The respective estimates requested for operations in Iraq in the spring supplementary estimates and voted by Parliament for the above years were:

	£ million
2002–03	1,000
2003–04	1,539
2004–05	975
Total	3,514

The differences between estimates and final outturn figures are due to changing operational requirements and associated troop numbers as outlined in the MOD's Annual Report and Accounts.

The net additional costs of military operations in Iraq are funded from the Treasury reserve and not through re-prioritisation of the defence budget.

Lyons Review

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a break down by (a) Department and (b) location of the 6,300 relocations as a result of the Lyons Review announced in the pre-Budget report. [37149]

Mr. Des Browne: The information requested is as follows:

Self-invested Personal Pensions

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish the information on which he based his decision announced in the pre-Budget report to rescind the widening of self-invested personal pension plans eligible assets legislated for in the Finance Act 2004; [37057]

(2) on what dates meetings were held with representatives of the financial services industry at which his Department gathered information to assess the impact of the change in the rules concerning self-invested personal pension plans eligible assets announced in the pre-Budget report; and which (a) Ministers and (b) officials were present at each; [37058]

(3) if he will estimate the cost to providers of self-invested pension plans (SIPPs) of his change in the rules concerning eligible investments set out in the Finance Act 2004; and if he will publish the regulatory assessment made for (a) the initial change to SIPPS rules and (b) the decision announced in the pre-Budget report. [37325]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In order to prevent the potential abuse of the pension tax simplification rules, where people could claim tax relief in relation to pension contributions into self-invested personal pensions (SIPPs) for the purpose of funding purchases of holiday and second homes for their or their family's personal use, the Government announced in the pre-Budget report that, from 6 April 2006, SIPPs and all other forms of self-directed pension schemes will be prohibited from obtaining tax advantages when investing in residential property, and certain other assets such as fine wines.

The legislation to bring the PBR announcement into effect will be included in Finance Bill 2006. The regulatory impact assessment assessing the impact of the whole of pension simplification was published in April 2004.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asbestos

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has received from the Health and Safety Commission of the effects of different asbestos stripping techniques on worker mortality. [31610]

Mrs. McGuire: Proposals for asbestos regulations made by the Health and Safety Commission to the Minister are supported by regulatory impact assessments and risk assessments. The risk assessment in the current HSC consultation document Proposals for Revised Asbestos Regulations and an approved code of practice (CD 205) includes estimates of asbestos-related worker deaths and takes account of a range of factors, including different types of work with asbestos.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what advice he has received from the Health and Safety Commission on the most effective dust suppression techniques available for removing asbestos; and if he will list the acceptable methods of asbestos removal in order of effectiveness as a dust suppressing technique; [31611]

(2) what advice he has received from the Health and Safety Commission on the circumstances in which dry stripping of asbestos-containing materials is permissible. [31612]

Mrs. McGuire: The Secretary of State has not received specific advice on dust suppression techniques, and circumstances in which dry stripping of asbestos containing materials is permissible. However, the current Approved Codes of Practice (ACOP) under the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002-Work with asbestos insulation, asbestos coating and asbestos insulating board (L28), and Work with asbestos which does not normally require a licence (L27) were approved by the Health and Safety Commission in 2002, with the consent of the then Secretary of State for Work and Pensions.

Under the regulations and ACOPs, employers are required to prevent exposure to asbestos and where this is not reasonably practicable, to reduce exposure to as low a level as reasonably practicable. When exposure can not be prevented, employers must chose a working method or combination of methods which reduce exposure to the lowest levels reasonably practicable and document these in the written risk assessment and plan of work.

Acceptable methods of asbestos removal and the effectiveness of dust suppression techniques will depend on a range of factors to be considered as part of the risk assessment for the job in hand. They include the type of asbestos material, its condition, and the amount to be removed. Often a combination of methods will be needed. Paragraphs 67–74 of L28 (for work with licensed materials) and paragraphs 74–76 of L27 (for work with non-licensed materials) set out methods for work with different types asbestos containing materials.

These paragraphs, and paragraph 29*(f)* of L28 also include references to dry stripping. Although they state that there may be some exceptional circumstances where dry stripping of licensable materials may be justifiable, the Health and Safety Executive has not encountered such circumstances.

Further guidance on reduced dust methods of working can be found in the Health and Safety Executive publication Controlled asbestos stripping techniques for work requiring a licence (HSG 189/1), and for work with non-licensable materials in Introduction to asbestos essentials: Comprehensive guidance on working with asbestos in the building maintenance and allied trades (HSG 213); Asbestos essentials task manual: task guidance sheets for the building maintenance and allied trades (HSG 210); and Working with asbestos cement (HSG189/2).

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which elements of the licensing requirements for contractors involved with the wet stripping of asbestos using equipment conforming to BSI PAS 61–1:2004 are mandatory. [31613]

Mrs. McGuire: The standard conditions attached to licences issued by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) under the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983 to asbestos removal companies for work with asbestos insulation, asbestos coating or asbestos insulating board include (a) fourteen days notice in writing to the appropriate enforcing authority of work to be undertaken; (b) that notice to include details of the work, including a suitable and sufficient written statement of the method of work to be used, and a suitable and sufficient written specification for the equipment for the protection and decontamination of those engaged in asbestos work.

Where new wet injection equipment is purchased, HSE has advised contractors that it should comply with BSI publicly available specification (PAS) 60 equipment used in the controlled removal of asbestos containing materials, Part 1 controlled wetting of asbestos containing materials-specification. However, the PAS is not a mandatory standard.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have died of an asbestos-related illness in (a) Tamworth constituency, (b) Staffordshire and (c) the West Midlands in each year since 1997. [32041]

Mrs. McGuire: Death statistics for mesothelioma and asbestosis are not held in a form which allows data for individual parliamentary constituencies to be readily available. However, in the tables that follow figures for the small area of Tamworth local authority are provided.

Deaths from mesothelioma, 1997–2003

The number of mesothelioma deaths in Tamworth local authority, Staffordshire, and West Midlands each year from 1997 is given in the following table.

	Tamworth local authority	Staffordshire	West Midlands
1997	0	17	100
1998	1	18	112
1999	1	14	99
2000	4	22	132
2001	3	28	110
2002[1]	2	24	130
2003[1]	1	25	133

Deaths from lung cancer due to asbestos

Lung cancer deaths caused by asbestos are clinically indistinguishable from those caused by other agents such as tobacco smoke. It is estimated that about the same number of lung cancer deaths due to asbestos occur each year as mesothelioma deaths.

Deaths with asbestosis specified as underlying cause, 1997–2003

The number of deaths where asbestosis was specified as the underlying cause of death in Tamworth local authority, Staffordshire, and West Midlands each year from 1997 is given in the following table.

	Tamworth local authority	Staffordshire	West Midlands
1997	0	1	1
1998	0	2	2
1999	0	2	4
2000	0	1	6
2001	0	2	4

Asperger's Syndrome

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to help people with Asperger's syndrome in Swindon into employment. [31642]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to reply to the hon. member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 14 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what steps the Department is taking to help people with Asperger's syndrome in Swindon into employment. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

There are no arrangements that are specific to Swindon to help customers with Asperger's syndrome into employment. However, all customers with Asperger's syndrome are dealt with on an individual basis. If required, in addition to the range of support offered to all our customers, they can access further support from specialist advisers such as Disability Employment Advisers or Specialist Incapacity Benefit Advisers. These specialist advisers meet with the customer and work alongside other support workers or their GP to agree a plan of action tailored to their individual needs to progress them towards employment.

If deemed necessary the customer can also be referred to specialist partner organisations who deliver a variety of provision including Work Preparation, WORKSTEP and New Deal for Disabled People, for additional support. This could include personal development, work placements, work experience and help with applying for work, including interview support.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Exit Rates

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 17 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1365–66W, what the quarterly average exit rate for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disability allowance was in each quarter since May 1997 in (i) Pathways to Work pilot jobcentre plus districts, (ii) the UK excluding Pathways to Work pilot jobcentre plus districts and (iii) the UK. [31520]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the tables.

Benefit Fraud

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff have been employed on benefit fraud enforcement in each of the last eight years, broken down by type of benefit; and if he will make a statement. [28772]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Every person employed in the DWP has a role in enforcing the requirements of the benefits system. Our preventive structures are intended to make our systems robust against fraud. All claims are subject to verification and all statements made by our customers are open to challenge where it appears that they may be incorrect.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the total number of job entries by claimants of incapacity benefit and severe disability allowance in the UK (a) returned to incapacity benefits and (b) claimed jobseeker's allowance within (i) one month, (ii) two months, (iii) six months and (iv) 12 months, in the latest period for which data is available. [30676]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many recipients of inactive benefits in Tamworth constituency moved back to work in 2004–05. [35676]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the format requested.

The Department for Work and Pensions Research Report Number 244—Destination of benefit leavers 2004—showed that nationally, 62 per cent. of claimants leaving income support, incapacity benefit or jobseeker's allowance entered employment of 16 hours or more a week. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Benefits Office Closures

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make funding available to the voluntary sector benefits advice organisations that have witnessed an increase in their workload since the benefits office closure programme. [34624]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Department does not, and has not previously, provided funding for voluntary sector benefits advice organisations. We have no plans to change this position.

Child Maintenance

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many families received child maintenance payments in (a) Brent and (b) London in each of the last five years. [35668]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information cannot be broken down to the geographical level requested.

Child Poverty

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received from Save the Children about the number of children living in severe and long-term poverty. [36131]

Margaret Hodge: I have not received any representations from Save the Children. However, my officials are in regular contact with them, and were consulted by Save the Children on their recently published report "Britain's Poorest Children Revisited".

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of children who will be living in poverty in winter 2005–06. [36132]

Margaret Hodge: The seventh annual "Opportunity for all" report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators.

Information regarding the number of children living in low-income households is published in Department for Work and Pension's publication "Households Below Average Income (HBAI)", copies of which are available in the Library.

Figures for 2005–06 are not yet available and are planned for publication in 2007.

Child Support Agency

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many uncleared Child Support Agency cases are awaiting processing in East Dunbartonshire. [21104]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at the geographical level requested.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the performance of the Child Support Agency. [22944]

Mr. Plaskitt: While there have been some improvements in the Child Support Agency's performance we are not satisfied with its overall level.

A copy of the most recent Child Support Agency Quarterly Statistical Summary, which gives information on the agency's performance, has been placed in the Library and is available on line at www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/csa.asp.

The Child Support Agency's chief executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the agency. He will report to Ministers and we will make announcements shortly.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the cost to the benefits system of the unresolved Child Support Agency cases. [26101]

Mr. Plaskitt: We do not have sufficient information on these cases to make a robust estimate. Not all of the unresolved cases will reach a calculation, and for those cases where the Agency will make a calculation we have no information about the amount of maintenance that will be charged and paid.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases were in arrears in each year from 1997 to 2005 in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Wellingborough. [26798]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available at the geographical level requested.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints were registered with the Child Support Agency in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency in each year since 1997. [29916]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information requested is not available at the geographical level requested.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the performance of the Child Support Agency. [32085]

Mr. Plaskitt: While there have been some improvements in the Child Support Agency's performance we are still not satisfied with the overall level.

A copy of the most recent Child Support Agency Quarterly Statistical Summary, which gives information on the Agency's performance, has been placed in the Library and is available on line at "www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/csa.asp"

The Child Support Agency's chief executive, Stephen Geraghty, is currently undertaking a root and branch review of the Agency. He will report to the Ministers and we will make announcements shortly.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when (a) he and (b) his officials last met officials from HM Revenue and Customs to discuss the future of the Child Support Agency. [35393]

Mr. Plaskitt: Since the Secretary of State's appointment on 2 November 2005 he has not discussed Child Support with HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) officials. However, departmental officials meet regularly with HMRC to look at a range of issues.

Children's Rights (Disabilities Convention)

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action the Government are taking to ensure children's rights are fully and appropriately addressed in the final text of the forthcoming UN convention on the rights of people with disabilities. [29958]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 21 November 2005]: The UK, with our EU partners, is committed to ensuring that the rights of disabled children are effectively addressed in the UN convention, taking into account the fact that there is an existing convention on the rights of children. At the most recent meeting of the UN Committee tasked with drafting the convention, the UK acting as EU President proposed text regarding the general obligations of states in respect of disabled children. We believe that the proposed text will ensure that the rights of disabled children are recognised across the convention in relation to all the obligations on states. The UK is working to ensure that this wording is included in the final text.

Civil Service

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental civil service jobs are located in Coventry. [33511]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 5 December 2005]: As at 30 October 2005 a total of 483 departmental staff (full-time equivalent, including temporary staff) were located in Coventry.

Corporate Pension Liabilities

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of whether corporate pension liabilities are overstated under FRS17. [32457]

Mr. Timms: No such assessment has now been made

There are a number of ways of estimating pension fund deficits. Estimates of deficits calculated using FRS17 are considered (although there is no consensus) to represent approximately 80 per cent. of the estimated costs of securing a pension scheme's accrued liabilities through the purchase of annuities and deferred annuities from an insurance company (often referred to as the "full buy-out" cost).

Data Control

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what part of his Department has overall responsibility for data control. [36327]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The Department's chief information officer has overall responsibility for any risk to the Department's data.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints concerning his Department have been made to the Information Commissioner with regard to the Data Protection Act 1998 since it came into force. [36329]

Mrs. McGuire: Since the Data Protection Act came into force on 1 March 2000, 220 letters have been received from the Information Commissioner following complaints.

Departmental Expenditure

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Department's expenditure on research activities was in each year since 2000. [30849]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department's expenditure on research is given in the following table. The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001, therefore figures have been provided from the financial year 2001–02 onwards.

£ million

Financial year	Expenditure
2001–02	11.8
2002–03	10.2
2003–04	12.5
2004–05	14.2

Departmental Targets

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he expects to be able to draw the data required to measure 2004 public service agreement target 5 from consistent data sources. [30288]

Mrs. McGuire: Yes, the data will come from sources which provide a basis for consistent comparisons. For health and safety outcomes, these will include reports from employers and others under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR), estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) and other sources, supported by data on risk control from workplace surveys and assessments by inspectors.

For the major hazard industries, they will be based on reports of precursor incidents (occurrences which do not in general result in death or injury but have the potential to be far more serious) in the nuclear industry, offshore oil and gas sectors and onshore hazardous installations.

Further details are given in a technical note published on the HSE website, http://www.hse.gov.uk/aboutus/plans/sr2004.htm.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he uses (a) income before housing costs and (b) income after housing costs when measuring the number of children in relative low income households for the purposes of measuring performance against 2004 public service agreement target 1. [30289]

Margaret Hodge: To ease international comparisons, the 2004 PSA child poverty target will be measured on a before housing costs basis. However, figures after housing costs will continue to be given equal prominence in the households below average income series.

Disability Handbook

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether medical representatives from patient organisations will be included in the panel re-writing the draft entry on chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis for the Disability Handbook. [23820]

Mrs. McGuire: As with the other new medical guidance for the Disability Handbook the draft chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalitis (CFS/ME) guidance was prepared in conjunction with medical experts. The guidance is evidence-based and represents our current understanding of this condition. Officials have met with groups representing people with CFS/ME on two occasions and sought their views. Many of their helpful comments have already been incorporated in the guidance and we are still considering comments made at the second meeting.

Economically Inactive People

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Beverley and Holderness are economically inactive. [37436]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 14 December 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question concerning economic inactivity. I am replying in her absence. (37436)

Annual Population Survey data, for the 12 months ending March 2005, shows that the number of people of working age resident in the Beverley and Holderness constituency who were economically inactive was estimated to be 14,000. This corresponds to 23 per cent. of the resident working age population.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Education and Training

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training is provided to Jobcentre Plus advisers to assist them in working with young people living independently who wish to pursue further education. [33441]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 14 December 2005:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to reply to your question concerning what training is provided to Jobcentre Plus advisers to assist them in working with young people living independently who wish to pursue further education. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus has in place a comprehensive programme of blended learning solutions to build adviser capability. The learning materials have been designed in such a way as to equip the adviser with the full range of knowledge and skills required to support the customer's jobsearch activity and successful movement into employment, or further education.

Advisers assist young people to receive training via the New Deal for Young People learning package. The primary focus of this learning is to help staff establish customers' eligibility to claim Jobseekers Allowance. However, as part of the learning process, Personal Advisers are instructed on the appropriate procedure when a young person is interested in undertaking further education.

This is usually instigated by referral to the "Connexions" service in England, or the relevant careers service elsewhere in the UK (for example Careers Scotland). These organisations are the typical gateway into learning for young people.

The Jobcentre Plus Adviser training focuses on supporting and allowing the relevant careers service to support the training needs and aspirations of this specific customer group.

I hope this is helpful.

EU Work at Heights Directive

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the legislative progress of the implementation of the EU Work at Heights Directive; and if he will publish a regulatory impact assessment for its implementation in the United Kingdom. [33491]

Mrs. McGuire: The EU Directive 2001/45/EC on the selection and use of work equipment for working at height was implemented in Great Britain by the Work at Height Regulations 2005. These regulations were laid in Parliament on 16 March 2005 and came into force on 6 April 2005. It was implemented in Northern Ireland by the Work at Height Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005, which came into operation 11 July. Gibraltar is well advanced in producing implementing legislation.

A regulatory impact assessment on the implementation of the Regulations in Great Britain was lodged in the House of Commons and House of Lords Libraries on 16 March 2005. A supplement on the impact of the Directive in Northern Ireland is available on request from the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland at 83 Ladas Drive, Belfast BT6 9FR.

Both sets of regulations do not apply to instructing or leading others in climbing, caving or similar activities. Arrangements for the application of the directive to workers in these activities are still under discussion with representatives from the sector.

Final Salary Pension Schemes

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps the Government is taking to minimise employers' usage of pension fund holidays in final salary pension schemes. [36441]

Mr. Timms: New scheme funding requirements will replace the minimum funding requirement for private sector defined benefit occupational pension schemes from 30 December 2005. This flexible framework will give trustees greater leverage in framing the scheme's funding strategy and determining the contributions paid by the employer. In addition, from 6 April 2006 current HM Revenue and Customs requirements for pension scheme to reduce an actuarial surplus will be abolished. This will remove a factor which may have played a part in some decisions to allow pension fund contribution holidays in the past. We do not believe, however, that it would be appropriate to prevent a contribution holiday where the scheme is sufficiently well-funded, and the trustees and the sponsoring employer consider that it is appropriate in the circumstances.

Health and Safety

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is promoting in conjunction with other Government Departments to ensure that suitably qualified health and safety advisers in the public service are encouraged to achieve the status of chartered health and safety practitioners; and how many of them have this status. [28183]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government are fully supportive of the introduction of a chartered qualification for professional health and safety advisors and would recommend all advisors, where appropriate, to work towards achieving this qualification. There are currently about 6,000 chartered practioners in the UK. The Government hold no figures for the number working in the public sector.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has held with trade unions about industrial relations issues concerning the HSE. [32440]

Mrs. McGuire: The HSE is in frequent discussion with those trade unions representing members of its staff, over the full range of employee relations. Discussions include those held through the departmental Whitley structure; negotiations, such as the annual pay negotiations which are currently ongoing; and more informal working groups on specific topics.

Incapacity Benefit

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was of medical examinations for incapacity benefit claimants in each year since 1997; and how often on average existing claimants have been re-examined. [29339]

Mrs. McGuire: Information about the cost of medical examinations for incapacity benefit is confidential and cannot be disclosed as to do so may prejudice the commercial interests of the Department and/or its suppliers.

Information about the frequency of re-examinations is not available and could o be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

People are re-referred at varying intervals from three months to five years on the basis of medical advice about the severity of a person's condition and the likelihood of an improvement in their condition in the future.

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed incapacity benefit on the grounds of poor mental health in each year since 1997. [30846]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the following table.

Incapacity benefit and severe disability allowance claimants with a diagnosis in the "mental and behavioural disorders" category: Great Britain.

May	Number
1997	735,000
1998	790,600
1999	833,700
2000	873,300
2001	938,800
2002	987,000
2003	1,032,000
2004	1,070,200
2005	1,086,100

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. 'Claimant' figures include all incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disability allowance (SDA), including IB credits-only cases.
3. Figures for the years 1997 to 1999 have been produced using the 5 per cent. data and have been rated up proportionally using the Great Britain WPLS 100 per cent. IB/SDA totals.
4. Diagnoses are taken from the International Classification of Diseases (ICD10).

Source:

DWP Information Directorate, 5 per cent. Samples from 1997 to 1999 and Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS)100 per cent. data thereafter.

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the number of people claiming incapacity benefit who were claiming jobseeker's allowance immediately prior to claiming incapacity benefit. [30847]

Mrs. McGuire: The most recent available information is in the following table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) commencements previously claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for the period 1 March 2004 to 28 February 2005.

Total IB commencements	Claimed JSA within previous 30 days	Percentage of IB commencements that claimed JSA within previous 30 days.
659,000	131,000	19.9

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Figures include JSA claims that have terminated in the 30 days prior to the IB claim commencing.
3. Due to note 2, it does not exclusively include those who were claiming JSA immediately prior to IB. It is possible for a claimant to have flowed from JSA to another benefit/work and then to IB within the 30 day period allowed for the computer systems to be updated.
4. The number of incapacity benefit commencements that flowed from JSA has been given. This figure may include some individuals who have flowed from JSA to IB more than once over this period.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Ribble Valley are claiming incapacity benefit. [33521]

Mrs. McGuire: As at May 2005 there were 3,400 people claiming incapacity benefit or severe disability allowance in the Ribble Valley parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost is to the Department of a medical examination for incapacity benefit. [34784]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 5 December 2005]: This information is confidential and cannot be disclosed as to do so may prejudice the commercial interests of the Department and/or its suppliers.

Office for Disability Issues

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 11 November 2005, Official Report, column 798W, on the Office for Disability Issues, what criteria his Department uses to decide whether a consultation will be (a) an informal exercise and (b) a formal consultation; in which circumstances each are used; for what reasons his Department decided the consultation on the establishment of the Office for Disability Issues would be an informal exercise; and how his Department communicates to relevant individuals and organisations the status of a consultation. [32551]

Mrs. McGuire: All Government Departments follow the Cabinet Office Guidelines on consultation. These guidelines clearly state how Departments should run formal consultations and are available in the Library (Cabinet Office Guidance on Consultations). However as this was an informal consultation and involved no change to either statute or regulations, the formal guidance was not applicable.

We were determined to ensure as many disabled people as possible could engage with us, and through the informal consultation we had many opportunities to engage, through regional consultation events, leaflets, intensive calls to disability organisations, signposts on local authority, Disability Rights Commission, Disability Now and You able websites and press advertising. We offered people the opportunity to express views by e-mail, in writing, by telephone, in various languages including Welsh and Braille and had copies of the consultation available in easy read and audiotape. We employed an external research company to ensure all responses were treated fairly and in unbiased fashion.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of Pathway to Work participants have moved into jobs in each of the pilot areas. [17608]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 October 2005]: The information is not available in the format requested because we only know about Jobcentre Plus and, NDDP job broker job entries. We also have information on return to work credit awards. However, we can provide information on job entries recorded through these channels and this is provided in the following table. The total number of job entries that actually occur will be higher than this as there will be a significant number of benefit leavers that have found jobs that were not the result of a direct intervention from Jobcentre Plus. The job entry proportion, as shown in the table, is an under-estimate of the true underlying job entry rate due to the fact that more recent cases will have had less time to find a job.

1. Participants are defined as anyone who has contacted Jobcentre Plus about making a claim for incapacity benefits plus those existing claimants who have volunteered to participate.
2. Job entrants include all recorded job entries plus return to work credit awards for which no job entry is yet recorded.
3. Data are to the end of August 2005.
4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Figures are presented for all customers entering the pilot, those customers who attend the initial work focused interview after eight weeks and those customers taking up an element of the choices package. All customers making a claim to incapacity benefit in the pilot districts are defined as participants as they are subject to the Pathways to Work regime. However a significant proportion of customers leave benefit early stages of the claim and therefore do not attend the initial work focused interview where the full range of support is explained.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the Pathways to Work pilots currently in operation. [37308]

Margaret Hodge: The Pathways to Work pilots are operating in 11 areas.

The first three started operating in October 2003 and are in Bridgend, Renfrewshire and Derbyshire.

Further pilots in Gateshead and South Tyneside; Somerset; Essex and East Lancashire started in April 2004. Four more pilot areas were rolled out in October 2005 in Glasgow, Cumbria, Lancashire West, and Tees Valley.

A further 10 pilots in Durham, Lanarkshire and East Dunbarton, Staffordshire, Barnsley and Rotherham (to be merged with Doncaster), Manchester (to be merged with Salford and Trafford), Greater Mersey, Liverpool (to be merged with Wirral), Eastern Valleys, Swansea Bay (to be merged with West Wales), and City of Sunderland will roll-out in 2006.

Pensioner Poverty

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of pensioners were living in absolute poverty in each region of the UK in each of the last 30 years. [36911]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators. Detailed information about the number and proportion of pensioners living in low income households for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income (HBAI) 1994–95–2003–04", available in the Library.

Robust figures on pensioners in low income, broken down by region, for each of the last 30 years are not available. Three-year rolled averages for the number and proportion of pensioners in absolute low income are available for the Government office regions, Scotland and Wales from 1994–95. These are set out in the following tables. Equivalent data is not available for Northern Ireland, as the necessary information has only been collected for two financial years.

An individual in absolute low income is defined as someone living in a household with income below 60 per cent. of 1996–97 median income, adjusted for inflation.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) contributors and (b) customers credited with contributions there were in the state second pension scheme (i) in total and (ii) in each (A) region and (B) county in each year since 2002–03; and what percentage of the working age population this represented in (1) the UK and in (2) each (y) region and (z) county. [34405]

Mr. Timms: In 2002–03 approximately 20 million people, representing 55 per cent. of the working age population started to accrue entitlement to the state second pension. This figure is made of 15.9 million people in work, 1.9 million carers and 2.2 million long term disabled people. No breakdown of these figures is available by region or county.

Notes:

1. The figure for 2002–03 should be regarded as provisional and may be subject to changes in future releases.
2. Population estimates are taken from Office for National Statistics, General Register Office for Scotland, Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency.
3. The figure is based on a one per cent. sample and is shown to the nearest thousand.

The following information relates to expenditure in Great Britain which the Department for Work and Pensions, is responsible for. Information relating to Northern Ireland is available from the Northern Ireland office.

Notes:

1. All expenditure figures are for Great Britain.

2. The percentage of gross domestic product (GDP) has been calculated using the UK money GDP figures provided, by HM Treasury, on 5 December 2005, following the pre-Budget report 2005.

3. As GDP is not available for Great Britain, the UK GDP has been applied to the Great Britain expenditure figures and future projections to provide a percentage of GDP.

4. Expenditure has been rounded to the nearest £ million.

5. GDP percentages have been rounded to one decimal place.

6. State second pension has been interpreted to mean additional state pension which therefore includes SERPS expenditure.

7. Pension credit expenditure is a combination of the guarantee and savings credits.

8. All figures are consistent with the pre-Budget report 2005 and with expenditure information which is published on the Department's internet website at the following address—http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/expenditure.asp. The internet tables have been updated recently following the pre-Budget report 2005.

Expenditure and percentage of gross domestic product figures have been taken from data which underlie the pre-Budget report 2005.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many single women pensioners in Tamworth constituency are receiving financial assistance to bring them up to the minimum pension level. [35674]

Mr. Timms: At June 2005, 500 single female pensioners in Tamworth parliamentary constituency were in receipt of the guarantee credit element of pension credit.

Notes:

1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest hundred.

2. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).

3. Data from the Generalised Matching Service (QMS) 100 per cent. scan taken on 10 June 2005. The figure has been rated up to give month-end estimates.

4. These figures are early estimates. Operational processing times mean that a number of claim commencements and terminations are not reflected in the figures. The final figures incorporated within the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) will take account of such cases.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received about stakeholder pensions; and what reviews his Department has undertaken on stakeholder pensions since they were introduced. [36899]

Mr. Timms: The Department receives a range of correspondence on pension issues including stakeholder pension inquiries but there have been no recent representations specifically on stakeholder pension policy.

Prior to the introduction of stakeholder pensions in April 2001, the Government advised that it would undertake a review of a number of provisions contained in the Stakeholder Pension Regulations 2000 after they had been in operation for three years. This review was concluded in October 2004, and after careful consideration, it was decided that no changes were necessary at that time. It was, however, recognised that developments in train in the wider pensions field might have a bearing on those provisions and that it might be necessary to look at them again at some point over the coming years.

Following the Sandier report in July 2002, which looked at medium and long-term retail savings in the UK, we reviewed the stakeholder pensions charge cap. This resulted in the annual management charge being revised from 1 per cent. of the value of the fund a year to 1.5 per cent. for the first 10 years of membership, reducing to 1 per cent. thereafter for stakeholder pension policies bought on or after 6 April 2005. We also introduced the requirement for providers to offer lifestyling, the process where at least five years before retirement the members pension savings are gradually moved into less volatile arrangements.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have taken up stakeholder pensions in each year since their introduction; and what the average contribution by (a) employers and (b) individuals has been in each year. [37530]

Mr. Timms: The information available is in the following tables:

2001[1]	599,000
2002	638,000
2003	560,000
2004	523,000

(a) HMRC: These estimates provided are based on third party information. The data is for the full year and does not include a scheme start date, so where a scheme was started in-year, although the contributions would only have been made for part of the year they have been averaged over 12 months. Therefore the estimate will not reflect the true annual average if the scheme had operated for a full year. This is particularly true for stakeholder pensions in their first year 2001–02.

Quad Bikes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information his Department collects on the number of (a) quad bikes used for work and (b) accidents involving quad bikes used for work; and what steps his Department has taken to educate the public on quad bike safety. [30326]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Executive does not collect information on the number of quad bikes used for work.

The Health and Safety Executive does not collect information on accidents specifically involving quad bikes. However information is collected on accidents involving all-terrain vehicles (ATVs), including quad bikes, and on accidents on rides on attractions such as go-karting, also including ATVs. Over the four-year period 2001–02 to 2004–05 in these categories there have been 127 work-related injuries to workers involving ATVs, of which seven were fatal. Over the same period there have been 84 work-related injuries to members of the public involving ATVs, of which one was fatal.

HSE does not produce guidance aimed specifically at the general public. However it does produce a range of guidance relating to the safe use of ATVs, including quad bikes, used in agriculture. HSE also works through the media to raise public awareness of the causes of accidents in agriculture involving ATVs, using press releases a[illegible] the annual accident statistics. In addition HSE works with industry's ATV/Quad Group, formed by the Agricultural Engineers Association (AEA) and the Outdoor Power Equipment Council (OPEC), which represents the majority of ATV manufacturers and suppliers. The group produces guidance and promotes the safe use of ATVs and quad bikes across the range of uses. As part of this work HSE has produced an instructional video, co-funded by the manufacturers of ATVs [illegible] quad bikes, that the manufacturers and suppliers have agreed to supply to all who buy an ATV or quad bike from members of the AEA and OPEC.

Refurbishment Projects

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list his Department's refurbishment projects that (a) are in progress and (b) will start in the next six months; what steps are being taken to ensure that these will procure timber from legal sustainable sources; and whether guidance is issued to contractors to ensure that the timber used on site during refurbishment comes from legal and sustainable sources. [14482]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions is undergoing an extensive long-term program to refurbish 900–1,000 Jobcentre Plus sites and Pensions call centres. In the current phase 117 sites are being refurbished with a further 86 sites due to commence refurbishment works before March 2006. A number of contractors and suppliers are used to undertake this work and the Department requires them to obtain timber from legal sources and encourages the supply of timber from sustainable sources. The Department requires all suppliers to submit details of certification schemes used for timber products—this information is collected and independently audited.

The Department's Estates Partners Land Securities Trillium undertake all remaining refurbishment projects on behalf of the Department. They have been instructed that all timber across the Department must be verified as being from legal and sustainable sources. This is included within all their specifications for refurbishment work. A supply chain report is presented annually to the Department, detailing the evidence presented for all the timber used. This report, and the evidence it contains, is then independently audited to ensure that the timber does meet the required standards. Any areas of weakness are identified and the Department works closely with Land Securities Trillium to ensure that performance is improved.

Royal Ordnance (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Health and Safety Executive has indicated approval for production to continue at the former Royal Ordnance site in Chorley. [33966]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Executive is not aware of any health and safety issues that might prevent the continuation of production at BAe Chorley. There was a fatal explosion at the site in March 2005, BAe voluntarily ceased production until any reasonably practicable safety improvements had been identified and implemented.

Limited production was resumed in September, excluding the process that had caused the explosion, but BAe has since announced that their sites at Chorley and Bridgwater will cease production at the end of 2006.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received winter fuel allowance in Oxford, East in each of the last three years. [36851]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is in the following table. The information for winter fuel payments made in these years are also available in the Library.

	Payments made
2002–03	15,500
2003–04	15,345
2004–05	14,860

Work Trials

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many jobseekers have undertaken a work trial; in what proportion of cases this has resulted in long-term employment; and if he will make a statement. [35069]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 14 December 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many jobseekers have undertaken a work trial and what proportion of these have resulted in long term employment. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

In answer to your specific question, to date, 14,290 jobseekers have started a work trial and 7,780 of those jobseekers went on to become employed as a result of the work trial. This represents a 54% job entry rate.

However, due to the limitations of the clerical collection of Management Information, we cannot trace employment details from the work trial back to the original customer and, therefore, we are not able to check if an individual work trial results in long term employment.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare Bill

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ask the Home Office to review the Custody Plus policy in advance of the forthcoming Animal Welfare Bill. [30490]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to review the policy on Custody Plus—these provisions are currently planned to be implemented in the autumn of 2006.

Abattoirs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many abattoirs are (a) EU-approved and (b) non-approved but operating with a derogation. [34598]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

Under the Meat Hygiene Regulations implementing the EU Fresh Meat and Poultry Meat Directives, abattoirs are either fully licensed for intra-Community trade (EU approved) or licensed as low throughput (operating with a derogation).

The following table gives the number of licensed red meat and poultry meat abattoirs in each category in the United Kingdom as of 1 November 2005.

	Type of licence
	Red meat abattoirs		Poultry, farmed game bird and rabbit meat abattoirs
	Fully licensed	Low throughput	Fully licensed	Low throughput
England	152	98	54	44
Scotland	32	9	5	1
Wales	18	12	5	3
Northern Ireland	14	1	7	2
United Kingdom	216	120	71	50

Avian Influenza

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what conclusions she has drawn from the information that the sentinel birds at the quarantine centre in Essex did not become infected with avian influenza. [31473]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 24 November 2005]: As indicated in the Epidemiology report of this event, there was no evidence that the H5N1 virus had transmitted to other species in the facility including the sentinel chickens. This suggests that the separation of the various species prevented exposure to the virus to the other species.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the guidance issued to (a) farmers, (b) abattoirs and (c) poultry keepers regarding avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [32621]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have arranged for copies of guidance the Department has issued to poultry keepers and other interested parties regarding avian influenza to be placed in the Library of the House.

Biodiversity Ministerial Group

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role the Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on Bio-diversity will play in the research into the impacts of internationally sourced commodity production on bio-diversity. [35074]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA have commissioned research work into the impacts of internationally sourced commodities on global biodiversity. This work will seek to identify the range of commodities with the largest effects on global biodiversity and identify gaps in the evidence base; palm oil will be one of the commodities investigated. We hope that the outcomes of this work will inform future policy development in the UK and internationally.

This project is one aspect of DEFRA's work on Business and Biodiversity, in the context of DEFRA's WSSD Delivery Plan on International Biodiversity. The Inter-departmental Ministerial Group on Biodiversity are monitoring implementation of the delivery plan.

Biomass Industry

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the suitability for use as biomass fuel of forestry waste from local government owned land. [22209]

Mr. Morley: No separate assessment has been made of the suitability of wood for fuel from local government owned woodland but this is not expected to be materially different from woodland on comparable land in any other ownership. The potential volume of woodfuel production from any single ownership, other than Forestry Commission land, has not been forecast.

Botulinum Toxin

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will introduce a requirement that the pharmaceutical industry use a completely non-animal method to confirm the potency of finished products containing botulinum toxin; and if she will make a statement. [34766]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

Botox is the trade name for one of the products containing botulinum toxin which is approved for the treatment of a number of serious and disabling conditions. International and United Kingdom regulations concerning safety and efficacy of medicines require testing for botulinum toxin products at various stages of their processing, from harvesting through to marketing as a finished product for use as a prescription only medicine.

The European Pharmacopoeia, which sets legal standards for many medicines, requires the product to be looked at in either a mouse test called an LD50 or with another test that has been shown to give similar information. Unfortunately, currently there are no tests that have been shown to be reliable enough to measure the product's strength.

Tests are being developed but at the moment they can only be used during the early stages of the manufacturing process. However, an acceptable assay in an animal model still remains a requirement to test the finished product before it can be released for use. Research work is ongoing in both the product companies and elsewhere to try and develop a reliable equivalent test that could replace the animal test but as yet no test has been approved by the Pharmacopoeia.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the effects of (a) erosion on the coastline and (b) rising sea levels in the East Riding of Yorkshire; what assessment she has made of the effect on local communities; and if she will make a statement. [36713]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA has policy responsibility for flood and coastal erosion risk management in England but operational responsibility falls to the various flood and coastal defence operating authorities who are expected to assess local risk and possible impacts and solutions. The Environment Agency is the principal operating authority responsible for flood risk management in England and this includes the risk of flooding from the sea. Measures to reduce coastal erosion risk fall to maritime district councils under the Coast Protection Act 1949.

The Holderness coastline is subject to erosion, management of which is principally the responsibility of East Riding of Yorkshire council. At the southern end of the coastline the land is more low-lying and subject to both erosion and coastal flooding; the Environment Agency therefore also has responsibilities.

Rising water levels in the Humber estuary have been the main driver for development by the Environment Agency of the Humber Estuary Flood Risk Management Strategy (HFRMS) which was published in draft form for public consultation in August 2005.

The HFRMS highlighted the serious issue of coastal erosion at Kilnsea where it is estimated that within two years erosion could lead to the loss of a flood defence embankment that protects eight houses to the south and east of Kilnsea village. At Easington, the HFRMS noted that the combination of erosion and wave overtopping is damaging the Easington Lagoons designated habitat site. The Environment Agency is also considering the potential, impacts for the coast and estuary from future serious breaches of Spurn point and a joint study is being set up with other stakeholders.

Shoreline Management Plans (SMPs) around the English coast are currently being revised. These provide large-scale assessments of the risks associated with coastal processes and present a long-term policy framework to manage them in a sustainable manner. East Riding of Yorkshire council will lead on the review of the "Flamborough Head to Gibraltar Point" SMP.

Current coastal research and development projects include one to consider the significance of the lowering by erosion of clay 'platforms' on the foreshore.

Contaminated Soil

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria she uses in deciding whether additional security measures may be needed to protect road or rail shipments of radioactively contaminated soils from remediated sites. [35788]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

Anyone wanting to transport radioactive material by road or rail will need to take into account the security measures required by The Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Use of Transportable Pressure Equipment (Amendment) Regulations 2005.

These security requirements are based on international agreements—the European Agreement concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road and the Regulations concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Rail—and include measures such as only offering the goods to carriers that have been appropriately identified, and fitting devices to stop the theft of the vehicle or its load.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria she uses in deciding whether to include upland farms covered by restrictions due to Chernobyl radioactive fall-out in areas to be designated under the revised radioactive land contamination regime. [35789]

Mr. Morley: I do not intend to provide separate criteria for upland farms in England.

Informed by the recent public consultation, I shall decide upon generic criteria to protect human health from land contaminated by radioactivity which is giving rise to lasting radiation exposure resulting from the after effects of a radiological emergency or a past or old practice or work activity.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many sites have been identified as radioactively contaminated within the scope of Part IIA of the Environment Act 1990. [35839]

Mr. Morley: None. Radioactivity does not currently fall within the scope of Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Regulations are to be laid before Parliament in the new year to extend the regime to include radioactivity in England.

Departmental Building

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by her Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [34752]

Jim Knight: DEFRA has the following building and refurbishment projects planned in 2005–06 and 2006–07:

	£ million
(i) 2005–06
(a) Building Projects
VLA Weybridge: Energy Centre	3.3
VLA Weybridge: HV building	3.6
VLA Weybridge: ASU Building	5.3
VLA Weybridge: New Laboratories	43.7
Carmarthen: SVS Building	1.0
(b) Refurbishment Projects
VLA Weybridge: Building 33	27.0
VLA Weybridge: HV supply	1.7
Reading: Northgate House	1.6
York: Kings Pool	17.5
London: Ashdown House	4.7
London: Nobel House	33.9
London: Eastbury House Ph II	0.5
London: 55 Whitehall	4.5
Scarborough: MFA offices	0.4
(ii) 2006–07
(a) Building Projects
VLA Weybridge: Stores Building	6.0
Alnwick: Reprovision of Offices	3.0
Norwich: Reprovision of Offices	2.0
(b) Refurbishment Projects
London: Eastbury House Ph III	1.0

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33331]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA expects to let all its contracts in accordance with moral principles, and would consider any case where evidence to the contrary was presented.

Environmental factors in contracts let by DEFRA have been considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of Community law.

The Department will, very shortly, be making publicly available a "Sustainable Procurement Toolkit" which will enhance further the consideration of environmental factors in public sector contracts.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of vehicles used by her Department run on (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) liquefied petroleum gas. [36788]

Jim Knight: At 31 March 2005, the proportions of fleet vehicles owned by DEFRA and its Executive agencies, by fuel type are shown as follows:

	Percentage
(a) Petrol	3.9
(b) Diesel	90.8
(c) Liquid Petroleum Gas (LPG)	4.0
(d) Hybrid Electric Vehicles	1.3

Fleet cars are subject to caps on CO_2 emissions according to engine size.

Business mileage is also undertaken by officials in their own vehicles. It is not possible to give a breakdown by fuel type.

Domestic Central Heating

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to help people over 60 who cannot afford the cost of the installation and maintenance of domestic central heating. [36822]

Mr. Morley: The Government's Warm Front Scheme in England provides a range of heating and insulation measures to householders in receipt of certain benefits. Where a new central heating system is installed, customers are provided with guidance on the efficient use of the system and two annual service visits. There are similar schemes in place in each of the devolved Administrations.

Warm Front has now assisted over one million households since its launch in June 2000. The new phase of the scheme was launched in June 2005, and is better equipped to target and assist those most in need in a sustainable way.

In the pre-Budget report, the Chancellor announced that an additional £300 million would be made available to tackle fuel poverty across the UK. In England, this means that an additional £250 million will be made available both to boost the Warm Front Scheme and extend its ability to provide central heating to poor pensioners, and to provide £300 off the cost of a central heating system for all other pensioners.

More information on the range of measures installed under Warm Front (including a breakdown of measures installed by constituency in England) and its equivalents in the devolved Administrations is available at www.eaga.co.uk

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance her Department gives to farmers markets in rural areas. [37270]

Jim Knight: Farmers' markets, which this department has responsibility for, are an important outlet for local food producers, with the added advantage that the direct sales they can stimulate leave producers with a bigger share of the retail price. They have been shown to help bring life back into town centres and to stimulate trade in surrounding shops on days when they are held. They can also play a part in reinstating a more individual character to the local area, where high street uniformity has possibly crept in, and in restoring a more traditional 'market town' atmosphere.

The Department has encouraged farmers' markets by stressing to local authorities the benefits to the rural economy and to town centres which such markets can bring. In addition, we have also provided funding, at both a national and regional level, under our various grant schemes to help establish and raise awareness of farmers' markets. Earlier this year we provided funding for the 'Farmers Market' conference organised by The National Farmers' Retail and Market Association (FARMA) which was held at the Royal Horticultural Halls in London. Officials meet regularly with representatives from FARMA (an organisation that represents over 700 direct selling outlets) to explore how we can work together on our common goals of reconnecting farmers to their markets and helping them to add value.

Flood Defences (East Sussex)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she plans to increase funding for flood defences in Robertsbridge, East Sussex; and whether the funds will be spent on flood defences along Northbridge street. [36900]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 13 December 2005]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 508W. Northbridge street is protected by the new £4.5 million Robertsbridge flood alleviation scheme. It has the same standard of protection from flooding by the River Rother as the rest of Robertsbridge, that is against all flood events except those with a probability of occurrence in any one year of less than 1 per cent.

Flood Maps

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the level of accuracy is of flood maps drawn up by the Environment Agency. [36126]

Mr. Morley: The Flood Map, which replaced the Environment Agency's previous Indicative Floodplain Map in October 2004, combines data from a number of sources, and therefore it is not possible to put a precise figure on its 'accuracy'.

Flood mapping is a complex, detailed and extensive process that will never be completely accurate but the Environment Agency is committed top provide the best currently available information using nationally consistent principles.

The Flood Map incorporates the Environment Agency's local detailed model data for over 800 flooding 'hotspots'. It was produced using an in depth survey, detailed flow estimates and local knowledge.

This is extended to cover the whole of the floodplain in England using national scale 'generalised' modelling and mapping. This uses data which, by its nature, is of varying levels of detail depending on, for example, local topography.

The information provided by the Flood Map therefore covers the flood plains across the whole of England using the latest technology, a consistent approach and the best available data. It shows areas that are at risk of flooding but cannot provide detail on individual properties.

The Environment Agency has an ongoing programme of improvements to the Flood Map, focusing on areas of highest risk and uncertainty. An updated Flood Map is published on the internet quarterly to incorporate this new information as it becomes available.

Flooding

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the potential for improving water absorption by tree-planting to reduce flooding; and if she will make a statement. [37112]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA is responsible for policy on flood risk management in England. There has been some research on the impacts of woodlands and forestry on flood run-off. Responses to the recent public consultation on "Making Space for Water", DEFRA's developing new Strategy for Flood and Coastal Erosion Risk Management, reinforced the need to continue this area of investigation alongside consideration of how other rural land management techniques might contribute to managing flood risk.

Evidence to date suggests that, while there can be an impact on frequent flood events at the local scale, effects are much less certain for more extreme events at the wider catchment level.

Food Allergies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the new rules on food allergies; and what products are covered by those rules. [35109]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Labelling (Amendment) (England) (No. 2) Regulations 2004 (SI 2004/2824) came into force on 26 November 2004. They establish a list of 12 foods that will have to be indicated by reference to the source allergen whenever they or their derived ingredients are used in pre-packed foods whatever the level of use. This list consists of cereals containing gluten (wheat, rye, barley, oats), crustaceans, eggs, fish, peanut, soya beans, milk, tree nuts (such as almonds, hazelnuts, walnuts, cashews, pistachios, brazil nuts), celery, mustard, sesame, sulphur dioxide and sulphites (above 10 mg/kg).

Global Warming

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with experts on the effects of global warming on coastline and river levels. [37248]

Mr. Morley: The Department funds much of the UK work on climate change, its impacts and appropriate adaptation measures and so we are in regular contact with leading experts in this field.

The main effects on the coastline relate to sea level rise, compounded by long term land movement. For the UK, estimates were published in the 2002 UK Climate Impacts Programme (UKCIP) Scenarios of Climate change. Other factors include the frequency, duration and intensity of storms which drive waves and surges.

The effect of climate change on river levels depends on complex interactions between rainfall patterns (including both the frequency, intensity and duration of severe storms and longer term rainfall patterns that determine the degree of catchment wetness) and physical catchment characteristics.

The Department has since 1989 issued precautionary guidance on the climate change impacts that should be taken into account when designing flood and coastal erosion risk management measures. This was last updated in 2003 to take account of the UKCIP 2002 scenarios and other specific research on river and coastal impacts. The guidance is kept under review in the light of emerging research results; for example, those presented by leading experts at DEFRA's conference on 'Dangerous Climate Change', held in Exeter in early 2005. In developing our new Strategy for Flood and Coastal Erosion Risk Management—Making Space for Water-we have made a specific commitment to review our guidance in 2007. To support this review DEFRA has just commissioned a major piece of research over a 30 month period to understand, better the potential impacts on river flow of a range of future climate scenarios.

GM Products

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent international experience she has examined in relation to the withdrawal of GM products for reasons of their effect on (a) the environment and (b) animal welfare. [36423]

Mr. Morley: Under EU legislation each proposed release of a GM product is subject to a detailed risk assessment which involves careful scrutiny by independent scientists. An evaluation is made of all the risk factors that may arise, including the impact on the environment and animal welfare. This takes account of both British and international experience in the form both of relevant evidence from tests and trials, and in the form of existing scientific knowledge.

Once a GMO has been approved, it is possible that new scientific evidence (from either British or international sources) may come to light which might warrant a reassessment of the approval. There areprovisions under the terms of EU legislation which allow a member state to take safeguard action in these circumstances, if this is justified by the new information.

Ensuring safety is the Government's clear overriding objective, and we will only agree to the release of a GM product if we are satisfied that it is safe.

Greenhouse Gases

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 312W, on greenhouse gases, what estimate she has made of the change in carbon dioxide emissions from current levels to the Kyoto target period which will result from (a) changes in the future of energy supply, (b) economic activity, (c) fuel prices, (d) sectoral trends, (e) effects of current and future policy measures and (f) other major factors. [36587]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 December 2005]: I have been asked to reply.

Work to update the energy projections published in November 2004 is continuing. My Department is aiming to publish information on the projections in due course.

The November 2004 projections can be found at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep2004.pdf with an addendum later published, which extended the projections to 2020. This can be found at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep_addendum.pdf.

Markets

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department is taking to encourage the use of markets. [35582]

Jim Knight: Farmers' markets, which this Department has responsibility for, are an important outlet for local food producers, with the added advantage that the direct sales they can stimulate leave producers with a bigger share of the retail price. They have been shown to help bring life back into town centres and to stimulate trade in surrounding shops on days when they are held. They can also play a part in reinstating a more individual character to the local area, where high street uniformity has possibly crept in, and in restoring a more traditional 'market town' atmosphere.

The Department has encouraged farmers' markets by stressing to local authorities the benefits to the rural economy and to town centres which such markets can bring. In addition, we have also provided funding, at both a national and regional level, under our various grant schemes to help establish and raise awareness of farmers' markets. Earlier this year we provided funding for the 'Farmers Market' conference organised by The National Farmers' Retail and Market Association (FARMA) which was held at the Royal Horticultural Halls in London. Officials meet regularly with representatives from FARMA (an organisation that represents over 700 direct selling outlets) to explore how we can work together on our common goals of reconnecting farmers to their markets and helping them to add value.

My noble Friend, Lord Bach, spoke at the "Making markets, Creating places" conference held at Borough Market in June 2005. That conference focused on the key role markets can play in towns and cities and highlighted their potential for supporting the growing numbers of quality food producers looking to sell their products. The event brought together leaders in the urban regeneration and food policy fields along with those who have been at the forefront of revitalising city centre markets in the UK.

Pegasus Birds Quarantine Centre

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether a public health issue would arise if a hospital worker was running the Pegasus Birds quarantine centre. [28715]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

Avian influenza does not easily cross the species barrier from birds to people, and there is no confirmed evidence that avian influenza is transmissible from person to person.

The normal infection control measures that are taken to protect people against the risk of any zoonotic diseases that birds can carry and to prevent infection of those caring for birds should protect against avian influenza risks.

Guidance on avoiding the risk of zoonotic infections, including avian influenza is available on the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) website and on the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) website.

Pesticides

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what meetings with pesticide companies the Government has had in the preparation of its response to the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, crop spraying and the health of residents and bystanders; and what meetings with pesticide companies are planned. [35798]

Mr. Morley: My noble Friend, the Lord Bach, will be meeting with representatives of the Crop Protection Association on 11 January 2006. He has not held any other meetings with pesticide companies since the launch of the RCEP report in September and no other such meetings are currently planned.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Government Departments will be involved in consultations and discussions about the Government's response to the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, crop spraying and the health of residents and bystanders. [35799]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA is currently addressing the recommendations and will co-ordinate a Government response by next summer. As part of this process DEFRA will be discussing the recommendations with a number of government departments and agencies and particularly those, such as the Department of Health and the Health and Safety Executive, which have responsibility relevant to some of the areas covered by the report.

Poultry Auctions

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department's definition of higher risk events includes poultry auctions under licence. [34989]

Mr. Bradshaw: The auction of poultry is defined as a higher risk event and is currently prohibited as are all sales from exhibitions, shows, fairs and other gatherings.

Sheep/Goats

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the United Kingdom's derogation from EU Council Regulation 21/2004 on identifying sheep and goats will continue after December 2005. [34858]

Mr. Bradshaw: Yes, the derogation is currently due to expire on 30 April 2006.

A decision on whether the derogation will be extended will be taken by the EU Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health before the derogation expires.

Sugar Subsidies

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of the recent reductions of sugar subsidies by the EU on (a) encouraging trade in developing countries and (b) the overproduction and dumping of sugar. [35604]

Mr. Bradshaw: The existing EU sugar regime results in a structural surplus of around 5 million tonnes of sugar a year, much of which is disposed of on world markets with the aid of export subsidies. This depresses world prices as well as displacing other potential suppliers. It also requires the EU to limit access to its own market in order to protect its internal price structure.

Under the reformed arrangements agreed in November to take effect from July 2006, EU prices will be progressively reduced and the industry restructured to achieve a new balance of supply and demand consistent with the granting of full duty free access to all Least Developed Countries from 2009 (in addition to existing preferential access for African Caribbean and Pacific countries) and limiting exports to the new lower level of 1.27 million tonnes resulting from the recent WTO Panel ruling.

The impact of these changes is considered in detail in the Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment of options for reform of the EU Sugar Regime published by DEFRA in June 2005.

Water Reservoirs

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the water reservoirs that (a) have become operational in each year since 1990 and (b) are planned, giving the operating company in each case. [36482]

Mr. Morley: No major public water supply reservoirs have been built since 1990 or are currently under construction. In fulfilment of their duties to maintain adequate supplies of water, several water companies propose to construct five new reservoirs. These proposals were set out in the 25-year water resources plans they prepared in 2004.

Proposed location	Company
Broad Oak	Southern Water/Mid Kent Water/ Folkestone and Dover Water Services
Clay Hill	South East Water
Havant Thicket	Portsmouth Water
South West Oxfordshire	Thames Water
Lower Severn	Severn Trent

In each case the necessary approvals, such as planning permission, will need to be obtained.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the complaints made by (a) members of the public, (b) hon. Members and (c) members of the House of Lords about the conduct of the Crown Prosecution Service in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what the outcome was in each case. [37372]

The Solicitor-General: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost (Code of Practice for Access to Government Information, part 2, section 9 a).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) males and (b) females were employed by the Crown Prosecution Service in (i) Southend, (ii) Essex, (iii) Hertfordshire and (iv) the Metropolitan police area of London in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available. [37374]

The Solicitor-General: The number of males and females who were employed by the Crown Prosecution Service in (ii) Essex, (iii) Hertfordshire (iv) the Metropolitan police area of London for which figures are available are tabled as follows.

Southend is not a Crown Prosecution Service area but forms part of Essex area. It has not been possible to provide a breakdown for that part of the area alone.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases of person-assisted suicide the Crown Prosecution Service has taken up over the last 10 years for which information is available. [37510]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has records of the volume of specific offences handled only since full implementation of the Compass Case Management System in April 2004. These records show that, during the year ending March 2005, two offences under s.2*(1)* of the Suicide Act 1961 (aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the suicide of another) proceeded to a hearing, followed by a further three offences during the period 1 April to 8 December 2005.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what the target staffing level is of the Crown Prosecution Service in (a) Southend and (b) Essex; and what the actual level is. [37511]

The Solicitor-General: CPS areas are required to operate within set budgets, rather than having target staffing figures.

CPS Essex is organised into four district teams. The South East Essex team has responsibility for cases arising in Southend. As at 1 December 2005, CPS Essex employed the full time equivalent of 25.4 staff in the South East team and the full time equivalent of 137.8 staff in the area as a whole. CPS Essex is currently recruiting at prosecutor level and has recently appointed two administrative witness care officers, who are due to take up their positions shortly.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases have been discontinued in the Essex Crown Prosecution Service, broken down by category of offence, in the last five years for which information is available. [37512]

The Solicitor-General: In September 2004, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) introduced a system for the recording and analysis of principal offence types for which each defendant is prosecuted. Before this date, the CPS measured only the seriousness of the offence as summary, either-way or indictable only.

Since September 2004, CPS Essex has processed a total of 30,952 defendants of whom a total of 3,700 had their cases discontinued. This figure includes cases: where a bindover was accepted; where a discontinuance decision was made by the prosecution; that are withdrawn with a reinstatement warning; in which no evidence is offered; and, a very small number where the indictment or prosecution was stayed.

18 defendants were processed under the offence type of homicide, of which two were discontinued.

4,601 defendants were processed under the offence type of offences against the person, of which 1,342 were discontinued.

292 defendants were processed under the offence type of sexual offences, of which 79 were discontinued.

769 defendants were processed under the offence type of burglary of which 126 were discontinued.

271 defendants were processed under the offence type of robbery, of which 44 were discontinued.

4,418 defendants were processed under the offence type of theft and handling, of which 466 were discontinued.

254 defendants were processed under the offence type of fraud and forgery, of which 40 were discontinued.

1,706 defendants were processed under the offence type of criminal damage, of which 284 were discontinued.

974 defendants were processed under the offence type of drugs offences, of which 64 were discontinued.

1,943 defendants were processed under the offence type of public order offences, of which 351 were discontinued.

13,141 defendants were processed under the offence type of motoring offences, of which 634 were discontinued.

1,592 defendants were processed under the offence type of all other offences, of which 261 were discontinued.

The above analysis takes no account of cases which resulted in an administrative finalisation, where the defendant could not be traced by the police, had died, or been found unfit to plead.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement about the performance of the Crown Prosecution Service in (a) Southend and (b) Essex. [37513]

The Solicitor-General: CPS Essex performance data for the second quarter of 2005–06 shows improvements across a range of key indicators (measuring delivery of services to the public). The Area is achieving an overall rating of amber/green (on a scale where red indicates a negative likelihood and green indicates a positive likelihood) in relation to the likelihood of it meeting current targets. This equates to an overall performance improvement from the first quarter of 2005–06 and suggests improved delivery of Area business. These measurements relate to the Essex as a whole and do not break down to team performance within the county.

In addition, Essex CPS was designated as ready to move onto the statutory charging scheme with effect from Monday 12 December 2005. This reflects a significant achievement for the Area in relation to the provision of pre-charge advice to Essex police officers as part of the national rollout under the CPS Charging Programme.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases have been dealt with by the Essex Crown Prosecution Service by category of offence in the last five years for which information is available; and how many resulted in an (a) not guilty and (b) guilty verdict. [37514]

The Solicitor-General: In September 2004, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) introduced a system for the recording and analysis of principal offence types for which each defendant is prosecuted. Before this date, the CPS measured only the seriousness of the offence as summary, either-way or indictable only.

Since September 2004, CPS Essex has processed a total of 30,952 defendants of which 25,228 resulted in a guilty verdict and 777 resulted in a not guilty verdict. Cases prosecuted by the CPS do not all conclude in a guilty or not guilty verdict. The figures for each principal offence code for defendants processed by CPS Essex between September 2004 and 8 December 2005 which concluded in a guilty or not guilty verdict are tabled.

18 defendants were processed under the offence type of homicide. 13 concluded in a guilty verdict and two concluded in an acquittal.

4,601 defendants were processed under the offence type of offences against the person. 2,957 concluded in a guilty verdict and 284 concluded in an acquittal.

292 defendants were processed under the offence type of sexual offences. 163 concluded in a guilty verdict and 48 concluded in an acquittal.

769 defendants were processed under the offence type of burglary. 626 concluded in a guilty verdict and 16 concluded in an acquittal.

271 defendants were processed under the offence type of robbery. 208 concluded in a guilty verdict and 14 concluded in an acquittal.

4,418 defendants were processed under the offence type of theft and handling. 3,875 concluded in a guilty verdict and 63 concluded in an acquittal.

254 defendants were processed under the offence type of fraud and forgery. 208 concluded in a guilty verdict and three concluded in an acquittal.

1,706 defendants were processed under the offence type of criminal damage. 1,376 concluded in a guilty verdict and 44 concluded in an acquittal.

974 defendants were processed under the offence type of drugs offences. 901 concluded in a guilty verdict and six concluded in an acquittal.

1,943 defendants were processed under the offence type of public order offences. 1,526 concluded in a guilty verdict and 61 concluded in an acquittal.

13,141 defendants were processed under the offence type of motoring offences. 12,316 concluded in a guilty verdict and 174 concluded in an acquittal.

1,592 defendants were processed under the offence type of all other offences. 1,268 concluded in a guilty verdict and 61 concluded in an acquittal.

The analysis takes no account of cases which resulted in an administrative finalisation (where the defendant could not be traced by the police, had died, or been found unfit to plead) or cases which were discontinued by the prosecution or discharged at committal.

TRANSPORT

A21 Upgrade

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to hold further public consultations regarding the proposed A21 upgrade between Flimwell and Robertsbridge in East Sussex.[37527]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency will continue to consult with individuals, representative bodies and statutory bodies. Further public exhibitions will be held as the proposals are developed.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the public consultation held on 7 December, on the proposed A21 upgrade between Flimwell and Robertsbridge in East Sussex. [37529]

Dr. Ladyman: I have asked the Highways Agency for details of the outcomes following the discussions that took place at Hurst Green Village Hall on 7 December and expect to receive these shortly.

Airspace (Extraordinary Rendition)

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on how many occasions since 1 January 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, and (b) N313P operated in UK airspace; [34629]

(2) on how many occasions since 1 January 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, and (b) N313P were provided with air traffic control services. [34630]

Ms Buck [holding answer 12 December 2005]: This is an operational matter for National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS). I have asked the chief executive of NATS to write to the right hon. and learned Member.

Biofuels

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment the Government have made of the environmental impact of the increased use of palm oil as a result of the Government's Renewable Fuel Obligation. [36938]

Dr. Ladyman: We have published a feasibility study and regulatory impact assessment for the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation which consider the environmental benefits and impact of biofuels in some detail. Both of these documents are available in the House Library and on the Department's website at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_roads/documents/divisionhomepaqe/610328.hcsp.

Car Accidents (Young People)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1118W, on car accidents (young people), what plans he has to improve the education environment for young drivers. [37304]

Dr. Ladyman: We aim to develop a more improved approach to training and testing. This will be based on research. To this end my Department has recently let two contracts. One is about improving the delivery of road safety education. The other is a review of pre-driver education, which will study the attitudes and influences on driving style that are developed at a young age and before any formal training is undertaken.

In addition the Cohort Study of Learner and Novice Drivers is looking at the methods used and experiences gained of those learning to drive and compares them to how the candidates performed in the practical driving test. The study also follows a sample of drivers for a 3-year period to analyse the experiences they have gained as novice drivers.

Two new projects are also about to be awarded. The Evaluation of the Driving Standards Agency Drivers' Record will investigate the extent of use of the Drivers' Record, and the influence it has on the level and nature of pre-test driver training and experience, and on driving test performance. The second new project concerns the Development of the Pass Plus Scheme for Newly Qualified Drivers, which will explore possible means of improving both the impact and uptake of Pass Plus.

Research continues on the content, delivery and recruitment to existing pre-test and post-test motorcycle training. The project, being conducted by TRL, is addressing issues such as key competencies and skills, whether training should vary according to bike type, how courses can attract riders and how the new practical test being introduced in 2008 will impact on current training courses.

Harbour Commissioners

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when powers under section 15 of the Harbours Act 1964 to remove a Harbour Commissioner from office were last used; what the circumstances were in which these powers were used; and if he will make a statement. [36714]

Dr. Ladyman: In the past 30 years, the period for which the Department retains records, no Section 15 Orders have been made to remove a Harbour Commissioner from office.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued relating to (a) the conduct of Harbour Commissioners and (b) the practice to be followed on appointing new commissioners; if he will publish such guidance; and if he will make a statement. [36715]

Dr. Ladyman: Guidance to trust ports covering the appointment and conduct of Harbour Commissioners is issued in the form of our published document "Modernising Trust Ports—A Guide to Good Governance" a copy of which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_shipping/documents/divisionhomepage/032192.hcsp

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there are plans to introduce retrospective measures to require heavy goods vehicles to fit blind spot mirrors or cameras. [37271]

Dr. Ladyman: We understand the European Commission is developing a proposal for a directive that would require the existing heavy vehicle fleet to be equipped retrospectively with mirrors (or cameras) offering the same vision capability as will be required of all new heavy vehicles entering into service after January 2007. The Commission has as yet not discussed this issue with member states so no details are available.

Highways Agency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedure has to be followed to claim compensation from the Highways Agency after a compulsory purchase order. [37142]

Dr. Ladyman: Following the making of a compulsory purchase order, a person or persons, whose property has been included in that order, are served with a notice to treat. The notice confirms the extent of the land affected and invites those with an interest to make a claim for compensation. On receipt of a claim, the Highways Agency instructs its valuer to negotiate and agree compensation with the claimant and their surveyor.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the Highways Agency spent on the Compulsory Purchase Order of Stage Cottage, Hurst Green, East Sussex; and how much it has spent on the property since. [37175]

Dr. Ladyman: Stage Cottage was purchased in August 2005 by agreement for £350,000 under discretionary purchase terms. The property will be kept in management by the Highways Agency and let until the A21 Flimwell to Robertsbridge road scheme has been developed in detail. The property is currently being refurbished at a cost of about £22,000 in preparation for letting.

M1

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason the M1 motorway was closed in Leicestershire on 5 December; on whose authority; what steps were taken to ensure the period of the closure was kept to a minimum; and if he will make a statement. [36712]

Dr. Ladyman: The M1 was closed southbound between Junctions 21 and 22 on 5 December from 9.45 am to 6.45 pm due to a serious road traffic accident involving five vehicles, including two HGVs and two vans. Leicestershire police closed the carriageway with assistance from the Highways Agency and its agents.

The length of closure was due to the severity of injuries and the fact that the vehicles involved were badly damaged and entangled, which increased the time of the recovery operation. The incident was classified by the police as a potential fatal scene, necessitating detailed investigation. The carriageway was reopened directly after the investigation was completed and the scene cleared.

Railways

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the operation of section 110 of the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003; [37518]

(2) what assessment he has made of the number of local authorities which have not complied with the provisions of section 110 of the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003. [37519]

Dr. Ladyman: Section 110 of the Act imposes no duty of compliance on local authorities. It amends an exemption from seat belt wearing by goods vehicle users to apply only when travelling less than 50 metres between stops. Regulations including the revised exemption came into force on 1 March 2005. Observed rates of seat belt wearing in light goods vehicles are as follows:

Road Building (North West England)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his road building priorities are in the North West of England. [37342]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has seven major improvement schemes (over £5 million) in the Trunk Road programme in the North West. These schemes are expected to start by April 2008, and are:

M6 Carlisle to Guards Mill (2006–07)

A5117/A550 Deeside Park Junctions Improvement (2006–07)

M62 Junction 6 Improvement (2007–08)

A590 High and Low Newton Bypass (2005–06)

A66 Temple Sowerby Bypass and Improvement at Winderwath (2005–06)

A57/A628 Mottram, Hollingworth and Tintwistle Bypass (2007–08)

A595 Parton to Lillyhall Improvement (2006–07)

The M60 junctions 5–8 widening scheme is under construction, and a scheme is also being developed to provide additional capacity on the M60 between junctions 12 and 18.

Further work is also being undertaken to determine how additional capacity on the M6 between Birmingham and Manchester should be provided—either by widening or by the construction of a new parallel 'expressway'.

A further six potential trunk road schemes are currently being prioritised as part of the regional funding allocation process.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the effect on the number of people wearing seat belts of an increase in the fine to £80; and if he will make a statement. [37520]

Dr. Ladyman: No such assessment has been made.

Observed seat belt wearing rates are shown in the following table shows. The Department continues its publicity campaign to try to improve seat belt wearing in the rear of cars.

Speed Limits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce 20 mph speed limits near schools in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) Greater London and (e) England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [37516]

Dr. Ladyman: Local authorities already have the powers under section 84 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to introduce local speed limits, including 20mph, when the national default limits are not deemed appropriate. The Department encourages their implementation in areas where vulnerable road users are present, including around schools. Local authorities are however best placed to determine where and when 20mph limits or 20mph zones are appropriate.

Tram Programmes

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list departmental meetings held in relation to the (a) Manchester, (b) Sheffield and (c) the Nottingham tram system programmes. [26550]

Derek Twigg: Departmental meetings are held frequently to discuss a range of departmental policies.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues in respect of Mersey Tram Line 1. [26549]

Derek Twigg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I meet our ministerial colleagues to discuss a range of departmental policies regularly.

US-registered Planes

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what dates planes registered in the US by Stevens Express Leasing have landed at domestic UK airfields in each of the last five years. [35999]

Ms Buck: The Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation sets out the international rights and obligations of the airlines of contracting states, including when it is necessary to seek prior permission to operate flights over or into another state. This is implemented by Article 138 of the Air Navigation Order 2005. Permission from the Secretary of State for Transport is only required by foreign aircraft operating civil flights into the UK where they land and take on board or discharge passengers or cargo, and where valuable consideration is given or promised in respect of that carriage. The Department for Transport has no records of aircraft operated by Stevens Express Leasing landing in the UK.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bribery/Corruption

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether breach of the proposed legal obligation at an EU level for public officials to report bribery, corruption and business interests would constitute a criminal offence in the UK. [36320]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 12 December 2005]: We are not aware of the proposal to which the question refers. Requirements of this kind are normally dealt with in the UK in codes of conduct and we do not think the introduction of a criminal offence is necessary or appropriate.

Correspondence

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of correspondence from hon. Members to the Prison Service was answered within 20 working days between (a) January to March, (b) April to June and (c) July to September; and if he will make a statement. [33595]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the percentage of correspondence from hon. Members to the Prison Service answered within 20 working days from (a) January to March (b) April to June and (c) July to September 2005 is shown in the following table.

Percentage of correspondence from hon. Members to the Prison Service answered within 20 working days from (a) January to March (b) April to June and (c) July to September 2005

	Total (Percentage)
January to March	92.1
April to June	98.8
July to September	98.7

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 20 September on behalf of Mohammed Hassan, husband of Israa Yunis Gullid (Home Office Reference G1097755), (Correspondence Reference B22342/5). [36995]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my right hon. Friend on 12 December 2005.

Crime (Shropshire)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisoners released from Shrewsbury prison entered employment, education or training after being released in each year since 2002. [29163]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Employment, Training and Education outcomes for prisoners leaving Shrewsbury prison is given in the following table. The outcomes include those who attended FRESHSTART appointments at Jobcentre Plus, whereby prisoners who do not have a job or training place to go to on release are linked into employment, training and benefits advice and support immediately after release.

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Discharges	725	623	643

Electronic Tagging

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many tagged offenders have removed their tags since the policy was brought in. [19382]

Fiona Mactaggart: Between 1 April 2005, when the new contracts started, and 31 October 2005, a total of one, 664 subjects breached their curfew requirements by maliciously tampering with the tag. The figures include subjects who cut off the tag.

The system is designed to ensure that any attempt to remove a tag within the curfew address automatically registers as a tamper at the electronic monitoring service provider's control centre.

European Anti-crime Measures

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is a Government objective that legislation in criminal matters should be approximated with other EU member states in accordance with European Commission suggestions. [35646]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 8 December 2005]: The Government believes that some limited EU approximation of criminal acts and penalties is necessary. This approximation should be restricted to that which is necessary to combat serious cross-border crime or in support of European Community policies, such as against environmental crime or shipping pollution. The Government does not support widespread approximation or harmonisation of member states legal systems.

Approximation of criminal acts and penalties, where necessary, should be taken forward in a manner which respects the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality. The legal traditions of individual member states should be respected and action at ED level should be taken only where this was justified on the basis of identified needs.

The European Commission recently published a Communication on the scope for community competence to legislate in criminal matters following the European Court of Justice judgment of 13 September 2005 (Case C-176/03 Commission v. Council) annulling the framework decision on the protection of the environment through criminal law. The Government are still considering the legal and political implications of this communication.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's policy is on the European Commission's proposals for a witness protection programme at EU level; and if he will make a statement. [36323]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The UK Government stands ready to consider such proposals on their merits as and when they are made. We support work to encourage cross-border cooperation on witness protection and recently endorsed a Council of Europe Recommendation with that aim. We are also working with French colleagues on the development of a project to encourage cooperation between G8 countries.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers the European Commission has to establish criminal offences in legislation (a) which has direct effect in member states and (b) which member states are obliged to implement. [36324]

Fiona Mactaggart: [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The European Court of Justice's judgement of 13 September this year confirmed that where application of criminal penalties is essential to ensure that Community rules are fully effective, measures relating to the criminal law may be adopted under the treaty establishing the European Community. The court also confirmed, however, that as a general rule criminal law matters do not fall within the Community's competence.

The role of the European Commission is to propose legislation, which may then only be adopted in accordance with the relevant procedural provisions in the treaty. The Commission could present a proposal for a directive including a requirement for member states to establish criminal offences. If this proposal was consistent with the European Court of Justice's judgement of 13 September and if it was adopted by the Council (or the Council and Parliament in the case of co-decision), then member States would be obliged to implement the directive. Directives that are intended to confer rights on individuals can in some circumstances be relied upon in national courts by those individuals against the state where the state has failed to implement the directive by the prescribed implementation date, i.e. may give rise to direct effect. These conditions, however, would not be satisfied by the provisions of a directive which were concerned with the establishment of criminal offences rather than the creation of rights for individuals.

Female Circumcision

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken by his Department in relation to the practice of British parents sending their daughters abroad for female circumcision. [26973]

Fiona Mactaggart: The recent Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003, which strengthened and replaced the Prohibition of Female Circumcision Act 1985 has been widely used to raise awareness of female genital mutilation. The Home Office, the Department of Health, the Department for Education and Skills and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) have together provided information about female genital mutilation to police forces and others in the Criminal Justice System; doctors and midwives throughout the country; local authority social services departments and the education sector; and consular staff. Information about female genital mutilation—including signs that may indicate a child is being prepared for this to take place abroad—is also contained in guidance that the Association of Chief Police Officers issued to its members in March 2005; and in Working Together to Safeguard Children, the main multi-agency guidance on safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children. This guidance is currently being revised and is due to be published in December. Further guidance for consular staff is also being developed by the FCO, in conjunction with the police and social services.

The Government also continue to fund voluntary organisations in the UK that are working to eradicate female genital mutilation.

Home Detention Curfews

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of the curfew period was for those released under the home detention curfew scheme in each year from 1999 to 2000 and 2004–05. [30947]

Fiona Mactaggart: The requested information is in the following table, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system.

Average length of time (weeks) spent by an offender released on curfew, by year[1] England and Wales

2000	6.5
2001	6.6
2002	6.3
2003	8.9
2004	9.8
2005[2]	10.3

[1] Data for 1999 is not centrally available.
[2] Data shown for period up to 28 October 2005

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of offenders on home detention curfew (HDC) failed to complete the HDC period successfully in 2004–05; and if he will list the reasons they failed to do so. [29369]

Fiona Mactaggart: Of the 33,743 offenders released on HDC from 1 January 2004 to 31 October 2005, 16 per cent. were recalled to custody during the curfew period, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system. The reasons why are as follows.

Prisoners who are subject to the Home Detention Curfew scheme can have their licences revoked under the powers available to the Secretary of State provided in sections 38A(1) and 39 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. The reasons for revocation are as follows:

breach of the curfew (section 38A(1)(a) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991);

the prisoner has not breached the curfew, but their whereabouts could no longer be electronically monitored—generally because of a change of circumstances such as they had lost their address (section 38A(1)(b) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991);

it was necessary to protect the public from serious harm (section 38A(1)(c) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991);

the curfewee had committed an offence or breached any other requirement of probation supervision (section 39 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 and for offenders sentenced for offences committed on or after 4 April 2005, section 254 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003). Curfewees who are charged with a new offence may also be recalled on any of the preceding grounds depending upon the circumstances of the case.

Immigration

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to decide the application by Shahid Hussain lodged in May 2004 for variation for leave to remain in the UK, reference LR1581008817. [33716]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate notified Mr Hussain of the decision in his case on 8 December 2005.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to decide the application of Robima Kouser, reference LK1600016626, for variation of leave to remain in the UK, lodged in May 2006. [33719]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate notified Mrs Kouser of the decision in her case on 9 December 2005.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the application of Nabila Bi Hussain (reference no. H110722T) lodged in May for indefinite leave to remain in the UK to be determined. [33727]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate notified Mrs Hussain of the outcome of her application on 8 December 2005.

Murder Sentences (Appeals)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average cost of an appeal by an individual who pleaded guilty to murder and received a life sentence and then appealed against the sentence. [32471]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not available as costs for such particular types of appeal are not separated out.

Offender Rehabilitation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list grants made to organisations in the Hampshire constabulary's area to promote rehabilitation of offenders in each of the last three years. [26197]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 9 November 2005]: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Parole Board

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases the Parole Board has processed in each month to date in 2005; and what the backlog of cases is. [32891]

Fiona Mactaggart: The number of cases processed by the Parole Board each month for the period January 2005 to October 2005 is set out in the following table. The Parole Board does not have a backlog.

Police

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the financial impact on policing in Brent of the Government's decision to pass costs from the security operations following the July bombings onto the Metropolitan Police. [35587]

Hazel Blears: We have made very clear that we would help the Metropolitan Police Authority with additional policing costs arising from the July bombings but that we would also expect the authority to contribute towards the costs. We made an initial payment of £10 million in October and in the light of costs incurred have now increased that to £30 million.

Operational policing decisions are a matter for the chief officer of police.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the (a) chief constable and (b) police authority in Hertfordshire about structural re-organisation. [31511]

Hazel Blears: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to all chief officers and chairs of police authorities in England and Wales on 22 September to set out his views on the development of options for force restructuring and to ask for proposals to be submitted to him by 23 December. Discussions with individual forces and authorities are ongoing at an official level.

Final reports from forces and authorities are expected by 23 December. However, ultimately it will be a matter for the police authorities to determine which options are included in their final submissions.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors he took into account when limiting police forces in the West Midlands to two options for merger; and for what reasons West Mercia constabulary may not pursue other options. [30417]

Hazel Blears: The options submitted to the Home Office at the end of October by all forces and authorities in the West Midlands were assessed according to the design criteria in my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's letter of 22 September. The options were also assessed in accordance with the overall position in the West Midlands region and the need to produce a credible landscape nationally. On this basis I provided the steer that the West Midlands regional force option and the two strategic force option were the most viable options for the region and should be progressed further. Feedback was provided to forces and authorities in the West Midlands region on the 9 November that the west midlands regional option and the two strategic force option (West Midlands police force/Warwickshire police force : Staffordshire police force/West Mercia police force) were the most suitable for progression based on the evidence submitted at that stage.

However, ultimately it is a matter for police authorities to decide which options are included in their final submissions on 23 December.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will postpone the reorganisation of police forces in Wales until the outcome in England has been assessed. [33178]

Hazel Blears: No. As England and Wales share a common criminal justice system and the new policing landscape has to be consistent with that, implementation of any police restructuring in Wales will be undertaken to the same timetable as that for England. We will continue to work closely with our Welsh parliamentary colleagues and our colleagues at the Welsh Assembly Government to ensure the particular needs of Wales are taken fully into account throughout.

Prisoners

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether prisoners on the basic level of the incentives and earned privileges scheme are entitled to a one-hour visit every two weeks; [32887]

(2) how many prisoners do not have access to a one-hour visit every two weeks. [32888]

Fiona Mactaggart: Convicted prisoners on the basic level of the incentives and earned privileges scheme should normally receive two visits, each for a minimum of one hour, every four weeks. Unconvicted prisoners on the scheme have more generous allowances. Statistics on take up and length of visits are not collected.

Reasonable Force

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the police and prosecutors' publication of a leaflet to combat confusion about current legislation on the use of reasonable force in protecting persons and their property. [35257]

Fiona Mactaggart: 300,000 of the leaflets were printed earlier this year, and distributed by the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) and Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO). A further 500,000 have recently been printed and are being distributed through local Criminal Justice Boards and Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships. In addition, the leaflet is available through the CPS and ACPO websites, with links on other websites including the Home Office website. Early informal feedback has been largely encouraging and the number of copies sought has been welcome.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been for driving without due care and attention (a) in England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) the Kettering constituency in each year since 1997. [36134]

Paul Goggins: Available information for England and within the Northamptonshire police force area from 1997 to 2003 (latest available) is given in the following tables.

It is not possible from data collected centrally to identify the constituency of Kettering within the geographical area covered by the Northamptonshire police force.

Data for 2004 will not be available until March 2006.

Victim Support

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to raise public awareness of the work of Victim Support. [35502]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since 1997 the Home Office has nearly trebled its grant in aid to Victim Support from £11.7 million to £30 million annually. Victim Support is an independent charity and it takes decisions about how best to use its resources to raise public awareness of its work.

Additionally the Department funded a project to research more effective ways to recruit volunteers. Recruitment materials developed were shown to be highly effective.

The Department responds to a lot of correspondence from the public in which it highlights the work of Victim Support. The victim and witness walkthrough on the public cjsonline website highlights the work of Victim Support and we have placed a duty on the police, from April 2006, to refer relevant victims to Victim Support unless they request not to be referred.

Victims of Terrorism

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the review of the possible introduction of a scheme to provide compensation for UK victims of terrorism abroad will be completed. [34641]

Fiona Mactaggart: Our consultation paper 'Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime', issued on 7 December, explained that the question of helping British victims of terrorism and other acts of violence abroad raised complex issues which we wanted to consider thoroughly. It went on to say that we would make an announcement in due course.

Women Prisoners

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many women were received into segregation in each prison in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 to date; [33097]

(2) how many women were held in segregation for more than one week in each prison in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 to date. [33099]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data on women received into segregation and on the number of women held in segregation for more than one week in each prison in 2004 and 2005 is shown in the following table.

Women received into segregation in each prison in 2004 and 2005

Work Permits

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2005, Official Report, columns 45–6W, on work permits, if he will break down the number of permits issued in each year by country of origin. [35411]

Mr. McNulty: Figures for individuals working in social care are not identified separately. However work permits issued for the health care industry include social care approvals. The numbers of permits issued in each of the last five years by country of origin are presented in the following table.

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	Total

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many helicopters are currently available to British troops in Afghanistan. [37277]

John Reid: British troops operating in Afghanistan as part of the International Security Assistance Force have a number of air assets available to them, including helicopters which are provided by coalition partners. These helicopters are allocated according to tasking and operational priority. There are no UK Military helicopters currently based in Afghanistan.

Airfield Review

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of his airfield review. [36693]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence airfield review is making good progress. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2055W.

Assessment Phase Work

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether companies undertaking Assessment Phase work are (a) reimbursed for the costs of that work and (b) undertake work at their own risk. [36038]

Mr. Ingram: Companies conducting Assessment Phase work under contract agree the price in competition, by reference to market forces or where competition is not available under the policy on No Acceptable Price No Contract. When negotiating the contract terms and conditions risks are allocated between the company and the Ministry of Defence on the basis of who is best able to manage them. Companies who decide to carry out private venture work at their own risk do so as part of their normal business. The result of this work might later lead to a MOD contract in which case the company normally seeks to recover their costs through the commercial arrangements agreed at the time.

Defence, Science and Technology Laboratory

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes to current staffing levels he expects will occur when the Defence, Science and Technology Laboratory is relocated. [36977]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (Dstl) is currently consolidating its activities onto three core sites as part of the site rationalisation programme. Although, any relocation programme is bound to affect staff it is not expected that there will be a major change in the overall number of staff employed by Dstl. The number of staff employed is determined by the scope and content of its programme for MOD and Government.

Departmental Staff (Relocation)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what relocations involving more than 100 people are planned within his Department and its agencies in the next five years; and between which locations. [37004]

Mr. Touhig: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Government will donate helicopters no longer needed to Uruguay to assist in the fight against drug trafficking. [36744]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no surplus helicopters available for disposal and no formal request from Uruguay has been received.

All requests for gifting of surplus Defence equipment from overseas Governments are considered on their merits.

Hearing Loss

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what evidence he relied when setting the (a) threshold and (b) other rules that apply to compensation for veterans who have sustained a noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss as a result of their military service; and whether he consulted with any (i) veteran or (ii) disability group. [23613]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence's approach to the assessment of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss in the War Pensions Scheme reflects that of the Government as a whole and is based on contemporary scientific evidence and understanding. This has been confirmed in recent years by several reviews carried out by independent audiological experts including an Industrial Injuries Advisory Council review. The Ministry of Defence also routinely scrutinises the published peer reviewed literature to ensure that compensation policy and approaches continue to take account of contemporary evidence.

The threshold for compensation for noise-induced hearing loss was introduced into the War Pensions Scheme in 1993. The Government consulted the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions on this change which formed part of a wider package of changes that included the removal of rank differentials from war disablement pensions and increases in the rate of disablements pensions above the rate of inflation; the most severely disabled other ranks gained most from these increases. The Central Advisory Committee is a statutory body whose role is to consider matters put before it by the Minister. It includes members from the principle ex-service organisations including those representing disabled veterans.

I met Dr. John Low, chief executive of the RNID, on 25 October to discuss his organisation's concerns, including about the threshold for compensation. The RNID submitted a paper to the Department on 5 December. I will arrange to meet Dr. Low again in the new year once the Department has considered the RNID paper.

Iraq

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which organisation is in charge of the investigation into the deaths of the six Royal Military Police who were killed at Al Majarr Al Kabir in Iraq on 24 June 2003; [30736]

(2) when charges will be brought against the killers of the six Royal Military Police who died at Al Majarr Al Kabir in Iraq on 24 June 2003. [30734]

Mr. Ingram: The Central Criminal Court of Iraq will conduct the investigation into the deaths of the six Royal Military Police in Iraq on 24 June 2003. The Central Criminal Court of Iraq follows the 'investigative model' whereby an investigative judge directs and oversees the investigation before deciding whether to refer the case to the trial court. The case papers, which take account of the Royal Military Police investigation into the incident, have been lodged with the court, to enable the investigative stage to begin. It will be for the investigative judge to decide whether to refer the case to the trial court once this stage has concluded.

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which UK organisations, including police forces, have been involved in the investigation into the deaths of six Royal Military Police who were killed at Al Majarr Al Kabir in Iraq on 24 June 2003. [30737]

Mr. Ingram: The incident in which six Royal Military policemen were killed in Al Majarr Al Kabir on 24 June 2003 has been the subject of an investigation by the Royal Military Police Special Investigation Branch.

Her Majesty's coroner will be holding an inquest into the deaths of the six soldiers in 2006.

IT Projects

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many IT projects have been developed for his Department since 2001; and whether he has agreed to make public (a) in full and (b) in part Gateway Reviews for these projects. [30492]

Mr. Ingram: There is no central list of IT projects developed for the Department since 2001 and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Two major IT projects have been subject to the Gateway Review process, however, these are confidential to the Senior Responsible Owner and in line with Office of Government Commerce guidelines are not published as a matter of routine.

Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability Programme

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the target date is for the submission of a Main Gate proposal for the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme. [36036]

Mr. Ingram: The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) project is in its Assessment Phase, the aim of which is to balance the key parameters of performance, cost and time. Proposals for a Main Gate investment decision will be made when we know with confidence the risks involved in building the MARS vessels, when we have a proper understanding of the costs involved and the implication in terms of the wider interface with other projects.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Assessment Phase of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability project is expected to be complete; whether it is considering (a) converting existing commercial ships and (b) building (i) hulls and (ii) complete ships abroad; and what the estimated cost of the assessment phase is. [36037]

Mr. Ingram: The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) project has only recently entered the Assessment Phase, the aim of which is to balance the key parameters of performance, cost and time. It is therefore too early to say what the final designs and specifications for these vessels might be and where the work will be carried out. We will use the assessment phase to look into the potential options, taking into account best value for money and wider industrial factors, before any decisions are made at the main gate investment point.

We expect that we will spend up to £44 million during the MARS Assessment Phase.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are members of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability Integrated Planning Team; and what the Team's budget is. [36039]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 43 members of Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) Integrated Project Team (IPT), although this figure is planned to rise to 54 by the end of this financial year. The MARS IPT has operating costs of some £2 million for this financial year, which includes staff costs and all associated administrative expenditure.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the Government want to retain nuclear weapons. [32349]

John Reid: The Government's policy on nuclear weapons was set out in the 1998 strategic defence review. In the 2003 Defence White Paper (at paragraph 3.11), we set out our position as follows:

"We are committed to working towards a safer world in which there is no requirement for nuclear weapons and continue to play a full role in international efforts to strengthen arms control and prevent the proliferation of chemical, biological and nuclear weapons. However, the continuing risk from the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and the certainty that a number of other countries will retain substantial nuclear arsenals, mean that our minimum nuclear deterrent capability, currently represented by Trident, is likely to remain a necessary element of our security."

The Government are committed to retaining the independent nuclear deterrent.

Nuclear-related Research

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has allocated towards nuclear-related research in each of the last five years. [36602]

John Reid: Expenditure on nuclear-related research funded by the Ministry of Defence over the last five years amounts to the following:

Financial year	Approx expenditure, 2005-06 prices (£ million)
2000-01	87
2001-02	123
2002-03	63
2003-04	62
2004-05	79

Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1263W, on the Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle, how many of the 401 vehicles ordered will replace (a) the Spartan, (b) the Truck Utility Medium (Landrover), (c) the Saxon and (d) the FV432 and FV436. [33576]

Mr. Ingram: Under current plans, we expect the PANTHER Command and Liaison Vehicle to replace the following numbers of in-service vehicles operating in command and liaison roles:

	Number
(a) Spartan	137
(b) Truck Utility Medium (Landrover)	225
(c) Saxon	3
(d) FV432	31
(e) FV436	5

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the definitions are of the terms (a) 'in service date' and (b) 'initial operating capability' as used in parliamentary answers. [36160]

Mr. Ingram: As defined on the MOD's Acquisition Management System website (www.ams.mod.uk), In Service Date (ISD) is declared when the military capability provided by the system is assessed as available for operational use. Initial Operating Capability (IOC) is the state achieved when the military capability is available in its minimum useful deployable form. The specific requirements for ISD and IOC will vary between projects depending on the nature of the role and the equipment in question, and are agreed at the point when the main investment decision is taken (referred to as Main Gate). Different definitions may have been used in projects begun before the introduction of SMART acquisition.

Project Hyperion

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much was allocated for setting up the collocated Army headquarters under Project Hyperion; and whether this budget has been revised; [37002]

(2) what changes to staffing levels will take place when the collocated Army headquarters are operational under Project Hyperion. [37003]

Mr. Ingram: It is too early to be precise about the impact on staffing levels. For planning purposes, we assume that collocation will lead to a reduction of at least 240 civilian and 100 military posts. However, the Army is still determining the possible size and structure of the new HQ organisation and we are unlikely to make an announcement until late 2006. Similarly, project costs and the budget for Project Hyperion continue to be refined and will be confirmed at Main Gate, which is unlikely to occur before November 2006.

Royal Air Force

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the posts based at RAF High Wycombe which are expected to move to other RAF units by 2008 will be relocated; and how many such posts will be relocated. [36926]

Mr. Ingram: Currently, there are 103 posts expected to relocate from RAF High Wycombe. The final location for these posts is yet to be decided.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was allocated for setting up the collocated RAF headquarters; and whether this budget has been revised. [36978]

Mr. Ingram: £23.9 million was allocated from the Defence Modernisation Fund to set up the collocated Royal Air Force Headquarters. This has not been revised.

Submarines

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recommendations by RAND to co-ordinate the Royal Navy's submarine design work with the United States of America. [32681]

Mr. Ingram: As a result of the RAND recommendations put forward in their report on sustaining design and production resources, a statement of intent (SoI) for co-operation and exchange between the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain on submarine concepts, design and construction was signed on 7 October 2005.

The SoI records the intention to work, to mutual advantage, in developing working relationships and agreements that enable the sharing of analysis and data on submarine platform and equipment requirements, concepts and design.

Additionally, the SoI provides for the benefits of interoperability and synergy in submarine construction, equipment production and logistic support to be maximised. Such work will not compromise the retention of submarine design capability in this country.

Ty Gwyn Nursing Home

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the Welsh Assembly Government regarding the closure of the Ty Gwyn nursing home for ex-servicemen suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder. [26152]

Mr. Touhig: MOD officials are in discussion with officials from the Department of Health and the devolved Administrations about the provision of services for former service personnel suffering from mental illness resulting from their service. They have not yet had the opportunity to discuss in detail the question of the closure of Ty Gwyn, which was one of a number of facilities with the capability for treating ex-service personnel suffering from PTSD. However, the question of whether its closure leaves any gaps in the capability for treating ex-service personnel suffering from PTSD is one of the subjects for discussion at a meeting planned for 19 December.

US Military Bases

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what authority UK military police forces have in United States military bases situated in the United Kingdom. [35459]

Mr. Ingram: The UK military police have lawful authority to arrest an individual suspected of a criminal offence if that person is subject to UK military law. The power is set out in the Service Discipline Acts. The United States visiting force is not subject to the Service Discipline Acts.

Under Article VII of the Agreement regarding the Status of Forces of the parties to the North Atlantic Treaty (SOFA), the United States visiting force stationed in the United Kingdom have the right to police the premises which they occupy and may take all appropriate measures to ensure the maintenance of order and security on such premises. Where there are no United States policing and security forces present, or a significant threat exists from demonstrator activity, the United States forces have agreed that the Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) can undertake the policing task on their behalf.

The MDP is a statutory British police force with constabulary powers as defined in the MDP Act 1987, as amended by the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. Although the MDP can exercise these constabulary powers, incidents solely involving United States visiting force personnel and associated civilians will normally be handled by the United States authorities in accordance with SOFA.

US-registered Aircraft

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions since September 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N313P and (b) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, has landed at United Kingdom military airfields with (i) Kabul and (ii) Baghdad as its (A) origin and (B) destination; [35460]

(2) on how many occasions since September 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N313P and (b) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, has landed at United Kingdom military airfields with an airport in (i) Jordan, (ii) Syria, (iii) Romania and (iv) Poland as its (A) origin and (B) destination; [35444]

(3) on how many occasions since September 2001 US-registered aircraft tail number (a) N313P and (b) N44982, formerly N8068V and N379P, has landed at United Kingdom military airfields with an airport in (i) Libya, (ii) Uzbekistan, (iii) Morocco and (iv) Egypt as its (A) origin and (B) destination. [35443]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Cemeteries (Gravesham)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions her Department has had with the parish council in Gravesham about the re-use of cemeteries. [37621]

Ms Harman: We have no record of an approach by a parish council in Gravesham on this matter. In my statement on 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 3WS, I set out our immediate plans for taking forward our plans for burial law reform, including the question of re-using old burial grounds.

Criminal Cases (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will publish the advice her Department has received on the impact on ethnic diversity in the legal professions of the introduction of competitive tendering for criminal cases; and if she will make a statement. [35085]

Bridget Prentice: The Lord Chancellor has asked Lord Carter of Coles to produce a plan to reform to the way publicly funded legal advice and representation are procured by the state.

The Legal Services Commission has commissioned research on ethnic diversity that includes an assessment of the possible impact of competitive tendering on legal aid firms that are owned or controlled by ethnic minorities. The Commission will publish this research once Lord Carter has reported early next year.

We want to see a fair and sustainable legal aid system that provides access to justice for all who need it, gives the taxpayer value for money and is fair for practitioners.

We also want to see a legal profession that is more reflective of the society it serves. On 23 November, I published a report "Increasing Diversity in the Legal Profession" setting out what steps the Government will take to achieve this.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many sentences have been passed under Part 12 Chapter 5 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003; and what guidance has been provided by (a) the Government and (b) the courts on the assessment of dangerousness in section 229 of that Act. [32851]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

Between April 2005 (when the legislation was implemented) and October 2005, 321 prisoners were received into custody under an extended sentence and 220 prisoners were received under a sentence of imprisonment or detention for public protection.

The Government have not published any guidance on the assessment of dangerousness in section 229 of the Act. The Court of Appeal recently considered the dangerous offender provisions in the guideline case of R v. Lang and 12 others (Times November 10). The court set out several principles that courts should consider when deciding if an offender met the criteria of dangerousness as required by the Act.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are taken by the Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36264]

Bridget Prentice: The Department for Constitutional Affairs has a robust framework of policies, internal services and links with external service providers, which are designed to provide practical and timely support for employees with mental health problems. This framework is equally applicable to employees who suffer from other forms of disability or health problems.

This framework includes the managing attendance policy and policies in respect of disability, work/life balance and stress at work.

The DCA has a nation-wide network of human resources advisors, local disability advisors, and welfare officers, all of whom have extensive experience of working with and supporting people with mental health problems. The DCA uses its external occupational health service providers to obtain clinical and employment-related advice tailored to specific individual circumstances. Workplace assessments and risk assessments are available to individuals wherever appropriate.

The DCA makes appropriate use of the access to work and workstep programmes available through the Department of Work and Pensions.

In addition the DCA has a disability network, which is a staff network which actively provides ongoing support for employees with physical and mental health issues.

Effective Trial Management Programme

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the progress of the Effective Trial Management programme; and if she will make a statement. [34323]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

The Effective Trial Management programme has supported all criminal justice areas in considering the Criminal Case Management Framework issued jointly by the Attorney General, Lord Chancellor, Baroness Scotland and the Lord Chief Justice in July 2004. All criminal justice areas have now produced their local case management schemes based on the national framework. 33 areas have implemented their schemes and all areas will have implemented their schemes by January 2006.

The early results are promising and indicate reductions in headline ineffective trial rates. For example: in the Crown Court there have been percentage point reductions of 11.1 in Merseyside, 7.2 in Manchester, 7.0 Bedfordshire, 6.0 in Essex and 5.8 in Nottinghamshire. In the magistrates courts we have seen percentage point reductions of 9.0 in Merseyside, 8.2 in Humberside, 6.3 in Nottinghamshire, 5.8 in Manchester and the West Midlands. (Figures are based on an annual average prior to the implementation of ETMP compared with a rolling monthly average after the implementation of ETMP, gathered by the PSA1 Performance Branch of the DCA).

Evaluations of each area's scheme are underway and a full national evaluation will be produced by July 2006.

Probate Costs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 11 November 2005, Official Report, column 1339W, on probate costs, why the fee structure for grant of probate in Northern Ireland is calculated on a different basis from England and Wales; and what the sliding scale system operating in Northern Ireland is. Bridget Prentice: The fee structure payable in respect of applications for grant of probate has differed historically between Northern Ireland and England and Wales.

In Northern Ireland fees for an application for grant of probate are charged on a sliding scale depending on the assessed value of the estate as follows:

Assessed value	Probate Fee (£)
Does not exceed £10,000	Nil
Exceeds £10,000 but does not exceed £25,000	75.00
Exceeds £25,000 but does not exceed £40,000	145.00
Exceeds £40,000 but does not exceed £70,000	260.00
Exceeds £70,000 but does not exceed £100,000	330.00
Exceeds £100,000 but does not exceed £200,000	410.00

An additional fee of £65.00 is taken for each £100,000 or part thereof where the assessed value exceeds £200,000.

Small Claims Court

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress has been made with research on raising the small claims court limit from £1,000; and if she will make a statement. [36133]

Ms Harman: The Better Regulation Task Force in its report, 'Better Routes to Redress' recommended that research should be carried out into the potential impact of raising the small claims limit for personal injury cases from the current limit of £1000. The Government indicated that it would carry out this research, and would also consider other options for dealing with these claims in a more proportionate and cost effective way.

The Government will be consulting shortly.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Department and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33223]

David Cairns: Some costs were incurred on a logo for the "Friends of Scotland" project which was under the responsibility of the Scotland Office until 2003 when this was taken over by the Scottish Executive. Figures on logo costs for this project are not readily available and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. The Scotland Office has not incurred any other costs on design and production of new logos or employed external public relations or graphic design agencies.

Departmental Tendering Policy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his policy is on including (a) ethical and (b) environmental factors in tenders for services. [33340]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office takes full advantage of contracts negotiated by the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA), depending on the services being purchased. Thus, the Executive or DCA would generally take the lead in such matters.

However, the Scotland Office expects to let all its contracts in accordance with ethical principles, and would consider any case where evidence to the contrary was presented. Environmental factors in contracts let by the office would be considered on a case by case basis relative to the subject matter of the contract, and the requirements of Community law.

Devolution

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what devolution issues the Advocate-General has considered since 15 November. [36695]

David Cairns: Since 15 November, 62 devolution issues have been intimated to the Advocate-General for Scotland.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking in collaboration with other EU member states to honour the EU commitment to provide African, Caribbean and Pacific countries with viable non-reciprocal alternatives to economic partnership agreements. [37309]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government's policy on alternatives to Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs) was made clear in our position of March 2005. We believe that the European Commission should be ready to provide an alternative to an EPA at the request of any African Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) country. Any alternative offered should provide no worse market access to the EU than is currently enjoyed under Cotonou preferences.

The deadline for any ACP country to request an alternative has been extended from 2004 to the end of 2006, at the request of the ACP themselves. To date, no ACP countries have requested an alternative, nor disengaged from the ongoing EPA negotiations.

However, DFID has already supported research to feed an independent assessment into the debate on what steps would be needed to make one of the non-reciprocal alternative options—the generalised system of preferences (GSP) scheme—a viable alternative to EPAs. In addition, a formal and comprehensive review of EPAs will be undertaken by the EU and ACP in 2006 to check that the negotiations and preparations are on track. In the context of this review, the UK will actively encourage the European Commission and other EU member states, to consider all possible alternative options available, particularly if requested by any ACP country.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what financial support the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries will receive from the EU as a result of the reformed sugar regime in the years after 2006–07; and if he will make a statement; [36640]

(2) from which fund the accompanying measures for the 18 African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar protocol countries will be drawn; when the funds will be available; and if he will make a statement; [36639]

(3) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the EU funding for African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar group nations will enable them to develop adequate transitional programmes; and if he will make a statement; [36638]

(4) what EU procedures will be used for disbursing support for African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar group nations; what steps are being taken to avoid delays in the disbursement of funds; and if he will make a statement; [36636]

(5) what criteria will be used by the EU to determine how the transitional support for African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar group countries will be allocated. [36633]

Mr. Thomas: The European Commission will be providing transitional assistance to those African, Caribbean and Pacific countries (ACP) who will lose out as a result of reform, to help them to adjust to the change in price. The Commission have proposed €40 million of funding for transitional assistance in 2006, which is still being debated by the European Parliament and EU member states. While the Commission has indicated that funding for 2007 to 2013 will be more substantial, the exact amount will be decided as part of the debate over the next financial perspective. The UK Government will be aiming to achieve appropriate levels of funding as part of this broader agreement.

In its draft regulation of June 2005, the Commission proposed that the €40 million of funding for 2006 would come from the Commission's external relations budget. While the Commission has not yet made any official announcements about how much funding it will propose for 2007 to 2013, it has proposed that this should be funded out of the new Development Cooperation and Economic Cooperation Instrument (also in the external relations budget).

Assistance will be delivered through country-specific plans, which are to be 'elaborated in the country itself, in dialogue with the Commission'. In order to avoid delays in the disbursement of transitional assistance funding, the Commission is aiming to provide part of its funding to ACP countries in the form of budget support where this is appropriate.

The Commission expects that the 2006 funds will be available before the end of 2006. The exact timing will depend in part on the speed with which the sugar protocol countries complete their action plans. DFID are providing over £250,000 to the six sugar protocol countries in the Caribbean to help them complete these plans in a timely manner.

The Commission stated in their draft regulation that allocation will be based on the needs of each country, related in particular to the impact of the reform on the sugar sector in the country concerned, and to the importance of the sugar sector in the economy. We expect more detailed criteria to be determined in the New Year.

Central Asia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's policy is on support to local non-governmental organisations in Central Asia; and if he will make a statement. [36858]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's policy in Central Asia is set out in our Regional Assistance Plan for Central Asia, South Caucasus and Moldova (2004 to 2007). DFID aims to support civil society in Central Asia, including local non-governmental organisations (NGOs), to improve the accountability and responsiveness of Governments to their citizens. This includes their participation in the drafting, implementation and monitoring of nationally-led poverty reduction policy processes.

In the Kyrgyz Republic, DFID's programme includes work with local NGOs in the areas of public financial management, service delivery and sustainable livelihoods, and rural water and sanitation schemes. In Tajikistan, our support to NGOs is largely through community development and livelihoods programmes, and third party arbitration courts. We are also working with local NGOs through a regional HIV/AIDS programme in Central Asia. This programme has just begun in Kyrgyz Republic, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan and will run to 2008.

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by his Department in each year since 1995; in respect of the percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [37395]

Mr. Thomas: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members and Peers correspondence. The report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–40ws. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

DFID's public inquiry point has received the following correspondence from members of the public over the years in question:

	Letters to PEP	Campaign letters to PEP	TOs copied to PEP	Total
2001	3,917	1,645	—	5,562
2002	1,657	2,282	—	3,939
2003	2,201	630	615	3,446
2004	1,234	2,583	257	4,074
2005[1]	1,608	3,748	278	5,634

[1] January to November.

Information on turnaround times is not held centrally and would incur a disproportionate cost to obtain.

DFID's parliamentary unit endeavours to reply to all parliamentary questions within parliamentary deadlines where possible. The information requested is not held centrally and would also incur a disproportionate cost to obtain.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by his Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37394]

Mr. Thomas: The currently planned building and refurbishment projects are as follows:

	Planned spend
	2005–06	2006–07	Total planned spend
Building projects
New office—Nigeria (Kano)	475,000	1.2 million	2.6 million
New office—Pakistan	1.63 million	340,000	1.97 million
New office—Democratic Republic of Congo	750,000	700,000	1.8 million
New office—Ethiopia	1.7 million	900,000	3.8 million
New office—Mozambique	340,000	2 million	2.8 million
New office—Uganda	70,000	1.1 million	2.7 million
New office—Afghanistan	300,000	100,000	0.4 million
New office—Zimbabwe	100,000	1.3 million	3.3 million
New office—Jerusalem	Nil	900,000	1.7 million
New office—Bangladesh	[1]—	[1]—	5.0 million
Refurbishment projects
Sudan office	300,000	1.4 million	1.9 million
Sierra Leone office	1 million	800,000	2.6 million
Abercrombie House, East Kilbride	740,000	—	740,000

[1] To be confirmed, still at planning stage.

Global Fund

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will increase the UK contributions to the Global Fund to the level of the contribution of the French Government. [36929]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has no further plans at the moment to increase the UK's contribution to the Global Fund. Prior to the Replenishment Conference in September, the Global Fund calculated that on the basis of Gross Domestic Product (GDP), the UK would have to contribute US$320 million for 2006 and 2007—equivalent to 4.5 per cent. of the Global Fund's resource needs for the period[1]. At the conference we increased our pledge to exceed our GDP "fair share"—to US$344 million for the replenishment period.

The Global Fund is just one instrument to channel funds for AIDS, TB and malaria. According to the Joint United Nations Programme on AIDS (UNAIDS) the UK was the second largest donor, of the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) country-members, providing direct bilateral support for HIV and AIDS to recipient countries in 2004. Of US$2.7 billion provided by DAC members in 2004 the UK contributed 20.5 per cent., second only to the US at 49.6 per cent.[2] In comparison the French Government provided 0.9 per cent.

The UK Government is committed to spending at least £1.5 billion over the next three years in AIDS related work, including our pledge to the Global Fund. Most of our spending on AIDS will go direct to developing countries, through Government, non governmental organisations or the private sector.

With regards to malaria and TB, DFID is a board member of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership (RBM). We have contributed £48.5 million to the RBM since 1999. We have pledged £7 million to the Stop TB Partnership through to 2008.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the outcome of the Global Fund Replenishment Conference held in London in September. [37495]

Mr. Thomas: I refer the hon. Member for St. Ives to the response given to my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd) on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 1294W and the written ministerial statement I made to Parliament on 26 October.

Maldives

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance the Government has provided to the Maldives since the tsunami. [37614]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provided emergency support to the Maldives immediately after the tsunami, totalling £1,664,000. This has been given to several UN agencies and also for the provision of transportation material (see following table for details). We have also encouraged the provision of further assistance for longer-term reconstruction through the European Commission.

UK emergency humanitarian assistance to the Maldives has comprised:

Partner	Activity	Amount
United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP)	Emergency waste management	400,000
United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)	Restoration of livelihoods	500,000
	Landing craft and engineering equipment including airlift	550,000
The World Health Organisation (WHO)	Specialist disaster preparedness and epidemiological staff	105,000
	Air transport costs for Scottish water 40 MT water and collapsible water cans	81,000
United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF)	Water and sanitation engineer seconded to UNICEF for three months	28,000
UNICEF	A proportion of £4 million to UNICEF for water and sanitation in Indonesia, India, Maldives and Sri Lanka.	—

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the Government has provided to the people of the Maldives to promote democratic governance; and if he will make a statement. [37615]

Mr. Thomas: The Maldives is the richest country in South Asia and the Department for International Development does not maintain a regular programme there. Our support focuses upon poorer countries where we can have a greater impact upon poverty.

Her Majesty's Government is however, supporting and encouraging democratic and political reform in the Maldives. The British high commissioner in Colombo is accredited to the Maldives and maintains a regular dialogue with the Government there. Most recently, on 12 December, in his capacity as the local EU presidency, he led a delegation of European Union Ambassadors and Heads of Mission to Male to discuss democratic reform with President Gayoom. We will continue to promote and support the process of democratic reform in the Maldives, bilaterally and with EU partners.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC Charter

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make it a requirement of BBC Charter renewal that (a) BBC websites and (b) BBC radio channels made available on-line are available free of charge only to licence payers. [34510]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The Government have no plans to make the renewal of the BBC Charter conditional on the Corporation restricting access to BBC online content to licence fee payers or to United Kingdom residents.

However, the grant received by the BBC World Service from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office already includes an element towards the cost of making BBC online services available outside the UK.

Iraqi Heritage Sites

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will raise the issue of the protection of Iraqi heritage sites with other EU Ministers during her chairmanship of the Education Youth and Culture Council. [34372]

Tessa Jowell: The Education Youth and Cultural Council was held on 14 November. The subject of the protection of Iraqi heritage sites would not have been an appropriate agenda item for this meeting, which is concerned with EU business only.

However, when I have been made aware of potential damage to the heritage of Iraq, I have written to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary requesting that he bring these concerns to the attention of those countries who had troops serving in the area, under the auspices of the multi national force, and emphasising that we should impress upon others the importance of caring properly for Iraq's heritage and the urgent need to protect its sites. As a result, the Foreign Office has raised these concerns with the relevant countries concerned.

The UK takes very seriously the need to respect Iraq's cultural heritage. The Iraq (United Nations Sanctions) Order 2003, introduced in response to United Nations Security Council Resolution 1546, makes it an offence to be in possession of illegally removed Iraqi cultural property, or to knowingly trade in such material.

Public Bodies/Agencies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which she has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35943]

Mr. Lammy: Total Executive NDPB staff numbers by department as at 31 March 2005 are recorded in table 2 of Public Bodies 2005, a copy of which is in the House Libraries, and which is available online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_publi_bodies/publications/pdf/public-bodies/publicbodies2005.pdf.

The number of staff in individual executive agencies as at 1 April 2004, including a regional analysis, is available in Civil Service Statistics 2004 which was published in February 2005, a copy of which is in House Libraries. It is also available online at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2004_report/number_of_civil_servants/index.asp.

However, the NDPB data do not detail the regional breakdowns requested. This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

CABINET OFFICE

Disabled People (Life Chances)

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's strategy unit report improving the life chances of disabled people where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government departments. [37074]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Since publication of the report in January 2005 the Department launched the 10-point plan—Delivering a diverse civil service—on 1 November 2005 that included a target for 3.2 percent., of the senior civil service to be people with disabilities. The plan includes a number of actions that will promote the recruitment and retention and career development of people with disabilities.

The Better Regulation Executive and the e-Government Unit provide guidance about consulting with diverse groups in policy development and service delivery.

The Cabinet Office will be developing plans to meet the new public sector duty to promote disability equality. The department will also work with the new Office for Disability Issues in delivering the strategy unit report recommendations that are assigned to all departments.

EU Presidency Team

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many staff work in the EU Presidency Team within the Cabinet Office; what the (a) civil service grade and (b) job description is of each; and how many are agency or contract staff; [35744]

(2) what the (a) total and (b) staff budget is for the EU Presidency Team within the Cabinet Office; if he will break this down by individual budget line; what the purpose of the team is; and when it was created. [35796]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There are three full-time staff in the EU Presidency Team located within the European Secretariat which is based within the Cabinet Office, one at Band A (formerly known as Grade 7 or Principal), one at B2 (Faststream), and one at C2 (formerly known as Administrative or Clerical Officer). None are agency staff. The pay budget for this team in 2005–06 is approximately £100,000. Other costs for this team were £13,464. The Band A worked on the Presidency part-time from January 2004, and was joined by the B2 in August 2004 and the C2 in January 2005. The objective of the team was to coordinate the planning, preparation and delivery of the UK Presidency of the EU across Whitehall and the devolved Administrations. The team will be wound up in the first few months of 2006.

Hampton Report

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the oral answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, columns 737–38, on the Hampton Report, how many (a) annual inspections of and (b) forms sent to businesses he expects will be undertaken when the recommendations of the Hampton Report are fully implemented. [36621]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government's better regulation agenda, which includes the implementation of both 'Less is More' and Philip Hampton's recommendations, is focused on lighter-touch regulation, concentrating on cases where action is needed. The Government have no specific numerical target for the number of forms or inspections carried out following the implementation of these reports, but reducing the number of unnecessary forms and inspections is a central part of its agenda.

As set out in the better regulation action plan announced in May this year, Departments and regulators have been asked to publish simplification plans, containing information about the number of forms they send to businesses and the measures being taken to reduce their burden. All plans will be published by Pre-Budget Report 2006.

Philip Hampton's report recommended that regulators act proportionately, in accordance with an open and transparent risk assessment process. The principles of proportionality and openness are to be included in the forthcoming Regulatory Reform Bill, and have already been incorporated into the regulatory impact assessment process that Departments have to follow.

The implementation of 'Less is More', which will in due course lead to a target for the reduction of administrative burdens, will also drive this work forward.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the total cost of congestion charges paid for ministerial travel has been since the charge was introduced; and how much of that total is accounted for by travel by the Prime Minister. [36285]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its chief executive Mr. Roy Burke to write to the hon. Member. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Office for Disability Issues

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether a Minister in his Department is planned to be nominated to take responsibility for liaison with the Office for Disability Issues; and if he will make a statement. [37073]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Cabinet Office participated jointly with the Departments of Work and Pensions; Health; Education and Skills; and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in the research and publication of the report "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People". The report initiated the setting up of the Office for Disability Issues (ODI).

The Departments of Work and Pensions; Health; Education and Skills; and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are now the main stakeholders in the implementation of the report's recommendations.

Cabinet Office will be implementing the recommendations where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. Officials will liaise directly with the ODI and report as necessary to Ministers.

Prime Minister's Delivery Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent by the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit in each year since its inception; and what its functions are. [35975]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit (PMDU) was set up at the end of June 2001. Information on the amounts it has spent since it was set up are shown in the table.

	Amount spent (£)
2001–02	955,000
2002–03	3,106,000
2003–04	3,576,000
2004–05	3,673,000

PMDU's role is to help departments ensure delivery of my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister's top public service priorities, in particular, delivery of the Prime Minister's top 2005 and 2008 public service outcomes; the unit is also working to increase capacity to drive delivery in the centre, departments and delivery agencies.

True North Project

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on procurement project True North and what the cost of this project has been. [36292]

Mr. Jim Murphy: True North was the title of a project to procure services from the private sector for a data centre and managed hosting of Cabinet Office information technology applications that are shared across Government and public sector organisations. The contract for this service was awarded to a company called ITNet UK Ltd. On 25 July 2003 and valued at £83 million.

The Cabinet Office terminated the contract on 28 June 2004 for delays and other breaches of the contract by ITNet. An agreement to settle the dispute was reached on 29 July 2005. No payments were made to either side as part of the settlement agreement.

The delivery of operational services was not affected by the cancellation of the True North contract or the dispute.

The Cabinet Office made one single payment of £5 million to ITNet under the True North contract.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Administrative Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34953]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The 2000 Spending Review set the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) an efficiency target of 3 percent. of its budget over for 2002–03 and 2003–04. The savings were identified in areas such as procurement, reviewing staff requirements and internal markets. Corresponding adjustments were then made to Directorate's allocations. Savings amounted to:

	£ million
2001–02	7.0
2002–03	12.2

In the 2002 Spending Review, the FCO committed to save 2.5 percent. on its administration budget year on year. This was mirrored in the FCO's internal resource allocation: Directorates were allocated resources to meet new requirements and challenges but were required to find 2.5 percent. efficiency savings.

This amounted to:

	£ million
2003–04	19.7
2004–05	19.9

The FCO also saved an additional £6.6 million in 2004–05 as part of the efficiency plan agreed in the 2004 Spending Review.

Systematic data on efficiency savings realised (as opposed to planned) for the financial years before 2001–02 is not available and could not be reconstituted except at a disproportionate cost.

Assets (Corruption)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice his Department has given developing countries as to how they can seek assistance from the United Kingdom in investigating, freezing and confiscating the assets of criminal origin which are believed to be located in the United Kingdom. [35403]

Ian Pearson: The United Kingdom is able to provide a full range of legal assistance to investigative, prosecutorial and judicial authorities in other countries and territories for the purposes of criminal investigations and criminal proceedings. The Home Office has placed mutual legal assistance guidelines on the internet which give detailed information about how assistance can be obtained from the United Kingdom. These guidelines also include information regarding restraint and confiscation procedures in the United Kingdom. More information can be found at http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/operational-policing/mutual-legal-assistance/?version=1.

British Antarctic Territory

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visitors to the British Antarctic Territory there were in each of the last eight years, broken down by purpose of visit. [36082]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Visits to the British Antarctic Territory are held under the Antarctic treaty. The UK does not therefore monitor the number or type of visits undertaken to the Territory. All visits by British expeditions, ships or aircraft to any part of Antarctica, must be in accordance with the Antarctic Act 1994.

The International Association of Antarctic Tour Operators (IAATO) has published the following figures on tourist visitors to Antarctica. IAATO estimates that around 80 percent. of these are to the British Antarctic Territory:

Antarctic austral season	Number of visitors[1]
1997–98	9,604
1998–99	10,013
1999–2000	13,826
2000–01	12,248
2001–02	11,588
2002–03	13,571
2003–04	19,486
2004–05	23,175

[1] Estimated actual figures.

In addition, scientists from around 20 countries undertake scientific studies within the British Antarctic Territory. The number of visitors supporting British scientific activities in the British Antarctic Territory is as follows:

Antarctic austral season	Number of visitors
1997–98	385
1998–99	389
1999–2000	385
2000–01	388
2001–02	390
2002–03	365
2003–04	355
2004–05	423

British Embassies (Overnight Visitors)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the people who stayed one or more nights at the British embassy in Washington in 2004–05. [32743]

Ian Pearson: We have compiled a list of official visitors who stayed one or more nights at the British ambassador's residence, Washington, between January 2004 and November 2005. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Burma

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to support the recommendations made in the Havel-Tutu report on Burma. [37335]

Ian Pearson: We fully support US efforts to secure discussion of Burma by the United Nations (UN) Security Council. We believe that such a discussion, including covering the human rights situation, would increase the pressure on the Burmese regime to effect genuine change. It would send a powerful signal to the Burmese leadership that the UN Security Council—the body with primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security—is concerned about the situation in Burma.

Cameroon

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures his Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to (i) encourage the continued development of a multi-party democracy in Cameroon and (ii) promote the conduct of free, fair and transparent elections at local and national level. [36717]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK is working hard with international partners to strengthen democracy in Cameroon.

In the past 18 months, the UK has supported activities to ensure the October 2004 presidential elections were more free and fair than previous elections. The main projects involved funding £180,000 towards the provision of 25,000 transparent ballot boxes with tamper-proof coded seals and £22,000 for the publication of the Cameroonian National Election Observatory's report, to demonstrate that the organisation was able to carry out a critical analysis of the electoral process. In common with other diplomatic missions, the British high commission sent out a team of 12 to observe the elections in five of the ten provinces. We co-ordinated closely with our EU, G8 and Commonwealth partners. We intend to continue such observation in the future.

The Cameroonian Government has recognised the need to reform the electoral law and we remain committed to assisting, principally through the Commonwealth. Our priorities are to see a revised electoral code and the introduction of an Independent Electoral Commission to organise future elections, which will support the development of a multi-party democracy in Cameroon.

Catering/Entertainment Contracts

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37487]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The value of catering contracts let by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) for the current financial year (2005–06) in relation to the provision of catering and canteen facilities at its offices in London and Milton Keynes amounts to £1,625,096. Of this, £1,337,756 relates to the catering contract for the offices in London and £287,340 relates to catering contracted for the offices in Hanslope Park, Milton Keynes. The cost to the FCO, via the subsidy paid to the contractor for the catering facilities at these sites, amounts to £154,848 (£128,592 for London and £26,256 for Milton Keynes).

The FCO delegates budgets for entertainment to individual internal departments and does not therefore hold a centralised record of contracts on entertainment. This information could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost.

China

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has ruled out supporting the lifting of the EU embargo on arms exports to China; and if he will make a statement. [37278]

Ian Pearson: The Government support the decision of the European Council in December 2003 to review the EU Arms Embargo on China. This review is ongoing—it was last discussed by EU Foreign Ministers at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 13 December. The Government do not wish to exclude any options for the review, nor to pre-empt the conclusion of the review. There is no consensus at present in the EU for lifting the embargo. Further consultations in the EU and with other international partners are necessary before any decision is taken. The European Council Conclusions in December 2004 stated that any decision on the arms embargo would not result in an increase of arms exports to China in either quantitative or qualitative terms.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has (a) made and (b) plans to make to the Government of the People's Republic of China about the Law on Population and Birth Planning; and if he will make a statement; [37370]

(2) when he last raised the issue of article 18 of the Law on Population and Birth Planning with the Government of China; what response he received; and if he will make a statement. [37371]

Ian Pearson: The Government have not made representations to the Chinese Government about China's right or need to implement family planning policies. We believe that China's family planning policies should be based on the principle of consent, and not coercion, as espoused by the International Conference on Population and Development. In this context, we are concerned about reports of enforced sterilisation and abortion. The EU, under the UK's presidency, raised the case of Chen Guangcheng, a lawyer who revealed information about forced abortions and sterilisations in Linyi City, Shandong Province, with the Chinese Government in October and November. We will continue to raise our concerns where appropriate.

Colombia

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Colombian Government that criminal investigations into human rights violations in Colombia carried out by (a) paramilitaries, (b) members of the armed and security forces and (c) guerrillas are advanced and those responsible brought to justice under the new Justice and Peace Law. [35247]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Through our embassy in Bogota, and also through the EU, we regularly impress on the Colombian Government the need to investigate thoroughly all human rights abuses and, where there is sufficient evidence, to prosecute those deemed responsible, regardless of their background, in accordance with the relevant Colombian laws. We reinforce this message in contact with visiting Colombian Ministers to London and the Colombian embassy, most recently in the meeting between my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Lord Triesman of Tottenham) and the Colombian Vice-President on 28 November. We have urged the Government to crack down even harder on impunity and instances of collusion between state forces and officials and illegal armed groups. There has been some improvement in this regard.

Moreover, through the Ministerial Council Conclusions of 3 October available at http://ue.eu.int/ueDocs/cms_Data/docs/pressdata/en/gena/86442.pdf, the EU confirmed its willingness to work closely with the Colombian Government, institutions and civil society of Colombia, as well as with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, the G-24, and others who may be involved in monitoring the implementation of the judicial process established under the Justice and Peace Law.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent to which the new Justice and Peace Law in Colombia complies with international law; and if he will make a statement. [35252]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK supports the position set out in the EU Ministerial Council Conclusions of 3 October, available at http://ue.eu.int/ueDocs/cms_Data/docs/pressdata/en/gena/86442.pdf. These conclusions highlight several defects in the Justice and Peace Law and note the concerns expressed by some observers that the law does not take into sufficient account the principles of truth, justice and reparation in accordance with internationally agreed standards. Nevertheless, the Council believes that if the law is effectively and transparently implemented, it will make a positive contribution to the search for peace in Colombia.

The Council confirmed its willingness to work closely with the Government, institutions and civil society of Colombia, as well as with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, the G-24, and others who may be involved in monitoring the implementation of the judicial process established under the law.

The EU and its member states stand ready to assist the Colombian Government and civil society in providing support for communities affected by the internal conflict, victims groups, local reconciliation activities, and the reinsertion and demobilisation of child soldiers, complementing existing programmes developed by UNICEF and others.

Cyprus

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposed Ledra Street, Nicosia crossing point, with particular reference to Turkish Cypriot encroachment at the site. [36077]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The British Government welcomed the decision to open the crossing point at Ledra Street and we are therefore disappointed that difficulties have arisen. In our view, these provide a worrying example of the lack of trust between the parties in Cyprus. The deeper causes of the Ledra Street controversy can only be addressed through a meaningful process of negotiation aimed at a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus problem. In the meantime, we strongly support the conduct of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) over Ledra Street, and its efforts to convert the current controversy into a genuine confidence building measure.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34042]

Ian Pearson: The annual number of officers who have taken early retirement for the years 1997 to 2005 are shown in the following table. Final figures for 2004 and 2005 include officers who took early retirement or severance to help the FCO meet staff savings required under the 2004 Spending Review.

	Number
1997	96
1998	44
1999	52
2000	67
2001	44
2002	33
2003	34
2004	59
2005	[1]170

[1] Approximate figure

EU Directives

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2005, Official Report, column 474W, on EU directives, if he will make a statement on the further progress of the EU Directive on Services. [36061]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We have made significant progress on the Services Directive in technical discussions and in Council. Further delay to the European Parliament vote, now scheduled for January, means it will not be possible to reach formal agreement on the directive during our presidency. However, maximising progress on this important single market measure remains a priority for this Government.

EU Presidency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the UK's presidency of the European Union; and what representations he has received from foreign Governments about it. [37531]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary set out the work programme for the UK presidency in detail in White Paper Cmnd 6611 presented to this House on 30 June. We have made progress in a number of areas, including the historic decision to open accession negotiations with Turkey and Croatia on 3 October. Last month, we achieved significant reform of the EU sugar regime and we continue to work on a range of issues from the fight against terrorism to the future financing of the EU. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I are, of course, in regular contact with our EU counterparts on the whole range of European and international issues relevant to us as EU presidency.

Global Opportunities Fund

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the members of the panel of experts referred to in the Global Opportunities Fund report. [35618]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As part of the Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance programme of the Global Opportunities Fund, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office convened expert panels to advise on policy and projects relating to all the key themes within the programme (except discrimination—for which there is no expert panel) as follows:

Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria are used to assess the effectiveness of projects supported by the Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme. [35617]

Ian Pearson: The effectiveness of projects sponsored by the FCO under the Human Rights, Democracy and Good Governance Programme has been measured using the following indicators of success for the various thematic priorities:

Death Penalty

A net increase of one a year in the number of countries adopting a moratorium or which abolish the death penalty due, at least in part, to UK intervention.

Combating Torture

A measurable increase in the number of countries adopting specific laws criminalising torture;

An increase in the number of countries developing domestic mechanisms for inspecting detention centres;

An increase in signatures and ratification of Convention Against Torture (CAT) and its Optional Protocols.

Freedom of Expression

The successful resolution of cases of specific concern in countries of particular concern;

A measurable reduction in the incidence of hate speech.

Rule of Law

An increase in number of countries with responsibility for the penitentiary transferred to the Ministry of Justice;

An increase in number of countries with functioning, independent, professional judiciaries and legal professions.

Child rights

An increase in the number of ratifications of ILO Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labour.

Discrimination

An increase in the implementation of international minority rights standards at the national level.

Indonesia

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the beheading of Christian teenagers in Indonesia; if he will make representations to the Indonesian authorities to take action to prevent such religiously-motivated killings; and if he will make a statement. [37165]

Ian Pearson: Immediately after the incident, President Yudhoyono condemned what he described as a "sadistic crime", and sent extra police to the area to ensure that violence did not flare up. On 14 November three men were arrested in connection with the crime.

The British ambassador in Jakarta has discussed the issue with senior Indonesian officials and expressed the UK's shock at the incident.

In September this year, President Yudhoyono stressed that the state guaranteed every citizen religious freedom and called on the police and members of the public to act to prevent violence against any faith. We co-sponsored with the Indonesian Government in Bali in July an international conference to promote inter-faith understanding and harmony.

We will continue to co-operate with the Indonesian Government on this important objective.

Iraq

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the investigation into the deaths of the six Royal Military Police who were killed at Al Majarr Al Kabir in Iraq on 24 June 2003. [30735]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

The Central Criminal Court of Iraq will conduct the investigation into the deaths of the six Royal Military Police in Iraq on 24 June 2003. The Central Criminal Court of Iraq follows the 'investigative model' whereby an investigative judge directs and oversees the investigation before deciding whether to refer the case to the trial court. The case papers, which take account of the Royal Military Police investigation into the incident, have been lodged with the court, to enable the investigative stage to begin. It will be for the investigative judge to decide whether to refer the case to the trial court once this stage has concluded.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35632]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Foreign and Commonwealth Office spending on media monitoring in the financial year 2004–05 was £436,591 and to date in the financial year 2005–06 is £326,241. Figures for previous years are not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Meetings

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since his appointment the Minister for Europe has met (a) Turkish Cypriot leader Mehmet Ali Talat and (b) representatives of the UK's Greek Cypriot community. [34449]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Since my appointment, I have not met Turkish Cypriot Leader, Mehmet Ali Talat. I have not, so far, met representatives of the UK's Greek Cypriot community.

Rare Birds (Breeding)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to ensure carnivorous rodents and other invasive species are controlled on (a) Gough Island and (b) other breeding areas for rare birds. [36088]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government are contributing £62,000 this year through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Overseas Territories Environment Programme (OTEP) to a Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) project to control rodents on Gough Island. We are working closely with Tristan da

Cunha, which includes Gough Island, to extend ratification of the agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels to them.

The amount of OTEP funding committed for bird conservation and control of invasive species across the Overseas Territories is presently £1,342,824.

The FCO last year provided £500,000 towards a highly successful project to restore seabird populations on Ascension Island.

Russia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the decision of the Russian Parliament on the regulation of non-governmental organisations and (b) the impact this will have on (i) the ability of international human rights organisations to operate within Russia and (ii) the protection of human rights in that country. [35743]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Bill is described as a measure against extremism, terrorism and crime and would give Russian authorities greater control over non-governmental organisations (NGOs). Our concern is that the draft law as it stands may lead to further restrictions on civil society in Russia and could open the way to excessive official obstruction of the work of NGOs, including international organisations, damaging their ability to work for human rights within Russia.

At this early stage, it is not possible to judge with any certainty what the ultimate effect of the law will be. The draft legislation will have to pass a further two readings in the Duma before it is presented to the Federation Council from where it will then be passed to President Putin to sign into law. At each stage there is the possibility that the legislation will be amended.

We have been proactive in our response to reports about the draft law: on 22 November our ambassador in Moscow wrote to Duma Speaker Boris Gryzlov expressing concerns about the draft law and requesting more information about its implications. On 2 December our ambassador also delivered an EU demarche to Deputy Foreign Minister Grushko outlining the EU's concerns.

We welcome reports that on 5 December, President Putin asked the Government to prepare amendments to the draft law as soon as possible to take into account concerns expressed by the European Union and the Russian Public Chamber.

Taxis

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent by his Department on taxi travel in the 2005–06 financial year; and what proportion of such travel was undertaken in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37488]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not record expenditure on travel by taxi in the United Kingdom separately from travel on other forms of surface transport. In addition, the FCO does not identify its expenditure on travel in the United Kingdom by nation or region.

Ukraine

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had on Ukraine joining the European Union. [35190]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Ukraine's European aspirations with the Ukrainian Foreign Minister, Borys Tarasyuk, when they last met in London on 17 October.

World Trade Organisation (Hong Kong)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will continue to press for trade justice at the World Trade Organisation meeting in December in Hong Kong. [36789]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Yes. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2136W.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils excluded by other schools were at each academy (a) when it was granted that status and (b) at the latest available date. [35328]

Jacqui Smith: This question can be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress her Department has made in monitoring its use of consultants since the National Audit Office and her Department's internal audit report in March 2005. [36859]

Bill Rammell: Since the issue of the joint Internal Audit /National Audit Office report dated March 2005, steps to enhance the future monitoring of use of consultants have been taken. Enhancements include better arrangements to collect information on the number of consultants engaged, what they are doing and that a sound and properly approved business case is in place. In addition, accounting arrangements have been enhanced to ensure costs against both programme and running cost expenditure can be identified.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish the final report and action plan of the National Audit Office and her Department's internal audit report in March 2005 on engagement and use of consultants in her Department. [36860]

Jacqui Smith: Internal audit reports are produced for internal management purposes and are not published.

As part of this audit, which was carried out jointly with the National Audit Office, a good practice guide on the engagement and use of consultants was prepared. This has been distributed to all divisions in the Department. A copy of this guide has been placed in the House Libraries.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the National Audit Office and Department for Education and Skills internal audit report, compiled in March, entitled Engagement and use of consultants in the DfES will be published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [37369]

Jacqui Smith: Internal audit reports are produced for internal management purposes and are not published.

As part of this audit, which was carried out jointly with the National Audit Office, a good practice guide on the engagement and use of consultants was prepared. This has been distributed to all divisions in the Department. A copy of this guide has been placed in the House Library.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter dated 4 November 2005 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to John Byenx. [37151]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to my right hon. Friend's letter on 11 December.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter of 1 November 2005 from the hon. Member for Northampton, South regarding the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children 'Talk 'til it stops' campaign against child abuse. [35426]

Maria Eagle: I responded to the hon. Member's letter on 7 December.

Criminal Offences

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by her Department since May 1997, broken down by Act. [26702]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 11 January 2005, Official Report, column 450W, which gave details of criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by this Department in the 2002–03 and 2003–04 sessions.

Before the 2002–03 session nine new offences were created in legislation sponsored by this Department.

Seven of the offences relate to obstruction of an inspection. These are:

Paragraph 18(4) of Schedule 26 to the School Standards and Framework Act 1998; obstructing an inspection of nursery education;

Section 57(6) of the Learning and Skills Act 2000; obstructing an inspection by the Adult learning Inspectorate;

Section 63(5) of the Learning and Skills Act 2000; obstructing an Ofsted inspection of further education;

Section 79(5) of the Learning and Skills Act 2000; obstructing an ESTYN inspection of further education in Wales;

Section 118(7) of the Learning and Skills Act; obstructing an Ofsted inspection of the Connexions Service;

Section 122 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000; obstructing an Ofsted inspection of the careers service;

Section 164(7) of the Education Act 2002; obstructing an inspection of an independent school.

The other two offences are:

Section 119(5) of the Learning and Skills Act 2000; unauthorised disclosure of social security information provided in connection with the Connexions service;

Section 19(1) of the Special Educational Needs and Disability Act 2001; failure to comply with a requirement relating to disclosure or inspection of documents in connection with the proceedings of the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal or failing to attend the tribunal to give evidence.

In the 2004–5 session two new criminal offences have been created in legislation sponsored by this Department, in sections 109 and 111 of the Education Act 2005.

Both of these offences relate to unauthorised disclosure of information. The Education Act 2005 introduced provisions to allow tax and social security information to be shared for the purpose of deciding on or checking eligibility for education maintenance allowances and free school meals. Provision is then made for unauthorised disclosure of such information to be an offence.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if she will make a statement. [33261]

Maria Eagle: The following table lists the properties and land that the Department for Education and Skills (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency.

Disability Rights

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action the United Kingdom Government are taking to ensure children's rights are fully and appropriately addressed in the final text of the forthcoming convention on human rights of people with disabilities. [35258]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) is committed to improving the life chances of everyone, to help them realise their full potential, including disabled children. My officials are working with the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP), who take the lead for the UK Government, to ensure our aims for disabled children are reflected within the convention.

Disabled People (Services)

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to assess the impact of children's services on families with disabled children; and if she will make a statement. [37345]

Maria Eagle: The Governments document Every Child Matters Change for Children (December 2004) sets national and local priorities for children's services in England based around an outcomes framework containing five outcomes for all children and young people, including disabled children and young people. These outcomes were given legal force in the Children Act 2004. Within this framework, local authorities evaluate their own services and set their priorities for development. The Department monitors services through annual priorities meetings with local authorities, guidance to them on preparing their plans, and field force support including where necessary formal intervention. Inspectorates assess the contribution of services to improving the outcomes for children through annual performance assessments of children's services by Ofsted and the Commission for Social Care Inspection, and multi-inspectorate joint area reviews of children's services. These mechanisms consider the impact of services on disabled children and their families.

Drinking Water

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have used their developed capital to improve drinking water provision in each of the last three years. [37329]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 13 December 2005]: The Department does not collect this information. Devolved formula capital (DFC) gives maintained schools direct funding to help support the capital needs of their buildings. Schools decide how they use the funding, but are advised to invest it in the priorities agreed locally and identified in local asset management plans. This could include making improvements to the provision of drinking water.

In the current financial year, 2005–06, a typical primary school is receiving approximately £25,500 of DFC for its investment priorities, and a typical secondary school is receiving £87,250. By 2007–08, these figures will rise to £34,250 and £113,000 respectively.

Faith Schools

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether the Department has a target for the creation of faith schools; [37018]

(2) what assessment the Department has made of the impact of its policies on the number of faith schools. [37019]

Jacqui Smith: We welcome faith schools to the maintained sector, where parents and the local community want them, but we do not have a target for the creation of faith schools. Nor have we made a formal assessment of the impact of our policies on the number of faith schools. Decisions about whether new faith schools should open are made locally, following consultation, by the School Organisation Committee or schools adjudicator if the Committee are not unanimous. Decisions are made on the merits of the individual proposals, and in the light of local circumstances.

The White Paper "Higher Standards Better Schools For All" aims to make it easier for independent schools, including faith schools, to enter the maintained sector but proposals will still have to follow the local decision making process. We have funded the Association of Muslim Schools UK to assess how many independent Muslim schools wish to join the maintained sector and are able to do so in their existing buildings. The Association is due to report back at the end of March.

Foundation Schools

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many foundation schools were placed in special measures in each year since 1999. [37152]

Jacqui Smith: 14 primary and 24 secondary foundation schools went into special measures during the period 1 September 1999 to 31 August 2005. The breakdown by year is shown in the following table together with the total number of primary and secondary schools going into special measures for comparison purposes. Currently some 3 per cent. of primary schools and 25 per cent. of secondary schools have foundation status.

	Number of foundation schools in special measures		Number of schools in special measures
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1 September 1999 to 31 August 2004	4	7	169	35
1 September 2000 to 31 August 2001[1]	2	1	98	21
1 September 2001 to 31 August 2002	3	0	96	19
1 September 2002 to 31 August 2003	3	1	98	31
1 September 2003 to 31 August 2004	1	8	130	60
1 September 2004 to 31 August 2005	1	7	55	36

[1] One special school was also placed in special measures during 2000–01.

Holocaust Memorial Day

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans her Department has made in preparation for Holocaust Memorial Day 2006. [37378]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills fully supports the aims of Holocaust Memorial Day. From 2001 to 2005, the DfES worked closely with the Home Office to help deliver the day by producing free resources for schools.

Those resources are still available and suitable for Holocaust Memorial Day 2006. They are promoted by the newly established independent Holocaust Memorial Day Trust, with whom the Department has a good relationship. The Department will soon be releasing a letter of support for Holocaust Memorial Day 2006 activities, and is in ongoing discussions as to other ways the Department can be of assistance in 2006 and in future years.

Learning and Skills

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 14 and 15-year-olds spent up to two days per week in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 at (i) a further education college and (ii) a work-based learning provider. [35184]

Bill Rammell: The vast majority of 14 to16-year-old learners who attend FE colleges or work- based learning providers will be part of either the Increased Flexibility programme (IFP) or Young Apprenticeship programme (YA). Since September 2002, the Increased Flexibility programme (IFP) for 14 to16-year-olds has enabled schools, in partnership with FE colleges to offer pupils the opportunity of vocational learning through new GCSEs in vocational subjects and part-time placements in colleges. In 2003/04 we estimate that there were around 90,000 14 to16- year-olds participating in the programme of which around 70 per cent. were being taught in FE colleges for part of the week, and 3 per cent. attended other providers. Figures for 2004–05 and 2005–06 are not available, however, it is anticipated that participation in IFP will be similar to 2003–04.

The Young Apprenticeship (YA) programme also began in September 2004 and enables 14 to 16-year-olds pupils to pursue industry specific vocational programmes outside of school for up to two days a week, in many cases spending time in FE colleges or with training providers. The first YA cohort in 2004 involved around 1,000 pupils. A second cohort began in September 2005 involving a further 2,000 pupils.

The data on IFP and YA has been obtained from baseline data collection exercises with participating schools as part of the national evaluations of these programmes.

Ministerial Visits

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times she has visited (a) Dacorum and (b) Hertfordshire in her official capacity in the last 12 months; and what the purpose was of each visit. [29909]

Maria Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has visited Hertfordshire once in the last 12 months. The visit was to St. Michael's Catholic Secondary School in Watford to celebrate the school being one of the top 100 most-improved schools nationally.

She has not yet visited Dacorum.

Missing Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local authority children's services have agreed joint protocols with their local police authority for management of cases of children reported missing from home or care. [36478]

Maria Eagle: This information is not collected centrally.

Part-time Students

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) financial and (b) other support her Department provides for part-time students in higher education; and if she will make a statement. [37613]

Bill Rammell: This Government continue to build upon the improved support for part-time students introduced in 2004/05. In the current academic year, a statutory fee grant of up to £885 (for a student studying at 75 per cent. of the equivalent full-time course) and a course grant of up to £250 are available for students domiciled in England and Wales. The grants are means-tested in order to target funding most effectively.

From 2006/07 fee grants for English students studying in England will be increased by 27 per cent. (compared to 2005/06). That means that a student studying at 75 per cent. intensity could receive up to £1,125 in fee support. In addition, the course grant of up to £250 will continue to be available. The National Assembly for Wales will be responsible for determining student support arrangements for Welsh-domiciled students from the academic year 2006/07.

Part-time students who need additional financial help with fees or other costs may be provided with discretionary support through their Higher Education Institution (HEI). My Department is allocating £12 million to support part-time students at HEIs in England during 2006/07, an increase from £3 million in 2005/06.

It is for individual institutions to determine the type and amount of pastoral and other support they provide for their students.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the quality of data used to measure progress against the need to improve the basic skill level of adults as required by 2004 Public Service Agreement target number 13 is assessed. [29198]

Phil Hope: The detail about measurement issues relating to the improvement in adult basic skills levels to achieve the 2004 PSA target 13 is described in the technical note, published by HM Treasury.

In addition to the information within the technical note, over 80 percent. of the data used to measure the target comes from the ILR. Measures the Learning and Skills Council undertake to assess the quality of this dataset include:

Good maintenance of the 'Skills for Life' flag on the ILR, which can be used by providers to keep a check on exactly how many 'Skills for Life' learners they currently have.

The learner information suite (LIS) includes the ILR validation reports which improve data quality by showing errors and warnings in ILR data.

LIS reports show 'Skills for Life' numbers, and providers can run these reports to see exactly how many 'Skills for Life' learners they currently have, helping to maintain the quality of data.

Credibility reports applied throughout the data collection process to maintain accurate data.

Quarterly administrative statistics on qualifications will also be collected directly from awarding bodies. This will be used to verify Learning and Skills Council, prison service and Jobcentre Plus data on achievements, assess the coverage of these sources and allow adjustments for under-coverage.

Spending review 2004—DFES PSA targets—technical notes

Target	Technical note
Tackle the adult skills gap
13. Increase the number of adults with the skills required for employability and progression to higher levels of training through: improving the basic skill levels of 2.25 million adults between the launch of 'Skills for Life' in 2001 and 2010, with a milestone of 1.5 million in 2007; and reducing by at least 40 percent. the number of adults in the workforce who lack NVQ 2 or equivalent qualifications by 2010. Working towards this, one million adults in the workforce to achieve level 2 between 2003 and 2006.	The first part of this target covers those aged 16 and above in England, who have left compulsory education excluding those in school sixth forms. The target refers to individuals significantly improving their basic skills. This could be through public or privately supported provision. Publicly supported provision is largely funded by the Learning and Skills Council, but also includes provision through, Jobcentre Plus, the Prison Service and other Government funded routes. The LSC are also proposing to have this target. Improvement refers to the individual passing an appropriate attainment threshold in: Literacy, Numeracy or ESOL at Entry Level 3, Level 1or Level 2 mapped to the National Standards developed by the Qualification and Curriculum Authority. Key Skills test in Application of Number or Communication at Levels 1 or 2 GCSEs in Maths or English. There will be portfolio-based assessment for some, especially those at the lowest skill levels. The target refers to numbers of adults not qualifications. Progress will be monitored through collation of administrative statistics on recruitment, retention and achievement from the Learning and Skills Council and other relevant sources. This data will be received quarterly. Additional sources include quarterly data of learning within the Prison Service and Jobcentre Plus. To improve timeliness, quarterly administrative statistics on qualifications will also be collected directly from Awarding Bodies. This will also be used to verify LSC, Prison Service and Jobcentre Plus achievements, assess the coverage of these sources and allow adjustments for under-coverage. The time lag between qualifications and data collected by the LSC is about six months and for Awarding Body data is about three months. The target period began on 1 April 2001 and ends on 31 July 2010 at the end of the academic year 2009/10. Final data on achievement will be available in Autumn 2010. A milestone of 1.5 million achievements by 2007 will be reported against in Autumn 2007. The second part of the PSA target covers attainment of all economically active adults in England between the ages of 18–64 (males) or 18–59 (females). Economically active adults, who also constitute what is meant by "the workforce", are either employees, self-employed or unemployed

Spending review 2004—DFES PSA targets—technical notes

Target	Technical note
Tackle the adult skills gap
	according to the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definition and thus actively seeking work. Progress towards the target will be measured in terms of the increase in the number of economically active adults with a level 2 or higher qualification between 2001 and 2010. The data used to monitor progress towards achieving the target come from the Autumn quarter of the LFS (available in January of the following year). All achievements recorded through the LFS, whether gained through public or private investment, will count towards the target This reflects the nature of the target as a shared ambition, whose achievement is dependent not just on Government interventions and funds but also on the voluntary actions of employers and individuals choosing to spend time and private resources on achieving qualifications. The baseline for 2010 is the Autumn 2001 LFS figure (when 16.0 million economically active adults had at least a level 2 qualification whilst 7.1 million were below level 2). After allowing for the estimated increase in the size of the workforce between 2001 and 2010, achievement of a 40 percent. reduction in the numbers without a level 2 requires an additional 3.6 million first level 2 or higher qualifications over that period. From spring 2007 the LFS is likely to change from being a seasonal quarterly survey to calendar quarters. The 4th quarter (sampling in October, November and December) will provide the closest comparison to the old Autumn quarter (sampling in September, October and November) used to set the target baseline. Therefore the final target outturn will be assessed using the 4th quarter of the 2010 LFS. The baseline for the 2006 milestone target is autumn 2002 to be assessed against the autumn 2006 quarter of the LFS. The Level 2 threshold is reached by obtaining any of the following: Five or more GCSEs at grades A*-C; an intermediate GNVQ; an NVQ level 2 or any other equivalent Level 2 qualification; one A-level (grade A to E); 2 AS levels (grades A to E) or any other full Level 3, Level 4 or Level 5 qualification. Figures related to this target have been previously published in an annual statistical first release (SFR) since 2001, most recently in "The Level of Highest Qualification Held By Young People and Adults: England 2003", published on 5 February 2004. The SFR is within the National Statistics remit.

Note:
The Labour Force Survey was re-grossed in spring 2004 in line with the 2001 Census results. Estimates published before this date will not be consistent with those published subsequently. However, future publications will present a consistent record of progress since the base year.

Qualifications

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of working age people in (a) Tamworth constituency and (b) England hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above. [37825]

Bill Rammell: From the 2004/05 Annual Local Labour Force Survey, the percentage of working age people in (a) Tamworth constituency and (b) England hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above is (a) 16.2 per cent. (10,000 people), and (b) 26.1 per cent. (7,948,000 people). This compares with 23.0 per cent. (734,000 people) in the West Midlands.

School Closures

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many primary schools have closed in England in each of the last five years; [34226]

(2) how many secondary schools in England have closed in each of the last five years. [34353]

Jacqui Smith: The numbers of local authority maintained primary and secondary schools (including middle schools) that have closed in each of the last five years, are set out in the following table.

	Primary	Secondary
2001	209	27
2002	197	26
2003	202	33
2004	224	42
2005[1]	229	25

[1] This is includes all schools up until 2 December 2005

The table includes all school closures including those schools that have closed as a result of an amalgamation or local reorganisation, those where a new school has opened in their place (eg a school with a religious character, an academy or a fresh start school) and those that have closed and have not been replaced.

School Exclusions

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many exclusions there were of (a) boys and (b) girls from schools in (i) Brent and (ii) London in each of the last five years; and what the (A) age and (B) ethnic origin was of each excluded child. [35578]

Jacqui Smith: Accurate local statistics on the characteristics of excluded pupils are not available for recent years due to known quality issues with the data provided by schools to the Department. An annual checking exercise carried out with local authorities confirms overall numbers of permanent exclusions but this does not extend to gender, age and ethnic origin breakdowns. The Department does hold information about the individual characteristics of the majority of excluded pupils who are permanently excluded but does not publish data in a form that identifies individuals. This practice is consistent with the Data Protection Act, the Human Rights Act 1998 and with other relevant provisions.

The available information for Brent and London is given in the table.

National estimates of pupil characteristics can be found in the Statistical First Release on 'Permanent and Fixed Period Exclusions from Schools and Exclusion Appeals in England 2003/04', http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000582/index.shtml.

School Science

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to encourage more graduates into teaching (a) physics, (b) chemistry and (c) mathematics at (i) GCSE and (ii) A Level. [37020]

Jacqui Smith: In relation to schools, since 2000, we have provided £6,000 bursaries to PGCE trainee teachers in a range of priority subjects. We have also provided them with a £4,000 "Golden Hello". From September 2005 the bursary for mathematics and science trainees rose to £7,000, and from September 2006 it will increase to £9,000 for all priority subject trainees. Mathematics and science teachers will also be provided with an increased "Golden Hello" of £5,000 (£2,500 for other priority subjects).

Routes into teaching are now also much more diverse. Over 15 per cent. of newly qualified teachers are trained through employment based teacher training schemes (EBTTS)—mainly the Graduate Teacher Programme (GTP), the Registered Teacher Programme (RTP), and the Overseas Trained Teacher Programme (OTTP). Each of these schemes carries its own incentives, comprising of a combination of support with the costs of training, salary grants and training grants.

We also started 'Teach First' in 2003 and this involves training top graduates from some of the UK's top universities to achieve Qualified Teacher Status. Trainees are trained to teach priority subjects in some of London's most challenging schools. The scheme began in London and will be extended to Manchester in 2006 and four other cities from 2007/08.

The TDA is also funding enhancement courses to increase the number of people able to start initial teacher training in physics, chemistry and mathematics. These courses fill gaps in the subject knowledge of participants who in all other respects meet the requirements for teaching. Following a successful pilot, these courses will be made available nationally from January 2006, and will enable up to 700 additional people per year to qualify to teach in these subjects. Courses are free to participants, and each participant receives a training bursary of £150 per week.

All secondary teacher training will enable participants to teach to GCSE level, and in many cases to A-Level.

In the post-compulsory sector, there are two main incentive programmes in place for attracting new teachers. Training Bursaries were introduced in 2000 and offer an additional £6,000 in shortage areas but rising to £7,000 for Maths and Science, and this will rise to £9,000 from September 2006. "Golden Hellos" were introduced in 2002 and currently offer an additional £4,000 for shortage areas (e.g. ICT, engineering, construction) but rising to £5,000 for Maths and Science.

Schools (Hounslow)

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to ensure that all schools in the London borough of Hounslow are (a) rebuilt and (b) modified to meet (i) Building Bulletin Standards 93 (for insulation) and (ii) 101 (for ventilation). [36403]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 12 December 2005]: For secondary schools, the Building Schools for the Future Programme in conjunction with the Academies programme aims to renew all secondary schools in England in 10 to 15 waves starting from 2005–06. Investment available for primary schools will be increased by an additional £150 million in 2008–09 and £500 million from 2009–10 onwards. Central Government capital support for investment in schools has increased from under £700 million in 1996–97 to £5.5 billion this year and will rise further to £6.3 billion by 2007–08.

All new buildings and some alterations or refurbishment works are subject to the acoustic performance standards of the Building Regulations. For schools, Building Bulletin 93 is quoted in the regulations as an approved document, whereby compliance with section 1 of the Bulletin would satisfy the acoustic requirements of the regulations.

Compliance with the Bulletin would also satisfy the acoustic requirements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations.

The Building Regulations similarly contain ventilation performance standards. Consultation on the draft Building Bulletin 101 is nearing completion and it is anticipated that this Bulletin will in spring 2006 similarly become an approved document under the Building Regulations, whereby compliance with the Bulletin would satisfy the ventilation requirements of the regulations.

The reply given on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1457W, by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Ms Buck), refers to the White Paper "The Future of Air Transport", in which the Government stated that operators of the larger UK airports are expected to offer acoustic insulation or alternative mitigation measures for noise-sensitive buildings such as schools.

Schools (Internet Access)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in England have access to the internet. [36853]

Jacqui Smith: Over 99 per cent. of schools in England (primary and secondary) are connected to the internet. Actual school numbers are not collected.

As at November 2005, 85 per cent. of schools (99 per cent. of secondary schools and 83 per cent. of primary schools) had access to broadband.

Schools Commissioner

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what power the Schools Commissioner will have to compel local authorities to open new schools under the proposals in the Schools White Paper. [37713]

Jacqui Smith: The Schools Commissioner will have no power to compel local authorities to open new schools under the proposals in the Schools White Paper. The Schools Commissioners role in relation to local authorities will be to support and challenge them in carrying out their new duties to promote choice, diversity and fair access; and to advise the Secretary of State on the exercise of her powers of intervention if they are failing in those duties.

Schools White Paper

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the (a) demand and (b) resource implications for pupil referral units of proposals in the Schools White Paper. [37666]

Jacqui Smith: We propose in the White Paper that full time education should be provided to pupils who have been excluded from the sixth day of their exclusion. We estimate that this additional provision will cost around £16 million a year from September 2007.

It is for local authorities and schools to determine the most appropriate provision for pupils who have been excluded, or have different needs, from a range of available local provision including pupil referral units and other types of alternative educational provision. The impact on demand for places in pupil referral units will therefore vary according to local circumstances.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she will take to ensure that independent schools wishing to apply for trust status under the proposals in the Schools White Paper are (a) of an acceptable educational standard and (b) financially secure; and what criteria she will set in each case. [37668]

Jacqui Smith: Independent schools wishing to join the maintained sector as trust schools will be required to follow similar procedures, and satisfy similar criteria, that apply currently to independent schools joining the maintained sector as voluntary aided schools. As part of their published proposals they will be required to provide prescribed information which includes a recent Ofsted report on the independent school and a statement of the independent school's accounts. Our guidance to local authorities and the schools adjudicator will require them to take into account standards at the school and financial viability when making their decision.

Teachers

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of trained teachers not employed in teaching, broken down by subject specialism. [37159]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the subject specialism of out of service teachers is not available.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whom she has asked to carry out the review of the framework for teaching mathematics; what the terms of reference are; and which experts have been invited to submit evidence; [36020]

(2) how many responses she has received to her Department's consultation on reviewing the framework for teaching mathematics. [36021]

Jacqui Smith: The Primary National Strategy has been asked to renew and update its framework for the teaching of mathematics. The renewed framework will reflect the significant improvements in mathematics teaching we have seen since the framework was introduced in 1999 and will draw on the latest evidence to ensure that it supports schools and settings to raise attainment still further by delivering education tailored to the needs of every child.

The strategy's terms of reference are to ensure that the renewed framework for teaching mathematics provides schools and settings with:

(a) a clearer set of age-related outcomes relating to learning progression in mathematics, which will inform the structure of the curriculum;

(b) better sign-posting to the range of teaching materials and professional development opportunities currently on offer to support teaching practice;

(c) an increased sense of drive and momentum on mathematics, making adjustments to learning objectives involving some progressive scaling up of expectations for each year group.

A period of informal consultation is currently under way. Discussions are being held with consultancy groups drawn from national samples of head teachers, teachers, local authority representatives, subject and professional organisations and higher education institutions. A consultation forum has been set up on the DfES website. To date, well over 100 contributors have taken part in consultancy group discussions and the website consultation forum has had 40 contributions posted on it, many of which are from local authorities feeding back comments from their meetings with local teachers.

The strategy will continue to hold discussions with experts across the mathematics community to elicit their views on proposed content and structure of the revised framework and will post documentation on the website for wider comment. After Easter 2006, a draft revised framework will be published for more formal consultation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alcohol-related Illness/Deaths

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths there were in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Upper Bann in each of the last five years in which alcohol was the primary cause. [36385]

Angela E. Smith: The following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland and Upper Bann parliamentary constituency in each year between 2000 and 2004 where the underlying cause of death indicated a condition directly related to alcohol[1]

Number of alcohol-related deaths registered in Northern Ireland and Upper Bann parliamentary constituency, 2000–04

	Alcohol-related deaths[1]
	Northern Ireland	Upper Bann
2000	193	7
2001	210	11
2002	246	11
2003	211	11
2004	260	17

[1] For the years 2001–04 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10). The codes used to define alcohol-related deaths are:
F10—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol;
142.6—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy;
K70—Alcoholic liver disease;
K73—Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified;
K74—Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver; and
X45—Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol.
For the year 2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10). The codes used to define alcohol-related deaths are:
291—Alcoholic psychoses;
303—Alcohol dependence syndrome;
305.0—Non-dependent abuse of alcohol;
425.5—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy;
571—Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis; and E860—Accidental poisoning by alcohol.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the annual costs resulting from alcohol-related illness in the Province. [36501]

Mr. Woodward: In the Report, Reducing Alcohol Related Harm in Northern Ireland, it was estimated that, in 1997–98, the last year for which costs are available, the social costs to the HPSS amounted to £26.8 million per year. This included the costs of occupied psychiatric and acute beds, general practice costs and responses to alcohol-related harm.

Benefits

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Upper Bann have been in receipt of (a) disability living allowance, (b) income support and (c) jobseeker's allowance in each of the last five years. [36251]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

Month of May	Upper Bann disability living allowance recipients
2001	9,372
2002	9,735
2003	10,063
2004	10,745
2005	11,230

	Upper Bann income support recipients
February 2001[1]	9,505
May 2002	9,762
May 2003	9,968
May 2004	5,522
May 2005	5,631

[1] May 2001 data is unavailable.

	Upper Bann jobseekers allowance recipients
February 2001[1]	1,649
May 2002	1,587
May 2003	1,480
May 2004	1,324
May 2005	1,226

[1] May 2001 data is unavailable.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of fraud have been detected in Northern Ireland in relation to (a) disability living allowance, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) jobseeker's allowance in each of the last five years. [36503]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

	2001–02[1]	2002–03[1]	2003–04	2004–05	2005-YTD[2]
Disability living allowance	3	14	34	48	40
Incapacity benefit	76	80	110	133	117
Jobseekers allowance	264	279	520	470	349

[1] The figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03 are incomplete as a number of cases have been deleted from the database in order to comply with the requirements Data Protection Act. It is not possible to quantify these cases.
[2] Ending 30 November 2005

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted in relation to benefit fraud in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [36504]

Mr. Hanson: The total number of people that has been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted in relation to benefit fraud in Northern Ireland from year 2001–02 to date are as follows:

	Prosecuted	Convicted
2001–02	471	467
2002–03	335	322
2003–04	243	238
2004–05	236	234
2005-YTD (Ending 30 November)	138	132

Bortezomib

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients received bortezomib within each of the health board areas in the Province in the last year for which figures are available. [36495]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what control programme operates in Northern Ireland in relation to bovine tuberculosis. [36628]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD), has in place a bovine tuberculosis (TB) control programme, which aims to bring about a substantial reduction in TB disease levels in Northern Ireland. The incidence of TB has been decreasing in Northern Ireland since early to mid-2003. This trend has continued during the first ten months of 2005.

The control measures are based on a programme of testing, the slaughter of infected animals, the restriction of movements of animals to and from infected herds and surrounding herds, and the tracing of contact animals.

Following the TB policy review undertaken in 2002, DARD has introduced a number of new measures to strengthen the control of TB in Northern Ireland. The most important of these measures are tighter restrictions on overdue tests and changes to the valuation system, including the establishment of an independent appeal panel to resolve valuation disputes.

Work is also underway on the feasibility of further measures that can be introduced to control TB. This includes a pilot on the use of the gamma interferon blood test, in combination with skin testing, to assist in the detection of TB in cattle in certain circumstances, and a review of the existing arrangements for TB testing arrangements.

In relation to badgers and TB, a Badger Stakeholder Group was established in May 2004 to review all the relevant information available on badgers and to consider the potential need for a badger management strategy to help reduce TB levels in Northern Ireland. At present, work is being finalised on cost/benefit information relevant to Northern Ireland to assist the Group, and the results of that work will be presented to the Group at a further meeting. The Group is expected to report in early 2006. No decision will be taken on badgers in Northern Ireland until the work of the Badger Stakeholder Group has been completed.

Child Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will (a) initiate an inquiry into clerical child sexual abuse in every school in the maintained sector in Northern Ireland and (b) initiate a joint inquiry with authorities in the Republic of Ireland into clerical child sexual abuse in every Roman Catholic diocese that straddles the border; and if he will make a statement. [36565]

Mr. Woodward: Officials from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) have held separate meetings with the PSNI, the Department of Health and Children in the Republic of Ireland, the National Children's Office in the Republic of Ireland and senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church to discuss implications of the Ferns Report and other disclosures relating to allegations of clerical abuse against children. PSNI has also met separately with senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church. A further meeting involving DHSSPS, PSNI and senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church is scheduled before Christmas following which decisions will be taken by DHSSPS and the PSNI on the appropriate course of action to be followed.

Children Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to question 34657, what work his Department is undertaking to exercise the power under section 12 of the Children Act 2004. [37434]

Mr. Woodward: The Children Act 2004 does not apply to Northern Ireland. However, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety intend to consult on a range of childcare issues early in 2006, which may include the sharing of information.

Civil Service

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the length of time it takes a Northern Ireland civil servant in each grade to progress to the maximum point of the pay scale. [36723]

Angela E. Smith: Depending on the payscale in question, it takes a civil servant in the Northern Ireland civil service between seven and 12 years to progress from the minimum to the maximum point of the scale.

It is the NICS' longer-term strategy to reduce the length of time it takes to progress to the maximum of a pay scale.

Commissioner for Victims

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he sought advice from the Commissioner for Public Appointments before appointing the Commissioner for Victims; and if he will make a statement. [36982]

Angela E. Smith: The Commissioner for Public Appointments was not consulted on the appointment of the Interim Commissioner for Victims and Survivors. The Interim Commissioner for Victims and Survivors for Northern Ireland was appointed on a non-statutory basis to take forward some essential preparatory work in advance of the post being established under law. That work included, for example, reviewing the efficiency and effectiveness of current funding arrangements and considering the practical issues of establishing a victims and survivors forum. The Interim Commissioner has been asked to produce a report for Ministers by the end of 2006.

I can confirm, however, that the Government will be bringing forward legislation to establish the post of Commissioner for Victims and Survivors. That appointment will be subject to the full public appointments process.

Community Care Grants

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Upper Bann have submitted claims for community care grants in each of the last five years; and how many were awarded. [36252]

Mr. Hanson: The information is not available in the form requested.

Cross-border Bodies

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which cross-border bodies have put the minutes of their board meetings on their websites; on what date each did so; and what steps are being taken to require those cross-border bodies which did not so publish their minutes to do so. [34770]

Mr. Hain: The content of the websites of cross-border bodies is a matter for each body. The Loughs Agency, an agency of the Foyle, Carlingford and Irish Lights Commission currently publishes minutes of its board meetings on its website (www.loughs-agency.org).

The dates of the relevant Loughs Agency board meetings and the dates they were published are detailed in the following table:

Date of board meeting	Date published on website
23rd meeting—19 May 2004	26 May 2004
24th meeting—15 September 2004	21 September 2004
25th meeting—17 November 2004	22 November 2004
26th meeting—15 December 2004	20 December 2004
27th meeting—23 February 2005	28 February 2005
28th meeting—20 April 2005	25 April 2005
29th meeting—24 June 2005	28 June 2005

The Loughs Agency has also advised that minutes relating to meetings prior to the 19 May 2004 have been removed from the website for technical reasons. It is the agency's plan to reinstate them when their new website comes online early 2006. The minutes from board meetings since 24 June will be put on the website as soon as possible.

Dentistry

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dental nurses are employed in the Province specifically to treat (a) children and (b) adults with complex needs. [36502]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Property

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent by his Department's Ministers on (a) new furnishings, (b) art and (c) new vehicles in each Northern Ireland department headquarters in each year since the suspension of the Northern Ireland Assembly. [36511]

Mr. Woodward: The information is as follows:

(a) And (b) are Nil for DHSSPS.

(c) In 2004 the Department purchased four emergency response vehicles for HPSS preparedness. Two Ford Ranger super cab 4x4s and two Iveco Eurocargo box vans at a total cost of £83,252.

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will address the financial situation of the Eastern Health and Social Services Board arising from the regional capitation formula to enable reduction of waiting lists for elective treatment. [36780]

Mr. Woodward: The Eastern Health and Social Services Board share of resources through the regional capitation formula is reducing in line with its share of the Northern Ireland population. A detailed research programme is currently being taken forward to further consider the capitation formula. This work is still progressing and is expected to inform future allocation decisions.

In relation to waiting lists, a comprehensive programme of elective care reform is being progressed across Northern Ireland. By March 2006, no patient should be waiting longer than 12 months for inpatient or day case treatment, with shorter waiting times for major joints (nine months), cataracts (six months) and cardiac surgery (six months).

ECT Machines

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has received reports that staff at one of the Province's psychiatric hospitals were unable to provide the serial numbers of their ECT machines, and did not have calibration cards or means to assess compliance with manufacturers' pre-calibration settings for the machine. [36497]

Mr. Woodward: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has received communication containing allegations about the use of ECT machines. These refer to experiences in the early 1990s. Guidance on good practice "Medical Device and Equipment Management for Hospital and Community-based Organisation" was issued on July 1999. This covered the issue of keeping a record of serial numbers and employing a routine maintenance policy to keep equipment working reliably and safely.

Emergency Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to ensure emergency services can respond promptly to terrorist or serious incidents in the south western part of Northern Ireland after the withdrawal of acute medical services from Tyrone County Hospital in Omagh; and if he will make a statement. [35848]

Mr. Woodward: All of the Health and Personal Social Services, including the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) have a generic Major Incident Plan which is designed to cover large scale incidents and terrorist events happening anywhere in Northern Ireland.

In the event of terrorist or serious incident occurring in the south western part of Northern Ireland, the Western Health and Social Services Board and the NIAS would each instigate their respective major incident plans. These plans anticipate the use of multiple hospitals for dealing with major emergencies. The NIAS plan allows for the Ambulance Commander to designate receiving hospitals, part of this is to ensure that the workload is evenly dispersed to the appropriate hospitals in relation to patients clinical requirements. The plan also contains the deployment of NIAS Emergency Equipment Vehicles (these are placed at strategic locations in Northern Ireland) which contain additional equipment for dealing with mass casualties.

The Southern and Western Health and Social Services Boards are working with the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service to ensure that ambulance services in the south western part of Northern Ireland are responsive to the needs of the population. The current planning for Sperrin Lakeland includes the creation of appropriate networks of Ambulance, A & E service, Critical care and other acute services across the Western Health and Social Services Board area and beyond to deal with casualties resulting from serious incidents.

In addition to Major Incident Plans, there are special provisions for Chemical, Biological, Radiological or Nuclear (CBRN) incidents. The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service is being equipped and trained to respond to such incidents as part of its New Dimensions role. The NIAS also have special provisions for dealing with CBRN incidents throughout Northern Ireland.

Engagements

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many councils in Northern Ireland he has met since his appointment. [29885]

Mr. Hain: Between my appointment as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in May and 30 November 2005 I met with Lisburn city council, Ballymena borough council and North Down borough council.

My ministerial colleagues have also met during this period with Carrickfergus borough council, Down district council, Ards borough council, Omagh district council and Belfast city council.

EU Initiatives

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of whether the four main European Union initiatives associated with Northern Ireland are going to meet their N+2 targets for 2005. [35307]

Angela E. Smith: Both the INTERREG IIIA Ireland/Northern Ireland cross border programme and the LEADER+programme have already incurred sufficient expenditure to meet their 2005 N+2 targets. Forecast expenditure for the EQUAL and URBAN II programmes indicate that these too should be able to meet their 2005 N+2 targets, but with very narrow margins.

General Practitioners

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many general practitioners in Northern Ireland are aged over 65 years. [36381]

Mr. Woodward: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 225W.

Housing Executive Homes

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new Housing Executive homes were built in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Upper Bann in each of the last 10 years. [36516]

Mr. Hanson: Housing associations assumed responsibility for the delivery of social housing from the Housing Executive in 1998. This answer therefore includes both housing association and Housing Executive completions.

The figures include new build and houses purchased from the open market either in good condition or for rehabilitation, prior to letting. All are additions to social housing stock.

The number of completions in Northern Ireland is as follows:

	Number
1995–96	2,805
1996–97	2,037
1997–98	2,117
1998–99	1,739
1999–2000	1,557
2000–01	1,342
2001–02	1,763
2002–03	1,295
2003–04	854
2004–05	1,073

The Housing Executive does not maintain its records by constituency and a full response by constituency is therefore not possible. However, a composite response can be given in respect of the Banbridge and Craigavon council areas, which straddle the Upper Bann constituency, but only for the last seven years. Further information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The number of completions in respect of the two council areas is as follows:

	Banbridge	Craigavon
1998–99	37	71
1999–2000	0	53
2000–01	10	58
2001–02	32	13
2002–03	1	0
2003–04	0	18
2004–05	0	7

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many Housing Executive homes have been condemned as unsafe in each of the last 10 years; [36517]

(2) how many Housing Executive homes in Upper Bann have been condemned as unsafe in each of the last 10 years. [36527]

Mr. Hanson: The information is not readily available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Housing Executive homes in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Upper Bann are vacant. [36528]

Mr. Hanson: There are a total of 4,288 void Housing Executive properties in Northern Ireland and 338 in the Upper Ban constituency.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Housing Executive dwellings are scheduled to be built in each council area in Northern Ireland over the next 10 years. [36541]

Mr. Hanson: Housing Associations assumed responsibility for the delivery of social housing from the Housing Executive in 1998. This answer therefore refers to Housing Association planned starts. The social housing development programme operates on a five-year time frame and is rolled forward each year to take account of changing needs and priorities. A 10-year projection is therefore not available.

The current target is to provide 1,500 new social houses per annum over the next five years. The following table shows the gross programme proposed in each year.

Planned social housing starts

District council	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08	2008–09	2009–10

Infection Control

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the level of use of hand gels by (a) members of hospital staff and (b) visitors to hospitals in Northern Ireland for the purposes of infection control. [36382]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has not made any assessment on the use of hand gels by members of hospital staff or visitors to hospitals for the purpose of infection control.

Interpreting Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the response of 13 October 2005, Official Report, column 598W, on interpreting services, what the plans are for the provision and monitoring of interpreting services within the local health service. [36355]

Mr. Woodward: The Department plans to publish a consultation document during the first quarter of 2006, to invite views on possible arrangements for the future of interpreting services for HPSS service users and those who deliver the services. In the interim the Department has written to the Eastern Health and Social Services Board offering continuation funding for the existing Regional Interpreting Service.

Irish Language Policy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of implementing an Irish language policy has been to each Government Department in the Province since the policy was introduced. [36353]

Mr. Hanson: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. MacEntee

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1630W, if he has provided Mr. MacEntee with all the information he has requested. [32256]

Mr. Hain: Mr. MacEntee made a general request for information held by the British Government which is relevant to his terms of reference. The British Government have given Mr. MacEntee all the information that they have identified as being relevant to his terms of reference. We have also provided him with further additional information which he has requested and are currently engaged in correspondence with him with a view to providing further assistance to his Commission of Investigation.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1630W, on the Barron Inquiry, whether the further information provided to Mr. MacEntee included information on (a) a white van with a UK registration plate and (b) the location of British Services personnel at the time of the bombings. [33929]

Mr. Hain: The British Government have given Mr. MacEntee all the information that they have identified as being relevant to his terms of reference. His terms of reference include:

"Why the Gardaí did not follow-up on the following leads:

i. information that a white van, with an English registration plate, was parked outside the Department of Posts and Telegraphs in Portland Row and was later seen parked in the deep sea area of the B & I ferry port in Dublin, and the subsequent contact made with a British Army officer on a ferry boat leaving that port;

ii. information relating to a man who stayed in the Four Courts Hotel between 15 and 17 May, 1974 and his contacts with the UVF;

iii. information concerning a British Army corporal allegedly sighted in Dublin at the time of the bombings."

Any information relating to these points which was uncovered by the Government's trawl of their files would have been passed to Mr. MacEntee.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1630W, on the Barron inquiry, to what the further information provided to Mr. MacEntee relates. [32329]

Mr. Hain: The Commission of Investigation into the Dublin and Monaghan Bombings of 1974 under Patrick MacEntee is required, in general, to be carried out in private. The material which the British Government provided to Mr. MacEntee was given to him in confidence.

Myeloma

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his most recent estimate is of the number of myeloma sufferers in the Province. [36496]

Mr. Woodward: Estimates of prevalence are not routinely produced by the NICR, due to the uncertainty surrounding these estimates. However the results of a recent population-based survey (Morris et al, 2004), published in the British Journal of Haematology, indicate that approximately 75 cases of myeloma are diagnosed in Northern Ireland each year.

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up to date currently available.

Orange Halls (Attacks)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on Orange halls have been reported to the police in Northern Ireland in each of the last 30 years for which there are records. [36557]

Mr. Woodward: I have been advised by the PSNI that records date back to 1990 and that statistics are collated from Orange halls and Apprentice Boys halls together. The following table from PSNI records details the number of attacks on Orange halls/Apprentice Boys halls over the last 15 years to 8 December 2005.

Number of attacks on Orange halls/Apprentice Boys halls

Note:
Includes incidents such as stones thrown, petrol bombs thrown, shots fired, malicious fires, etc.

Overseas Nurses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nurses from overseas have been employed in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36568]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Number of nurses from overseas employed within the NI HPSS as at 30 September over the last 10 years

	Headcount	Whole-time equivalent
1996	2	1.49
1997	2	1.49
1998	1	1.00

Police

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers have taken early retirement in each district command unit in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [31986]

Mr. Woodward: District command units were only formed in 2001. During the period 1 April 2001 until 1 November 2005 1,632 officers have taken early retirement from district command units within the police service.

A breakdown of the figures is set out in the following table:

District command unit	Early retirement through voluntary severance	Medical retirement
Antrim DCU	33	14
Ards DCU	30	22
Armagh DCU	23	23
Banbridge DCU	28	12
Belfast East DCU	68	41
Belfast North DCU	62	66
Belfast South DCU	86	35
Belfast West DCU	38	70
Ballymena DCU	19	13

District command unit	Early retirement through voluntary severance	Medical retirement
Ballymoney DCU	16	3
Carrickfergus DCU	20	15
Coleraine DCU	38	21
Cookstown DCU	16	20
Craigavon DCU	45	28
Castlereagh DCU	44	23
Dungannon and South Tyrone DCU	15	35
Downpatrick DCU	42	26
Fermanagh DCU	39	37
Foyle DCU	16	23
Larne DCU	21	14

Newry and Mourne DCU	30	31
North Down DCU	45	35
Omagh DCU	19	26
Strabane DCU	10	9
Grand total	910	722

In respect of the period 1 April 1995—31 March 2001 1,510 officers retired from the service early on medical grounds or voluntary severance.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers have been (a) prosecuted and (b) disciplined as a result of investigation by the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. [36559]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Ombudsman advises that the Director of Public Prosecutions has directed charges in 30 cases of police officers as a result of investigation by the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. The chief constable advises that 139 police officers have been disciplined as a result of investigation by the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Police Service of Northern Ireland officers are on secondment to other police services. [36338]

Mr. Woodward: There are currently 17 members of the Police Service of Northern Ireland on secondment to other police services.

Poverty Statistics

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 235W, on poverty statistics, to what he ascribes the increase in pensioner poverty in Northern Ireland; what steps he has taken to address increases in pensioner poverty in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [36563]

Mr. Hanson: The change in the number of pensioners, recorded by the Family Resources Survey as in poverty, should be treated with some caution, because some variation is to be expected from one year to the next in the results of sample surveys. Results from a longer period of time would be required to confirm the trend. It would not be prudent to speculate about possible explanations.

Since 1997 we have taken many steps to tackle pensioner poverty, including the introduction of pension credit, winter fuel payments and free television licences. Also, since 2000 the basic state pension has risen substantially more than inflation. As a result of these measures during 2005–06 pensioner households will be on average £29 a week better off while the poorest third of pensioner households will be on average £39 a week better off compared with 1997.

Pension credit has been key to this increase in income, currently guaranteeing a minimum income of £109.45 a week for single pensioners and £167.05 for couples. The Government are committed to increasing the guarantee credit element of pension credit by earnings next year and in the next spending round 2006 to 2008.

Skin Cancer

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of skin cancer were diagnosed in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [36334]

Mr. Woodward: The following tables detail the number of incidences of Malignant Melanoma of the skin (ICD-10 C43) and Non-melanoma skin cancer (ICD-10 C44) in Northern Ireland between 1994 and 2003.

Malignant Melanoma of the skin (ICD-10 C43)

Year of diagnosis	Incident cases
1994	178
1995	169
1996	175
1997	159
1998	177
1999	179
2000	187
2001	215
2002	245
2003	208

Non-Melanoma skin cancer (ICD-10 C44)

Year of diagnosis	Incident cases
1994	2,093
1995	2,054
1996	2,234
1997	2,196
1998	2,174
1999	2,261
2000	2,213
2001	2,157
2002	2,377
2003	2,414

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up to date currently available.

Smoking

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to question 34727, on smoking in enclosed public places, if he will set out the scientific evidence he considered in reaching his decision. [37223]

Mr. Woodward: The World Health Organisation's International Agency for Research on Cancer has classified second hand smoke as a Group 1 human carcinogen. Other Group 1 carcinogens include asbestos, arsenic, benzene and radon gas.

The Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) in the US and the American Conference of Government Industrial Hygienists (ACGIH) have concluded that even proposed new technologies, such as displacement ventilation systems, which may reduce second hand smoke exposure levels by 90 percent., still leave exposure levels which are 1,500 to 2,500 times the acceptable risk level for hazardous air pollutants. The conclusion of the OSHA/ACGIH ventilation panel is that dilution ventilation is not a viable control option for Environmental Tobacco Smoke.

The US Surgeon General, the US Environmental Protection Agency, the World Health Organisation, the International Agency for Research on Cancer, the American Medical Association and the American Lung Association have all concluded that there is no safe level of exposure to second hand smoke.

The Government's Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health (SCOTH) has concluded that exposure to second hand smoke is a cause of lung cancer and, in those with long-term exposure, the increased risk is estimated to be in the order of 24 percent. In 2004, SCOTH indicated that the weight of evidence published on the causal effect of exposure to second hand smoke on the risk of ischaemic heart disease is now stronger than at the time of SCOTH'S 1998 report and that the increased risk is estimated to be in the order of 25 percent. SCOTH also concluded that the evidence published since 1998 continues to point to a strong link between exposure to second hand smoke and adverse effects in children.

Supermarkets (Product Source)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to UK supermarkets to encourage them to source more of their products from Northern Ireland producers. [36555]

Angela E. Smith: The issue of local sourcing has been a high priority since the UK supermarkets entered the Northern Ireland retail market. The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development and Invest Northern Ireland continue to work closely with the retail multiples to encourage them to increase trade with Northern Ireland suppliers. Also, as part of the implementation of the "Fit For Market" report, supermarket representatives are currently participating in the development of a domestic marketing campaign for local produce. I consider that this work is vital to maximise the uptake of local produce and bring long-term benefit to the Northern Ireland agri-food industry.

Temporary Accommodation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland are living in temporary accommodation, broken down by (a) constituency and (b) council area. [36550]

Mr. Hanson: The information is not available in the form requested. The Housing Executive has information only in respect of those accepted as homeless whom it places in temporary accommodation. The following table sets out that information by district council level.

Numbers in temporary accommodation by district council area at 7 December 2005

Council area	Number

Tourist Attractions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to develop the Black Pigs Dyke as a tourist attraction. [36543]

Angela E. Smith: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) currently has no plans to develop the Black Pigs Dyke as a tourist attraction.

The NITB recognises that there are many visitor attractions across Northern Ireland that add to the overall visitor experience, however, the Black Pigs Dyke has not been prioritised within NITB's SFA for development from 2004–07.

Local authorities also have a level of responsibility for development of tourism attractions within their respective areas. To gain recognition as a tourism attraction local authorities take the lead in highlighting key tourism strengths within their area.

Travel Schemes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the all-island free travel scheme for Ireland to be operational. [36745]

Mr. Woodward: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 694W.

Travellers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with authorities in Scotland regarding improvements for travellers from Northern Ireland using the roads infrastructure to and from the ports of Stranraer and Cairnryan. [36487]

Mr. Woodward: There have been no such discussions. However, in late 2004 there was correspondence between John Spellar MP, the then Minister for Regional Development and Nicol Stephen MSP, the then Minister for Transport in the Scottish Executive, welcoming plans for substantial improvements on both the A75 and A77 routes scheduled for completion between 2006 and 2008.

Water Supplies/Usage

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the number of homes in Northern Ireland that are not connected to the water supply, broken down by constituency; and what plans he has to make this facility available to each of those homes. [36549]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs Katharine Bryan, dated 13 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about the number of homes in Northern Ireland that are not connected to the water supply, broken down by constituency, and what plans there are to make the facility available to each of those homes (36549). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

It is estimated that less than 1% of households in Northern Ireland are not connected to the public water supply. Water Service does not, at present, have a database of all household customers connect to mains water and cannot therefore supply the information on a constituency basis. However, a comprehensive customer database is currently being developed in preparation for the proposed introduction of domestic charging from April 2007 and this will identify any households not connected to the public water supply.

Water service currently has a duty to provide water and sewerage services but is not required to do anything which is not practicable at a reasonable cost. For this reason, Water Service has always operated a policy of reasonable cost. The allowances for watermain schemes are £5,000 for properties, which were occupied and on which rates were being paid on or before 31 May 2000, and £2,900 for other properties. The higher reasonable cost allowance for existing properties not connected to the public watermain reflects the importance attached to reducing the number of such properties. The policy provides Water Service with an objective mechanism to consider applications for new water and sewerage services in a consistent and equitable manner. The policy seeks to strike a balance between the interests of householders and taxpayers, within the context of resources made available for water and sewerage services.

Where the cost of providing a first-time service exceeds the total reasonable cost allowance, Water Service will proceed with the scheme if the householders who will benefit from the scheme agree to meet the balance.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the average volume of water used by a (a) domestic residence and (b) domestic residence where the supply pipe also supplies a farm in Northern Ireland in each of the last two years. [37012]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 14 December 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about the average volume of water used by (a) domestic residence and (b) domestic residence where the supply pipe also supplies a farm in Northern Ireland in each of the last two years (37012). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The volume of water used by domestic properties varies considerably depending on the type of property, the household size and other factors such as the number of domestic appliances. However, the average volume of water used by all types of domestic properties in Northern Ireland was 348 litres per property per day in 2003/04 and 346 litres per property per day in 2004/05. These figures are derived from data obtained from a sample of 102 discrete areas, containing 5,000 domestic properties, which broadly represent the proportion of property types across Northern Ireland.

Domestic residence, where the supply pipe also supplies farms are metered. The volume of metered supply includes water for both domestic and agricultural consumption and information on these two elements is not directly available. In other words, we do not collect directly the information you require on the volume of water used by farmhouses. However, the nearest estimate of the domestic consumption could be obtained from the data relating to detached properties which is included in the sample of 5,000 domestic properties. The volume of water used by detached properties was 415 litres per property per day in 2003/04 and 448 litres per property per day in 2004/05.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Animal Welfare

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Guide Dogs for the Blind on the impact of louder fireworks on dogs and other animals. [37842]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None.

Asbestos

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will remove textured coatings from the list of licensed materials that only licensed, trained and insured asbestos contractors are authorised to remove. [30909]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Commission is currently consulting on a proposal that would mean that work with textured coatings containing asbestos would no longer need to be done by licensed asbestos contractors. It is one of a number of proposals set out in the consultative document 'Proposals for revised Asbestos Regulations and an Approved Code of Practice' which seeks to implement amendments to the European Asbestos Worker Protection Directive and to simplify and rationalise the legislative regime by combining the three sets of current asbestos regulations—on controls, licensing and prohibitions—into one.

Under current asbestos legislation and the proposed revisions, all work with asbestos, whether or not it needs to be done by a licensed contractor, requires a suitable and sufficient risk assessment, adequate control to prevent or reduce exposure, and trained personnel.

Employers are also required to hold insurance under the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act and there are no changes proposed to this legislation.

Carbon Capture

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with (a) oil and gas exploration companies and (b) power generation companies about potential liability for carbon reservoirs created in former oil and gas cavities as part of a carbon capture and storage scheme. [36928]

Malcolm Wicks: This issue has been raised by several stakeholders as a key issue for the implementation of carbon capture and storage. This is currently being considered by the Department as part of the broader issue of how to license and regulate carbon dioxide storage.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made by his Department of the relative (a) ease of installation and (b) effectiveness of carbon capture technology applied (i) pre-combustion and (ii) post-combustion; and whether there are significant cost differences between the two extraction methods. [36962]

Malcolm Wicks: These technologies along with oxy-firing, were considered in the Carbon Abatement Technology Strategy. Based on current information we cannot distinguish between post and pre-combustion on the basis of ease of installation and effectiveness. Also, the estimated costs of the technologies are comparable.

Clean Coal Technology

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the costs and benefits of clean coal technology. [37616]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1999 the Department has provided £13 million to the Cleaner Coal Technology Programme and an additional £3.5 million for collaborative Cleaner Coal Technology Projects with the USA.

The Department has supported work on the development of Clean Coal Technologies to reduce atmospheric pollution (oxides of nitrogen and sulphur) and carbon dioxide emissions. The costs and benefits of reducing atmospheric pollution have not been assessed because the need for these technologies was driven by regulations such as the Large Combustion Plant Directive, and the methods for valuing the benefits of pollution abatement have a wide range of uncertainty.

The cost of carbon dioxide abatement through the application of carbon capture and storage (CCS) has been examined in the DTI's Carbon Abatement Technologies Strategy (June 2005). This drew on a wide range of sources including programmes organised by the International Energy Agency as well as a public consultation, and estimated costs of £38-£127 per tonne of carbon for abatement on coal fired plant. This should be compared to the social cost of carbon dioxide emissions, which is highly uncertain although a recent report for DEFRA indicated a range from £35-£1,000 per tonne of carbon emitted.

Company Law Reform Bill (Explanatory Notes)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why the Explanatory Notes to the Company Law Reform Bill [HL] were not made available at the same time as the Bill itself; on what date they were published; what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to ensure that Explanatory Notes to Government Bills sponsored by his Department are published at the same time as the Bill itself; and if he will make a statement. [37558]

Alun Michael: Our departmental policy is to publish Explanatory Notes at the same time as Bills are published wherever possible. The Company Law Reform Bill is a very substantial Bill, and the Explanatory Notes were not ready to be published until 17 November 2005. Explanatory material on key clauses was made available on the day that the Bill was published.

Concessionary Coal

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former mineworkers or beneficiaries in Midlothian are in receipt of (a) cash in lieu and (b) concessionary coal. [37560]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Midlothian constituency, 1,189 former mineworkers or beneficiaries are in receipt of cash in lieu and 237 are in receipt of concessionary fuel.

Domestic Gas Supplies

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what charges gas companies may make for the installation of domestic mains gas supply; [36823]

(2) what (a) grants and (b) other assistance are available to rural communities to receive mains gas supply. [36824]

Malcolm Wicks: Gas transporters are obliged, on request, to connect a domestic property within 23 metres of an existing gas main. Under normal circumstances, the gas transporter will apply a standard charge, agreed with the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem) for providing such a connection. This charge varies slightly between different parts of Great Britain. The transporter will ordinarily bear the cost of installing the first 10 metres of pipe in the public highway. Gas transporters are able to recover the reasonable costs of providing connections to properties more than 23 metres from a gas main. Connections may also be arranged through gas suppliers, which will oversee the process, but will charge the customer for this service.

There are no grants for the provision of connections to the mains gas network. Grants to install gas central heating systems are available to qualifying households under the Government's Warm Front scheme.

Environmental Best Practice (Businesses)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to promote environmentally responsible behaviour by British businesses. [37307]

Malcolm Wicks: We expect companies to comply with the legal requirements on environmental matters and we encourage them to exceed those standards in addressing the environmental impacts of their activities. The Government's approach to encouraging responsible business practice is outlined on the Government website on Corporate Social Responsibility—www.csr.gov.uk.

We promote environmentally responsible behaviour in a number of ways, for example, through the Envirowise advisory service which we fund with DEFRA for companies wishing to improve their environmental efficiency.

The Department is also helping to return landfill tax monies from the Business Resource and Efficiency Programme back to business through:

The Technology Programme, including previous calls for proposals on Waste Management and Minimisation and Meeting the Challenge of the Zero Emission Enterprise; and current calls on Design and Manufacture of Sustainable Products and Contaminated Land Remediation Technologies;

Support for the Resource Efficiency and Waste Management Knowledge Transfer Network;

Support for the National Industrial Symbiosis Programme.

Fireworks

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many injuries associated with fireworks and bonfires there were over the recent Halloween period; and what the figures were in each year since 2001, broken down by primary care trust area. [37556]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Each year firework injury statistics are collected over a four-week period around 5 November, this includes Halloween. Statistics for 2005 will not be available until March 2006. Copies of the total injury statistics for NHS trusts for the years 2001–04 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Fuel Cell Technology

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support his Department gives to the (a) development of fuel cell technology and (b) application of such technology to the transport sector. [37228]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI provides support for industrial collaborative research and development for fuel cells through the DTI Technology programme. The programme seeks to advance fuel cell technology for both stationary power generation and transport applications, with a view to achieving the cost reductions and performance levels necessary for commercial deployment.

Basic research in universities on both fuel cells and hydrogen is supported by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC), including through the SUPERGEN initiative.

The Government also provided funding of over £450,000 for the trial of three hydrogen-powered fuel cell buses in London as part of the CUTE project. £7.5 million of funding has been provided for the fuel cell and low carbon vehicle technology Centre of Excellence (CENEX) based in Loughborough.

On 14 June 2005, the Government announced a funding package worth £15 million for hydrogen and fuel cell demonstration projects. This scheme is currently in preparation, and will require EC state aids approval.

Gas

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the future security of supply of the importation of gas. [35526]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 7 December 2005]: Diverse supplies, delivered through competitive markets, are the most efficient way to ensure security of gas supply. The Government is committed to working with others to provide an appropriate framework for international trade in gas, and to developing partnerships with gas producing and transit countries. However, there is concern that changes in other Governments' national rules are potentially diverting cargoes of Liquefied Natural Gas away from Great Britain, and that gas supplies via the interconnector from continental Europe have not fully responded to recent strong price signals; Ofgem and the Government are pursuing these issues with the European Commission. The Government's Energy Review, due to report in 2006, will look at the reliability of energy supplies in the medium and long term.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost of boosting the storage capacity of gas in the UK from 11 days to 60 days. [32645]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK currently has gas storage capacity of more than 75 days. This is mainly in the rough gas storage facility operated by Centrica Storage Ltd but also includes capacity available in the medium and short range storage facilities, for example at Hornsea. Further Information is available on the National Grid website: http://www.nationalgrid.com/uk/Gas/Data

Subject to regulatory consents, a further 10 storage projects could be completed by 2010. Together these would more than double GB's storage capacity. Independent energy consultants estimate that the investment in these projects might in total cost some £1.3 billion.

Greenhouse Gases

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was allocated to support industries developing new methods of reducing their emissions of greenhouse gases in 2005–06. [36985]

Malcolm Wicks: The Carbon Trust is an independent company grant funded predominantly by Defra for England, and via separate relationships with the devolved Administrations, to take the lead on business and public sector energy efficiency and encourage the development of a low carbon sector in the UK. Defra has allocated £60.6 million in 2005–06 to support the work of the Carbon Trust.

The Government also support the development of low carbon energy generation technologies. This is a commitment of around £500 million between 2002–08. Eligible renewable energy sources can also gain support through the Renewables Obligation.

Low Carbon Buildings Programme

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role fuel cells will play in implementing the Low Carbon Buildings programme. [37227]

Malcolm Wicks: The Low Carbon Buildings programme is currently being finalised and is due to start in April 2006, subject to state aid approval. The programme will be technology blind and it is intended that fuel cells technologies in micro-CHP mode will be eligible for support.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the responses to the consultation paper Microgeneration Strategy and Low Carbon Buildings programme. [37229]

Malcolm Wicks: The responses to the consultation paper on the Microgeneration Strategy and Low Carbon Buildings programme were published on Monday 12 December and can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/consultations/consult_closed.shtml.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the final version of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's national strategy. [35834]

Malcolm Wicks: I expect to receive the NDA's proposed strategy before the House rises for the Christmas recess. It will go to the Scottish Ministers at the same time. The Scottish Ministers and I will then have until 31 March 2006 to consider and approve the NDA's proposed strategy.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what parliamentary approval is required to confirm a decision to commence building (a) a nuclear power station and (b) a series of nuclear power stations. [36742]

Malcolm Wicks: Under section 36 of the 1989 Electricity Act approval is required from the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (in Scotland approval is required by Scottish Ministers) for the construction or operation of any power station with a capacity in excess of 50 MW, which would include all nuclear power stations.

Parliamentary approval is not required to confirm a decision for the building of power stations of any type.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies his Department has made of the impact on carbon dioxide release of the expanded use of lower grade ores in the production of nuclear energy. [37116]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has undertaken no studies to examine the impact that lower grade uranium ores would make on carbon dioxide emissions.

However, the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency has informed the Department that there is no imminent use of low-grade ore envisioned. And, the nature of the ores to be mined in the near future is very much similar to that of the past 40 years.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the exclusion zone for building around nuclear power stations is. [37245]

Malcolm Wicks: There is no exclusion zone for building around nuclear power stations. Developments can, and do take place. These are controlled by the local planning authorities, which consult with relevant stakeholders including the station operator and the Health and Safety Executive. A developer must be able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of these bodies that any proposed development does not have a significant adverse effect on the safety case for the site.

Nuclear-related Research

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department has allocated to nuclear-related research in each of the last five years. [36603]

Malcolm Wicks: The expenditure on nuclear energy technology research from 2000 to 2005 is set out in the following tables.

Expenditure by the EPSRC on nuclear fission research

Financial year	Nuclear fission (£ million)
2000–01	0.13
2001–02	0.33
2002–03	0.31
2003–04	0.21
2004–05	0.13

Figures for direct Government expenditure (but not including spending by the Research Councils) on nuclear fission

2000–01	0
2001–02	2
2002–03	2.1
2003–04	2.1
2004–05	2.2

Note:
Expenditure in support of Meteorological Office emergency response arrangements currently accounts for approximately £2.1 million.

Figures for nuclear fusion R and D

Financial year	Nuclear fusion (£ million)
2000–01	17.0
2001–02	14.4
2002–03	14.6
2003–04	15.6
2004–05	19.5

Note:
The UK's indirect contribution to the European fusion programme, via central European Union funding for the EURATOM Framework Programme, is excluded.

Oil/Gas Supplies

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the proposed changes to the oil tax regime on future (a) exploration for and (b) production of oil and gas in the UK continental shelf. [37121]

Malcolm Wicks: The changes to the North sea fiscal regime announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his pre-Budget statement on 5 December were subject to detailed analysis to ensure that the North sea tax regime delivers the Government's objectives of striking the right balance between oil producers and consumers, by promoting investment and ensuring fairness for taxpayers. They are not expected to have a significant effect on exploration for oil and gas on the UK continental shelf. They are also not expected to have a significant effect on production. While the increase in the rate of the supplementary charge may impact a very small number of marginal investments, the Ring Fence Expenditure Supplement should provide an incentive to investment, particularly by new entrants, a small but important sector for the continued vitality of the North sea. The industry can now plan for the future safe in the knowledge that there will be no further increases in North sea taxation for the lifetime of this Parliament and with the offer of discussions with Government to tackle wider structural issues which affect the stability of the North sea oil tax regime.

Peninsular Power Ltd

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what indications have been given to Peninsular Power Limited concerning his Department's likely response to applications from that company for extensions of the crop targets specified in the terms of the offer of a grant under its Bio-energy Capital Grant scheme to the proposed biomass energy generator at Winkleigh in Devon. [33976]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has received no such request from the company. If the Department were to receive such a request, our requirements are amendable, but consideration of any amendment would need to ensure that (a) they are in line with the objectives of the scheme (b) any revisions are not likely to affect the assessment of the competition under which the grant undertakings were originally awarded.

Phoenix Fund

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the Phoenix Fund; what other funding streams he expects will be available for community development funding agencies; and if he will make a statement. [36704]

Alun Michael: The Phoenix Fund was introduced in 1999 as a time-limited programme to help build good practice on business support for under-represented groups and deprived communities. It was not designed to provide long-term core funding for these organisations. Under the 2004 spending review for the period 2006–07 to 2007–08, the DTI is making available a £6 million per annum contribution to regional development agencies, toward their support for enterprise in under-represented groups and deprived communities. The Government have also introduced the Community Investment Tax Relief scheme to enable community development funding agencies to raise finance from the private sector. The first 23 accredited Community Development Finance Institutions are aiming to raise over £80 million this way, which is double the figure that has been committed to the sector through the Phoenix Fund. Furthermore, following the Graham Review of the Small Firms Loan Guarantee scheme, there is now scope for more Community Development Finance Institutions to become Small Firms Loan Guarantee scheme lenders under the new arrangements and it is hoped this can be taken forward from next March.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with regional development agencies about replacement finance for the Phoenix Fund. [36705]

Alun Michael: The Phoenix Fund was only ever intended to be a time limited, pump priming fund and was, exceptionally, extended to 2006.

Under the 2004 Spending Review for the period 2006–07 to 2007–08, DTI is making available a £6 million per annum contribution to regional development agencies (RDAs), toward their support for enterprise in under-represented groups and deprived communities. As part of our ongoing engagement with regional development agencies (RDAs), the Secretary of State and I met RDA representatives in November when we discussed the future promotion of enterprise in the regions and the RDAs' contribution towards this.

Power Supplies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with energy providers on their ability to protect vulnerable individuals in the event of a breakdown in power delivery; and if he will publish the (a) protocol for identifying such individuals and (b) guidance on support to be provided to them. [35812]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 December 2005]: While gas supplies will be tighter this winter than in previous years, National Grid report that under all credible scenarios gas and electricity supply can be maintained to domestic customers, small businesses and other organisations. The regulation of gas and electricity supply, including arrangements in respect of vulnerable customers, is the responsibility of the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem). Ofgem requires gas and electricity suppliers, under section 37 of their licences, to provide services for persons who are of pensionable age, disabled or chronically sick. These obligations include the maintenance of a Priority Service Register, and the provision of special services to meet the access, communication and safety needs of eligible customers. Relevant information about customers on the register is passed to gas and electricity distribution companies to enable them to comply with their obligations in the event of certain categories of supply failure.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to encourage smaller, non-excluded energy production schemes being set up to take advantage of the Renewable Energy Certificates. [35266]

Malcolm Wicks: I assume the hon. Member is referring to Renewable Obligation Certificates (ROCs).

Many microgenerators already benefit from the Renewables Obligation (RO). However, feedback from microgenerators, as part of the current Review of the RO, suggested that the some of the administrative requirements might act as a barrier to accessing the benefits of the RO. One potential barrier is that the RO order defines the obligation in terms of the supply of electricity to customers in Great Britain. As a result there is a requirement that even generators that consume their own electricity must first sell it to a supplier before buying it back for their own consumption.

The Climate Change and Sustainable Energy Bill is currently before Parliament, and the Government intend to use this to introduce primary legislation that would allow the removal of this requirement for small generators. The Government would also like to use the same Bill to introduce primary legislation, which would allow agents to act on behalf of small generators through the process of accreditation and claiming ROCs and allowing ROCs to be issued to agents. It will also allow agents to amalgamate the output of small generators.

The Government are also carrying out further work, outside of the current Review of the RO, to address other barriers preventing the widespread take-up of microgeneration technologies. The Government will be publishing a strategy for the promotion of microgeneration next year.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will develop mechanisms for supporting fuel cell technology and hydrogen energy akin to the Renewables Obligation. [37226]

Malcolm Wicks: There are no plans at the present time to do so. Hydrogen and fuel cell technologies offer significant potential to contribute to the Government's target of 60 per cent. CO_2 reduction by 2050. On the 14 June, the Government announced a funding package worth £15 million for hydrogen and fuel cell demonstration projects.

Social/Community Policies (Businesses)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to promote responsible social and community practices by business. [36200]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI leads for the Government on corporate social responsibility, in liaison with other Departments who will all have an interest in this wide ranging agenda.

Our approach to corporate social responsibility is to create the right framework to encourage companies to make socially responsible practice an integral part of their business operations, to the benefit of both society and business.

By working with organisations like Business in the Community we have supported a range of initiatives that benefit local communities. The Government also encourage corporate community involvement through, for example by means of the publication of 'A guide to tax incentives for corporate giving', which was published jointly by HM Treasury and Home Office.

Information about the Government's approach can be found on the Government CSR website www.csr.gov.uk.

Sunday Trading

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact that increasing Sunday trading hours in England would have on (a) the volume of road traffic, (b) the number of shoppers travelling to (i) out-of-town shopping centres, (ii) main supermarkets and (iii) high street stores and (c) smaller local convenience stores. [37113]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We are currently considering the case for liberalising Sunday trading hours. The factors referred to by the hon. Member will clearly be relevant to this trade and industry.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what form of public consultation will take place as part of the review he has announced into Sunday trading laws; and whether he expects the review will take evidence from the public. [37209]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We will be consulting widely and considering the views of all interested parties, including members of the public, before any decisions are taken. Ministerial colleagues and officials are actively discussing with stakeholders and inviting views and evidence on the issue. Officials have also commissioned a cost benefit analysis of the case for further liberalisation from independent consultants, which will be published.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce the timetable for his proposed review of Sunday trading laws; what the terms of reference will be; who he expects will lead the review; to whom they will report; and if he will make a statement. [37210]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no fixed timetable for this work. Departmental officials have been asked to evaluate the case for further liberalisation of Sunday trading hours. To assist in this, we have invited independent consultants to carry out a cost-benefit analysis of the options.

Telecommunications

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 798W, on telecommunications, when the chief executive of Ofcom will respond. [32571]

Alun Michael: The chief executive responded to the hon. Member on 2 December. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Wind Farms

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications for consent to the development of (a) offshore and (b) onshore wind farms have been made to his Department under (i) section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and (ii) section 3 of the Transport and Works Act 1992 in each of the last five years; and what percentage have been (A) granted and (B) refused. [36972]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is set out in the following table

	Applications
	Onshore S36	Offshore S36	Offshore TWA
2001	0	1	0
2002	1	5	4
2003	3		1
2004	2	1	0
2005	2	5	0
Total	8	12	5

The number granted, refused and not yet determined is as follows:

Total	Granted		Refused	Not yet determined
	Number	Percentage		Number	Percentage
25	12	48	0	13	52

In addition two applications which had been received before 2001 were determined in the period. One was granted and one refused.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of wind levels in the Bridgwater constituency; and in what locations. [37241]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has made no assessment of the wind levels in his Bridgewater constituency. However, wind levels are of interest to wind farm developers, as it will determine whether any proposed development is viable.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultation has been undertaken on off-shore wind turbines in the Bristol channel. [37243]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has undertaken no consultation on offshore wind turbines in the Bristol channel.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidelines he has issued on the siting of wind turbines near to nuclear power stations. [37244]

Malcolm Wicks: None.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has commissioned on wind levels at Hinkley Point nuclear reactor. [37247]

Malcolm Wicks: None.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent research he has commissioned into the costs and benefits of wind farms; and if he will make a statement. [37612]

Malcolm Wicks: The Environmental Change Institute, on behalf of the DTI, recently published a report into wind power and the UK wind resource. Some of the report's main findings were:

Wind power availability is greater during winter than at other times of the year, and is on average stronger during the day than overnight;

Wind power delivers around two and a half times as much electricity during periods of high electricity demand as during low demand periods;

Low wind speed conditions affecting 90 per cent. or more of the UK would occur in around one hour every five years during winter; and

The chance of wind turbines shutting down due to high winds speed conditions is very rare—high winds affecting 40 per cent. or more of the UK would occur in around one hour every 10 years.

A copy of the report is available online from www.eci.ox.ac.uk/renewables/ukwind.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he will take of the protection afforded to the North Wales coastline by the Constable Bank in considering the application for consent to develop the Gwynt y Mor wind farm. [37913]

Malcolm Wicks: Offshore wind farm developers are required to produce an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) when submitting an application for consent. The Government will take into account the EIA, and many other considerations, before reaching a decision on whether to grant consent. The Government will also consult statutory advisors such as the Countryside Council for Wales.

A copy of npower renewables non-technical summary of the Gwynt y Mor environmental statement is available from their website. Their website address is http://www.npower-renewables.com/gwyntymor/index.asp

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he will take of the cost of key components in considering the application for consent to develop the Gwynt-y-Mor wind farm. [37914]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government do not take into account the cost of the project when considering an application for consent to develop an offshore wind farm. The cost of the Gwynt-y-Mor wind turbine project is a matter for the developer.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial compensation is made available to persons whose property values are adversely affected by the development of wind farms pursuant to the granting of departmental consents. [35171]

Malcolm Wicks: A study by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors in 2004 suggests that wind farms have no lasting impact on UK house prices. It shows that local house prices recover from any initial impact once a wind farm has been operating for two years.

Also evidence from the "Public attitude to wind farms: a survey of local residents in Scotland" conducted by MORI in 2003 suggests that those living nearest to wind farms are their strongest advocates. The results of this survey can be found at: http://www.scotland.gov.uk/library5/environment/pawslr-00.asp

Worker Exploitation

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role his Department plays in tackling exploitation of workers in developing countries. [36201]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK has played a leading role in ensuring that the international framework to promote international labour rights and to tackle abuses of those rights throughout the world is in place, particularly through its work with the International Labour Organisation (ILO), which is the UN specialised agency responsible for developing, promoting and monitoring labour standards. DWP as lead Department for the ILO play an active role in the ILO Committee on Multinational Enterprises and DTI fully supports the promotion and follow-up of the ILO Declaration of Principles Concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy which seeks to enhance the positive social and labour effects of multinational corporations' operations throughout the world.

We also actively encourage UK-based international companies which operate in other countries, and which are subject to the laws applicable in those countries, to apply high standards of corporate behaviour, including those which protect workers' rights.

For example, DTI promotes the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises which recommend standards of responsible business conduct for businesses operating in or from the 39 adhering countries and have written to the FTSE 100 companies to raise awareness of these expectations. We have also set out our approach to encouraging environmentally and socially responsible practice internationally in our International Strategic Framework on Corporate Social Responsibility published in March.

HEALTH

Abattoirs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what prosecutions of abattoirs for breaches of legislation on standards of hygiene have (a) taken place and (b) succeeded in each year since 1985 in which proceedings are complete. [34597]

Caroline Flint: Figures on prosecutions for breaches of legislation on standards of hygiene are only available for the period since the establishment of the Meat Hygiene Service in 1995. Prior to that date, enforcement responsibility lay with individual local authorities and no central record of prosecutions is available.

The table provides details of prosecutions pursued in relation to breaches of fresh meat and poultry meat hygiene regulations and legislation in respect of removal of specified risk material at licensed meat plants (abattoirs, cutting plants and cold stores).

Acute Trust Hospitals

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the acute trust hospitals with major accident and emergency departments that do not also have paediatric services on the same site. [31888]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Age-related Macular Degeneration

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of cases of age-related macular degeneration caused by smoking in each year since 1997–98. [33268]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The data requested is not routinely collected. A paper from the British Journal of Ophthalmology in May 2005 estimated that approximately 28,000 cases of age-related macular degeneration in people aged 75 years and above in the United Kingdom may be attributable to smoking.

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the UK voted at the EU's Agriculture and Fisheries Council meeting in October on the application to accept genetically modified maize MON863. [35107]

Caroline Flint: A vote on a proposal for the authorisation of food ingredients derived from genetically modified MON863 maize was taken at the European Union Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24–25 October. The United Kingdom voted in favour of this proposal, having been satisfied that the necessary criteria of safety, consumer information, and nutritional quality had been met.

Alcohol-related Illness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 710W, on alcohol-related illness, what the equivalent figures for 2004–05 were. [35423]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the table.

Notes:
A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons alcohol-related referrals to the community mental health service in the Alnwick and Berwick areas have been suspended; and if she will make a statement. [24452]

Mr. Byrne: This is a matter for the Newcastle, North Tyneside and Northumberland Mental Health National Health Service Trust.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many communication systems are in operation in the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services; which of them are interoperable with those of the police services; how they would be unified in the event that the ambulance services were merged; and what the unification would cost. [35711]

Caroline Flint: I am informed by Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority that there are three communication systems in operation in the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire ambulance services. The system in Wiltshire Ambulance National Health Service Trust is interoperable with those of the police services.

It has not yet been agreed how these systems would be unified or what the cost of unification would be as the planned structure for the new ambulance trust has not yet been finalised.

Avian Influenza

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the process by which an emergency mass vaccination for influenza would take place. [21776]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal 'flu, avian 'flu and pandemic 'flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal 'flu refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic 'flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans, and to which they do not have immunity.

The Department is currently developing plans for mass vaccination for pandemic influenza. Plans will depend on a number of factors, such as the rate at which a vaccine is supplied to the United Kingdom. In October 2005, the Department announced that it is inviting manufacturers to tender for a contract to supply pandemic influenza vaccine once the pandemic strain is known. The proposal to purchase in advance the capacity needed to make a pandemic influenza vaccine will make sure that an effective vaccine is available for use in the UK as quickly as possible after an influenza starts. The UK will need approximately 120 million doses to be available as soon as possible.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is being prepared on prevention of the spread of avian influenza to humans; and what the cost has been to date. [19245]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal 'flu, avian 'flu and pandemic 'flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal flu refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic 'flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can easily spread between humans, and to which they do not have immunity.

Avian influenza is a disease of birds and very few humans have been affected. HN1 is the strain currently circulating in poultry and is known as avian (bird) 'flu. Although there is a risk that bird 'flu may spread to the United Kingdom, the risk to humans remains low. The Department for Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) has produced a contingency plan for dealing with Avian influenza and this is available on their website at: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/avianinfluenza-contplan.htm

A joint Government Department and industry working group on worker protection has produced guidance for poultry workers on protection against the risk of Avian influenza. This was published on Defra's website on 31 October and will be made available to the poultry industry through their poultry organisations. All involved in developing the guidance have borne their own costs. Defra will be paying for the production of leaflets, posters, etc.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she has put in place for enhanced medical surveillance of human population cohorts assessed as most at risk from co-infection by the H5N1 and a human host adapted influenza virus. [24011]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal 'flu, avian 'flu and pandemic flu. Avian influenza refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and cause widespread illness each winter. Pandemic 'flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans, and to which they do not have immunity.

The cohort at most risk from co-infection by the H5N1 and a human influenza virus is that group of people who are exposed to wild birds or poultry in which avian influenza is suspected or confirmed. Among the measures which are recommended around such incidents, which will be overseen by the Health Protection Agency, is the monitoring of the health of all such people after assessment of their risk of exposure.

Our present strategy is risk based and there is no evidence that there is at present an elevation of risk to people who are exposed to wild birds or poultry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority she gives to workers in the energy industry in her contingency plans to protect key workers in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza. [20952]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal 'flu, avian 'flu and pandemic 'flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal 'flu refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic 'flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans, and to which they do not have immunity.

The Government are building a stockpile of antiviral drugs to treat people who become ill with pandemic 'flu rather than for prophylaxis. Since the stockpile of Tamiflu is intended to be large enough to cover all of those likely to become ill, the issue of prioritisation between competing claims for antiviral drugs ought not to arise. However, if a pandemic strikes before the stockpile is complete or the clinical attack rate is higher than expected, antivirals will need to be prioritised, initially health care workers, and to those who fall into one of the "clinical at risk" groups, as defined by seasonal 'flu. Once a vaccine for the pandemic 'flu strain has been developed, health care workers and other essential service key workers may need to be vaccinated first, as it will be important to maintain health and other essential services.

Final decisions will be made based on emerging information about the pandemic virus. However, given it is unlikely that a vaccine will be available for the first wave of a pandemic, it is important that businesses consider how they would maintain services.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make use of (a) schools, (b) village halls and (c) other public buildings as temporary health care facilities in the event of an influenza pandemic; and if she will make a statement. [22125]

Ms Rosie Winterton: These are issues for local planners. "The UK Influenza Pandemic Contingency Plan" contains estimates of potential impact on primary and secondary care which local planners can use to ensure that their contingency plans are appropriate for a potential influenza pandemic. We have also provided operational guidance to the national health service on preparing for an influenza pandemic to help organisations formulate their plans.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many syringes and needles she estimates will be necessary to deal with a pandemic influenza threat; what timetable has been put in place for their procurement; and if she will make a statement. [33803]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Arrangements for accessing supplies of a pandemic vaccine are still the subject of contractual discussion with manufacturers. Those arrangements will determine the requirement for needles and syringes and decisions on procurement are dependent on the outcome of those discussions.

Blood/Bone Marrow Donors

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to encourage people from black and minority ethnic communities to become (a) blood donors and (b) bone marrow donors. [35312]

Caroline Flint: NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) is responsible for managing blood supplies in England and North Wales and for managing the British Bone Marrow Register (BBMR). It does this through its operating division—the National Blood Service (NBS). The NBS recruits blood donors from the general public and potential bone marrow donors from the active blood donor populations.

In 2004, the NBS commissioned the Central Office of Information to lead on a long-term strategy to attract more people from ethnic communities to give blood and join the BBMR. A campaign called "OneBlood" is addressing existing barriers by raising awareness of the importance and relevance of blood donation, encouraging individual and community ownership of the issue, tackling religious objections and myths and encouraging blood donation.

The NBS has also developed an advertising campaign, "Are you my Type?' which features black and minority ethnic celebrities.

Borellia

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the use of prolonged intravenous ceftriaxone therapy in the treatment of Borellia infection. [34960]

Caroline Flint: The British National Formulary recommends that ceftriaxone may be used intravenously for Lyme disease associated with moderate to severe cardiac or neurological abnormalities, late Lyme disease and Lyme arthritis, with a duration of treatment of generally two to four weeks. For Lyme arthritis a suitable oral follow on antibacterial agent is needed. Early Lyme disease can be treated with doxycycline, or amoxicillin if doxycycline is contra-indicated.

Breast Cancer

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of non-urgent referrals by general practitioners each year for investigations into possible breast cancer which are later identified as having breast cancer. [27559]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All women with suspected breast cancer should be referred urgently by their general practitioner under the two week out-patient waiting time standard. From the data centrally collected, we cannot identify those women who were routinely referred with other breast conditions but who were subsequently diagnosed with breast cancer. The number of patients who were treated for breast cancer who were referred under the two week wait and those who were referred through other routes is shown in the table.

	Number of patients treated for breast cancer who were urgently referred under the two week wait	Number of patients treated for breast cancer who were referred through other routes[1]	Percentage of patients treated for breast cancer who were referred through other routes[1]
2002–03	11,705	16,075	42.13
2003–04	15,163	16,090	48.52
2004–05	14,575	16,244	52.70

[1] Includes patients referred routinely with other breast conditions and those patients referred through the breast screening service.

The Cancer Plan target of 31 days from diagnosis with cancer to first treatment, to be achieved from December 2005, picks up those patients who are referred with other conditions but who are subsequently diagnosed with cancer to ensure they receive prompt treatment.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled by Lancashire hospital trust (a) for medical reasons and (b) because of lack of beds at (i) Royal Preston hospital and (ii) Queen's Park hospital in each month between January 2004 and September 2005. [34523]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. However, information relating to the Lancashire Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Foundation Trust and the East Lancashire Hospitals NHS trust is available on a quarterly basis which is shown in the following table.

Lancashire teaching hospitals NHS trust—cancelled operations

Year/ quarter		Number of last minute cancelled operations

2004–05

Notes:

1. Data are collected each quarter on an NHS trust basis only.
2. A last minute cancellation is one that occurs on the day the patient was due to arrive, after they have arrived in hospital, or on the day of their operation. For example, if the patient is to be admitted to hospital on a Monday for an operation scheduled for the following day (Tuesday). If the hospital cancels the operation for non-clinical reasons on the Monday then this would count as a last minute cancellation. This includes patients who have not actually arrived in hospital, but who have been telephoned at home prior to their arrival.
3. Some common non-clinical reasons for cancellations by the hospital include: ward beds unavailable; surgeon unavailable; other emergency patient needing theatre; theatre list over-run; equipment failure; administrative error; anaesthetist unavailable; theatre staff unavailable; and critical care bed unavailable.

Cancer

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to increase awareness of (a) breast and (b) prostate cancer among ethnic minority communities. [34930]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Together with Cancer Research UK, the Department produces the "Be Breast Aware" leaflet, which advises women on how to be breast aware and what signs to watch for.

The leaflet is widely available from primary care surgeries and breast screening units and is available in Bengali, Chinese, Gurjarati, Polish, Punjabi, Urdu and Vietnamese.

Currently we are providing £58,710 to fund Breast Cancer Care's "Here for you, Near to you" project, which aims to provide breast cancer information and awareness for ethnic minority groups.

We have previously provided Breakthrough Breast Cancer with £40,000 to fund their "To develop the voice of breast cancer patients" project. This project was aimed at difficult to reach groups, ethnic minorities and socially disadvantaged.

Thanks to the work of the Prostate Cancer Advisory Group (PCAG) we now have, for the first time, a definitive set of key messages for the general public about the prostate, including prostate cancer. 20 voluntary, patient and professional groups have signed up to the key messages.

A pilot communications programme using the key messages, jointly funded by the Department and signatories to the Prostate Cancer Charter for Action, is expected to start in February 2006.

We are currently providing £105,000 to the Prostate Cancer Charity to improve awareness of the risks and symptoms of prostate cancer in African and Afro-Caribbean men in Britain. We have previously provided the Prostate Cancer Charity with £135,000 to fund a project to increase awareness of prostate cancer in all men.

Care Homes

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential care and nursing (a) homes and (b) places she estimates there will be in (i) 2005, (ii) 2006 and (iii) 2007. [34599]

Mr. Byrne: The Government believes that care homes are only one of a range of options that should be available to support people with long-term care needs.

The Department has made no formal estimate of the number of care home places available between 2005 and 2007. However, according to the latest United Kingdom market survey, published in September 2005 by the independent healthcare analysts Laing and Buisson, the level of spare capacity in the care home sector has remained the same over the last three years, at 10,000 to 15,000 places, despite the fall in the number of care home places.

Chase Farm Hospital

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future provision of accident and emergency services at Chase Farm hospital. [30051]

Jane Kennedy: Responsibility for the provision of local services rests with local national health service organisations working in conjunction with local stakeholders and their strategic health authorities. I understand that the local disposition of services between Barnet hospital, which is a new private funded initiative funded hospital, and Chase Farm hospital is proposed to be the subject of an engagement exercise with local people. There is still much further work to be done taking into account the results of engagement before proposals reach the stage of formal consultation which is expected in the new year.

A strategic outline case has already been approved for an £80 million development on the Chase Farm site which would replace many of the old Victorian buildings. A revised outline business case is expected by the North Central London strategic health authority towards the end of November for the development which will need to be seen in the context of the future services on the site. It offers a good opportunity to replace unacceptable buildings and to demonstrate a commitment for appropriate services on the Chase Farm hospital site well into the future.

Choose and Book Programme

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the likely effects of the Choose and Book programme not being fully operational on the predicted date on primary care trusts' ability to meet their targets; [32112]

(2) when the Choose and Book programme will become fully operational. [32123]

Mr. Byrne: Meeting the public service agreement targets on booking and choice is not dependent on the choose and book service, as manual systems are available. Implementation and utilisation of the choose and book service requires complex changes to local information technology systems and management and clinical staff practices, which presents considerable challenges. National roll-out of choose and book is progressing, supported by the Department and NHS Connecting for Health. Utilisation is now increasing rapidly and it is anticipated that this will continue through 2006.

Citygate Public Affairs Ltd.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings her Department has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36756]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Coeliac Disease

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research she has evaluated on the aetiology of coeliac disease and the effects on it of the consumption of genetically modified foodstuffs; [35072]

(2) what the incidence of coeliac disease was in each year from 1994 in (a) England, (b) Leeds and (c) Morley and Rothwell constituency. [35073]

Mr. Byrne: It is known that coeliac disease is an inherited genetic disease caused by an intolerance to gluten, a protein found in foodstuffs containing wheat, barley and rye. We have not evaluated any research on the effects of consumption of genetically modified foodstuffs.

Data on the incidence of coeliac disease is not collected, although Coeliac UK estimates that the condition affects one per cent. of the United Kingdom population.

Compensation Claims

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget of health trusts in England is to meet the cost of compensation claims in 2005. [35039]

Jane Kennedy: This information requested is not held centrally.

Continuing Care/Delayed Discharges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how compliance with the directions on continuing care and delayed discharge issued on 27 February 2004 is monitored. [34823]

Mr. Byrne: It is the responsibility of the strategic health authorities and national health service trusts to ensure that they adhere to their legal obligations.

Correspondence

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer the letters from the hon. Member for Colchester of 3 February 2005 and 15 September 2005. [35079]

Ms Rosie Winterton: My noble Friend Lord Warner replied to the hon. Member's letter of 3 February 2005 on 16 February, and a copy of the reply has been sent to him.

A careful search has shown no trace of his letter of 15 September 2005 being received in the Department. However, if the hon. Member would like to send a copy of this letter, I will ensure that a reply is sent to him without delay.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority will be attached to drugs for cystic fibrosis sufferers during the review of NHS commissioning arrangements for specialised conditions. [30671]

Mr. Byrne: The review into specialised services commissioning arrangements has been set up to investigate current commissioning arrangements for specialised services in general and make proposals for improvements; it has been asked to report in the spring. The review will not be looking at individual services, like cystic fibrosis.

Darent Valley Hospital

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting time for out-patient appointments at Darent Valley Hospital. [34578]

Caroline Flint: Data about out-patient waiting times is collected at national health service trust level and by timeband. The median time waited for an outpatient appointment at Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust at September 2005 was 7.4 weeks, with no patients waiting longer than 17 weeks.

Dentistry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) dental nurses, (b) dental hygienists and (c) dental therapists there have been in the NHS in each year since 1997. [27544]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The majority of dental care professionals are employed by independent general dental practitioners. We do not hold data centrally on the numbers of these professionals, but we estimate that there are currently some 30,000 dental nurses, 3,600 dental hygienists and 600 dental therapists working in England. The number of dental therapists is likely to increase very significantly over the next few years, following Government funding for a fourfold increase in the number of training places, from 50 to 200 annually, in 2003 to support the development of team working in dentistry.

The table contains information on dental therapists directly employed in the hospital and community health services, that is excluding therapists employed by independent general dental practitioners.

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures she plans to put in place to ensure the creation of new dental schools do not adversely affect existing dental schools; [27581]

(2) what account she will take, when considering allocation of additional undergraduate dental places, of (a) the availability of significant core teaching facilities, (b) outreach facilities and (c) integration into Local Improvement Finance Trust schemes; [27582]

(3) whether existing dental schools will be able to make their case for additional undergraduate dental places on the same basis as applications for new dental schools when bids for additional places are considered. [27583]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government are funding 170 additional training places for dental students. A joint implementation group (JIG) made up of representatives of the higher education funding council for England (HEFCE), the Department and the national health service is managing this expansion of dental training. In April the JIG invited bids for the training places from all higher education institutions in England indicating that it would apply the following criteria to their evaluation: geographical context; innovation; quality; value for money and widening participation. Bids have been received from both universities with existing dental schools and those currently without dental schools. The JIG will be making recommendations to the HEFCE Board for consideration at its meeting on 26 January 2006.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of schedule 3, part 1, paragraph 3, of the new draft dental contract on registrations, with particular reference to the renewal of an age bar; and if she will make a statement. [28070]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The purpose of schedule 3, part 1, paragraph 3, is to prohibit, unless there are reasonable grounds, dentists refusing to provide services on the grounds of age. The final dental contracts regulations, laid before Parliament on 9 December, amended the draft regulations in response to issues raised during consultation in the summer. The final regulations clarify that, subject to the agreement of the local primary care trust, a practice may enter into a contract to provide services to specific categories of patients such as children.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will (a) bring forward proposals to define in statute the dental services that a primary care trust has to commission and (b) seek to ensure that the relevant legislation sets targets for primary care trusts on dentistry. [28509]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The new arrangements for local commissioning mean a primary care trust (PCT) must commission either mandatory services for a new general dental services (GDS) contract, and either mandatory and advanced services or advanced services only in a personal dental services contract (PDS). Mandatory services are defined at regulation 14 (4) of the National Health Service (General Dental Services Contracts) Regulations 2005.

The regulations governing GDS contracts and PDS agreements do not set targets for PCTs on dentistry. In line with the approach set out in "National Standards Local Action" it is for PCTs to set standards or targets that are appropriate to their local circumstances.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the new General Dental Services contract on the number of registrations with an NHS dentist; and whether dentists will be provided with incentives to ensure patients are registered. [28687]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The evidence from personal dental service pilots is that moving away from a fee-per-item system supports dentists in carrying out simpler courses of treatment, such as fillings, where there are fewer individual items within each course. This frees up significant time that can be used in part to see a greater range of patients. The new general dental service (GDS) contract will allow all dentists to work in this way. The new type of GDS contract will also require dentists to have regard to the new National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on patient recall intervals. These guidelines are likely to mean many patients are recalled by their dentist less often than the current six monthly intervals. The dental reforms will also give primary care trusts (PCTs) the financial ability to commission new NHS dental services more readily if a dentist in their area chooses to deregister NHS patients.

Dentists will no longer receive payment based on the number of patients registered but in return for a guaranteed annual contract value they will be expected to provide an agreed level of service over the course of a year. Taken in conjunction with the application of the NICE guidelines this will support improvement in patient access.

It is not possible to predict with complete accuracy the overall impact that these measures will have but we are confident that they will together support significant improvement in patient access.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her estimate is of the number of general and personal dental service dentists per head of population in (a) each strategic health authority area and (b) England. [31909]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Number of general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) dentists per 10,000 head of population in England by strategic health authority (SHA) area as at 30 September 2005

Notes:

1. Data includes all notifications, received by the Dental Practice Board, up to 2 November 2005 for England and 19 October 2005 for SHA data. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, e.g. data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.

2. A dentist may have a contract in more than one SHA. Therefore, data at this level may include duplication. England data excludes duplication.

3. The dentists include principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts are excluded from the data.

4. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. SHA areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.

5. The number of dentists per 10,000 people has been calculated using 2004 population data, as this is the most up to date available.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 17WS, on national health service dentistry, if she will break down the 859 training places for 2005 by dental schools; and how many of these places have been taken up by overseas students. [31965]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: A breakdown of the 859 training places is shown in the table. All of the 859 students were from the United Kingdom or other countries in the European Union and are in addition to any students the schools admitted from other overseas countries.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population in the area served by Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust was registered with an NHS dentist in each year since 1997. [32036]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The percentage of the population who were registered with an national health service dentist in Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust as at 30 September each year is as follows:

	Percentage of population
1997	56
1998	51
1999	50
2000	49
2001	49
2002	49
2003	48
2004	48
2005	52

Notes:
1. Registration rates (i.e. the percentage of the population registered with a dentist) have been estimated by including registrations in the area of the dentist according to the postcode of the dental surgery (not the patient's address). So the registration rates for some areas may be affected by some patients receiving dental treatment in a different area from the one in which they live.
2. The registration rates use population estimates for the primary care trust areas for the nearest year for which data are available. Figures for 1997 to 2000 have been calculated from 2001 population data. Figures for 2004 and 2004 have been calculated from 2003 population data.
3. The changes in registration period from two years to 15 months under the General Dental Services from 1 September affected the registration numbers from December 1997 onwards, so the 1997 figures are not comparable with later figures. Data for 2004 and 2005 include some personal dental service proxy registrations, that is counts of patients seen in the past 15 months.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will commence the review of community dental services. [32487]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The review of community dental services commenced in early 2004 and the resulting consultation document, "Creating the Future" was published in December 2004. The Department has since invited NHS Employers, the organisation representing national health service employing organisations, to negotiate new pay, terms and conditions for salaried primary care dentists.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the three-year dental pay deal will be extended beyond April 2006. [32488]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The current pay deal for salaried primary dental care services ends in April 2006. The doctors and dentists pay review body will make recommendations for levels of pay in 2006–07. We have also asked NHS Employers to take forward negotiations on a new pay system for salaried primary care dentists.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new dentists have been recruited in the area covered by the Rochdale primary care trust in each year since 1997. [32769]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of dentists that have joined general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) in Rochdale primary care trust as at 30 September each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources she is making available in the Rochdale primary care trust area to increase NHS dental registration. [32771]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An additional £250 million has been invested in national health service dentistry over the last two years to bring new dentists into the NHS and to address access in areas where historically there have been the biggest problems seeing an NHS dentist. We are implementing reforms in April 2006, which will enable primary care trusts (PCTs), including Rochdale PCT, to build further on this. They will be able to commission services from local dentists in ways that best meet the needs of their local population.

The Department will issue PCT dental budgets for next year shortly.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists have been recruited to work in Lincolnshire in each year since 2000. [33945]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of dentists who have joined the general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) in the county of Lincolnshire as at 30 September each year is shown in the table.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists received gross earnings from the NHS of (a) over £500,000, (b) over £250,000, (c) over £100,000 and (d) over £50,000 in each year since 1997; and what her most recent estimate is of the average net earnings a dentist receives from the NHS. [25269]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The requested information on gross earnings is shown in the table. Gross fees cover both the dentist's net income and practice expenses.

The estimated average general dental service (GDS) net income for a dentist with a reasonable commitment to the GDS in 2004–05, excluding low earners, namely those dentists with GDS earnings less than £59,100 in 2004–05 was £70,000. Gross fees for principal dentists also include payment for work done by their assistant dentists.

These estimates wholly exclude income from non-GDS work.

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 21 July 2005 to the hon. Member for Northavon (Steve Webb), Official Report, column 2155W, on dentistry, what plans her Department has to monitor clinical and distance standards for access to NHS dentistry in line with the undertaking given by the Prime Minister in September 1999 in relation to access to a local NHS dentist. [24105]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) locally to set standards for access and monitor local performance.

PCTs decide distance standards for each type of call (routine, emergency and urgent) and for type of area (urban or rural). The majority of PCTs in urban and rural areas typically have standards for routine calls of 10 miles and urgent calls at 15 miles. In October 2004, around 90 per cent. of callers to National Health Service Direct were being advised of available NHS dental services within PCTs' locally agreed distance standards.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population in the area served by Rushcliffe primary care trust was registered with an NHS dentist in each year since 1997. [30873]

Departmental Estate

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2107W, on the departmental estate, how much rent has been paid by the Department on the properties to which the answer refers since they ceased to be used as Community Health Council buildings. [35820]

Jane Kennedy: The following rent has been paid since December 2003 on the properties referred to; having established that there was no national health service interest they have been actively marketed:

22–24 High Road, Willesden—£58,750.

A notice to break the lease from June 2006 has been served.

128 The Grove, Stratford—£48,000.

An assignment of the lease to a third party has been completed.

42 Fulham Palace Road, Fulham—£56,000.

The lease expires in December 2005.

45–47 Praed Street, Paddington—£260,000.

Part sub-let at £72,000 per annum.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual running costs of the Department of Health were in each year since 1999. [35309]

Jane Kennedy: Detailed information on administration costs for the Department back to 1999–2000—and with projections to 2007–08—is set out in Figure 8.1 of the 2005 Departmental Report (CM 6524) which is available in the Library.

ECG Machines

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent since 1997 on buying ECG machines in hospitals. [26472]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is unable to provide an exact figure as this information is not collected centrally. However, following the launch of the national service framework for coronary heart disease (CHD) in March 2000, as part of a one-off central initiative, the Treasury Capital Modernisation Fund made £25 million available for a range of CHD equipment including electrocardiogram machines where these were a local priority.

Electronic Magnifiers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide electronic magnifiers for the visually impaired through the NHS. [33611]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The national health service hospital eye service provides optical devices and loans low vision aids, such as high-powered reading lenses, hand-held and stand magnifiers and telescopes, to people with visual impairment. In addition, some primary care trusts have local arrangements for the provision of low vision aids through community based opticians.

Electronic magnifiers are classed as aids to daily living and as such providing them is the responsibility of local authority social services departments. Social service departments assess individuals' needs and arrange services to meet those needs. This can include the provision of closed circuit television. However, hand-held, stand and spectacle-mounted magnifiers are generally easier to use, more widely available and more accessible.

In keeping with the principle of flexibility in meeting local needs, NHS hospital trusts, primary care trusts and social service departments are being encouraged to work more closely together, including the possibility of establishing joint budgets for equipment which could allow for the provision of a wider range of services and equipment than has hitherto been available.

Epilepsy

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people in each strategic health authority have been diagnosed with epilepsy since 1997, broken down by age group; [35428]

(2) how many patients diagnosed with epilepsy since 1994 have been reported as having suffered an adverse reaction after failing to take their anti-epilepsy drugs as prescribed; and what types of adverse reaction these were. [35357]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of people diagnosed each year with epilepsy is not collected.

Adverse reactions can sometimes occur when patients are taking prescribed drugs. If epilepsy patients are not taking their anti-epilepsy medication then it is likely their symptoms associated with epilepsy will return. We do not collect information on the number of these cases.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many women who underwent (a) in vitro fertilisation and (b) ovulation induction in England and Wales were hospitalised due to (i) serious and (ii) minor complications in each of the last five years for which information is available; [34760]

(2) how many women who underwent (a) in vitro fertilisation and (b) ovulation induction in England and Wales suffered (i) a miscarriage, (ii) bleeding, (iii) ectopic pregnancy and (iv) ovarian hyperstimulation syndrome in each of the last five years for which information is available; [34761]

(3) what recent discussions her Department has had with (a) the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, (b) the British Medical Association and (c) the Royal College of Nursing about the complications of in vitro fertilisation; and if she will make a statement. [34762]

Caroline Flint: Data on incidences of complications following in vitro fertilisation (IVF) and ovulation induction, including hospital admission for complications of these treatments, are not collected centrally by the Department nor routinely recorded by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA).

The Department has not met the professional bodies recently to discuss complications of treatment. However, the HFEA, in its role as the national regulator, regularly meets professional bodies to discuss a range of issues relating to the provision of IVF, including complications of the treatment.

Fibromyalgia

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to make the general public aware of the symptoms of fibromyalgia. [34492]

Mr. Byrne: We have no specific plans to raise public awareness of the symptoms of fibromyalgia.

NHS Direct, NHS Direct On-line and NHS Direct Interactive have been established to provide advice and information on health and self-care. Through these services, people have access to information on a range of conditions and illnesses, including fibromyalgia.

Free School Milk

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the Department for Education and Skills about the provision of free milk in schools for those aged between seven and 11 years. [35491]

Caroline Flint: No recent meetings have taken place between the Department and the Department of Education and Skills to discuss specifically the provision of free milk in schools for those aged between seven and eleven years. However, both departments meet regularly to discuss a range of issues across the school food agenda.

Good Hope Hospital (Waiting Times)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long a patient has had to wait on average for a (a) heart bypass, (b) breast cancer treatment, (c) hip replacement, (d) cataract treatment and (e) kidney transplant at Good Hope hospital in Sutton Coldfield in each year since 1997. [29382]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Median time waited, in days, for selected procedures at Good Hope Hospital National Health Service Trust, 1997–98 to 2003–04

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Breast Cancer	16	12	10	12	9	9	14
Cataract	[1]—	[1]—	7	9	118	12	13
Heart by-pass	60	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Hip replacement	204	208	168	185	330	212	210

[1] No operations in that year.

Notes:

1. There were no kidney transplant operations carried out in the years shown.

2. Ungrossed data—Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is, the data is ungrossed.

3. Main operation—The main operation is the first recorded operation in the HES data set and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode. It is appropriate to use main operation when looking at admission details, for example, time waited, but the figures for "all operations count of episodes" give a more complete count of episodes with an operation.

4. Time waited (days)—Time waited statistics from Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) are not the same as the published waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and time waited for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment on a specific date and how long they have been on the waiting list. Also, HES calculates the time waited as the difference between the admission and decision to admit dates. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-deferrals or periods of medical/social suspension.

General Practitioners

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she will abolish the 48 hour general practitioner access target. [31903]

Mr. Byrne: No.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost of salaries for general practitioners was in the last five years for which figures are available. [29689]

Mr. Byrne: Table 1 shows the total combined spend by primary care trusts (PCTs) in England, for both general medical services (GMS) and personal medical services (PMS), on payments to general practitioners and, since financial year 2004–05, practices in providing primary medical services (PMEDs) for financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05.

The cost of salaried GMS GPs included in table 1 figures are separately reported for financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04 in table 2.

Table 1: GMS/PMS total expenditure 2000 to 2004–05

	Total GMS including PMS spend (£ million)
2000–01	3,650
2001–02	3,816
2002–03	4,060
2003–04	4,623
2004–05[1]	5,905

[1] 2000–01 to 2004–05 general medical practitioner figures include both combined GMS and PMS GP spend.

Notes:

1. Data 2000–01 to 2003–04 are based on combined discretionary, non discretionary and PMS spend.

2. Data for 2004–05 nGMS Contract spend is funded solely through Discretionary Unified Allocations.

3. All data for 2000 to 2003–04 are taken from the audited health authority/PCT returns for England to the NHS summarised accounts. Data for 2004–05 are taken from the 303 PCTs in England and are unaudited. As such they are still subject to change.

Table 2: Salaried GPs 2000–04

	GMS salaried GPs only (£ million)
2000–01	3
2001–02	3
2002–03	6
2003–04	6
2004–05	n/a

Notes:

1. Salaried doctors as defined under SFA para. 52 relate to GMS only and are funded through discretionary GMS spend to the unified budget.

2. Data are taken from the HA/PCT audited returns for England 2000 to 2003–04 only. 3. Data from 2004–05 are not available centrally.

4. Separate data for PMS salaried GPs are not available centrally.

Health Outside Hospitals

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1294W, on Health Outside Hospitals, whether she had received expressions of interest to run the consultation from companies with whom the Central Office of Information did not hold framework agreements prior to the contract being awarded; when Opinion Leader Research agreed a framework agreement with the Central Office of Information; when this framework agreement was advertised in the Official Journal of the European Union; and what assessment she has made of the cost-effectiveness of restricting the number of companies to which the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" contract could be offered to those with which the Central Office of Information holds a framework agreement. [31891]

Mr. Byrne: No expressions of interest were received from companies with whom the Central Office of Information (COI) did not hold framework agreements.

Opinion Leader Research secured the current framework agreement with the Central Office of Information in December 2004. It was advertised in the Official Journal of the European Union in February 2004.

Opinion Leader Research had previous framework agreements with the Central Office of Information concurrently from 1998 to 2001 and from 2001 to 2004.

The process of restricting the number of companies, open to tender for the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" contract, to only those whom the COI held a framework reduced the amount of time taken to procure services, from several months to a few weeks, while still conforming with procurement legislation.

Health Service Commissioning

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition she uses of (a) contestability and (b) the internal market in the commissioning of national health services. [31720]

Mr. Byrne: New providers will give patients wider choice in where they receive treatment. Independent sector providers will provide a challenge by offering high quality and innovative services, and patient choice will challenge national health service providers to match the service quality and performance of the independent sector, thus promoting improved patient services.

Health Services (Uxbridge)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practices in Uxbridge constituency have (a) opened and (b) closed since 1997. [29768]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 30 September 2005, there were 11 dental surgeries working in the national health service general dental service (GDS) or personal dental service (PDS) within Uxbridge parliamentary constituency. Of these, one had opened since 30 September 1997. No dental surgeries have closed within this area in the same time period.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to promote healthy eating among (a) children and (b) the general population. [35490]

Caroline Flint: The "Choosing Health" White Paper sets out the Government's strategy to promote healthy eating among children and the general population. Action includes healthy start which reforms the welfare food scheme, the 5 A DAY programme, the school fruit and vegetable scheme, the joint Department of Health and Department of Education and Skills food in schools programme and the obesity social marketing programme.

Hemel Hempstead General Hospital

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the strategic health authority plans are for the level of services to be provided by Hemel Hempstead general hospital; and if she will make a statement. [26828]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire strategic health authority have advised that the implementation of "Investing In Your Health" will mean that Hemel Hempstead hospital will have the following:

A new state-of the-art surgicentre:

Performing thousands of elective operations every year. It should be completed by September 2007 and ready to open its doors in early October.

Over the course of a year, a similar number of patients will be seen at Hemel Hempstead hospital as at Watford hospital.

It will deliver all West Hertfordshire's day case surgery, most elective orthopaedic activity and most non-cancer related general surgery. It will also provide some planned day case paediatric surgery.

Among the procedures to be performed there will be hip and knee replacements, cataracts, grommets, tonsillectomies and hernias.

Accident and emergency (A and E) department:

Fully medically-staffed (24 hour round the clock presence of a doctor).

The department will not treat major trauma cases but it is expected that around 80 per cent. of the people currently visiting the A and E department would be safely cared for under the new arrangement. Patients will be seen and treated far more quickly than at present. Under current arrangements they have to wait as more urgent cases come in.

It will include a children's rapid assessment unit where children with an illness or injury can be assessed and then either treated or sent to a more appropriate place for treatment.

Diagnostic services:

A full range of diagnostic services such as magnetic resonance imaging, computerised tomography scan, electrocardiogram, x-ray and blood tests will be available.

Although most cancer treatment will be provided at the new state-of-the-art Hatfield hospital cancer unit, many diagnostic minor illness or injury will be seen and treated far more quickly than at present as under current arrangements they have to wait as more urgent cases come in.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to close the children's ward at Hemel Hempstead hospital; and if she will make a statement. [30261]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 21 November 2005]: Any decisions regarding the children's ward at Hemel Hempstead hospital are a matter for the local national health service, which has responsibility for the reconfiguration and delivery of local service, working in partnership with its local community.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to reopen York Ward at Hemel Hempstead hospital; and if she will make a statement. [30262]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 21 November 2005]: Any decision regarding the re-opening of York Ward at Hemel Hempstead hospital is a matter for the local national health service, which has the responsibility for the reconfiguration and delivery of local services, working in partnership with the communities it serves.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where in England the survey of prevalence of hepatitis C antibody was carried out. [33587]

Caroline Flint: The Health Protection Agency (HPA) has carried out surveys of the prevalence of hepatitis C virus (HCV) antibodies in several populations that have differing degrees of risk of acquiring HCV. These are: adults in hospitals, women attending antenatal clinics, people attending genitourinary medicine (GUM) clinics, prisoners, and injecting drug users (IDUs). These and the areas where the surveys were undertaken are outlined in the table[1].

Population surveyed	Regions covered	Date of survey
Adults in hospitals (residual sera from specimens collected)	Wales, London, South East, South West, North West, Eastern, West Midlands and Northern and Yorkshire	1996
Women attending antenatal clinics	London and Northern and Yorkshire	1996
People attending GUM clinics (includes injecting drug users)	Anglia and Oxford, London, (North Thames, South Thames), North West, Northern and Yorkshire, Trent and West Midlands	1995 and 1996
Prisoners[2]	England and Wales	1997 and 1998
Injecting drug users[3]	All regions of England	1998–2004

[1] The regional data are based on the region where samples were collected—they are not necessarily the region where individuals lived at that time.

[2] The survey covered eight prisons in England and Wales and was categorised by prison type and not by region.

[3] Data for each region are available in supplementary tables on the HPA website at: http://www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/hiv_and_sti/publications/Annual2005_ua/ua_idu_2004.pdf

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1144W, on HIV tests, if she will break down the figures by sex. [35410]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is shown in the tables.

[1] Test taken defined as KC60 codes S2 (HIV antibody test and sexual health screen) + P1A (HIV antibody test no sexual health screen).
[2] King's College Hospital does not collect information for code S2.
Notes:
The data used to compile these tables were taken from the KC60 return, which is made by all GUM clinics to the Health Protection Agency. The data does not represent the number of HIV tests offered and taken up by the population resident within each SHA, as many patients cross health boundaries to access GUM clinics. In addition, the gender and sexual orientation mix varies between clinics. Some clinics are attended by a high number of men who have sex with men and consequently this influences the number of HIV tests offered and taken.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to tackle HIV/AIDS. [33629]

Caroline Flint: Measures to reduce the spread of HIV/AIDS were set out in the "National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV" (2001) and the public health White Paper "Choosing Health", published last November, available from the Library and from the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/05/89/45/04058945.pdf.

These measures include targeted HIV prevention and health promotion work with those most at risk of HIV infection, such as gay men and African communities, provided through community organisations such as the Terence Higgins Trust and the African HIV Policy Network. The Choosing Health White Paper also announced a new high profile national campaign, to promote safer sex messages, aimed at reducing the prevalence and spread of all sexually transmitted infections including HIV. On 1 December, the Department published for consultation and action plan to tackle HIV related stigma and discrimination, which is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/39/93/04123993.pdf.

In addition to these national measures, primary care trusts are responsible for providing HIV prevention and services which meet the needs of their local populations. To support them in this role, the Department, working with professional bodies, has published recommended standards for national health service HIV services; a toolkit of best practice for sexual health promotion, and guidance on commissioning.

Hospices

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public funding has been provided to hospices in the Gravesham area in each year since 1997. [35608]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not routinely collect the data requested. The level of funding given to local hospices is a matter for discussion between the commissioning primary care trust and the hospice.

Hospital Facilities

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations she has made concerning separate (a) sleeping areas, (b) washing facilities and (c) toilet facilities in new NHS hospital buildings. [35191]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We appreciate the fact that many hospital patients feel more comfortable if they are in an area with other people of their own gender. We have set clear standards requiring the NHS to treat patients with dignity and respect, in environments that are supportive of privacy.

Guidance issued to the national health service on the design of healthcare facilities sets out best practice standards in providing separate accommodation for the sexes, and maintaining patients' privacy and dignity. Single-sex accommodation is provided in 97 per cent. of NHS trusts.

Hospital Finance

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in England are in debt; by how much in each case; and if she will make a statement. [32018]

Mr. Byrne: The latest available audited data on the financial position of national health service trusts in England is for 2004–05. The 2004–05 financial position of all NHS organisations, including NHS trusts that reported an overspend in 2004–05, has been placed in the Library. It is also available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en

Hospital Food

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 28 October 2005, Official Report, column 581W, on hospital food, if she will provide a breakdown of the information by (a) NHS trust and (b) region. [33471]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is available in the Library.

Hospital Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals are planning staff cuts; and what sectors of jobs are being cut in each case. [32189]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally. Local delivery plans suggest that the national health service is planning to increase the overall number of staff in the period from March 2004 to March 2006.

Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) new build and (b) refurbishment programmes in the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust since 1997 were completed within budget. [33571]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally but can instead be provided by the Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

Hull Royal Infirmary

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what operational capacity the MRI scanners at Hull Royal Infirmary operated in the last period for which figures are available. [32962]

Mr. Byrne: Data on the operational capacity of magnetic resonance imaging scanners are not collected centrally. Data on the number of magnetic resonance imaging scans performed in 2004–05, by national health service trusts are available at:

http://www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible heart attack victims received blood clot removing drugs within 20 minutes of arriving at the Hull Royal Infirmary in the last period for which figures are available; and what the average percentage for hospitals in England was in the same period. [32972]

Mr. Byrne: The percentage of eligible heart attack victims receiving blood clot removing drugs at Hull Royal Infirmary within 20 minutes for July to September 2005 was 48 per cent. The national aggregate average for the same period was 61 per cent.

Hull Royal Infirmary with the local ambulance service should continue to work together to increase the proportion of people suffering from heart attack who are treated within an hour of calling for help. The national target is to increase this proportion by 10 percentage points per year.

There may be good clinical reasons for taking time to administer appropriate drugs; for example, complex symptoms sometimes require more expert advice or more tests.

Immunisation

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department made of (a) the impact on general practitioners' finances and (b) the availability of immunisation services before the five-in-one vaccine was introduced; and if she will make a statement. [33539]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Uptake levels of diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, Hib and polio at 24 months of age has not changed significantly since the introduction of Pediacel in September 2004 and remains around 93 per cent. for England. No assessment has been made of the impact of Pediacel's introduction on general practitioner's finances and could not be easily done.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners have indicated that they intend to opt out of the Government's childhood immunisation programme; and if she will make a statement. [33541]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 1 December 2005]: There is no information available centrally on how many practices are planning to opt out of providing childhood immunisation services. Should they choose to do so, as provided for within the new primary medical care contractual arrangements, a practice would lose one per cent. of their global sum payment.

Intensive Care

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect on pandemic planning of a reduction in high dependency or intensive care services at Burnley General Hospital. [26125]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 29 November 2005]: It is for the local national health service to assess the potential demands in its area and to plan appropriate responses that may include opening additional capacity, cancelling or diverting planned work and providing care in a variety of locations away from traditional critical care areas.

All NHS organisations are expected to have plans in place which are appropriate for a possible human 'flu pandemic and which are regularly tested and updated. The operational guidance on planning for a 'flu pandemic originally published in May 2005 and updated in October 2005 contains planning checklists for strategic health authorities (SHAs), primary care trusts and NHS trusts to inform their plans. The Department will be working with SHAs to ensure those plans are in place across the country.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in her Department and introduced since 1997 have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee; and if she will list them. [26590]

Mr. Byrne: Since 1997 none of the Department's projects costing £1 million or more and in use was subject to scrutiny by the Public Accounts Committee.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many non-British passport holders are detained in the United Kingdom under the Mental Health Act 1983. [33110]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in implementing the objectives of (a) the Mental Health National Service Framework and (b) the NHS Plan since 2000 in (i) North West Leicestershire and (ii) England. [33287]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The implementation of the "national service framework for mental health" is envisaged to take 10 years and a comprehensive account of the progress made in the first half of the implementation period is available in the national director for mental health's report, "The National Service Framework for Mental Health—Five Years On".

Most of the targets set for mental health services in the "NHS Plan" have now been met. At the end of March, there were 343 crisis resolution, 262 assertive and 109 early intervention teams in England. In addition, 1,520 community gateway, 654 carer support and 648 graduate primary care staff were employed in the national health service.

Since the publication of the NHS Plan, 205 secure beds and 75 specialist rehabilitation hostel places for people with personality disorders have been created. The NHS Plan included a target to move up to 400 inappropriately placed patients out of the high security hospitals, which was achieved by its end of 2004 target date. All prisoners with severe mental health illness now have a care plan and 360 prison in-reach staff have been recruited to help manage prisoners with severe mental illness.

At the end of March, Leicester Partnership NHS Trust, which delivers mental health services in North West Leicestershire, was providing six crisis resolution, one early intervention and four assertive outreach teams. In addition, 38.7 whole-time equivalent (wte) graduate primary care, 10 wte community gateway and 2.2 wte carer support staff were employed by the Leicester Partnership NHS Trust at the end of March.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Healthcare Commission on measures to improve the performance of NHS mental health services. [33288]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has worked closely with the Healthcare Commission on the development of performance indicators for assessing mental heath services in 2005–06 and expects to do so for 2006–07. This covers the assessment of both mental health provider trusts and the commissioning role of primary care trusts. The Healthcare Commission's assessments of mental health services are based on the framework of standards and objectives set out in "National Standards, Local Action—Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework for 2005–06 to 2007–08".

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) talking treatments and (b) drug treatments for mental health problems delivered through primary care services in each strategic health authority area in each year between 2000–01 and 2004–05. [34355]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format. Information about spend on drugs listed in the British National Formulary Chapter 4 (central nervous system drugs) that were dispensed in the community in England in each year from 2001–02 to 2004–05 is shown in table 1.

2000–01	915,273,032
2001–02	1,077,116,609
2002–03	1,217,777,827
2003–04	1,346,269,724
2004–05	1,439,405,155

Notes:

Prescription information is taken from the Prescription Cost Analysis system, supplied by the Prescription Pricing Authority, and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community (i.e. by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England.) Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospitals, including mental health trusts, or private prescriptions.

Information about spend on talking treatments that were delivered in primary care is not held centrally by the Department. The National Survey of Investment in Mental Health Services has captured information on planned spend on psychological therapy services since 2001–02. This information is shown in table 2 and reports of the National Survey of Investment in Mental Health Services for each financial year from 2001–02 to 2004–05 are available at www.dh.gov.uk

2001–02	103,471,000
2002–03	122,052,000

2004–05	141,378,000

New Vaccines

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) role and (b) process is of (i) the National Institute for Healthcare and Clinical Excellence and (ii) the Joint Committee for Vaccines and Immunisation in (A) approving and (B) licensing new vaccines; and if she will make a statement. [31202]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) was set up to give advice to the national health service on best clinical practice including clinical and cost effectiveness of drugs and other treatments. Details of NICE'S processes and methodologies are available on NICE'S website at www.nice.org.uk.

The Joint Committee for Vaccines and Immunisation (JCVI) has no role in licensing new vaccines. The Medicines Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is responsible for licensing vaccines. In this work MHRA would seek advice from the Commission on Human Medicines (CHM), the Government's independent safety experts.

The JCVI's role is to advise the Secretaries of State for Health, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland on matters relating to communicable diseases, preventable and potentially preventable through immunisation. The JCVI does make recommendations to the Secretaries of State on the suitability of new vaccines for the national immunisation programme.

The JCVI committee and the institute have collaborated to work on topics such as the use of antiviral agents for influenza.

NHS Doctors (Suspensions)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to ensure that national health service doctors suspended by hospital trusts have their cases dealt with (i) justly and (ii) speedily; and if she will make a statement. [35966]

Jane Kennedy: We took steps in 2001 to improve the performance of the NHS in dealing with suspensions by establishing the National Clinical Assessment Authority, which is now part of the National Patient Safety Agency. New suspensions procedures agreed in 2004 gave the National Clinical Assessment Authority a key role in advising on the management of all suspensions. By April 2005, the total of long-term exclusions of all types, including what was previously called gardening leave, had halved from 56 in June 2003 to a figure of 25.

A new disciplinary framework agreed with the medical and dental professions was implemented in June this year. It is mandatory across NHS trusts and will speed up local procedures for handling disciplinary cases.

Notes:

Complete new entrant means the dentist had an open GDS or PDS contract in September of the specified year but no GDS or PDS contract in September of the previous year.

Dental Practice Board

NHS Bodies

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed by the (a) Dental Practice Board, (b) NHS Logistics Authority, (c) NHS Pensions Agency, (d) Prescription Pricing Authority and (e) NHS Counter Fraud and Security management service; and where each of their main centres of employment is. [32022]

Jane Kennedy: The establishment numbers, in whole time equivalents, (wte) as at 1 April 2005 and the centres of employment for the organisations requested are:

Organisation	Centres of employment	Establishment (wte)
Dental Practice Board	Eastbourne	273
NHS Logistics Authority[1]	Mainly Alfreton, with other distribution centres in: Bury St. Edmunds Maidstone Normanton Runcorn Bristol Bridgwater	1,313
NHS Pensions Agency	Fleetwood	367
Prescription Pricing Authority	Mainly Newcastle with smaller operations divisions in: Bolton Durham Liverpool Manchester Preston Sheffield Wakefield West Bromwich	2,123
NHS Counter Fraud and Security Management Service	London	251

[1] Represents the actual headcount (in wtes) and does not include open vacancies

NHS Logistics

Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent by NHS trusts in 2003–04 on consumable goods not purchased from NHS Logistics; and how much of that sum is represented by (a) drugs, (b) medical and surgical equipment-maintenance, (c) x-ray equipment purchase, (d) x-ray film and chemicals-purchase, (e) x-ray equipment-maintenance, (f) laboratory equipment maintenance, (g) contract hotel services (including cleaning), (h) postage, (i) telephones, (j) advertising, (k) travel, (l) subsistence and removal expenses, (m) other transport costs, (n) electricity, (o) gas, (p) other fuels, (q) water and sewerage, (r) external general services contracts, (s) furniture, office and computer equipment, (t) computer hardware, maintenance contracts and data processing contracts, (u) business rates, (v) rent, (w) building and engineering equipment, (x) building and engineering contracts, (y) total purchase of healthcare from non-national health service bodies, (z) total external contract staffing and consultancy services and (aa) auditors' remuneration; [32879]

(2) how much each NHS trust spent in 2003–04 on consumable goods (a) purchased and (b) not purchased from NHS Logistics; [32878]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 28 October 2005, Official Report, column 585W, on NHS Logistics, how many of the products and services were purchased direct from the manufacturers and service providers by NHS trusts. [32880]

Jane Kennedy: The following table shows those categories of products and services used by NHS Trusts which are not purchased through the NHS Logistics Authority, or where, as indicated, there is minimal activity.

The spend by NHS trusts for 2003–04 for these categories was as follows.

Products and services—2003–04	£
Drugs (including Gases)[1]	2,307,732,964
Medical and Surgical Equipment—Maintenance	114,079,014

Total Non-Pay Revenue Expenditure	9,697,539,332

[1] Minimal activity through the NHS Logistics Authority
[2] Not able to break this down into individual categories of *(k)travel,(i)* subsistence and removal expenses.

The information requested in relation to consumable goods (a) purchased and (b) not purchased from NHS Logistics is not readily available and could be only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The quantities of products and services purchased direct from the manufacturers and service providers by NHS trusts is not readily available and could only be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NHS Pensions Agency

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the likely impact on staff employed to deliver NHS student grants and bursaries at Hesketh House in Fleetwood when the NHS Pensions Agency based on that site is contracted out of the Department; [26422]

(2) how many organisations put in bids to take up the contract to run the NHS Pensions Agency; [26424]

(3) if she will place in the Library the business case produced on the contracting out of the NHS Pensions Agency; [26425]

(4) what assessment she has made of the likely impact on jobs at Hesketh House in Fleetwood of the contracting out of the work of the NHS Pensions Agency; [26426]

(5) what consultation she expects the new NHS Business Services Authority to undertake when it implements the process of contracting out the NHS Pensions Agency; [26427]

(6) if she will list those she consulted on the decision to contract out the work of the NHS Pensions Agency; [26428]

(7) when the decision was made to contract out the work of the NHS Pensions Agency based at Hesketh House in Fleetwood. [26429]

Jane Kennedy: The NHS Pensions Agency is to become part of the Business Services Authority (BSA) on 1 April 2006. This was first announced in the report, "Reconfiguring the Department of Health's Arm's Length Bodies" published in July 2004. This report reflected Government policy to reduce costs of administration through modernisation of systems and use of private sector capability where appropriate. "The Implementation Framework for Reconfiguring the DH's Arm's Length Bodies:, redistributing resources to the NHS frontline" published in November 2004 built on this approach. In implementing these reports, consideration is being given to market testing a wide range of the BSA's functions, not just those of the NHS Pensions Agency.

Following a review of the NHS Pensions Agency by KPMG, a report recommending full outsourcing of this mostly administrative business was published on 21 May 1998. The decision to outsource elements of the business was announced on 6 March 2000. The KPMG report was placed in the Library of the House on the same day. Expressions of interest were invited through the official Journal of the European Community on 20 June 2000 and 33 organisations responded.

The outcome of the procurement process was to award a contract covering about half of the NHS Pensions Agency's functions to Paymaster (1836) Limited with an option to expand to all its functions at a point in the future. The contractual terms agreed at that time obliged the NHS Pensions Agency to negotiate with Paymaster (1836) Limited first on any proposed expansion of the outsourcing arrangements.

Should a decision be made to expand the existing outsourcing arrangements at the NHS Pensions Agency, full consultation will be undertaken with both trade unions and employees.

If outsourcing some or all of the NHS Pensions Agency is extended as a result of current negotiations, employees dealing with NHS Pensions and the student bursary scheme will transfer to the private sector partner under the provisions of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations.

The resulting contract with the private sector supplier will reflect the principles of the Joint Statement of Good Practice issued on 6 October 2005 by the Department, NHS Employers, the Confederation of British Industry and the Business Services Association, together with a number of trade unions. That statement commits private sector suppliers who contract with the NHS to meet minimum standards on pay, conditions of service and work force issues.

Similarly, contractors are required to offer all transferring NHS employees membership of a pension scheme broadly comparable to the NHS scheme.

NHS Professionals

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects NHS Professionals to become completely self-funding; [30956]

(2) what the average time taken was between an invoice being received and payment being made by users of services of NHS Professionals in the last year for which figures are available; [31068]

(3) how many statutory demands for payment NHS Professionals has received in each year since its creation; [31074]

(4) how much NHS Professionals has spent on external consultants in each year since its creation; [31077]

(5) what percentage of suppliers of services to NHS Professionals are waiting for payment of services rendered (a) three months to six months ago, (b) six months to 12 months ago and (c) 12 months ago or longer; [31078]

(6) what the total amount of payment made to suppliers of services to NHS Professionals has been to compensate for late payment and other associated legal costs since it became operational; and if she will make a statement. [31079]

Mr. Byrne: NHS Professionals is currently working with officials in the Department to develop a three year corporate strategy underpinned by annual business plans so that it can become self-financing and prepare to take on independent status from 2007–08 as proposed in the review of Departmental arm's length bodies in 2004.

NHS Professionals meets the Best Payment Practice in the NHS, which requires at least 95 per cent. of suppliers to be paid within 30 days. During the financial year 2004–05 it received two statutory demands for payment, paid a total of £2,000 to compensate for late payment and other associated legal costs and spent a total of £2.5 million on external consultants. The external consultant costs included the provision of internal audit facilities, support for the relocation of the main offices in the south to a new contact centre and the development of a new booking system. Information relating to the percentage of suppliers of services to NHS Professionals waiting for payment of services rendered is not held centrally.

NHS Reforms

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) NHS staff and (b) trade unions about the implications for staff of the reforms proposed in Commissioning a Patient-led NHS. [19647]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has had several discussions with stakeholders. In our proposals sent out on 28 July, we indicated that we were minded to require primary care trusts (PCTs) to reduce their service-provision functions by the end of 2008. Since that document, we have listened to stakeholders. The policy moving forward, in relation to service-provision, is that this will be a matter for PCTs to determine locally. So any move away from direct provision of services will be a decision for the local NHS within the framework set out in the forthcoming White Paper and after local consultation, including professions allied to medicine.

We will support PCTs who want to do that, but we will not instruct PCTs to do it, nor will we impose any timetable. What matters is getting the best services for each community—and that is what the White Paper will focus on.

Nurses

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the nurses who qualified in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 found nursing employment in the NHS. [32066]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses have been employed by Lancashire NHS Teaching Trust in each year since 1997. [33519]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Obesity

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department spent on reducing obesity in each of the last 30 months; how much the Department plans to spend on reducing obesity in the next 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [32752]

Caroline Flint: It is not possible to separate out the total amount spent by the Department on reducing obesity over the last 30 months. However, a number of nutrition and physical activity interventions have contributed to tackling obesity. The 2005–06 cost of these include £2 million for the Five-a-day programme, £135 million for Healthy Start, £36.8 million for the school fruit and vegetable scheme, £1.2 million for local exercise action pilots (LEAP) and £1 million for pedometers. Primary care trusts have also received £3 million for training on obesity.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the incentives available to general practitioners to (a) identify and (b) treat obesity in children; [33111]

(2) what incentives are available to general practitioners (a) to identify and (b) to manage obesity in children. [33351]

Caroline Flint: There are no specific incentives for identifying or treating childhood obesity in the current general medical services (GMS) contract. However, under the new GMS contractual arrangements, general practitioners must provide essential services that would include the provision of advice in connections with the care of obese children, including relevant health promotions advice.

Ostomy, Incontinence and Wound Care

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to change the arrangements for the provision of (a) ostomy, (b) incontinence and (c) wound care services and related products; and if she will make a statement. [34052]

Jane Kennedy: The Department is conducting a formal consultation about possible changes to the arrangements for the provision of dressings, incontinence appliances, stoma appliances, chemical reagents and other appliances to primary and secondary care.

The consultation was published on 24 October 2005 and closes on 23 January 2006.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England are receiving (a) ostomy, (b) incontinence and (c) wound care (i) products and (ii) services from the NHS. [34054]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected by the Department.

Postnatal Care

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of stay in hospital is after delivery for women who have given birth. [34430]

Mr. Byrne: The length of stay in hospital after delivery for women who have given birth is a decision for the medical professionals involved and will vary depending on the medical circumstances of each individual case. In 2003–04, about 15 per cent. of women left hospital on the same day as delivery took place, about 35 per cent. left the next day, 20 per cent. two days later and 15 per cent. three days later.

Poverty-induced Ill Health

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to (a) commission and (b) evaluate research on the relationship between poverty and ill health; and if she will make a statement. [34689]

Caroline Flint: The Department is not currently funding and has no plans to commission studies specifically related to poverty and health.

The Department has supported and continues to support a range of studies looking at associated issues. Over the last eight years, research has been commissioned on both the impact of socio-economic circumstances on health, and also on the impact of mainstream and targeted services. For example, projects have been supported on inequalities in the outcome of pregnancy; the health effects of welfare advice in primary care; and on the effect of out of home day care on the health of disadvantaged families. A project on inequalities in the health of older people looked at the association between health and material and social well-being among older people using various indicators.

In addition, the Department is the principal funder, with other Government Departments, of the five-year English Longitudinal Study of Ageing. The study was begun in 2003 and is gathering data on income, housing, health and other areas from its representative sample of some 12,000 people aged 50 and over.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects final proposals for the reconfiguration of primary care trusts to be published; whether these proposals will be put out for public consultation; and when she expects the proposals to be given effect. [25108]

Mr. Byrne: On 15 October, strategic health authorities (SHAs) submitted their proposals for the reconfiguration of primary care trusts (PCTs), which set out how they intend to strengthen their commissioning function. These proposals were assessed by an independent external panel drawn from and representing a wide range of stakeholder interests, to determine whether the SHA proposals meet the criteria stipulated in "Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS" (July 2005).

Following consideration by the external panel and Ministers, proposals for PCT reconfiguration will go forward for local consultation in December. The consultation period will begin on 14 December, running for 14 weeks.

No decisions on the reorganisation of PCTs will be taken until this process has been completed. However, we anticipate, subject to local consultation, that the first organisational changes will come into effect from early summer.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to grant strategic health authorities powers (a) to remove the chief executives of primary and acute trusts and (b) to require primary care trusts to outsource or market test services; and if she will make a statement. [28655]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 November 2005]: We have no plans to extend powers to strategic health authorities to remove the chief executives of primary and acute trusts.

There is no requirement for primary care trusts to outsource or market test services.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what administrative savings have been made by the Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust since its inception; and what the forecast figures were for such savings. [32040]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold information on administrative savings or on forecast savings figures for primary care trusts.

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department is able to offer additional support to a primary care trust which has failed to pay (a) sums it owes to a social services authority under an agreement under section 31 of the Health Act 1999 and (b) its business rates; and if she will make a statement. [33468]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 1 December 2005]: All national health service bodies are required to pay undisputed invoices within a reasonable time period.

Strategic health authorities monitor the performance of individual NHS bodies and work with poor performance organisations to achieve and maintain a level of payment performance consistent with government accounting regulations and the Better Payment Practice Code.

The growth in financial allocation to primary care trusts (PCTs) for 2005–06, 2006–07 and 2007–08 was 9.6 per cent., 9.2 per cent. and 9.4 per cent. respectively. The Department does not plan to offer any additional support to PCTs.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the revised proposals for the reconfiguration of strategic health authorities and primary care trusts in (a) Lancashire and Cumbria and (b) elsewhere in England meet the 15 per cent. savings criteria set out in Sir Nigel Crisp's letter of 28 July; and if she will make a statement. [35206]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Each strategic health authority has submitted for consultation reconfiguration proposals which will achieve their share of the required £250 million savings.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed in communication roles in each primary care trust on 1 October (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005; and if she will make a statement. [32629]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Public Engagement Contracts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 991W, on public engagement contracts, which other companies were asked to tender for the contract to run the Your Health, Your Care, Your Say consultation. [31896]

Mr. Byrne: The tender for the Your Health, Your Care, Your Say, consultation was issued to four agencies, three of which responded; ICM Research, Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) and Opinion Leader Research (OLR).

Public Service Agreements

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she will measure progress towards meeting her Department's Public Service Agreement target to offer a personalised care plan for vulnerable people most at risk. [35196]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on Monday 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1705–6W.

Racial Equality

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many race equality impact assessments her Department had completed in the period (a) April 2004 to March 2005 and (b) April 2005 to November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32840]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the period April 2004 to March 2005, 29 policies were assessed as part of the regulatory impact assessment process for race equality impact. None of these revealed the need for full race equality impact assessment. No race equality impact assessments have been completed since April 2005.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance the Commission for Racial Equality has given to the Department on the time within which a race equality impact assessment should be carried out in relation to published legislative proposals. [33280]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Commission for Racial Equality has issued guidance to public bodies on producing and publishing race equality impact assessments, but this does not prescribe specific timescales. The Department arrangements for publishing such assessments are set out in its race equality scheme for 2005 to 2008.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the average waiting times for (a) radical and (b) palliative radiotherapy in the area covered by Lancashire NHS Teaching Trust. [33518]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) of 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 407W, on radiotherapy, if she will make a statement on her plans for an 18-week waiting time target. [34735]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The 18 week pathway for December 2008 will measure from general practitioner referral to the start of hospital treatment including, where appropriate, radiotherapy. As is the case now, where the clinician decides that the patient requires urgent treatment waiting times will be much shorter. The national health service cancer plan targets will remain in place.

Rapid Review Panel

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the letter sent to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire by the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Liverpool, Wavertree (Jane Kennedy), on the Rapid Review Panel, dated 25 October, of the 118 products which have been reviewed by the Rapid Review Panel, if she will list the products which are in widespread use; and what estimate she has made of the time saved in introducing these products into widespread NHS use by the rapid review panel's proceedings. [32071]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not collected centrally but to 29 November 2005, 134 products have been reviewed by the Rapid Review Panel (RRP) and reported on the Health Protection Agency's (HPA) website.

Of these products, Bardex 1C silver alloy hydrocel catheter, Dermamed skin protectant and Chloraprep topical antiseptic were given a recommendation 1, which means a clear benefit has been shown.

Bardex 1C was introduced into national health service logistics stock in September 2005 and 15 trusts have so far begun to draw stock from this supply but others may be purchasing direct from the supplier. Chloraprep topical antiseptic is currently subject to consultation regarding its licence status and further information on Dermamed is being sought by the Purchasing and Supply Agency.

Respiratory Diseases

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) Rainham and Wennington and South Hornchurch wards and (b) the remaining wards of the London borough of Havering were diagnosed with (i) lung cancer, (ii) asthma, (iii) pneumonia and (iv) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease in each of the last five years; and what the national average number of cases of each disease was in each year. [34515]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected centrally for all the conditions that are being requested. However the information in the table shows the number of newly diagnosed cases of lung cancer in South Hornchurch, Rainham and Wennington ward and the London borough of Havering and England for the period covering 1999 to 2003.

Numbers of newly diagnosed cases of lung cancer by selected areas and England, 1999–2003

Area	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	Total
South Hornchurch ward	11	14	8	7	15	55
Rainham and Wennington ward	9	9	8	7	8	41
Total for the remaining wards of Havering London borough	128	155	159	107	154	703
England	31,778	31,439	31,131	30,328	29,889	154,559

School Food

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to source a greater proportion of the produce used in the school fruit and vegetables scheme from the UK. [35053]

Caroline Flint: We are obliged to tender competitively for the school fruit and vegetable scheme supply contracts and cannot, under current European Union competition law, favour United Kingdom growers in our tendering process.

We are keen to explore ways of maximising locally grown produce and have designed the consumption calendar to reflect any seasonality for produce on a national and international level. Some products cannot be grown in the UK.

Secondments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 285W, on secondments, whether pension contributions for those NHS staff who are seconded to her Department are paid by her Department; and how many staff are on secondment or loan (a) into and (b) out of her Department expressed as a headcount. [36606]

Jane Kennedy: Staff seconded into the Department from the national health service will normally remain on their own organisation's payroll and the Department will reimburse their salary and pension contribution.

There are currently 49 staff on secondment or loan into the Department.

There are currently 180 staff recorded on the human resource systems as being on secondment or loan out of the Department.

Selby and York NHS Primary Care Trust

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the financial situation is of the Selby and York NHS primary care trust. [34718]

Mr. Byrne: Selby and York primary care trust (PCT) recorded a deficit of £6.6 million in 2004–05 and is projecting a deficit of £9.968 million in the current financial year. The PCT is working with its national health service partner organisations to put in place a financial recovery plan.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the decision of York and Selby Primary Care Trust to delay referrals of all non-urgent cases for up to six months or more; and if she will make a statement; [34517]

(2) what representations she has received on the decision of Selby and York NHS Primary Care Trust to delay the treatment of non-urgent cases; [34716]

(3) what assessment she has made of the impact on the York Hospital NHS Trust of the cancellation of non-urgent operations; and if she will make a statement. [34717]

Mr. Byrne: From December all patients will receive inpatient treatment within six months of the decision being made to treat. Patients residing within the Selby and York Primary Care Trust area will receive treatment within this timeframe. The Department has received no representations on this issue.

Sexual Health

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was available to (a) North Somerset primary care trust and (b) all English primary care trusts for sexual health-related issues in the last year for which figures are available. [33686]

Caroline Flint: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for providing sexual health services which meet the needs of their local populations. Records are not held centrally of the amounts made available for sexual health by each PCT.

In addition to local allocations, certain additional amounts of funding have been allocated by the Department in order to implement the national strategy for sexual health and HIV, and the sexual health elements of the "Choosing Health" White Paper. North Somerset PCT have received £125,000 for 2004–05. For all English PCTs, the total figure for 2004–05 is £37,765,000 capital and revenue funding.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of funding was for sexual health services in Easington primary care trust in each year since 2002. [34063]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, the Department has allocated the following funding to Easington primary care trust as the lead PCT for the Durham Chlamydia screening programme, which is shown in the table.

	Funding (£)
2003–04	150,000
2004–05	301,000
2005–06	478,000
Total	929,000

Notes:
The funding is allocated to Easington PCT which is then shared with the other Durham PCTs (Darlington, Derwentside, Durham and Chester-le-Street, Durham Dales, and Sedgefield)

Dept of Health

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will begin the national advertising campaign on sexual health announced by her predecessor on 26 November 2004. [34225]

Caroline Flint: Our current plans are to aim to launch the new sexual health campaign around spring 2006.

Shropshire and Staffordshire Health Authority

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget of the Shropshire and Staffordshire Health Authority is for 2005–06; and what plans she has to increase this budget for the next financial year. [24292]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority has a resource budget of £5.0 million for its running costs in 2005–06.

The Department has not determined strategic health authority budgets for 2006–07.

Smoking

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have suffered observable damage as a result of their mothers smoking during pregnancy in each year for the last 10 years. [34425]

Caroline Flint: The figures requested are not routinely collected.

The national health service leaflet, "Smoking in Pregnancy" sets out the substantial risks that smoking in pregnancy presents including slow growth of the foetus, premature birth, stillbirth, low birth weight, and cot death. A copy of the leaflet is available in the Library.

Spinal Injuries

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the spinal injuries units in England; and if she will make a statement. [34288]

Mr. Byrne: There are 11 spinal injury units in the United Kingdom. Eight of theses specialist spinal cord injury centres are based in England and are listed as follows:

The North of England Spinal Injuries Centre
The James Cook University Hospital
Marton Road, Middlesbrough
Cleveland TS4 3BW
The Midland's Centre for Spinal Injuries
The Robert Jones & Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital
Oswestry
Shropshire SY10 7AG
The Duke of Cornwall Spinal Treatment Centre
Salisbury District Hospital
Odstock Road
Salisbury SP2 8BJ
The Princess Royal Spinal Injuries Unit
Northern General Hospital
Osborne Building
Merries Road
Sheffield S5 7AU
The Regional Spinal Injuries Centre
Southport and Formby General Hospital
Town Lane
Kew
Southport PR8 6NJ
The London Spinal Injuries Unit
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital
Brockley Hill
Stanmore HA7 4LP
National Spinal Injuries Centre
Stoke Mandeville Hospital
Mandeville Road
Aylesbury
Bucks HP21 8AL
Yorkshire Regional Spinal Injuries Unit
Pinderfields General Hospital
Aberford Road
Wakefield WF1 4DG

Following the year-long review that the Department announced in April, 2003, new arrangements for the commissioning of specialised services were introduced. Strategic health authorities and primary care trusts now have responsibility for the planning, commissioning and monitoring of specialised services, working collaboratively within regional commissioning consortia. They should assess the healthcare needs of their population and commission services for their local area.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many serious spinal cord injuries have occurred in each of the last five years. [34289]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the table.

Count of finished consultant episodes where primary diagnosis is spinal cord injury in national health service hospitals England 1999–2000 to 2003–04

	Finished consultant episodes
1999–2000	698

Stem Cell Research

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diseases were cured as a result of (a) adult and (b) embryonic stem cell research in each year since 2002; and if she will make a statement. [34532]

Jane Kennedy: Research with embryonic stem cells has been licensed to allow scientists to understand and develop treatments for conditions such as motor neurone disease, diabetes and cystic fibrosis. It is still too early to speak of cures, but scientific and medical opinion is that stem cell research will revolutionise medicine in the 21st century.

There has been a number of encouraging early stage clinical trials with adult embryonic stem cells. As a result of the United Kingdom stem cell initiative, the Government are investing £100 million in stem cell research and clinical trials over the next two years.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the ongoing projects using embryonic stem cells; and if she will make a statement. [34533]

Jane Kennedy: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA) is responsible for licensing research to produce embryonic stem cell lines. A list of current licenses can be obtained from the HFEA website http://www.hfea.gov.uk/Research.

There are no central figures for research involving embryonic stem cell lines, but the Medical Research Council's Stem Cell Steering Committee maintains details of embryonic stem cell lines that have been ethically sourced with informed donor consent.

In response to the United Kingdom stem cell initiative, the Government have announced a total investment of £100 million in stem cell research over the next two years.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what capital allocations she expects to be made to the Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority over the next three years; and for what purpose each allocation will be made. [35161]

Caroline Flint: No decisions have yet been made on national health service capital allocations for 2006–07 onwards.

The last round of capital allocations was announced in January 2003, covering 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed in the NHS in each strategic health authority in London. [35621]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is shown in the table as national health service staff by main staff group for London Government office region by strategic health authority, as at 30 September 2004.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether strategic health authorities have a duty to report problems experienced by their constituent trusts in paying their suppliers to her Department. [34282]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities are required to monitor the performance of individual national health service bodies and work with poor performing organisations to achieve and maintain a level of payment performance consistent with Government accounting regulations and the better payment practice code.

SHAs do not have a specific duty to report problems experienced by NHS trusts and primary care trusts within their health economy to the Department, but, they do report to the Department on all aspects of performance.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [34136]

Jane Kennedy: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Temporary/Agency Staff

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) temporary and (b) agency staff there were in the Department in each year since 2002. [36921]

Jane Kennedy: For information on temporary staff, I refer my hon. Friend to table A in Civil Service Statistics which covers permanent and temporary staff numbers (full-time equivalent basis) in the Department. Civil Service Statistics are available in the Library and on the Cabinet Office Statistics website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

Information on agency staff is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, we are currently in the process of improving the data coverage of our human resource system and will in future include information on all non-permanent departmental staff.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to reduce the number of (a) agency and (b) non-permanent staff employed in her Department. [37216]

Jane Kennedy: The Department reports regularly to its managers on its establishment and vacancy factors to enable them to manage resources effectively. Recruitment controls that were in place during the Department's change programme have been relaxed to allow managers to recruit to posts, thus reducing the need for temporary cover.

Urology Services

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the oral statement of 20 July 2005, Official Report, column 503WH, on the review of urology services at the Kent and Canterbury hospital, when she expects an announcement to be made on the future of the services. [35002]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 8 December 2005]: This is a local matter. However, the Kent and Medway strategic health authority has advised that it is anticipated that an announcement on the outcome of the review of urology services at Kent and Canterbury hospital will be made following a meeting to be held on 19 December 2005.

Worcestershire NHS Mental Health Trust

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget was for the Worcestershire NHS Mental Health Trust in each year since 1997. [32460]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Worcestershire Mental Health Partnership National Health Service Trust was established (as the Worcestershire Community and Mental Health NHS Trust) on 1 April 2000. Comparable figures are not available prior to 2000–01.

The following tables show the total income for the trust each year.

Worcestershire community and mental health NHS trust
Total income: £000

	Amount
2000–01	82,692
2001–02	89,824
2002–03	52,241

Working Time Directive

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of the European working time directive on the quality and depth of training received by junior doctors; [33313]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of the European working time directive on continuity of patient care. [33315]

Mr. Byrne: This Government are committed to the overall aims of the working time directive (WTD) and ensuring fair working hours for doctors in training.

The national health service is introducing changes to the way that hospitals are organised that improves continuity of care, including the hospital at night project. Changes to working patterns means it is increasingly important to make best use of training opportunities throughout the whole of the working day. The better managed, better structured and more robust training arrangements set out in modernising medical careers (MMC) will lead to more meaningful and focused training. This should be a benefit in developing rotas to support the implementation of the working time directive.

Standards for postgraduate medical training are set by the Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board. A doctor cannot be entered on the specialist register until these standards have been met.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the workload of (a) consultants and (b) registrars following implementation of the European working time directive; [33316]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of the European working time directive on clinical exposure for surgical trainees; [33317]

(3) what research her Department has undertaken into the impact of the European working time directive on (a) junior doctors and (b) surgical trainees. [33318]

Mr. Byrne: The working time directive (WTD) was implemented for the vast majority of national health service staff groups in 1998 in accordance with regulations. The Government negotiated an extension to the WTD for doctors in training to enable phased implementation from August 2004.

Implementation of the WTD is the responsibility of NHS trusts, and all employees are entitled to appropriate working hours and rest breaks.

However, the Department of Health in England worked with the health professions and NHS employers to provide joint guidance and invested an extra £46 million to support WTD implementation, including 20 national pilots and the hospital at night project. We are also funding independent research on the impact of WTD on medical training.

Standards for postgraduate medical training are set by the Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board. A doctor cannot be entered on the specialist register until these standards have been met.

CABINET OFFICE

Christmas Presents

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the cost is of employing people to wrap Christmas presents for the Prime Minister's Office; and if he will make a statement. [37236]

Mr. Jim Murphy: No staff are employed to wrap Christmas presents for the Prime Minister's Office.

Ecovert plc

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contracts have been entered into between the Cabinet Office and Ecovert plc in the last three years. [37237]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Following a competitive tendering exercise, the Cabinet Office entered into a contract with Ecovert FM Ltd. on 1 April 2002 for the provision of a total facilities management service covering its estate in London and Basingstoke. This includes ad hoc project works. The Cabinet Office has not entered into any other contracts with Ecovert FM Ltd.

Public Bodies

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to how many posts in public bodies he has the power to appoint individuals. [36617]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is responsible for making appointments to five advisory non-departmental public bodies. These are the Advisory Committee on Advertising; the Advisory Panel on Public Sector Information; the Better Regulation Task Force (which becomes the Better Regulation Commission on 1 January 2006); the Civil Service Appeal Board; and, the Security Vetting Appeals Panel. Further information about these bodies can be found on the Public Bodies database at http://www.knowledgenetwork.gov.uk/ndpb/ndpb.nsf/

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36679]

Mr. Jim Murphy: No former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to a public body sponsored by the Department.

Prime Minister's Delivery Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff are employed by the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit; and at what grade. [35974]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit's agreed staffing profile for 2005–06 was 41.5 full-time equivalent staff, breaking down as the following mix of grades:

	Number
Senior Civil Service 3	1
Senior Civil Service 2	3
Senior Civil Service 1	14
Cabinet Office Band A	14.5
Cabinet Office Band B2	4
Cabinet Office Band B1	4
Cabinet Office Band C2	1

In October 2005 the unit expanded, with seven posts transferring in from elsewhere in the Cabinet Office to work on an initiative to assess the wider capability of Whitehall Departments to deliver their objectives. Their grade breakdown is as follows:

	Number
Senior Civil Service 2	1
Senior Civil Service 1	2
Cabinet Office Band A	3
Cabinet Office Band B1	1

As with any unit that actively manages its staffing complement through turnover and succession planning, at any given point PMDU may have slightly more or fewer staff than the profile quoted aforementioned.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clergy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners how many retired Church of England clergy who are in receipt of a pension have subsequently returned to the ministry full-time. [37933]

Sir Stuart Bell: For the majority of clergy, ministry does not cease when they retire and start to receive a pension. Many retired clergy continue to make a vital contribution through honorary and assistant ministry. Occasionally they are licensed to a benefice and may even receive a part-stipend in addition to their pension. The Pensions Board has discretion to suspend or reduce pension if the recipient is in work which falls within the definition of pensionable service. The total they receive by way of pension and stipend should not exceed the National Minimum Stipend (currently £18,060 p.a.).

In 2004 there were two such cases and there have also been two cases so far in 2005. Aggregate figures for all retired clergy are not available.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Appeal Court Hearings

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeals were heard by the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) where there were (a) two Appeal Court judges and (b) one Appeal Court judge sitting in each of the last five years for which information is available. [36186]

Ms Harman: The number of appeals heard when there were two judges sitting in the full Court of Appeal is set out in the table. No appeals were heard by a judge sitting alone in the full Court of Appeal.

December to November each year	Number
2000–01	268
2001–02	623
2002–03	726
2003–04	607
2004–05	665

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the cases heard by the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) in which all proceedings are complete where there were (a) two Appeal Court judges and (b) one Appeal Court judge sitting in each of the last five years for which information is available. [37541]

Ms Harman: A list setting out the names of cases where an application or appeal was heard by two judges sitting in the full Court of Appeal has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. No applications or appeals were heard by a judge sitting alone in the full Court of Appeal.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance she issues about the number of judges required to hear an appeal in the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division); what the (a) maximum and (b) minimum number of judges required is to hear an appeal before that Court; and if she will make a statement. [37542]

Ms Harman: No guidance is issued by the Minister. The governing provisions in section 55, Supreme Court Act 1981 do not set a maximum number of judges; a court consisting of two judges may be duly constituted for the hearing of an appeal against sentence but cannot hear an appeal against conviction, for which a minimum of three judges is required.

Civil Legal Aid (Gravesham)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the availability of civil legal aid to people living in Gravesham. [37620]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission contracts with service providers throughout England and Wales to provide a range of legal and advice services across different categories of law.

There are currently six service providers with a contract to undertake civil legal aid work in Gravesham. Service providers in Gravesham may help people who live outside the area, and people who live in Gravesham may visit a service provider in a different area.

Any person residing in England or Wales can access free quality legal advice and information through Community Legal Service Direct. This service is available direct to the public through a telephone line, website and information leaflets.

Departmental Guidance (Evidence/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what her policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document she gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons select committees. [37409]

Bridget Prentice: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures, and for the provision of information to the assemblies, will be considered on a case by case basis. This consideration will reflect the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees (July 2005)" and the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note 12, "Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures"; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act.

The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committee are set out in "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees", particularly sections 4B and 4C.

External Media Relations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much her Department spent on external media relations in each year since 2001. [29575]

Bridget Prentice: The Department spent nothing in 2001–02, £14,100 in 2002–03, £154,140 in 2003–04 and £141,451 in 2004–05. This can be explained primarily by spending on independent PR consultants by the Commission for Judicial Appointments and spending on the Living Together campaign which aims to increase awareness and understanding of the legal issues surrounding cohabitation.

High Sheriffs

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the arrangements were for (a) the advertisement of vacancies and (b) the selection of nominees in preparing the 2005 nominations for high sheriffs in England and Wales. [34448]

Ms Harman: The arrangements for seeking nominees are a matter for individual counties. Local selection panels are, however, encouraged to cast the net as widely as possible and to consider candidates from a wide variety of backgrounds.

Media Relations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much the Department has spent on external media relations in each month of the last year. [14683]

Bridget Prentice [pursuant to the reply, 24 November 2005, Official Report, c. 1355W]: The Department spent £10,415.41 on external media relations in each month of the last year. I had previously stated that the amount spent was £5,670 but this figure failed to take account of spending by the Commission for Judicial Appointments on independent consultants.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Broadcasting

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her latest estimate is of the number of non-digital television sets in the UK; what the average is per household; what the estimated cost to the Government is of (a) digital switchover and (b) support to viewers on low incomes to facilitate changeover; and if she will make a statement. [32204]

James Purnell: On 8 November 2005, Ofcom published research by the Generics Group[1] which examined the cost and power consumption implications of digital switchover for UK households. The report estimates that there are 24.8 million primary sets and 24.3 million secondary sets in regular use. This excludes television sets that are used exclusively for other purposes such as video gaming. Ofcom's most recent figures for digital take up were published on 9 December 2005. As of 30 September 2005, 65.9 per cent. of homes—round 16.4 million homes—can receive digital television services on at least one set. A further 650,000 homes have access to multichannel television services through analogue cable. Ofcom do not have detailed estimates for digital take up for second or third sets take up. The Generics Group research estimates that around 28 per cent. of secondary sets are used to receive digital television.

Targeted support will be available to households where someone is aged 75 or over; and to households where someone has a severe disability-defined as those people eligible for either disability living allowance or attendance allowance. The full details and costs of the scheme are currently being developed, but the assistance will consist of providing the necessary equipment to convert one television set and the relevant support to install and use such equipment. This help will be free for the poorest eligible households, those on income support, jobseeker's allowance or pension credit; other qualifying households will pay a modest fee. The scheme will be established and funded by the BBC, as envisaged in the BBC Charter Green Paper published in March.

There are no central estimates of the overall cost to Government of digital switchover. However, other than the costs of updating television equipment within the Government sector, the only costs will be those incurred for research, communications and other programme support costs for the Digital Switchover Programme.

Elite Athletes (Financial Support)

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on financial support for elite athletes. [37617]

Mr. Caborn: Financial support for elite athletes during the period April 2005 to March 2009 is being provided through a number of schemes.

UK Sport's World Class Performance Programme will provide £98 million to sport's national governing bodies and elite athletes to assist their preparation and participation at winter and summer Olympics and Paralympics.

The Talented Athlete Scholarship Scheme (TASS) is providing £17 million to our most talented young people in the form of scholarships, bursaries and TASS 2012 scholarships.

In addition, our elite athletes are able to train at a number of world-class facilities throughout England that have been developed as part of the English Institute of Sport with an investment of £120 million from Sport England's Lottery Fund.

London Olympics

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will publish the commitments made by the Government to the International Olympic Committee to restrict betting on the 2012 London Olympics; and by what means she will implement those commitments. [37274]

Mr. Caborn: No such commitments have been given.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding submissions she has received directly from the British Olympic Association for elite sport in the run-up to the 2012 Olympic games. [37288]

Mr. Caborn: I have not received a funding submission from the British Olympic Association for elite sport in the run-up to the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Disability Rights Commission on promoting the London Paralympics; and if she will make a statement. [37610]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not, at this stage, held discussions with the Disability Rights Commission (DRC) on the promotion of the London 2012 Paralympic games. However, the DRC has been involved in the preparations for the games through their membership of London 2012's London Disability Organisations Forum. As preparations gather pace, discussions are taking place between the 2012 stakeholders to determine the best way to engage and consult with disability organisations on various aspects of the games over the coming years.

We are determined that the London 2012 Paralympic games will be a showcase for Paralympic sport, strengthening the Paralympic Movement and setting new standards for services, facilities and opportunities for disabled people. The games will inspire greater numbers of young people—and in particular those with disabilities—to become involved with sport and to aspire to elite performance.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Hollobone) of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 1W, on the Olympic Games, who the members are of the Nations and Regions Group of London 2012; and what the relevant experience of each is. [35831]

Mr. Caborn: The 2012 Nations and Regions Group is Chaired by Charles Allen and includes a representative from each English region and the devolved Administrations.

The full list of current members is; Charles Allen, Chief Executive of ITV, London 2012 Board Member and Chief Executive of Manchester 2002; Keith Mills, Deputy Chairman of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games; Jeff Moore, Chief Executive of the East Midlands Development Agency; Stephen Castle, Board Member of the East of England Development Agency and Chair of the East of England Regional Sports Board; Neale Coleman, Adviser to the Mayor of London; Tim-Cantle Jones, Chair of the North East Regional Sports Board; Andy Worthington, Chair of the North West Regional Sports Board; Aideen McGinley, Permanent Secretary of the Northern Ireland Department for Culture, Arts and Leisure; Julia Bracewell, Chair of Sport Scotland; Mary McAnally, Chair of the South East Regional Sports Board and a member of the South East Regional Development Agency; Ged Roddy, Chairman of Sport England South West; Gareth Hall, Chief Executive of the Welsh Development Agency; Derrick Anderson, Chair of the West Midlands Regional Sports Board and Non-Executive Director of London 2012; David Gent, Chief Executive of Sport England Yorkshire; Sue Killen, Director General, Department for Culture, Media and Sport; and Tom Wright, Chief Executive of VisitBritain.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with regional and local bodies about plans to attract Olympics-related activities to Northamptonshire in the run up to the 2012 games. [36137]

Mr. Caborn: We have established a Nations and Regions Group to ensure the whole of the UK is engaged with and benefits from the Games in 2012.

The Nations and Regions Group met on 4 November to discuss how best to co-ordinate UK wide interests in staging the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, and will meet again on 24 January to confirm its remit and membership.

Each of Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the regions of England is establishing a regional working group, responsible for taking work forward and reporting to the Nations and Regions Group. They will include representatives from regional development agencies (RDAs), regional sports boards and other relevant stakeholders. Under this arrangement, Northamptonshire would participate through the East Midlands Group.

The RDAs will of course play a vital role in this work, and we will write to them shortly to ask them to develop plans to maximise business and development opportunities offered by the 2012 Olympics in their regions.

National Lottery

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements are in place to ensure that organisations in receipt of lottery awards (a) are monitored effectively and (b) spend the awarded resources as intended. [37975]

Mr. Caborn: Each lottery distributing body's financial directions require the body to set up appropriate project monitoring and evaluation arrangements for both ongoing and completed projects, which are supported with lottery funds.

The exact nature of monitoring will vary in individual cases depending on the size, nature and complexity of the project concerned. The directions also say that distributors should make a condition of each lottery award that it should be repaid in certain circumstances. This includes cases where the purpose of the grant is not fulfilled.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the implications of lottery funding for the London 2012 Olympics for lottery grants for other sports; and if she will make a statement. [37618]

Mr. Caborn: We have been quite clear since launching our Olympic bid three years ago that lottery proceeds would form a key part of the public funding package. We have allowed for up to £1.5 billion to be raised in this way, some of which will be raised by new lottery games solely for this purpose. We expect the non-Olympic good causes to receive up to 5 per cent. less in income, as a result of sales diversion, over the eight-year period from 2005 to 2013. In addition, up to £410 million will be redirected from the proceeds of non-Olympic lottery games after 2009.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the amount of lottery funds distributed in the South East region in 2004–05. [37619]

Mr. Caborn: 3,560 awards worth over £122 million were made by Lottery bodies to projects in the South East region during financial year 2004–05. The expenditure of these awards may be spread over several years. Similarly the amount spent during 2004–05 will have included parts of awards made during previous years.

The Department holds information on the geographical breakdown of Lottery awards, rather than expenditure.

This information is derived from the Department's Lottery award database, searchable at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

National Coaching Certificate

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with the (a) National Governing Bodies and (b) the Department for Education and Skills on the implementation of the National Coaching Certificate. [37272]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has worked closely with Sportscoach UK and 21 National Governing Bodies to develop their sport specific qualifications in line with UK Coaching Certificate Levels 1–5. Six of these National Governing Bodies have been involved in a UKCC endorsement pilot. A further 10 sports are working with Sportscoach UK to progress their sport specific qualifications.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has been involved in discussions with Department for Education and Skills regarding the level of support available for the UK Coaching Certificate from Learning and Skills Councils and I have written to Phil Hope, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Skills regarding this issue.

National Sports Foundation

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to announce details of the National Sports Foundation; and if she will make a statement. [37273]

Mr. Caborn: The Chancellor outlined details of the National Sports Foundation in his pre-Budget report document "Britain meeting the global challenge: Enterprise, fairness and responsibility".

The National Sports Foundation will be established from April 2006, bringing public and private sectors together to invest in grass roots sport. The Government has committed £27.5 million over the next two years, and will be encouraging the private sector to match this funding, aiming to raise at least a further £30 million from private investors over this period.

The foundation will aim to attract new sources of investment from both large and small private sector firms not traditionally associated with sports sponsorship, ensuring the investment is targeted at community sport development rather than elite and professional sport. To do this, the foundation will:

be a high profile, one-stop shop for private investors and community sport organisations who need project funding, with a single web-based point of access;

act as broker, bringing together investors and projects to meet the needs of both;

have a national and regional dimension;

have a visible, respected and enterprising "Champion" promoting the benefits of investing in the foundation; fund initiatives that focus on increasing participation, particularly projects that promote diversity in sport, or improve the infrastructure of community sporting provision, for example by providing facilities and coaches; and capitalise on the nationwide Olympic "feel-good" factor to ensure lasting benefits for community sport.

Special Advisers

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the (a) advisers and (b) special advisers to her Department whose role relates to (i) sport and (ii) the Olympics; whether each is paid; and what other official posts each holds. [37859]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS employs a special adviser who advises on sport and Olympics matters. He is paid and holds no other official posts.

Sport (West Midlands)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what financial assistance has been given to junior (a) Rugby League, (b) Rugby Union, (c) football and (d) cricket in (i) the West Midlands, (ii) Staffordshire and (iii) Tamworth constituency in each of the last five years. [37832]

Mr. Caborn: Exchequer and Lottery funding is allocated by Sport England to the National Governing Bodies of Sports. It is not possible to identify the funding that went specifically to juniors as Sport England does not capture this information. However, benefiting young people is a key priority for Sport England's investment in National Governing Bodies and the potential for projects to benefit junior sport is integral to funding decisions.

The Exchequer funding made available to the governing bodies of the sports mentioned over the last five years is as follows:

Rugby Union £2.3 million, and £9.4 million through the Community Club Development Programme (CCDP)

Cricket £2.1 million, and £9.4 million through CCDP

Football £0.8 million, and £9.4 million through CCDP

Rugby League £1.4 million.

As the funding is awarded to the governing body we are not able to provide information on figures to a specific area or region.

However, the table summarises Sport England's lottery investment over the last five years in the West Midlands, Staffordshire and Tamworth.

Sports Funding

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what financial assistance has been given to junior (a) Rugby League, (b) Rugby Union, (c) cricket and (d) football in (i) the North West, (ii) Lancashire and (iii) Chorley in each of the last five years. [37124]

Mr. Caborn: It is not possible to split the funding that went to juniors as Sport England does not specifically capture this information. However, benefiting young people is a key priority for all of their community investment and the potential for projects to benefit junior sport is integral to every funding decision made.

The Exchequer funding made available to the governing bodies of the sports over the last five years is as follows:

Rugby Union—£2.3million, and £9.4million through the Community Club Development Programme (CCDP)

Cricket—£2.1 million, and £9.4 million through CCDP

Football—£0.8million, and £9.4 million through CCDP

Rugby League—£1.4 million.

As the funding is awarded to the governing body we are not able to provide information on figures to a specific area or region.

I can, however state what lottery money Sport England have invested in the North West, Lancashire and Chorley. This is detailed in the following table:

Lottery awards (including awards for all) in the last five years

Swimming Pools

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many public access 50 metre swimming pools there are in (a) England, (b) London and (c) Havering; and how many are planned prior to the Olympics in 2012. [37957]

Mr. Caborn: There are sixteen 50 metre swimming pools with public access in England, of which two are in London. There are no 50 metre swimming pools in Havering. A further six pools are currently being developed and this includes two for the new Aquatic Centre in Stratford.

An additional three 50 metre pools and two water polo pools are planned for the Olympic games and these will be redistributed following the games against an agreed legacy strategy.

Sport England is working with the Amateur Swimming Association to consider swimming pool provision in London, including the impact of the Olympic games pool provision.

UK Film Industry

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on Government support for the UK film industry; [34803]

(2) what financial assistance is available to film makers from the UK Government to fund film production. [34804]

James Purnell: The Government are committed to supporting a sustainable, stable and successful film industry. The UK Film Council, our strategic body for film, allocates lottery money for filmmaking, and works with the Government and other funding bodies to promote the widest possible enjoyment and understanding of cinema throughout the UK. The Government themselves continue to make available effective and appropriately-targeted tax relief for filmmakers.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last had discussions with his Dutch counterpart about the possible deployment of Dutch troops to southern Afghanistan; and what the outcome was of such discussions. [37127]

John Reid: I have regular discussions with allies including the Dutch about NATO operations in Afghanistan.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35868]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence publishes pay costs by region in the HMT Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis (PESA). The data for 2003–04 is contained in Table 8.20 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2005 (Cm 6521) which was published in April 2005 (see page 131). We are currently undertaking work on the analysis of the 2004–05 data, and this will be published in the PESA tables in April 2006.

MOD does not currently collect data on administrative budgets.

Departmental Staff (Relocation)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the potential (a) to reduce and (b) to relocate departmental posts in the main London building. [36998]

Mr. Touhig: An assessment was made at the end of 2004, as part of work on the SR04 efficiency programme, that identified the potential for a reduction of around 300 posts in the MOD's main London building. In addition, some individual posts may be relocated but there are no plans for major relocations. Future staffing levels and requirements will be reviewed regularly.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34047]

Mr. Touhig: The following table gives details of the number of Ministry of Defence civilian employees that took early retirement in each of the financial years 1997–1998 to 2004–2005.

Financial Year	Headcount
1997–98	1,420
1998–99	920
1999–2000	1,060
2000–01	990
2001–02	830
2002–03	700
2003–04[1]	1,200
2004–05	790

[1] The streamlining of Head Office prior to the reoccupation of Main Building in London led to 540 personnel taking early retirement on Compulsory early retirement on structural grounds.

Note:

This table used the revised definition of civilian personnel (www.dasa.mod.uk), but excludes Royal Fleet Auxiliary and Locally Engaged Civilian staff for whom no information on civilian early retirements is available.

Far East POWs

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from non-qualifying claimants for the ex-gratia payment scheme for Far East prisoners of war in response to his offer of compensation for distress caused by his Department's failure to set out the eligibility criteria clearly. [32335]

Mr. Touhig: A number of those who claimed under the scheme but did not qualify, and who may be entitled to the £500 compensation payment, have written to the Department criticising its level. Of some 175 payments that have so far been made, one has been returned.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35627]

Mr. Touhig: The following table sets out MOD's expenditure on media monitoring activities for the last two completed financial years. Information relating to the costs of media monitoring for the preceding six financial years in the format requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Expenditure (£ million)[1]
2004–05	0.350
2003–04	0.421

[1] This figure is made up of expenditure for daily press cutting services and a subscription to the Cabinet Office Media Monitoring Unit. The total is rounded to the nearest £1,000.

Post-traumatic Stress

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision his Department has made for veterans suffering from severe post-traumatic stress disorder. [24841]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence recognises Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) as a serious and disabling condition and continues to take all appropriate steps to address this and other more common stress-related disorders among Service personnel, reflecting the wider medical understanding of prevention and care.

The provision-of health care for veterans is primarily the responsibility of the NHS. However, under a provision of the war pensions scheme, the MOD funds remedial treatment at one of the treatment centres of the Ex Services Mental Health Society (Combat Stress) for those with service-related accepted mental health problems; this includes cases of PTSD.

As part of the Veterans Programme, the MOD is working closely with the Department of Health and the devolved Administrations to ensure excellent mental health services for veterans, including those suffering from PTSD. Discussions are taking place on a number of questions relating to the provision of such services, including exploring whether any changes need to be made to arrangements to address the needs of those suffering from severe PTSD.

Public Bodies/Agencies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff were employed by non-departmental public bodies and agencies for which he has responsibility in 2004–05 in (a) total and (b) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (c) London. [35892]

Mr. Touhig: Information on the number of staff, employed between 2004–05, by each of MOD's executive non-departmental public bodies in total and for each nation and region of the UK and London is as follows:

Nation: England

Museum	Total[1]	UK region (including London)
National Army Museum	86	Chelsea—London Government Office Region (82) Sandhurst—South East Government Office Region (4)
RAF Museum	169	Cosford/Stafford—West Midlands Government Office Region (49) Hendon—London Government Office Region (120)
Royal Naval Museum	32	Portsmouth Naval Base—South East Government Office Region (32)
Royal Navy Submarine Museum	22	Gosport, Portsmouth—South East Government Office Region (22)
Museum Royal Marines	29	Southsea, Hampshire—South East Government Office Region (29)
Fleet Air Arm Museum	65	Yeovilton, Somerset—South West Government Office Region (65)

Information on the number of staff employed by agencies in total and for each nation (England, Scotland, Wales, N Ireland and overseas) can be found in the UK Defence Statistics 2005 Publication under tables 2.6, 2.6a and 2.6b (pages 52–54). A copy is available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of staff employed by agencies in each region of the UK and London could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) salary bill was and (b) administrative costs were for his Department in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London in 2004–05. [35877]

Jim Fitzpatrick: As stated in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) Resource Accounts 2004–05 (HC 301, 20 July 2005), the total salary bill for ODPM was some £226,643,000. Total expenditure within the administration cost limit for the year, also taken from the accounts, was £310,744,000.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not monitor regional or central London administrative costs relating to the central Department separately. Such a breakdown could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A breakdown, by English region, of expenditure and salaries (within the administration costs limit) by the Government Offices is set out as follows.

Government offices	Salary/ expenditure	Total administrative costs/expenditure (net of receipts)
North East	10,214	13,887
North West	12,060	17,778
Yorkshire and Humberside	9,463	13,454
West Midlands	9,530	15,286
East Midlands	9,035	11,937
East	8,951	15,076
South West	10,542	14,725
South East	11,137	14,372
London	13,177	18,870
Regional co-ordination unit (in London)	2,260	6,025
Total	96,369	141,410

Departmental Grants

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the projects and services run by the NSPCC which have received public funding from his Department in each of the last three years; how much funding was provided in each case; and over what time scale. [34245]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no payments to the NSPCC for projects or services in any of the last three years.

Fire Services

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his current estimate is of the overall cost of establishing regional fire control centres in (a) the South West, (b) the other regions and (c) in total. [35685]

Jim Fitzpatrick: FiReControl is a national project. There are no separate budgets for each regional control centre. For information on the one-off costs of delivering FiReControl, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 358W. The national cost will be £160 million.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) genuine and (b) malicious fire emergency calls have been received in (i) Brent and (ii) London in each year since 1997. [35589]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The figures for the financial years from April 1999 are set out in the following table. The current computer incident recording system used by the London Fire Brigade (which has provided these figures) was introduced in April 1999 and there is no readily available data on a comparable basis for 1997 and 1998.

(a) genuine calls are given as incidents attended which are either a primary fire, secondary fire, chimney fire, automatic false alarm or good intent false alarm.

(b) Malicious calls are given as malicious false alarms attended.

Formula Grant

Jim Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the assumed population of the City of Newcastle-upon-Tyne was for formula grant purposes in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2004–05, (c) 2005–06 and (d) 2006–07. [38063]

Mr. Woolas: The population figures for City of Newcastle-Upon-Tyne used in formula grant calculations in 2002–03, 2003–04, 2004–05, 2005–06 and 2006–07 are shown in the following table:

	Settlement year

2004	—	—	—	—	—	—	269,465
Population projection in 2006	—	—	—	—	—	—	263,888

Notes:

1. The mid-2000 population estimates used in the 2002/03 settlement were based on the 1991 Census.
2. Settlements for 2003–04 to 2006–07 have used population figures derived from the 2001 Census.
3. Revised population estimates for 2001 and 2002 published by the ONS have been reflected in Amending Reports by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.
4. In the 2006–07 Settlement, population projections for 2006 will be used for the dominant data drivers of population as this allows the settlement to be more forward looking. The mid-2004 population estimates have also been used but within wider indicators used in the top-up formulae.

Office for National Statistics (ONS)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the formula grant was in respect of reimbursement of the costs of concessionary fares in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06 for each local authority in the County of Tyne and Wear; and how much is proposed for 2006–07. [38064]

Mr. Woolas: Government support for concessionary fares is funded via the Revenue Support Grant Settlement. Revenue Support Grant is an unhypothecated block grant. This means that authorities are able to spend the grant on any service. It is not therefore possible to say how much grant an authority received for a particular service.

Media Relations

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Office spent on external media relations in each year since 2001. [29573]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was created as a central department in its own right in May 2002, since then the ODPM has spent £619,072.66 on media relations with the Central Office of Information over the period.

The figure breaks down as follows:

ODPM	£
2002–03	247,612.45
2003–04	99,161.92
2004–05	160,320.75
2005–06	111,977.54

All spend has been to help promote fire safety in the home

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has spent no money on external commercial media relations in this period.

Occupational Health

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department spent on occupational health in each of the last five years. [35581]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002. The information requested is tabled as follows:

Financial Year	Expenditure (£)
2002–03 (June to March)	11,622
2003–04	11,406
2004–05	39,069
2005–06 (to end October)	18,086

Parliamentary Questions

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to Question 27463 from the hon. Member for St Albans, tabled on 8 November. [33447]

Yvette Cooper: I answered the hon. Member on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 681W.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [34317]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

Sustainable Communities Plan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment the Government have made of the potential impact of the Sustainable Communities Plan on the different growth rates of the English regions. [26926]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have set out a full response to the Barker Review of Housing Supply on 5 December 2005. This builds on the Sustainable Communities Plan and seeks to deliver a better balance between housing supply and demand in every English region. We recognise that affordability problems are not exclusively a problem in London and the South East, but extend to the South West and into parts of the Midlands and hot spots in the North.

We have announced a package of measures, including increases in housing supply, reforms to improve the planning system's responsiveness to the housing market and we are consulting on a planning gain supplement to provide funding to support additional housing supply.

By providing homes where demand is highest, we will tackle constraints to the continued economic development of the country as a whole. National growth is partly dependent on enabling the continued development of London and the South East. Constraints on London and the South East's housing supply and economic development are likely to harm the economy and job growth of the UK as a whole, given the links between regions.

Addressing constraints to growth in London and the South East should also reduce long-term regional disparities in house price inflation. This will enable people to move between regions to take advantage of employment opportunities. Labour mobility helps to reduce disparities between regions. In addition, improving the supply responsiveness of the housing market may also reduce inflationary pressures and all regions will benefit from lower economic volatility as well as lower real interest rates.

We are taking steps to help northern regions to maintain the rate of improvement they have shown in recent years. We have set a regional economic performance target, jointly owned by ODPM, the Treasury and the Department for Trade and Industry, to help narrow the persistent gaps in economic growth rates between the regions. To meet this objective the Government have taken significant measures, in areas such as education, skills, employment and transport, to improve the economic performance of all the English regions.

The housing market renewal pathfinders, which form a key element of the Sustainable Communities Plan, also have an important part to play. They will deliver a greatly improved choice of good quality housing in nine areas of the North and Midlands, thus helping to make them more attractive to employers and more competitive nationally and internationally.

Town and Parish Councils

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of funds raised through town and parish council precepts in England were spent on (a) capital and (b) revenue projects in the last year for which figures are available. [35387]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Unlawful Activities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what activities have been made unlawful by legislation introduced by his Department since May 2003; and if he will make a statement. [36217]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for Housing and Planning, my hon. Friend the Member for Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper) on 26 January 2005, Official Report, columns 433–37W. No additional Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Acts of Parliament have been passed since that answer was given.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in her Department are involved in promoting and setting up academy schools; which (a) outside agencies and (b) consultancies are involved; and at what cost to date. [36286]

Jacqui Smith: The Academies programme is a £5 billion programme to create 200 Academies open or in the pipeline by 2010. The following table gives the number of my Department's staff employed on the Academies programme (as at the end of the financial year) and the associated running costs for each year since 2002. In addition, my Department employs the external consultants Veredus, Alligan, PriceWaterhouse Coopers and Atkins to advise on the programme as the need arises together with various other individuals providing a consultancy service.

Financial year	Number of DfES staff	Cost (£000)	Cost of consultants (£000)
2002–03	25	784	1,725
2003–04	30	1,762	3,776
2004–05	45	2,000	5,685
2005–06[1]	67	2,147	3,539

[1] Costs and staff numbers to end November 2005.

Outside agencies involved in the programme include the Specialist Schools and Academies Trust, and the 13 project management companies on the DfES framework: Alligan Ltd; Appleyards Consulting; BDP; Cambridge Education Ltd; Faber Maunsell; MouchelParkman; Nord Anglia Education; PKF; Place Group Ltd; Precept; Tribal Education; Turner and Townsend; 3Es.

Children Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1337W, what work her Department is undertaking in pursuance of the exercise of the power under section 12 of the Children Act 2004. [37230]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills issued on 8 December the following written ministerial statement.

"I am announcing today a step change in the support the Government provides to front-line professionals in children's services by leading the implementation of an information sharing index.

The information sharing index is a key element of the Every Child Matters programme to transform children's services by supporting more effective prevention and early intervention. Its goal is to improve outcomes and the experience of public services for all children, young people and families. Better information sharing is essential for early and effective intervention. The index will provide a tool to support better communication among practitioners across education, health, social care and youth offending. It will allow them to contact one another more easily and quickly, so they can share information about children who need services or about whose welfare they are concerned.

Our decision about the way forward with the index has been informed by substantial input from, and consultation with, many front-line practitioners and managers across a wide range of children's services organisations. We have also drawn extensively on the experience of local index approaches run under existing legislation by Trailblazer local authorities. Our conclusions respond to what stakeholders have told us they need to be able to do their jobs more effectively and take account of views expressed on the design of the index.

The index will be a simple basic online system containing:

minimal identifying information for each child; name, address, date of birth, gender, and contact details for parents or carers. Each child will also have a unique identifying number. In almost all cases this will be a scrambled version of their Child Reference Number (which all children are allocated when a claim for child benefit is made);

contact details for their educational setting and GP practice and for other practitioners or services working with them; and where a practitioner judges it appropriate and necessary, an indicator showing that they wished to be contacted by other practitioners because they have relevant information to share, are taking action, or have undertaken an assessment in relation to that child.

No case information will be held on the index. Children, young people, or, where appropriate, their parents or carers will be able to ask to see their records and to challenge any inaccuracies, in accordance with data protection legislation.

There will be a single central index with its data partitioned into 150 parts, one relating to each local authority in England. A central index will ensure that the system works for children who move areas or who access services from more than one area. Partitioning the data will ensure local authorities take the lead in maintaining the accuracy of the data for children living in their area.

To avoid double-inputting of data and to ensure high standards of accuracy, information on the index will be drawn from and updated through existing systems. It will use proven technology.

Technical access to the index will be either through the practitioner's existing case management systems, via a web link or, where an approved practitioner has no access to appropriate IT facilities, via another approved user who does have IT access.

The Government are determined that the index will be as secure as possible, and will therefore ensure it complies with rigorous security standards. Access to it will be granted only to authorised users who have undergone appropriate checks, including those provided by the Criminal Records Bureau. Practitioner use of the index will be audited to ensure information is only accessed where it is necessary for practitioners to do so, and so guard against inappropriate access by authorised users.

The Government are today making available a report on local authority Trailblazer experience. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

The experience of the Trailblazers identifies significant benefits in the effectiveness of services. These include improved access to information to inform action, better identification of children not receiving universal services, and better multi-agency communication and information exchange. Scope for significant efficiency gains has also been demonstrated from time saved by practitioners on such tasks as identifying other services involved with a child, tracking down and contacting the individual practitioners involved, and making wasted referrals to services already involved with a child. These savings have been quantified as worth over £88 million per annum across England. We do not intend to reduce funding for children's services, but instead to enable savings realised to be reinvested in more and better services for children and more effective use of staff time. We anticipate that this will enhance staff satisfaction with their jobs.

The Government will commit substantial resources to the index. One-off implementation costs will be an estimated £224 million over the next three years—this includes the costs of adapting systems that will supply the data to the index and adapting the day-to-day systems used by practitioners so they can access the index from their own systems. It also includes the cost of ensuring the original data supplied to the index is accurate, that there are robust systems in place to ensure security, and that staff are trained to use the index properly. Operating costs, thereafter, will be £41 million per year. Most of these costs will fund the additional staff needed to ensure the on-going security, accuracy and audit of the index. Both set-up and running costs will be funded by central Government, so that the costs to local authorities do not form a pressure on the council tax.

Our plan is that a technically robust, secure and accurate index is available to support children's services across England by the end of 2008. To enable this to be achieved we plan to publish draft regulations under Section 12 of the Children Act 2004, which will be subject to the affirmative resolution procedure. An initial set of regulations in spring 2006 will provide the necessary vires to allow trials to take place for the creation of the initial records. We then plan to publish in autumn 2006 the main regulations to govern the operation of the index. We will consult publicly on draft regulations in the summer/autumn of 2006.

Implementation will be led by a dedicated project team within DfES. The Project Team will continue to work closely with local authorities, users and other stakeholders to ensure that developments continue to be relevant and lead to more effective practice. Building on the current knowledge gained by the local authority Trailblazers, the project team will directly and actively seek the views of children, young people and families and will ensure those views are taken into account as we develop the index."

I have written to the hon. Member about the information sharing index announcement, and also to other hon. Members and Peers who have expressed an interest in the index.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when her Department will reply to the letter sent by the hon. Member for Brent, East dated 2 February on behalf of Mr. Eric Brentini. [33858]

Bill Rammell: My hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Children, Young People and Families replied to the hon. Member's letter on 12 December.

Dedicated Schools Grants

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average (a) primary and (b) secondary school allocation of dedicated schools grant per pupil is in each local education authority for 2006–07, listed in descending order of grant. [36584]

Jacqui Smith: Allocations of dedicated schools grant are not broken down between primary and secondary schools. The following table sets out the guaranteed unit of funding for local authorities' allocations of dedicated schools grant for 2006–07, listed in descending order.

Exam Results

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average A-level attainment has been of entrants to undergraduate courses leading to qualified teacher status in each year since 1995. [31104]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is given in the following table. Figures for 2004/05 will be available in January 2006.

Average "A" level points for English domiciled entrants to English HE institutions who have one or more "A" level qualifications on entry and who are aiming for the qualification of first degree with QTS

Academic year	Average A level points[1]	Number of entrants
1995/96	12	6,135
1996/97	12	5,710
1997/98	13	5,735
1998/99	15	5,350

2001/02	15	4,765
2002/03	202	4,315
2003/04	201	4,855

[1] Figures up to and including 2001/02 are based upon students who hold one or more A level (or AS equivalent) qualification on entry. The average score given is based upon the "A" level points for the student's best three "A" levels (or "AS" equivalents). For 2002/03 onwards, figures are based upon students who hold either GCE "A" level or VCE "A' level qualifications. The average score given is the average tariff points score based upon all "A" level qualifications (not just the best three).

Note:
Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5.

Higher Education

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average pay of teachers in higher education was in 2004–05; and what percentage change in their pay there has been in the last three years. [29264]

Bill Rammell: The latest available figures are shown in the table. Figures for 2004/05 will be available in January 2006. Significant changes were made to the content, structure, coverage and definitions of the source data in 2003/04 which means that the figures for that year are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Average salary[1] of full-time HE academic staff with teaching responsibilities, HE institutions in the UK

	2000/01 (£)	2001/02 (£)	2002/03 (£)	Percentage change 2000/01 to 2002/03	2003/04
Professors	52,400	53,900	56,200	7.2	56,900
Senior lecturers[2] and researchers	38,500	39,500	40,700	5.8	41,800
Lecturers	29,400	30,300	31,600	7.5	32,500

[1] The HESA Staff Record changed markedly in structure, coverage and content in 2003/04. In addition, the definition of salary changed. For the years up to 2002/03, salary represented the monies received in respect of institutional duties actually being paid on the date of the HESA staff count (31 July) or for those who have left during the year, the salary on leaving, "including" any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria regardless of their source. In 2003/04, the salary represented the gross basic salary per annum, in pounds sterling as stated in the contract at the reference date of HESA's staff count or at the end date of the contract if earlier, "excluding" any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria, regardless of their source.

Learner Support Funds

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the learner support funds were distributed to (a) 14 to 16-year-olds, (b) 16 to 19-year-olds and (c) those aged over 19 years in (i) 2003–04 and (ii) 2004–05; and what estimate she has made of the likely proportion in (A) 2005–06, (B) 2006–07 and (C) 2007–08. [36044]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is shown in the table.

Adult/youth split

	Actual		Planned
	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08
Young People (16–19)	216	337	481	584	606
Adults (19+)	113	116	115	127	134
Total financial support for learners in FE	329	453	596	711	740

Learner support funds are not paid to learners under age 16. However Care to Learn, which provides help with child care costs for young parents who want to continue in learning, has been available to pre-16s since 1 August 2004. Care to Learn helped 431 pre-16s in that year, the youngest of whom was 13. The total cost for pre-16s was just under £308,000 for that academic year.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answers of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 598W, and 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 124W, on Learning and Skills Council, what the Learning and Skills Council's core administration costs were in 2001–02; and why different figures were provided in each answer. [35822]

Bill Rammell: The LSC's core administration costs for 2001–02 were 3.4 per cent. The figures quoted in the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 598W, were taken from the LSC's Annual Accounts for 2001–02 which include costs incurred in the last seven months 2000–01 for the setting up of the LSC. This gives an overall administration spend of 4.6 per cent. of total expenditure. The answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 124W, provided administration costs solely for the 12 months of 2001–02 which give an actual figure of 3.4 per cent.

Nursery Places

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the cost of providing a nursery place for every child of two years and above in (a) England and (b) the most deprived (i) quartile and (ii) decile of electoral wards. [37174]

Beverley Hughes: The Government do not fund free nursery education places for children aged two and there are currently no plans to do so. However, local authorities are fully funded to meet their statutory responsibilities to deliver a free part-time place for three and four-year-olds through their Education Formula Spending Share (EFSS)—their main education budget. Overall resources are determined by means of a national formula, taking into account local factors including deprivation, ethnicity and area costs. From April 2006 funding for the free entitlement is being consolidated within the new Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) arrangements. This will place a ring-fence around education spending while maintaining flexibility for local authorities to determine the distribution of funding in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Office for Fair Access

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to publish the work of the Office for Fair Access; and what steps she is taking to monitor its progress. [37129]

Bill Rammell: The Office for Fair Access has made excellent progress in approving access agreements for higher education institutions. Details of its work have been published in its annual report in July 2005 and strategic plan in December 2005, copies of which are being placed in the Library. We use these, and periodic discussions with Sir Martin Harris, to review progress.

Synthetic Phonics

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of schools in Morecambe and Lunesdale which teach children to read using synthetic phonics. [37291]

Jacqui Smith: We do not have figures on the number of schools using synthetics phonics in the teaching of reading. However, the use of synthetic phonics is a key part of the approach to teaching reading advocated by the Primary National Strategy, as well as being available in commercial phonics packages, and is therefore widespread.

The interim report of Jim Rose's independent review into the teaching of early reading has given valuable advice on the way in which the teaching of synthetic phonics should develop in future. We will implement the approach that he has suggested, drawing on his interim report and the final report due early in 2006, in our renewal of the framework for literacy teaching.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Commercial Waste

14. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to promote the recycling of commercial waste. [37705]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government have a target to reduce the amount of commercial and industrial waste going to landfill by 15 per cent. between 1998 and this year.

On the evidence of progress to 2002 we expect now to have met this target.

Common Agricultural Policy

17. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with EU counterparts on reform of the Common Agricultural Policy. [37709]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has brokered a deal on major reform of the CAP sugar regime, discussed the Government's vision for fundamental CAP reform published earlier this month and chaired EU ministerial discussions on agricultural trade liberalisation in the context of the WTO negotiations.

Supermarkets Code of Practice

18. Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with colleagues in the Department for Trade and Industry on the Supermarkets Code of Practice. [37711]

Jim Knight: I have had informal discussions about the Code with my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment and Consumer Affairs (Mr. Sutcliffe), and will be continuing these.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle were slaughtered in the last recorded month as a result of bovine tuberculosis. [37632]

Mr. Bradshaw: 1,831 reactor cattle and 340 direct contact (2,171) cattle were slaughtered as a result of bovine tuberculosis in October 2005.

Christmas Trees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental impact of (a) artificial and (b) natural Christmas trees; and if she will make a statement. [37156]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has not carried out any comparative life-cycle assessments in this field.

Dog Registration Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Canine Crisis Council and (b) other organisations about a proposal for a dog registration scheme; what her policy is on a dog registration scheme; and if she will make a statement. [36856]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has not held any recent discussions with organisations on this issue. However, the Government fully supports a voluntary dog registration scheme.

Environmental Crimes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will increase the penalties for environmental crimes; and if she will make a statement. [37339]

Mr. Morley: The Government has been increasing the penalties available for environmental crimes, for example through the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. How to improve further the impact of environmental enforcement and sanctions is being examined under the Government's cross departmental Review of Enforcement in Environmental Regulation.

The environmental enforcement review, led by Defra, is drawing together evidence to better define obstacles to effective enforcement before reaching conclusions about possible solutions in summer 2006. It will draw on contributions from all parties to the enforcement process, including enforcers, business, the wider community, and the courts, who determine penalties in specific criminal cases. The Government will then consider whether further measures are needed.

An examination of the sanctioning tools related to a wide range of regulators, including those in the environmental field is being carried out by the Better Regulation Executive Penalties Review, which was launched with a discussion document on 7 December. It will report in autumn 2006.

Both reviews will contribute to the pursuit of better regulation, and share the aim of making enforcement more proportionate. Serious offences should be met by tough sanctions which will really change damaging behaviour for the better, and ensure a level playing field for law-abiding businesses.

Exmoor National Park

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the budget for Exmoor National Park was in each year since 2000–01. [37249]

Jim Knight: The annual National Park Grant allocation for Exmoor National Park Authority since 2000–01 is as follows:

	£ million
2000–01	2.369
2001–02	2.583
2002–03	2.935
2003–04	3.519
2004–05	3.291
2005–06	3.616

GM Crops

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on organic food of the growing of GM crops. [37268]

Mr. Morley: We will issue a consultation paper next year setting out proposals for managing the co-existence of GM and non-GM production. This will also discuss whether special arrangements should apply in the case of co-existence between GM and organic crops.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions her Department has had on the locations for growing GM maize in England. [37269]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not had any recent discussions on the locations for growing GM maize in England. No GM maize suitable for UK conditions is currently authorised for cultivation, and we do not anticipate that any GM maize will be grown in England for the next few years.

GM maize has been grown in England in the past for research purposes. The last trials were completed in 2002. The locations of the trial sites are available on the DEFRA website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/gm/fse/location/index.htm

We expect to publish a consultation paper on proposals for co-existence in the cultivation of GM and non-GM crops next year.

Government Decontamination Service

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received on the establishment of the Government Decontamination Service; and if she will make a statement. [37154]

Mr. Morley: The project team responsible for setting up the Government Decontamination Service consulted widely and by several means to seek the views of its stakeholders. Representations were received from central Government, local authorities and emergency planners, emergency services' representatives, specialist suppliers who might provide the decontamination services required, and a range of public and private sector bodies responsible for assets or infrastructure of national importance.

The clearest messages from those representations were that the GDS should concentrate its resources on its core functions: the establishment of a contractual framework of specialist suppliers that could provide the decontamination services required, which has now been done, and the provision of advice and guidance on decontamination, which is a key ongoing function of the service.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff are employed in the Government Decontamination Service; and what the total annual salary costs of the service are. [37155]

Mr. Morley: The Government Decontamination Service (GDS) was set up as an executive agency of Defra on 1 October 2005. The service is currently recruiting staff to bring it up to complement. When fully staffed, the GDS will employ 26 people. The projected annual staff costs (including employers pension and national insurance contributions) is approximately £1.02 million.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. [36996]

Mr. Morley: The Government set out its policy on reducing emissions of the six greenhouse gases covered under the Kyoto protocol in its publication "climate change: The UK programme" (CM 4913) in 2000. We have introduced a set of flexible measures covering a range of different sectors—including energy supply, transport, agriculture, business and households.

The Government are currently carrying out a review of the UK climate change programme which is looking at how existing policies are performing and the range of policies which might be put in place in the future to further reduce greenhouse gas emissions. The Government are aiming to publish a revised UK climate change programme early next year.

Habitats Directive

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance is being prepared for those organisations responsible for implementing in the UK the provisions of the habitats directive. [37571]

Jim Knight: Guidance on the application of the habitats directive for planning authorities was contained in DEFRA circular 01/2005 of 16 August 2005 biodiversity and geological conservation—statutory obligations and their impact within the planning system. The circular compliments the expression of national planning policy in the co-published planning policy statement 9, biodiversity and geological conservation (PPS9) and the accompanying good practice guide, which is currently under preparation.

DEFRA policy guidance on coastal squeeze implications for flood management—requirements of the European birds and habitats directives was published by my department on 21 September 2005 and there are also a set of habitats regulations guidance notes which have been published by English Nature.

The Department is currently involved in developing guidance on the implications of the habitats directive for developers undertaking offshore windfarm development and a protocol for maintenance dredging in European marine sites. The need for any further guidance is being kept under review.

Home Energy Efficiency

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding is made available by her Department to provide homes with central heating; and if she will make a statement. [37991]

Mr. Morley: The Government's main tool for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England is the Warm Front Scheme. The Scheme provides a range of heating and insulation measures to householders in receipt of certain benefits.

In the pre-Budget report, it was announced that an additional £300 million would be made available to tackle fuel poverty across the UK. In England, this means that an additional £250 million will be made available both to boost the Warm Front Scheme and extend its ability to provide central heating, and to provide £300 towards the cost of a central heating system for all other pensioners. This means that total funding for the Scheme in the 2005–08 period will be over £800 million.

Pet Food

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of feeding pets processed pet foods rather than natural foods. [36857]

Mr. Bradshaw: No research has been commissioned by DEFRA in this area.

Poultry

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how her Department plans to assess the percentage of poultry owners that fulfil the requirement to register their flocks under the Avian Influenza (Preventive Measures) Regulations 2005. [38015]

Mr. Bradshaw: This percentage will be estimated in two complementary ways: firstly by the usual activities of the enforcement authorities and secondly, by cross-validation of the entries in the GB poultry register against a consolidated dataset which has been created from ten existing partial data sets about poultry which Government holds.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what basis a flock size of 50 birds was chosen as the level at which poultry owners must register their birds under the Avian Influenza (Preventive Measures) Regulations 2005; and whether there are plans to require owners of less than 50 birds to register birds. [38030]

Mr. Bradshaw: The decision to restrict the requirement to register to commercial flocks of 50 or more birds was based on advice from an expert group which considered that only flocks of this size would be likely to play a significant role in the spread of Avian Influenza. From a logistical point of view it was seen as a priority to focus on gathering information from these larger flocks. Once this has been achieved, it will be possible for owners of smaller flocks to register on a voluntary basis should they so wish. We could also revise the mandatory requirement to include smaller flocks at a later date, should experts and others consider that this would confer sufficient added benefits to justify the costs.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is permissible for poultry dealers to buy in birds from various individuals and locations and subsequently hold a sale of those birds on one site. [34990]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 6 December 2005]: Sales by a single poultry dealer are not classed as a bird gathering and are not therefore covered by the precautionary measures introduced to reduce the risks of gatherings.

Research and Development

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Government have spent on the research and development of (a) energy conservation and (b) energy efficiency measures in each year since 1980; and what further sums are planned to be spent. [36589]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 12 December 2005]: The Government does not have information on spending on these programmes over the period 1980–2005, nor on the detailed split between energy efficiency and energy conservation. Over the period 2002–2005, the UK spent approximately £15 million per year on RD&D into demand-side energy-efficient technology; about £12 millon from UK public bodies and £2.8 million from the European Commission framework programmes.

Rural Communities

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to sustain rural communities. [37631]

Jim Knight: In its rural strategy 2004, the Government announced an ambitious and targeted set of policy priorities for rural communities and for enhancing our natural environment, together with radical reforms for their delivery in the most customer-focussed, effective and efficient way, all firmly within a sustainable development framework.

Since the general election in May we have reinforced those priorities through actions such as the establishment of the Affordable Rural Housing Commission, the announcement of a new rural social and community funding programme and the introduction of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill. The Bill seeks, among other things, to establish both the Commission for Rural Communities—an expert advisor, advocate and watchdog for rural communities—and Natural England—a new integrated agency to conserve and enhance the natural environment.

Rural Housing

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding will be given to national parks to assist with providing rural housing to encourage young people to stay in their areas. [37251]

Jim Knight: The National Park Authorities have a duty to seek to foster the social and economic well-being of local communities. However no specific amounts are ring-fenced within the National Park Grant. ODPM does not make any allocation to National Parks specifically for housing.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the estimated unit cost of compliance with the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive is for a television set. [37343]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

This will vary according to the size and weight of TV and the proximity of treatment centres.

Waterways

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to receive a representation from British Waterways on an agreed future licence fee structure for boat owners on waterways. [37275]

Jim Knight: This is an operational matter for British Waterways. Last year, British Waterways consulted publicly about proposed changes to its licence fee structure. In the light of the responses, it has produced a further consultation paper setting out revised proposals. The closing date for responses is 16 January 2006. I expect British Waterways to let me know in due course how it intends to proceed.

World Water Forum (Mexico City)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) who from her Department will attend the World Water Forum in Mexico City in March 2006; and what her Department's role will be at the forum; [37497]

(2) if she will make a statement on the World Water Forum being held in Mexico City in March 2006. [37498]

Mr. Morley: Defra officials will attend the forum as part of the UK delegation and are continuing to work closely with DfID who are the lead Department on preparations for this event.

HEALTH

Blindness

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) parents understand the importance of eye examinations for children and (b) young people and adults have regular eye examinations. [30897]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Free sight tests are available under the national health service to large parts of the population including children, those aged 16 to 18 in full-time education, people on benefits, those people at particular risk of developing eye disease, and people who are registered blind or partially sighted or who have a complex spectacle prescription. Sight tests allow the opportunity to review all aspects of eye health, including investigations for signs of disease. Those at risk of specific eye disease, for example diabetic retinopathy, may be asked to attend regular screening.

Information about the extensive arrangements for providing help with NHS optical services and other health costs are publicised in leaflet HC11 "Are you entitled to help with health costs?" Posters are also available for display in optical practices and hospital out-patient departments.

The number of NHS sight tests undertaken continues to increase. In 2004–05, there were 10.1 million NHS sight tests, an increase of 3 per cent. on 2003–04.

We have also promoted a system of child health and development checks. The programme of home visiting and community development makes an important contribution to many areas of health education and fosters the early detection of problems, including those associated with eye sight, in young, pre-school children.

Contagious Diseases

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1222W, on contagious diseases, whether her Department plans to issue new regulations under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984. [37651]

Caroline Flint: The Department has no current plans to issue new regulations under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1222W, on contagious diseases, how many applications have been (a) made and (b) granted under sections 37 and 38 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 and the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988 in each year since 1988. [37652]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 15 December 2005]: The Department does not collect this information.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1222W, on contagious diseases, whether an individual who had contracted avian influenza could be removed to, and detained in, hospital under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 or associated regulations. [37653]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 14 December 2005]: In principle, regulations could be made under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 to make the powers in sections 37 and 38 of the Act available for avian influenza that was known to pass from one human to another. However, the Department has no current plans to do so. The H5N1 strain of avian influenza currently circulating in South East Asia and elsewhere is a disease which mainly affects birds. It has been contracted by some people through close contact with poultry, but is unlikely to be passed from one human to another.

Continence Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to respond to the findings of the Royal College of Physician's Clinical Effectiveness and Evaluation Unit in its audit of continence services for older people. [34828]

Mr. Byrne: Primary care trusts are responsible within their areas for providing quality services to their patients. This includes delivering the standards on continence care for older people, as set out in the national service framework for older people.

The Healthcare Commission has responsibility for assessing progress towards achieving these standards.

Dr. Ann David

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require a re-examination of the standard and conduct of work performed by Dr. Ann David during her employment in the West Midlands prior to her employment in Essex; and if she will make a statement. [32006]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The strategic health authority and national health service trust concerned have undertaken a review of Dr. David's work, from the period she was employed in the West Midlands. It is their opinion that the review did not raise any concerns regarding Dr. David's work during her employment with them. Should further concerns arise or further evidence come to light it is for the trust to decide what, if any, further review may be necessary.

Emergency Beds

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the baseline is for her Department's public service agreement target to reduce emergency bed days by 5 per cent. by 2008; when the target was set; and what progress has been made towards meeting the target. [35200]

Mr. Byrne: The baseline year for the Department's target to reduce emergency bed days by 5 per cent. by 2008 is 2003–04. The target was agreed with HM Treasury as part of the 2004 spending review. The latest available data, for 2004–05, shows a 2 per cent. reduction in emergency bed days from the baseline year. Latest progress against public service agreement targets can be found in the Autumn Performance Report 2005, available on the Department's website at:
www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/42/52/04124252.pdf

Epilepsy

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action her Department has taken to reduce sudden death by epilepsy since the publication of the Government's Action Plan on Epilepsy in 2003; what assessment she has made of the progress that has been made in reducing the levels of sudden death by epilepsy since the publication of the Action Plan; and what guidance she has given to practitioners to ensure patients with epilepsy are fully informed about the risks of sudden death from the condition. [35355]

Mr. Byrne: Although the specific cause of sudden death by epilepsy (SUDEP) is unknown, the risks are considered greater for patients whose epilepsy is poorly controlled. Action to reduce SUDEP has therefore concentrated on improving epilepsy is poorly controlled. Action to reduce SUDEP has therefore concentrated on improving epilepsy services in general, raising awareness of SUDEP, and the introduction of new more effective drugs to control seizures.

As part of the "Action Plan on Epilepsy" the Modernisation Agency ran "Action on Neurology" in 2004–05 at eight pilot sites. These included:

delivering high quality epilepsy service without the need for patients to travel far by the use of electronic and paper patient-held records.

improving communications between primary, secondary and tertiary care by developing a network of healthcare professionals to deliver a coordinated service.

developing general practitioner services for people with epilepsy and headaches and a primary care triage system to improve access and efficiency.

The national service framework for long-term conditions was published in March 2005. This focuses on improving neurological services across the country for a range of conditions including epilepsy.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has published guidance on the clinical and cost effectiveness of new epilepsy drugs in adults (March 2004) and children (April 2004).

We have commissioned NICE to produce clinical guidelines for the diagnosis, management and treatment of epilepsy. This guidance, published in October 2004, specifically covers the importance of informing patients and their families of the risks of sudden death in epilepsy. In addition, we have made a grant of almost £290,000 to the National Society for Epilepsy to improve support and information for people with epilepsy and their families.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the merits of different means of providing anti-retroviral drugs to HIV/AIDS sufferers. [37628]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 14 December 2005]: Primary care trusts are responsible for providing HIV prevention, treatment and care services which meet the needs of their local populations. To support them in this role, the Department has published best practice guidance, "Effective Commissioning of Sexual Health and HIV Services" (2003). This includes advice on commissioning treatment services for people with HIV and AIDS.

Hospital Facilities

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS in-patient beds (a) are in mixed sex sleeping areas and (b) share (i) mixed sex washing facilities and (ii) mixed sex toilet facilities. [35193]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Nationally, 97 per cent. of national health service trusts report that they are fully compliant with the standards that we have set for the provision of single-sex accommodation. Information on the location of in-patient beds within each trust, and their adjacency to toilet and washing facilities, is not collected.

The small number of trusts who have yet to meet our standards are undertaking building works which will bring them to full compliance.

Immunisation

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether her Department piloted the introduction of the five-in-one vaccine; what plans she has to review the take-up of MMR following the introduction of the five-in-one vaccine; and if she will make a statement; [33540]

(2) what targets have been set for the take-up of childhood immunisation; what assessment she has made of the effect of the introduction of the five-in-one vaccine on the achievement of that target; and if she will make a statement. [33542]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 1 December 2005]: Before being licensed, all medicines including vaccines are thoroughly tested to ensure that they are safe, of a high quality and are efficacious (effective). The introduction of Pediacel was recommended by joint committee on vaccination and immunisation after careful consideration all of the available data and research, including experience of the use of a similar vaccine (Pentacel) in Canada.

Information on the uptake of routine childhood immunisations in the United Kingdom is routinely collected by the Health Protection Agency through the COVER programme (Cover of Vaccination Evaluated Rapidly). Coverage of diphtheria, tetanus, polio, pertussis, Hib and Meningitis C at one, two and five years of age, and measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) at two and five years, is published quarterly in CDR weekly on the Health Protection Agency's website at www.hpa.org.uk/cdr/default.htm.

Only children born after July or August 2004 would have been offered Pediacel exclusively rather than for completion of a primary course already started. Information on coverage at one year of age for this cohort has not yet been evaluated through the routine COVER programme. This data will begin to come through the routine COVER programme data collection from December this year and will be published.

We are, therefore, unable to comment on whether there has been a change in uptake due to the introduction of Pediacel, including MMR.

Influenza Vaccine

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likelihood of developing a DNA vaccine for use in the event of an influenza pandemic. [28696]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are currently in discussions with vaccine manufacturers regarding the development of a vaccine against pandemic flu. Officials have had discussions with a manufacturer that is working on DNA vaccines, including their potential for use during a pandemic. However, it is likely to be some years before a DNA flu vaccine could be available.

Kent and Canterbury Hospital

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of the urology unit at the Kent and Canterbury hospital. [37886]

Caroline Flint: This is a local matter. It is for local national health service organisations to determine how best to use their resources to plan and develop services to meet the needs of their local community. However, the Kent and Medway strategic health authority has advised that it is anticipated that an announcement on the review of urology services at Kent and Canterbury hospital will be made following a meeting to be held on 19 December 2005.

Mental Health

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adolescent mental health beds there are in Milton Keynes. [35267]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold the information in the format requested.

Departmental figures for 2004–05 show that there are no beds classed as "mental illness: children: short stay" or "mental illness: children: long stay" at either Milton Keynes general hospital or the Milton Keynes primary care trust. These categories include adolescents.

NHS Dentistry

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have left the NHS to work in private practice in each year since 1997. [26575]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of dentists who have left the general dental service (GDS) and personal dental service (PDS) in England as at 30 September each year is shown in the following table.

	Leavers
1995	910
1996	821
1997	947
1998	972
1999	1,037
2000	1,206
2001	1,207
2002	1,352
2003	1,236
2004	1,224
2005	1,097

A dentist is assumed to have left the national health service if they had an open GDS or PDS contract in September of the previous year but no GDS or PDS contract in September of the specified year.

The dental practice board does not record the reasons for joining or leaving the NHS. The figures given will include dentists who have retired from practice and dentists who have moved to private practice.

Palliative Care

Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the Hospice at Home service will be brought into line with the Payment by Results scheme for palliative care; and if she will make a statement; [36171]

(2) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of Payment by Results on statutory funding for services for palliative care commissioned from voluntary providers; and if she will make a statement. [36194]

Mr. Byrne: Work to develop healthcare resource groups for specialist palliative care, which will inform the implementation of Payment by Results, is ongoing. Part of this work will include consideration of the funding implications of introducing Payment by Results in specialist palliative care.

Healthcare resource groups are not being developed for Hospice at Home services. However, consideration is being given to the development of healthcare resource groups for community care services other than in palliative care and once this work, together with consideration of the results of the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" consultation, is complete, we will be able to give this issue further consideration.

Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what public funding for palliative care was allocated for 2005–06; and what the total annual funding will be when the Government have met the Labour manifesto commitment to double spending on palliative care; [36174]

(2) if she will ensure that additional funding for palliative care promised in the Labour manifesto covers (a) full cost recovery and (b) Payment by Results. [36193]

Mr. Byrne: Primary care trusts are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident populations, including palliative care. This would include meeting any costs associated with full cost recovery, recommended in the HM Treasury's "Cross Cutting Review on the Role of the Voluntary Sector in Service Delivery" or the implementation of Payment by Results. The Department does not routinely collect data on the amount of funding allocated locally for palliative care services, although, as pledged in the NHS Cancer Plan 2000, an additional £50 million per annum was allocated to primary care trusts in 2005–06 for specialist palliative care.

The details of delivering our manifesto commitment are being discussed with a range of key stakeholders. Alongside this, the views of the public, service users and staff on end of life care was one of the issues covered in the "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" consultation. We will take account of what people have said in this consultation in the way we discharge our manifesto commitment.

Primary Care Trust Commissioning (Oxfordshire)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 405W, on primary care trust commissioning (Oxfordshire), whether discussions regarding the proposal to put primary care trust commissioning out to tender was initiated by Thames Valley strategic health authority. [36898]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 13 December 2005]: Thames Valley strategic health authority (SHA) sought advice from the Department about the inclusion of this proposal as part of its 15 October reconfiguration submission. We advised that it should not be explored as part of the forthcoming reconfiguration exercise, as it is for the new organisations, not current ones to decide how best to manage their responsibilities after reconfiguration. This was confirmed in a letter to Thames Valley SHA on 30 November, which set out the options and conditions for consultation on the reconfiguration proposals.

Royal Liverpool University Hospital

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the proposals are for the development of services at the Royal Liverpool university hospital under the private finance initiative; [36401]

(2) what consultations her Department plans to hold on the future of services at the Royal Liverpool university hospital. [36402]

Mr. Byrne: The strategic outline case (SOC) for the development of the Royal Liverpool university hospital was approved in July 2004.

The SOC proposal was for all of the current services to be re-provided in a new build of the Royal Liverpool university hospital on the existing site expanding eastwards. Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority report that the exact service configuration will need to be agreed before the Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen university hospitals national health service trust can develop a public sector comparator to allow it to test affordability and value for money within the outline business case (OBC).

Once the location of the proposed new hospital and the configuration of services have been identified the local health community will need to undergo a formal consultation exercise as part of the OBC process, prior to consideration by the Department.

Turnaround Teams

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health into which NHS organisations in West Yorkshire her Department intends to send turnaround teams. [35439]

Mr. Byrne: It is planned that there is an assessment with the West Yorkshire strategic health authority of the financial position of the Mid Yorkshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

Variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (vCJD) have been notified in each year since the disease was first recognised; and how many of these resulted in (a) deaths from definite vCJD and (b) deaths from probable vCJD. [35111]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the table.

Case reports and deaths from variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (vCJD) from 1995 to date

	vCJD cases reported	Deaths
		Definite	Probable
1995	8	3	0
1996	9	9	1
1997	13	10	0
1998	20	16	2
1999	16	15	0
2000	29	24	4
2001	21	13	7
2002	15	5	12
2003	16	9	9
2004	6	3	6
2005[1]	6	2	3
Total	159	109	44

[1] To 5 December 2005.

Note:
There is no correlation between reports and deaths in the columns in the table for any one year as reporting, diagnosis and death in any one case may not occur in the same year.

Wheelchairs

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for NHS patients in England for a bespoke powered wheelchair. [35437]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Assets Recovery Agency

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value is of assets (a) realised and (b) frozen by the Assets Recovery Agency which have been derived from (i) corrupt activities overseas and (ii) the theft of foreign states' assets. [35400]

Paul Goggins: The Assets Recovery Agency has not yet undertaken any work in freezing and recovering the proceeds of corruption committed overseas. The imminent coming into force of secondary legislation under the Proceeds of Crime Act will provide more powers for the UK to deal with requests from foreign States about assets in this country derived from all criminal activity, including corruption.

Cannabis

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the number of (a) arrests and (b) prosecutions for (i) dealing and (ii) possession since the reclassification of cannabis as a class C drug. [34878]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The available information is included in the "Drug Offenders in England and Wales" annual publications.

Table 1: Persons dealt with for cannabis offences in England and Wales—2003

	Dealing offences	Possession offences
Cautions	590	38,130
Convictions	2,970	39,360

Table 2: Persons dealt with for cannabis offences in England and Wales, 2004[1]

	Dealing offences	Possession offences
Formal warnings[2]	n/a	27,520
Cautions	570	22,530
Convictions	2,500	22,960

[1] Due to the re-classification of cannabis from class B to class C and the introduction of police formal warnings, data for 2004 should not be directly compared to those of previous years.
[2] Formal warnings are only given for cannabis possession offences. Data relates to April–December 2004.

Change Up Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the establishment of the agency to drive forward the implementation of change up. [26666]

Paul Goggins: In March this year, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced a further £70 million for change up and his intention to set up the Capacity Builders Agency to take this programme of investment forward. This is in addition to the initial £80 million investment in the change up programme from 2004–2006.

Change up is a capacity building framework for the voluntary and community sector, which has a ten year vision that by 2014 the needs of frontline voluntary and community organisations will be met by nationwide support which is structured for maximum efficiency, offers provision which is accessible to all, reflects and promotes diversity and is sustainably funded.

The Capacity Builders Agency will build on the good work to date and will manage the change up framework at arms-length from Government. It will take ownership of fund management, ensure the programme is joined up and co-ordinated, mainstream diversity issues into the design and delivery of activities within change up and ensure real time action learning and longer term evaluation.

On 16 November, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced the agency's new top team. The new chair is Chris Pond, the chief executive of the National Council for One Parent Families and formerly MP for Gravesham (1997–2005) and Parliamentary under Secretary of State at the Department of Work and Pensions. Simon Hebditch has been named chief executive of the agency.
